Ground floor. Out the elevator, a wooden table blocks the set of doors closest to the cruiser. Where did that come from? It's slid aside and Turati dashes outside for the stretcher. Time is frozen. Guilmette stands over red-hair, quiet now, as a gaggle of students watch, frozen, unmoving on the other side of the tower. We wait for the stretcher.

A bang on the door and Turati is in, unfolding the stretcher before he's all the way in the door.

The cops move with a hurried calmness. Fast, but quiet, no wasted words or motions. As they strap red-hair down another cruiser pulls in. Three officers lift the stretcher, crash through the doors, slide him into the power car, Turati cursing as the tail gate jams, he trows his body against it and it latches shut.

"Nathan, you'll have to hold the stretcher still. It's gonna be a ride."

I nodded and braced a leg against the door as the cruiser moved, bumping over the curb and onto Mass. Ave. As Guilmette punches the gas Turati turns, "Hold his head to the side so he won't choke if he vomits." My hand touched his face. I remember there was no beard, his face was cool and smooth to my touch, I wondered how old he might be. He stunk of wine.

The back of the stretcher slid as we rounded the corner onto North Pleasant, a right up to the infirmary, a left past Franklin Commons, and red-hair's body convulsed, throwing his throat and chest into the air, rigid as I tried to push his head to the side. Then his body relaxed, his head fell limply to the side. He was enormously still... but no, a glimpse of breath was caught in the cold air.

Guilmette drove well. The cruiser pulled up to the emergency entrance and a nurse, warned before by radio stood holding the doors open. I cursed as the stretcher caught on the first aid box, but Turati yanked and they flew in and lifted red-hair, stretcher and all, onto the bed in the emergency room.

The nurses went to work then, putting a tube down his throat to clear the vomit out of his wind passage.

Red-hair cried and convulsed as they worked, Guilmette and Turati sweating as they held him down. His throat was clared but red-hair's jaw fell on the plastic tube. A nurse tugged at it, with a "what the hell do you do now?" look on her face. Guilmette told him to let go, and somehow through his muddled brain red-hair responded, his mouth slackened, the nurse pulled the tube out, and red-hair stopped breathing.

The nurse turned white, and for a moment the emergency room is motionless. She checked. No heart beat, no pulse. Action. As one nurse massaged his heart another covered his face with an oxygen mask, Guilmette and Turati were frozen. It was out of their knowledge, they could do nothing but watch.

Seconds pass. The nurse bends to find red-hair's heart, and the color flows back into her face. He's breathing again. But for 10 seconds death had danced triumphant.

An ambulance from Cooley-Dickinson Hospital had been called earlier and now arrives. As the two ambulance drivers load red-hair onto their stretcher the nurses brief them. One will ride in the ambulance in case of a relapse.

The men from Cooley-Dickinson, almost blase (how many times have they done this before?) wheel red-hair out. Guilmette and Turati tell the driver we will follow.

The ride to Cooley-Dickinson is wild, sirens and lights screaming and flashing. One or two close calls with cars slow to pull over, but an anti-climax to what had come before.

Red-hair is still unconscious when we leave the hospital, Guilmette and Turati still have no idea who he is, what he drank, swallowed, or shot. They will never see red-hair again.

The rest of the night was quiet. Guilmette and Turati checked parking lots, especially F Lot. Guilmette calls it, "The one night auto supply". At 1:00 am we go to McManus for breakfast. The 99¢ special; juice, coffee, toast, eggs and home fries.

We cruised for the rest of the night, answered only one more call, a broken window at Cance.

At 2:40 am we returned to the station. Guilmette and Turati filled out their night's report then shot the breeze for a while with the radio man and officer in charge.

A little after 3:00 am the two left for home. They would be back on duty that night at 7:00 pm.

TONITE
Hound Dog Taylor and the Houserockers
Worcester
Dining Commons
8:30 p.m.

"My Oscar bet for best American film, best Director, best non-original screenplay, best performance by an actor (Anthony Perkins) and actress (Tuesday Weld) —Just about the best of everything." —Cinema Magazine

Starts Friday! December 8

Rod Steiger "SLAUGHTERHOUSE 5" (PG)

TUESDAY WELD ANTHONY PERKINS

'PLAY IT AS IT LAYS' (R)

It ranks high among the best movies I've ever seen. One of the most rewarding experiences you'll ever have in a motion picture theatre." —Rex Reed, Syndicated Columnist

(PG) From the best-seller that really knew a generation

A SEPARATE PEACE

Daily at 7:00 & 9:00

"1972 Bollinger Award" —Schlosinger Films

Campus Cinemas AMHERST HOLYOKE

DOLLAR NIGHT! Every Monday Night Admission Only $1.00

an exceptional love story, funny and moving!

BUTTERFLIES ARE FREE

GOLDIE HAWN · EDDIE ALBERT HECKART

Shows daily at 7:00 & 9:00 (PG)

I could love you if you'd let me.

PROGRAM COUNCIL PRESENTS

"PSYCHO"

Directed by Hitchcock

Friday, Dec. 8

7 and 9 p.m.

Mahar Aud. 50¢

Books

A Dream Of A Biography

By Carl Greenberg

George S. Kaufman, an Intimate Portrait
by Howard Teichmann
Atheneum
371 pages, illustrated $10.00

George Kaufman is a biographer's dream. It is evident from reading Teichmann's book that Kaufman led a life fully as interesting as the plays he wrote.

Teichmann worked with Kaufman for the last ten years of the latter's life, and at times he gets a bit maudlin and idol-worshippy, but at least every time he tells us what a great wit Kaufman was, he backs it up with a few pages of examples.

Teichmann organized his biography along lines other than chronological and his method of telling the George Kaufman Story is highly effective. One chapter deals with his love life, another with his position as a director, another as a letter writer, as father, card player, newspaperman, etc.

There is always the underlying tone of Kaufman's personality to hold the book together; he was always a bit uncertain of himself even when he had hits and fame and two Pulitzer Prizes. He always was afraid of death and always assumed he had poor health even though he was perfectly healthy until into his sixties.

Kaufman was not a writer of great literature, but usually what he wrote worked the way he wanted it to work. Kaufman plays are frequently revived because they are highly entertaining and were written to be played as much as any plays have ever been written for the stage as opposed to the page. I the names of some of his plays mean anything to those of us after his time, he was responsible, in collaboration with others, for The Front Page, 1928; Once in a Lifetime, 1930; Dinner at Eight, 1932; Let 'Em Eat Cake, 1933; You Can't Take it With You, 1936; Of Mice and Men, 1937; The Man Who Came to Dinner, 1939; The Late Geroge Apley, 1944; Park Avenue,1946; The Solid Gold Cadillac, 1953. The last one was in collaboration with Teichmann.

Men at work: Kaufman and Hart.

Teichmann's biography is pervaded with the atmosphere of high literary circles. Kaufman was friends with and worked with, among others, Ring Lardner, Edna Ferber, Moss Hart, Alexander Woolcott, John Steinbeck, Abe Burrows, Peter Ustinov, Groucho and all the other Marxes, Dorothy Parker, Robert Benchley, James Thurber, etc.

If we are to understand why Kaufman was so successful at his business, we must understand how he worked. We are shown how he worked at all stages of a play production. He was, for one thing, a tireless worker. Playwriting, it appears, was for him a craft like any other. He worked and worked and worked on a play until it was just what it was supposed to be. He did not hesitate cut lines when they weren't absolutely right. Teichmann tells us that Kaufman had a chest high wastebasket where he worked and it often seemed as if his job were to fill it as fast as possible with edited material.

As a director, he let the actors have freedom to act, but was merciless in keeping them in check when they threatened to interpret the play for themselves.

Although Teichmann does at times make much of Kaufman, he does get close to him and is honest in his reporting. He doesn't go into details concerning Kaurman's constant sexual exploits outside his marriage, but he does tell us about them, and he does report the Mary Astor's husband came to see Kaufman about their excapades shortly before her diary told all on the front pages of the nation's newspapers.

Teichmann is also honest when it comes to telling about Kaufman's often almost misanthropic ways. Kaufman was always an introvert, developing his skill with words to defend himself and often come out being cruel or at least unfeeling to many people.

It is to Teichmann's credit that he did not write this book solely as his own view of Kaufman. He says that he spent ten years researching for this biography, which might seem excessive, but it becomes apparent, especially with his list of almost two hundred people he credits with communicating their personal views, that he has indeed covered the field. It also seems likely, after reading the book, that he has related his collected material in a fairly unbiased way.

Teichmann goes so far as to include sample pieces of correspondence from Kaufman to his family, friends and associates. For the most part, the letters are dull and seem to be just the same kind of newsy letters that any of us would write. They do, of course, tell us just that much more about Kaufman.

Despite Teichmann's often slack style (he is not a highly skilled book writer), it is evident that he was the man to write this book and he communicates the essence of Kaufman quite well.

(This book came courtesy of University Bookstore.)

Is That What Overdrive Really Means?

By Gauri Bhatia

Is Your Volkswagen a Sex Symbol by Jean Rosenbaum, M.D.
Hawthorn

Learn why automobiles function as sex substitutes. Why dress designers design the ugly clothes that they often do. Why your mother always wanted you to grow up to be a doctor. All this and many more insights into the fascinating new art of exploring personality traits-in Dr. Jean Rosenbaum's new book Is Your Volkswagen a Sex Symbol?"

I don't like Dr. Jean Rosenbaum. Because his photograph on the dustjacket shows him in an ostentatiously annoying pose (smoking a pipe). Because he got the Hart Crane award for poetry and frankly, Hart Crane bores me. But most of all (to get away from these somewhat personal aversions), I dislike him for having written just another in an annoyingly long list of psychology based books--books designed to appeal to the low I.Q. public, and which are supposed to give one an insight into one's own and one's friends' personalities.

That's exactly what Dr. Rosenbaum's book pretends to do - give insight. And like the countless others before it (Body Language, Peter Prescription) it fails miserably in it's task.

I personally tend to believe that "insight" is not an entity that one can pick up for $5.35 in the form of a glossy pink book. Dr. Rosenbaum obviously disagrees and it is therefore his responsibility to prove me wrong--something that he is unable to do.

Dr. Rosenbaum falls prey to all of the same mistakes that many dozens of psychiatrists turned writers have done before him. His desire to make a fast buck is obvious as is his lack of anything interesting to say. And the final product-a glossy, eye-appealing book-is useful for nothing more than propping up rickety tables.

Is Your Volkswagen a Sex Symbol is basically a book to tell you who you are and why. The dust jacket explains it as "what your life-style reveals about you and your personality." Dr. Rosenbaum explains to us why we drive a Cadillac instead of an Edsel (pretty obvious to me), why the Edsel is ugly (also fairly obvious to anyone who's even caught a passing glimpse of one on a junk heap), how the clothes we wear reveal our personality-Even the reasons why people don't tip in restaurants (I always thought it was because of bad service and lack of money). He analyses our personality down to its barest essentials but tells us nothing in actuality. Most of the remarks he makes are amazingly obvious and annoyingly puerile. To cite an example, he tells us that a handshake can be the key to a man's personality. "The person who's handshake is limp," he continues, "usually has a limp personality." That tremendous perception and amazing knowledge is what makes one want to read the book from cover to pink cover without putting it down?

Is Your Volkswagen a Sex Symbol won my award for the "1972 Banal Book of the Year." I certainly don't anticipate finding a book more highly qualified for this title in the remaining 20 days of the year.

(This book came courtesy of the University Bookstore.)

UMASS STUDENT HOMOPHILE LEAGUE
Presents a GAY HOLIDAZE
— DANCE —
8:00 p.m. Sat., Dec. 9th
FARLEY LODGE (Near the Stadium) 75¢ Admission
— DANCE —
For More Information call 545-0154

GIFT CERTIFICATES ALWAYS AVAILABLE
SHOWCASE CINEMAS 1·2·3·4·5
ROUTE 5 RIVERDALE RD. WEST SPFLD.
24 HR. TEL. 733-5131
Wed. 2 p.m. All Theatres
CHARLES BRONSON "THE MECHANIC" PG
Wed. 2 p.m. Mon.-Fri. 7:30-9:30
LAST 5 DAYS
STEVE McQUEEN • ALI MacGRAW "THE GETAWAY" DEC. 20th
The Mafia. The way they lived The way they died. "The Valachi Papers" R
Wed. 2 p.m. Mon.-Fri. 7:30-9:40
GENE HACKMAN "THE POSEIDON ADVENTURE" DEC. 22nd
BOB HOPE in CANCEL MY RESERVATION G
Wed. 2 p.m. Mon.-Fri. 7:30-9:30
JON VOIGHT • BURT REYNOLDS "DELIVERANCE" DEC. 22nd
Carry on Doctor PG
Wed. 2 p.m. Mon.-Fri. 7:30-9:30
WALT DISNEY'S "SNOWBALL EXPRESS" DEC. 20th
DIANA ROSS IS BILLIE HOLIDAY R
LADY SINGS THE BLUES
Wed. 2 p.m. Mon.-Fri. 7:30-10
LAST 5 DAYS
BARBRA STREISAND "UP THE SANDBOX" DEC. 20th

Did It Get Fooled The First Time?

By Ed Bryant

There are some things you should know about the Solar System. Being chrono synclastically infundibulated, I've known it all along. It is, none the less, such a sickening thing that I've thought about it as little as possible.

The sickening thing is this: Everything that every Earthling has ever done has been warped by creatures on a planet one-hundred-and-fifty thousand lightyears away. The name of the planet is Tralfamadore.

Winston Niles Rumfoord

Our story deals with a disappearing phenomenon. It has been called, incorrectly, The Movement. It was not, at any time, a movement; rather it was a series of expressions by various individuals and groups held together, perhaps created by, the electronic eye of mass media. It was during a time of expanding personal and political consciousness, and for a time promised or threatened, depending on one's point of view, to overthrow what was, and to replace what was with a higher vision. Liberals called The Movement, reactionaries called it conspiracy, but the drug-crazed, radicalized human energy centers called it The Revolution.

Whatever happened to The Revolution? Did it burn out? Did the Eighteen Year-Old Vote and the so-called end of the draft kill it? Is it in disarray? Working for George McGovern? In Canada growing wheat? In the Michuacan Valley growing marijuana? On North Pleasant Street selling sound equipment? Lying dead on the ground? Will it get fooled again? Did it get fooled the first time?

The answer to all these questions is probably yes. The Revolution is scattered; it may be burnt out. It may also simply have been given back to the people to whom it belonged initially. For a time, beginning as long ago as 1962, ending in May of 1970, everyone who was to the left of the American status quo came together to scare the hell out of America, and then went separate ways, having accomplished very few of the original goals of the groups and individuals who had joined in the common effort for change. The groups that came together have taken different courses since dissolution; some have gone back to being indifferent to the fate of the world, some have continued to dream about what was, and some have returned to their original purpose, sometimes bitter and cynical about their former allies.

It is useful to consider what happened. The principal characters in the drama were special interests groups of oppressed people, the media, the pigs, and that other faction, the white male hippies. Beginning with black activists, blacks, women, pacifists, gays, socialists, anarchists, and utopians staged an endless assault on the status quo during the 1960's. Each group had an enemy; each challenged its enemy. Whether the enemy was racism, sexism, militarism, heterosexual intolerance, repression, or mediocrity, it was forced, during the decade, to stand up in its own defense, to demonstrate either the justifiability of its stance, or the viciousness with which its stance would be defended in the face of the screaming multitude over by the Washington Monument. Racists hid behind code words, sexists ridiculed their critics, and wars continued. All of this was recorded by the media. Revolution was a media event in the '60's.

It is my suggestion that Revolution was a media event, and is no longer Revolution because it is no longer a media event. The love affair between the blue-eyed white male hippie and the one-eyed camera is over, and the white male hippie has gone home to get high. In Chicago, the people who were being clubbed by Daley's Finest could shout, truthfully, that "the whole world is watching." The whole world, or at least the combined audiences of the three major networks, was indeed watching. When the Democrats met again, who among the Miami Beach protests groups would have shouted the truth, namely that "CBS gives us ten minutes whenever the convention gets boring?" Instead of watching a true expression of the disintegration of American myths, as in 1968, the media spent the summer of 1972 showing us close-ups of Gary Hart, his hair long enough to cover his ears, in hasty consultation with Delegate X over why Delegate X wouldn't vote to seat Mayor Daley. I remember sitting in rooms with people rooting for Mayor Daley, because George needed Daley, and George was their man. George needed Daley, and so much for George. Not in 1972, however. The white male hippie in 1972 took a year off from smashing the state to vote for a new head of state.

Locally, the most painfully obvious example of this was the University of Massachusetts' so-called "Strike" of 1972. The proceedings of that strike are noteworthy in examining the dissolution of the forces which previously stood united against lots of things. In 1972, they couldn't stand united about much at all.

A NATION-WIDE STUDENT STRIKE against the Nixon war policy in Asia and the administration's policy of at-home political repression gained support at 20 Universities across the nation yesterday, including Illinois. See stories on page 3 and editorial on page 6.

On the evening prior to the strike's first official day, a young woman from Smith College told a meeting, "We have two choices: a violent revolution or a new President of the United States." She finished her speech by opting for George.

The next night produced, naturally enough, another meeting. The strike, which was called in opposition to bombing renewed two weeks earlier when the weather wasn't so good, was a day old, and naturally involved more people than the eighty who had decided to call a strike. The strike's goal was quite simple: it called for an end to the war in VietNam. Using the logic that had worked so well in the media days, those in charge of calling meetings did so, possibly in an attempt to sequester in one room everyone in the Valley who opposed war, but more probably because UMass radicals love meetings. The meeting dealt with two questions: what were the strike's demands, and how would the power structure of the strike be constituted? At that point the farce was revealed.

Members of the Third World Community asked that the strike concern itself with the oppression of Third World People as well as the specific question of VietNam.. Women asked that sexism be spelled out as an issue of the strike. The followers of Tom Moriarty wanted nothing so much as to sit on the Steering Committee. A bunch of other people, white, male, and long-locked, spent their time behind the microphone begging for unity.

The senseless debate raged on for a while, after which time both the Women's Caucus and the Third World Alliance had to good sense to walk out of the meeting. Those who remained decided, eventually, that without the women and the Third World, they were a farce.

Without the Third World Alliance and the Women's Caucus, the people assembled in that room took no further action. The following day a referendum declared that University Local #01002 was not on strike any more, even though Dickinson Hall had been occupied by the Women's Caucus and the VietNam Veterans against The War. Fortunately the media intervened. The Daily Collegian, which could have pretended that the strike was over, continued to focus on the occupation of Dickinson.

The 1972 strike was made by women and veterans, its most noted accomplishment being the establishment of a Center For Social Change. In spite of this tangible achievement, the strike failed to capture the imagination of the campus. Instead of remaining in Dickinson Hall to be arrested, the people there decided to negotiate with Chancellor Bromery. This mistake removed from the strike the possibility so necessary to the sustainment of interest in radical causes: good theater. Chancellor Bromery is a likeable man, an admirable man. He is employed, however, by the University of Massachusetts, which owns Dickinson Hall. The University, in turn, is a wholly-owned subsidiary of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, about which it can honestly be said that it voted for George McGovern in 1972. It cannot be said, however, that a man in a new job working for the University is going to give away a building. Property rights are property rights, but they are also symbols, even if they do value social change more than they value the training of second lieutenants. The Center For Social Change was given a different home, but Dickinson Hall, the home of ROTC, was given back to the colonels. Everyone who wanted to get arrested did so at Westover Air Force Base. Had they chosen to do so at Dickinson Hall, it would have been a better show.

When dealing with people who agree with you, but don't care to act, a good show is necessary. A good show draws attention, and if the goals are obscured by the attention, at least you have a big crowd for Life or CBS to photograph. Richard Nixon is not above sending astronauts off early to try to compete with a demonstration, because he had learned about bread and circuses. White male hippies generally eat well; they have bread. If they are to be pulled away from the status quo, they must be offered circuses. The building should never have been abandoned without a fight.

White male hippies differ from the others who participated in The Revolution. Except for the fact that they smoke marijuana and breath air, they are the least effected members of the "coalition". They are not black, and are therefore not hurt by white supremacy. They are not female, and are not oppresses by male supremacy. They are not female, and are not oppressed by male supremacy. They will never get bombed by the United States, and are therefore unaffected by bombing. They only reason they ever were around was because they were sick at injustice, which is an admirable reason, but not a reason that can be sustained. In the hamlets of VietNam, one's immediate surroundings guarantee that one will act according to one's beliefs. The Vietnamese have not watched this war on TV. They will not lose interest in it when the TV cameras go away. It is inseparable from their daily lives.

The Revolution is ripe for another round of war with its enemies. The McGovern Distraction is over; cooperation seems to be out for the time being. Will the Revolution hearts of Attorneys General everywhere? Maybe it will, because CBS needs news. Maybe it will because people will realize the need more strongly than ever. Maybe it won't revive to its former size for bad reasons. There are, however, perfectly legitimate reasons why it may not revive.

Not all white male hippies are vicarious thrill seekers. Some want to live their own lives. They have had their fill of trying to change a way of life that they don't buy. They do not choose to waste their time seeking changes that will provide no satisfaction. They won't expend their energies trying to change laws they are not currently prosecuted for breaking. Their way of life has less to do with the way things are commonly conceived than it does with the way they perceive things themselves. They are the children of the Psychedelic Revolution. One of the nice things about the Psychedelic Revolution is that you don't need a mass of people to deal with yourself.

Not all white male hippies are male either. There are women who do not want to be president of General Motors, who are more interested in living their own lives. They deal with sexism on a personal basis. Or maybe they don't deal with it at all.

The major criticism of hippies is that, male or female, they are hedonistic pleasure creatures who don't care about anyone but themselves. Short-haired coat-and-tie socialists often feel contempt for people who refuse to cut their hair in order to infiltrate bowling leagues at Sammy White's to educate hyphenated-Americans as to the difference between Trotsky and Saint Simon. Straight people hate hippies too, of course, but tha's another story.

What will the relationship be between psychedelia and the Revolution? Will there be a Revolution? Will the kids who smoke grass and go to UMass be for it or against it?

I do not have the answers to these questions. I do, though, have one disturbing thought which I feel bears directly on this question. That concerns the role of the media. Without the media, there is a great problem of communicating enthusiasm, and without enthusiasm there can be no Revolution. With the media allowing the whole world to watch, the Revolution can win the Battle of The Seven O'Clock News.

Winston Niles Rumfoord said that the Solar System is controlled by Tralfamadore. Before her death, Beatrice Rumfoord spent her final years writing a history of the planet Earth refuting what her former husband had said. No one knows whether or not the Solar System is controlled by Tralfamadore. No one knows whether or not the Revolution is controlled by the media either. Within four years we shall have the answer to both of these questions.

Friday Late Night Special
Buy a plain pizza at The Hungry-U
and receive two tickets to the Amherst Cinema
11:30 Skin Flick
all for only $2.50
Save $1.49
This week see:
Barbie's Hospital Affair

Today's Navy: Rough Seas Ahead

by Liberation News Service

ALAMEDA, California (LNS)–Moving the American military presence in Vietnam from sweaty jungles to air conditioned aircraft carriers has not, as the government had hoped, stifled the GI resistance and non-cooperation which hindered the U.S. land war.

In the past month, four of the Navy's nine carriers in the Pacific have been staggered by a combination of racial tension, political resistance, and sabotage. And a multi-million dollar fire aboard the U.S.S. Forrestal off the coast of Virginia last summer has now been attributed to deliberate sabotage.

The biggest headlines back in the States stemmed from an incident aboard the U.S.S. Contellation. Three hundred black sailors peacefully seized the kitchen facilities of the giant carrier to demand reinstatement of six experienced black sailores suddenly dismissed for low scores on tests they took when they first joined the Navy.

They also demanded an end to the lily-white officer corps on board the 4500-man ship, equal job assisgnments for blacks and whites, amnesty for all who voiced grievances, and a an opportunity to talk with the ship's captain.

For several hours, the Constellation did without food. The blacks sat in the kitchen waiting for the captain, but the captain declined to meet with them. Instead, he dispatched a company of marines with loaded weapons to the kitchen. The blacks refused to engage in a violent confrontation which they feared might play into the hands of the Navy brass.

Captain J. D. Ward, upon receiving orders from a superior, then abruptly cut short the ship's training cruise and returned to San Diego. Once there the remaining protestors, 122 blacks (more then a quarter of all black on board), were transferred off the ship.

Added to this group were 10 "handpicked" whites "to mix in so that the news media would just talk about 132 sailors, and not mention the racial issues," said Jake Colbert of the San Diego Black Servicemen's Caucus.

When the beached sailors staged a one-day sitdown on the dock at San Diego, refusing to reboard the ship, they were fined and restricted for unauthorized absences. Captain Ward, still refusing to discuss the grievances, then arranged for them to be dispersed to as many different locations as possible for various forms of punishment.

Throughout the episode, said Sidney Glass, a spokesman for the sailors into violence. Their non-violent response was based on the fresh memory of another dramatic incident on board the U.S.S. Kitty Hawk.

While its fighter bombers hovered over North Vietnam, the Kitty Hawk in the Gulf of Tonkin was the site of a major brawl between black and white crewmen. When the tear gas cleared, 46 sailors required hospitalization, and charges were brought against 25, all of them black.

To prevent a railroad at sea, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People successfully pressured the Navy to bring the men back to San Diego for stateside trials in December. But the fact remains that no white sailors face the threat of punishment for their part in the brawl.

In Washington, Navy Secretary John Warner dismissed the problems aboard the Constellation and Kitty Hawk as the result of "small groups of troublemakers."

But Admiral Elmo Zumwalt, ranking admiral of the U.S. Navy, decided the fleet would never cool down unless the Navy admitted a slightly larger problem. His tough words against racism to an assortment of admirals in Washington made headlines throughout the country.

Yet in spite of Admiral Zumwalt's directives that racial harmony commence immediately, sailors on the carrier Coral Sea, based here in Alameda, California, are reportedly arming themselves in preparation for racial confrontations. Two stabbings have already taken place and if the carrier leaves San Francisco Bay, it will probably face a rougher time at sea.

The carrier Ranger, also based in San Francisco Bay, has had very difficult time even getting out to sea. After a postponement of three and a half months, it is now scheduled to leave for the airwar in Southeast Asia by the end of November.

A U.S. Destroyer damaged by North Vietnamese fire. Are some of our boys in blue working at toward same end?

Acts of sabotage began to reverberate through out the ship beginning in late May. Sailors cut fire hoses contaminated the ship's drinking water–once with salt water and once with airplane fuel, started small fires, damaged pressure gauges and oil pumps, and fouled up the generators.

Several times bomb threats and rumors of mass desertion spread throughout the ship. The Navy itself confirmed 12 incidents since May, and crew members have revealed another 16.

Until late July, the ship's plan to depart for Vietnam on August 1 remained unaffected. The commanding officer, Capt. H.P. Glindemann, Jr., was not about to be intimidated by what Admiral Charles Duncan calls "those few with mental aberrations who cause sabotage."

However, shortly before the ship was supposed to leave Alameda, the Ranger's captain was given a chance to change his mind. A paint scraper and two 12-inch bolts were slipped into a #4 main reduction gears. The mechanism was destroyed and the ship couldn't move. Replacing the gears took the Navy and General Electric three and a half months and cost over $800,000. Meanwhile, the crew of 4700 men were idle.

The Navy fingered Patrick Chenoweth, 21 a quiet, unassuming sailor from Puyallup, Washington, as the saboteur. They charged Chenoweth with "willful destruction of government property" and "sabotage in time of war." The charges could result in a sentence of 35 years in jail.

The evidence against him consists of testimony from three witnesses who claim they overheard Chenoweth's attorney discovered over 20 men who over heard similar "admissions" all over the ship or who admitted to having made similar statements themselves. Sailors were apparently eager to take credit for the ingenious act.

"There are no witnesses," says Seitz, "to the act or acts which caused the damage, no fingerprints or other physical evidence linking Pat to the damage.

"There is evidence that literally hundreds of persons aboard the Ranger had access to the gears in question and that many persons were overheard to make admissions similar to those attributed to my client."

To its embarrassment, the Navy cannot even place the time when the scrap was added to the gears more closely then an eight-day period in late June and early July. In a civilian courtroom, the government would probably not take the chance of prosecuting Chenoweth with such flimsy evidence.

Navy officials apparently believe that if Chenoweth gets convicted and sentenced, sailors will think twice about continuing to screw up the ship. In fact, the opposite seems to be true.

Since Chenoweth's arrest, sabotage on the ship has continued and political activity has increased. In October, while the Ranger executed trail maneuvers, two oil pumps went up in flames and the #2 engine had to shut down due to unusual virations. Anti-war slogans and stickers began to appear on the damaged equipment. And a few weeks ago, an anti-war slide show, smuggled onto the Ranger, made its shipboard debut in the carpenter's shack.

Sailors on board are also beginning to identify with SOS, the Stop Our Ships movement, a group of sailors involved in non-violent resistence. SOS is making itself felt throughout the Seventh Fleet (stationed in the Pacific) and on the aircraft carriers in particular.

On the Ranger, there is a running battle between crewmen and the captain over the right of sailors to wear SOS buttons. One sailor who had his button confiscated is drawing up charges against Capt. Glindemann under Article 139 of the Uniform Code of Military Justice. Glindemann insists he will stand by his order prohibiting sailors from wearing buttons.

As Glindemann's headaches multiply, Pat Chenoweth sits in the brig at Treasure Island–a Navy installation in the middle of San Francisco Bay. With four month's time under his belt, Chenoweth is now the old timer in the Treasure Island brig. Despite his clean record in military and civilian life, neither the Navy nor the Federal courts have been willing to grant him release from his pre-trial confinement.

The extraordinary charge against Chenoweth of "sabotage in time of war" has attracted attention from the national press, and will attract a barrage of legal fire from defense attorney Seitz. The charge carries a 30-year prison sentence, and Seitz plans to challenge the government to prove that it is, in fact, legally at war–an issue all branches of the U.S. government have studiously avoided before any judicial body through the Vietnam war.

In addition, Seitz plans to challenge some of the more obvious inequities of military justice–for example, the rule which allows only officer to serve on military juries despite the fact that most of the defendants are enlisted men.

A defense request that 20 crew members needed as defense witnesses be detached from the Ranger before it sails was denied. The Navy plans to fly them back to Alameda one-by-one as their testimony is needed but wants to keep them as far as possible from the defese attorney, the press and the anti-war movement.

The prosecution is even pushing to try the whole case at Subic Bay in the Phillipines–th Navy's primary forward base in the Far East and the future homeport of the Ranger. This would accomplish two aims: first, to keep the press and anti-war movement far away, and second, to threaten the personal safety of the defense lawyer and his staff. In September of this year, Filipino authorities raided a GI legal aid office the National Lawyers Guild operated in Subic Bay–an office attorney Seitz himslef worked at for over a year.

The entire staff of the office was charged with possession and distribution of "subversive" material which, under the present state of martial law in the Phillipins, carries the death penalty.

The Navy cooperated fully with the Marcos government officials in the arrests, even going so far as to hand over to the Filipino military police an American attorney from the legal aid office who happened to be on base at the time of the raid.

The victims of the raid were later deported; the Navy's point quite clear: it finds martial law in the Phillipines a convenient device for eliminating the presence of civilian attorneys who are attempting to protect the rights of sailors.

Since the Filipino government is well aware of his previous connection to the National Lawyers Guild outpost, Seitz looks askance at the Navy's offer to fly him free to Subic Bay in December to continue interviews of the Ranger crew which will be interrupted once the carrier leaves for the war.

NEWMAN CLUB

ANNUAL TREE-TRIMMING

CHRISTMAS PARTY

JOIN US!

Tonight (Fri.) at 8:00

Newman Lounge

NORTHAMPTON JERRY LEWIS CINEMA

U.S. Route 5 586-3209

Mon. & Tues. Adults $1.00

1 RAGE George C. Scott (PG) 7:00 & 9:00

You'll Like My Mother a thriller 7:30 & 9:30 PG

College Students 50c Off

Wed. Night 1,000,000 Night Free Lottery Ticket with each $1.75 adm.

Sat. & Sun. Matinee MUNSTER GO HOME 1 & 3 p.m. All Seats 75c

In Concert: Judy Collins

By Mike Kostek

In Concert: Judy Collins, December 1, Springfield Municipal Auditorium.

As I sat in row KK on the Main Floor–Right, waiting for the show to start, I wrote down in jest the first sentence of a review. "Ms. Judy Collins gave a desultory and perfunctory performance Friday night to the best dressed crowd of the 1972 concert season."

Well, sad to say I wasn't too far wrong. I had gone not expecting a great deal, but I did at least expect one or two moments of spellbinding enrichment, waiting for Judy to carry me off somewhere else on the power and glory of her gorgeous voice, like Joan Baez did with her "Swing Low Sweet Chariot" in the Woodstock movie.

Unfortunately I got none of this. Judy was only fair. However my thoughts of her performance being perfunctory were wrong. No, the problem here goes a little deeper than that. Once you stop remarking at the beautiful clarity and grace with which she sings, you start to notice other things. She utilizes an effective range of perhaps two octives (which is average for you and me, but Joni Mitchell has four and Captain Beefheart swirls up and down seven). This in itself is no problem of course, but very rarely does she sing a song using any tricks or vocal nuances she hadn't used in the previous one. She has a bad habit of shifting into her high register for the 'memorable' choruses, poignant moments and in fact, every emotional peak is presented this way. Trouble is, she loses almost all of the clarity in these high notes, and the effect comes out trilling (not thrilling) as she gets only a high toneless shrill pitch that doesn't deliver completely in any one song; certainly after an hour any positive emotional effect is gone.

Judy Collins sings folk song and soft folkrock songs almost exclusively. There's a lot you can choose from in this category, since Judy doesn't write very many songs, but it is no illusion to say that she rigidly stays along two or three singing patterns for her entire repitoire of songs. After an hour, a half hour, they blend into each other, and seeing that her back-up band was strictly back-up, there just wasn't anything of interest after Judy's initial vocal charm wore off.

The back-up band, Richard Bell, Gerald Freidman, fake lead guitar, Gene Taylor, bass and Susan Evans, namby-pam drums, all played like they'd been carefully trained in giving minimal musical support. Especially Susan on drums, who played so gently it looked as if she couldn't bear hitting and thus hurting her drum set. The star of the band was Bell on piano, who gave good licks throughout.

Besides the basic problems with Judy's singing and the band's impotence, there was the trouble with the material itself. As Judy crooned through "Both Sides Now", "Bird On A Wire", "Someday Soon", "My Father", "He's The Kind Of Man" and other oldies sung with only one or two note variations from the recorded versions, I wondered what the point was. After all this time, who wants to hear the same version of tired old "Suzanne" again? I got my answer when I looked around at the audience. 75% female, 99% white, wearing the most expensive clothes I'd ever seen at any non-Classical concert. These girls from Smith and Mount Holyoke wanted to hear "Suzanne" note for note, and Judy knows it too. These girls go to see very few concerts a year, and when they do go they want their $5.50's worth in the form of a safe event with little or no suspense involved. These girls paid their dough, and they want to sit there, just like in their dorm rooms, and hear lines like "Oh had I a golden needle and thread so fine/I would weave a magic strand of a rainbow design." Musical expirimentation? New arrangements? Forget it.

As I looked sround I noticed several fascinating things: 1) The girls had the longest hair I've ever seen, and the boys had the shortest I'd seen since Deerfield Academy. 2) The sober atmosphere of absolute stillness and rapt attention was absolutely stifling. After an hour of this I felt like doing something outrageous, like bouncing a wad of gum off the pumpkin head of the girl two rows in front of me. 3) The most humerous sight of the night were the sloppy guys from UMass taking their clean, neat dates from Smith to see Judy Collins. Absolutely funny. 4) Two middle aged gents in their mod get-ups listened to the crowd applaud an anti-war song. "Must be a McGovern crowd." said one. 5) When was the last concert you attended where everyone just clapped? No whistles, no shouting, no human voices to be heard, just the impersonal applause. 6) When was the last concert you attended where you were ushered to your seat by middle-aged matrons in casual-formal attire? 7) When was the last concert you attended where no one moved? 8) Judy did sell out the 2500 seat auditorium, something that Led Zeppelin/Taj Mahal in 1969 (2000 filled) and Paul Butterfield in 1970 (500 filled!) failed to do.

Judy, your old stuff is wearing thin, and most of the new stuff you do, like Steve Stills' "So Begins The Task" and Tom Paxton's lame Attica Prison song, aren't all that hot. And really, it's incongrous enough the way 'damned' pops out of your pristine mouth in "Someday Soon", but when you sing "City of New Orleans" with pe.fect vocal pronunciation until you hit that chorus line, "Good morning America, how are ya", well, it's too much! It makes me wince to think of it. See it for yourself, Judy Collins saying "ya". Nope. Arlo might be able to puff it off, but not you, you're too perfect.

"Easy Times" is a nice new song by Judy for a film called The Repeater about prisons, and her performance of Brel's "Sons" transcended anything I've said previously. But that was about it.

Actually, we were given a viable counterbalance all evening, as the ladies room right behind us was always attended by at least three girls waiting. Well, between the door banging and the toilet flushing, I was satisfied. Reality always seems to stick its ugly head in somewhere.

Notice

Whoever walked off with the negatives of the Grateful Dead and Larry Coryell would you please return them to the desks of Poor Richard's. The photographer has not yet seen the photos and would like them back. You may keep the contact sheet but please return the envelope of negatives. Thank you...

Springfield Symphony Orchestra

Robert Gutter, Conductor

A CHRISTMAS FESTIVAL

Tues., Dec. 12
8:00 P.M.
MUNICIPAL AUDITORIUM

HELEN BOATWRIGHT SOPRANO
NADINA BRYAN MEZZO
JON HUMPHREY TENOR
JOHN DARRENKAMP BARITONE

BACH "MAGNIFICAT"
VAUGHAN WILLIAMS "HODIE"

SPECIAL ROUND TRIP PETER PAN BUS SERVICE
From U. Mass Campus Center, downtown Amherst, Greene Hall at Smith College, Central Bus Terminal in Northampton.
Call Peter Pan Office for information.

5.75-4.75-3.50 STUDENTS 1.50
SYMPHONY OFFICE
49 CHESTNUT STREET, SPRINGFIELD, MASS. 01103
739-4728

TAKE THE MONEY AND RUN

WOODY ALLEN RETURNS!!!

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 8

THOMPSON 106 8:45, 8:45, 10:45

"PENDRIFT"

FRI. - DEC. 8 9 - 1 a.m.

Plus - 20% Discount UMass. students & guests

Album Inquest

Archie Shepp

By Gary Gomes

Archie Shepp
"Attica Blues"
(ABC—Impulse AS-9222)

Archie Shepp has always been a pioneer in finding new ways of black expression, every since his early ventures into New Black Music (called other names at various times--energy music, free jazz, the 'new thing', the black avant garde, etc.) with such geniuses as Cecil Taylor and John Coltrane, developing an entirely new concept of playing during the sixties.

The music was (and is) gut-searing and pained, outrageous cries against a background of exploding percussion, and outraged cries against the social conditions of the United States. Shepp was at that time (and still is) establishing a new criterion for music, at the same time pushing into towards the innermost boundaries and outermost boundaries of human expression. Not an easy task by any means. In this process, Shepp's drive influenced other musical minds (among them Zappa, Beefheart and a myriad of British musicians who had began listening to jazz with more than a little interest), and his influence is being felt more and more, especially when one listens to the works of groups like the Art Ensemble of Chicago and the various works coming out of the Association for the Advancement of Creative Musicians (AACM).

Connected with his capacity as a musician, Shepp has shown a strong social conscience--borne out of necessity and high conviction to his people, and the idea that America could someday be just-or die in the refusal to give that which is owed its inhabitants.

This attitude has been evident on other albums, all the way back to "Four for Trane", his earliest album as a leader. One of the songs on that album was "Rugus (swung his fact at last to the Wind, then his neck snapped)"--a composition about a lynching. Shepp has always been adamant in his demands to be treated as an equal in representative art forms, and his overriding concern over issues and the clarity of thought which he brings to many topics have caused people to call him a "racist" -- a word which is absurd when it is applied to Shepp, or any black artist for that matter, since they have none of the means or control of things which implies racism. Archie Shepp sees things with a clear mind's eye, and most of the time that clarity and precision come too close for people -- hence the derogatory expletive "racist", used in the hopes that Shepp will clam down and be a "good black". Fortunately for us, Shepp, despite great adversity, has not backed down--as this album so clearly attests.

Now, despite what I have said earlier about the anarchic (usually applied by somebody who has no way of dealing with new things) energy improvisations of the sixties, Shepp is a staunch traditionalist--and a cultural nationalist. But above all he is a man who respects his heritage, respects black music as the only art form in this country, recognizes its potential (already realized) for changing attitudes. Music is political, at least in the fact that it is a reflection of a people's culture and attitudes, regardless of what that music is. It's affects have already been felt in the fact that about 90 per cent of the music heard by whites daily is at very least black-inspired. So where does that leave us, especially as regards "Attica Blues"?

"Attica Blues" is a very political statement, as well as a musical statement. It show's Shepp's preference for getting his mesasage across in a number of formats. The opener is a punchy funky piece of music with growling wa-wa backing and forceful lyrics by Shepp's drummer William G. "Beaver" Harris, which segues into the invocation by Harris, narrated by attorney William Kunstler:

"Some people think they're within their rights, when, on command, they take a Black man's life,
Let me give you a rundown on the way I feel:
If it aint natural,
It ain't real."

Next comes "Steam", with some beautiful arrangements in the background, featuring Leroy jenkins (one of the best),

John Blake, Lakshinarayana Shankar on violins. The textures flow in and out on this song, the lyrics evoke images of natural beauty, and Joe Lee Wilson's smooth voice fairly drifts with the ebb and flow of the song, which ends with a bobbing back and forth between Shepp's excellence soprano sax playing and the strings as the number fades into the "Invocation to Charlie Parker", featuring Marion Brown on flute and percussion, Jimmy Garrisson on bass, and Bartholomew Gray, text and narration. Parker was a saxophonist, a contemporary of Miles Davis and Max Roach, among others, and perhaps the prime innovator on that pecularly Afro-American instrument, before the advent of the new era with Coltrane and Coleman. His technique was incredible, but more one of the most expressive artists to appear (and I don't exaggerate here), one of the most expressive artists of all time. He didn't die a natural death by any means--found dead of an overdose of heroin in New York at the age of 34 in 1955, literally crushed to death by the difficulties this country reaps upon black artists--difficulties Parker couldn't dodge, as some others have been lucky enough to. The music is seering and serious, and the recitation takes the forms of a narrative plea "Where is that driving music man?" The music then shifts back to "Steam, Pt. II", with a beautiful, driving soprano by Shepp, fluttering amongst clouds.

Side two opens with "Blues for Brother George Jackson", a magnificiently arranged piece with Shepp, Brown (on alto), and Roy Burrowes (on trumpet), on solos that virtually lift the top of your head off.

Another segue into the invocation of "Ballad for a Child" narrated by Kunstler: discussions of uprooting a man, taking away his origins, taking away all that he holds sacred. This leads into the aforementioned piece, beautifully and mournfully studying the same theme--torn roots, lost life, imprisonment in the end.

"Goodbye Sweet Pops" is done in memory of Louis Armstrong, who died a little over a year ago. It strikes me as a dedication to one fine man, who was one of the creators and refurbishers of blacks music, and again Shepp's playing is really stunning.

The album closes with a piece by Cal Massey, featuring Massey's 7 year old daughter Waheeda on vocals, offering new hopes for a generation of people whom we have not yet seen or experienced, and at that I believe lies the root of Archie Shepp's music. He sees all that occurs around him, but rather than despairing, he realizes that, in the recognition of that difficulty, he sees a new hope coming forth. It is those who do not see the reality, or those who see the reality, but refuse to do anything about it, and despair by retreat, that shall suffer unpleasantness and pain the rest of their life. Nothing is gained by retreat into comfortble nitches.

Quotations by Wm. G. Harris and Bartholomew Gray and published by Dawn of Freedom Publishing Company.

Captain Beefheart

By Mike Kostek

Captain Beefheart & The Magic Band/Clear Spot Reprise MS 2115 time 36:49

For a long time now Captain Beefheart has been carefully and craftily carving his name into the over-worked musical idiom called The Blues. Now he's deliberately working on this word, but he's not paying much attention to the 'Blue' part of the music; rather he's concentrating on the 'ues' part, and that's pronounced use. Where so many people are running up and down the same old blues scale playing the same things over and over, the Captain is one of the very, very few who is using the blues scale and old blues patterns as tools for crafting new music. Riffs, phrases, subjects, time signatures and all other components of the blues have been really mixed with rock, boogie, jazz and some solid space age craziness of the Captain's into the most original music we've heard since early Hendrix.

Given all the ground we've covered (Hendrix, Zappa, The Dead) and all the ground we've tried to cover (Cream, Quicksilver, Buddy Miles, Renaissance) it is indeed hard to find new ways to play, new rows to hoe. Even Miles Davis slipped badly on On The Corner. So it is with more awe and respect that we must regard artists like John McLaughlin, Zappa and Captain Beefheart and The Magic Band.

Clear Spot is Captain Beefheart's second "Commercial" album of the year. I can't really say just what is meant by commercial, but Clear Spot has something for everyone. Clear Spot has more than one soft spot. I don't mean weak, I mean soft. Easy. Pretty.

By now it is clear that The Magic Band is one of the tightest and best ensembles anywhere. On Clear Spot the band is somewhat shuffled, with Orejon (Roy Estrada) on bass, former bassist Rockette Morton now on rhythm guitar, and Ed Marimba (Art Tripp) still behind his low-key drum kit. Zoot Horn Rollo has now moved up to first guitar, and of course, the Captain leads on vocals and harmonica. Unfortunately, Winged Eel Fingerling, the one who is built like the original bean pole and who blew the top off of The Paramount Theater in Springfield last Feb. with his guitar playing, is gone. Perhaps most importantly, Ted Templeman, Van Morrison's producer, produced this record. This shift in the band's personell has changed the focus and direction just a bit, but a very important bit. With the former lineup, there were actually two lead guitars trading off, and it was very rarely that both were silent. Rockette Morton played a slashing, pummelling bass, and now that he's moved to rhythm guitar, he plays a slashing, cutting rhythm guitar in very clipped, economical fashion, leaving lots of open space for the other instruments to shine in. On Spotlight Kid, the atmosphere with the two leads is dark and closed, almost in black and white, while Clear Spot glows in hues of all persuasions.

Most of Clear Spot is in the style and shape of the power-pushers so brilliantly executed on The Kid, but there are a few changes of pace thrown in that make this set fuller, more well-rounded than The Kid. All of The Kid was recorded at 2AM sessions, and it sounds it, while Clear Spot might have been made at high noon in a golden field of grain.

"Low Yo Yo Stuff" is the Captain's new 'dance' number that should become the masturbation anthem. With its shuffle beat and drum roll rhythms, it starts things off fine. "Sometimes things are rough. You mean to tell me it's that low yo yo stuff?"

"Nowadays A Woman's Gotta Hit A Man" is a New Orleans' shuffle beat derived number, with some fluent Beefheart harmonica. A fine rave-up. Just as soon as the band gets cookin', a beautiful sax section comes in on the chorus and Zoot Horn gets in a great back-forth circular solo in the middle. "None of my women have tears in their eyes. You can ask them about me for sure."

The third track is a surprise, as it is the first slow track. "Too Much Time" is a loose, slow Top 40 ballad with sweet honking saxes and sweet singing Blackberries. This is the most imitative track on here, with its soul horns and pat arrangement, sounding like The Captain heard one too many Stylistics tunes. However, it's done carefully and beautifully. This is one Top 40 type tune that will never grow stale. "Ah got too much time to be without love."

"Circumstances" is next, and is a Spotlight type charger that is cold at first, but gradually slips into a piece as a solid peace. More Beefheart harp, galloping drums from Ed Marimba, and a hard grit vocal by the Capt. It's painfully obvious with the current dearth of rock singers that there is just no one around who can sing what Beefheart does. "You know the sun can burn you, but not half as bad as those old people do."

For the inside poop on the next selection we went to the big eyed Bean of Fort Hill who was found quaffing a frosty and gazing gleefully into his newly purloined 8X10 glossy. His voice was low and his eye was high as he talked: "'My Head Is My Only House Unless It Rains', huh, is that what he calls it? Well, my man, it's a stone gem! I mean Mike, you're my main man, and you know that Cap (see, he's really trendy at heart) is a good scoshe or two off the floor when he lays this one down. And Zoot Horn, babies, this cat is pristine, chrystalline, and a hell of a sharp dresser. Oh man, this has got to be the biggest single since "What Does It Take". In short, my man, a gas."

Er, thanks, Beamer. Side One is well-paced with the two gentle cuts breaking up the scappa flow of the other movers, and "Sun Zoom Spark" starts things spinning again at the tail end of side one. "I don't care who you are or what size you are, I'm gonna magnetize ya."

"Clear Spot" starts side two and is actually one of the best melodies on here. Zoot Horn plays some excellent fading down-slide guitar while the Captain's performance here is perhaps his best on the album with about four different voices and some more beautiful harmonica. The beauty of Beefheart's sings lies in his phrasing. He attacks the words, and makes each one ring and count. He uses the sound of each word to form something different. "Can't find my kinda folks having fun, Gotta run run run run to find a clear spot."

The great classic blues theme of the little jailbait that drives all the men wild gets a good dusting off by the Captain in a manner that would make any old bluesman smile an "Crazy Little Thing." This is a quick little ditty that flies along. "Crazy little thing has just gone crazy/How'd you get a name like crazy little thing/Probably the name that drove you crazy all along."

The final four songs on this record form a breath-taking ending that prompts me to say that no other band that we know of could produce these four tracks.

"Long Neck Bottles" is another song with a classic blues theme, this one being the wild woman who can put that likker down. Honking sax, more New Orleans Mardi Gras shuffle beat, more delightful swarms of notes from Zoot Horn's guitar and some great Who power chords make this one a swinger. "Well, one night she got to drinkin'/went out an shot up the town/I'll be damned if she didn't bring an airplane down."

Perhaps the most beautiful song on here is "Her Eyes Are A Blue Million Miles" which lives up to its stupendous title. Again the arrangement is simple, sparse and the songs flows along on its melody. No flashes of instrumental brilliance are needed to stroke this tune to life. Very similar to "White Jam" on Spotlight. "Far as I can see she loves me. Her eyes are a blue million miles."

A bolt of nasty guitar spits out of the speaker, and is answered in the other speaker. Again, and again. Thus begins the album's prime cut, "Big Eyed Beans From Venus". After the first chorus, they launch a long bridge. "Mr. Zoot Horn Roll-o, hit that long lunar note and let it floaat". Zoot Horn sets a long, outer space empty sun hum against his jagged down-scale sliding, and after about five seconds of this white noise concoction, he fires his re-entry rockets in three split-second blasts and returns back to the song. Meanwhile the rhythm section has been waiting to move, and when Zoot Horn comes back down to pick up the high-keyed rhythm lines, well, Marimba launches into a steady tatoo, Rockette slashes some new configuations on his rhythm guitar, and they sail off in a rush.

continued on page 19

continued from page 18

This power drive ends and the Captain comes back in with a triumphant recapitulation of the song sung over some gorgeous picking by Zoot Horn, and finally Zoot Horn jaggs out the long lunar note and we sail off, fading out on the real screen. "Distant cousins, there's a limited supply. And we're down to the dozens, and this is why." This cut should have every radio station in the country blatting "Big Eyed Beans From Venus" every half hour as it exudes an energy level unmatched by anything released this year in rock.

A relic from the Trout Mask-Decals days ends the record. "Golden Birdies"

"Those little golden birdies, look at them.
And the mystic Egypt tassle dangling down.
Old sleeper man shish, don't wake him.
Up one hand broom star was an Obie man
Revered throughout the boneknob land.
His magic black purse slit creeped open,
Let go flocks of them.
Shish Sookie Singabus.
Snored like a red merry-go-round horse
And an acid gold bar swirled up and down,
Up and down,
In back of the Singabus.
And the pantaloon duck white gooseneck quacked
Webcor, webcor.

Hopefully the music contained herein will demonstrate to many more why Captain Beefheart is one of the most imaginative and gifted music makers on the scene today. Of course my bland words must always fail to properly illuminate Clear Spot, so try to hear the real thing real soon, because with 12 hits in 12 tries, the title Album Of The Year seems emminently applicable.

At The Folklore Center

A smallish ad in the entertainment section of the Sunday New York Times told it all, opening at the Gaslight II on MacDougal Street, SPIDER JOHN KOERNER. A name from everybody's past. Everybody, at least who'd lived through the folk boom of the early 1960's.

One wondered as Spider John Koerner came on to the stage at the close of their set, adjusted a beat-up ol'Fender amp (Spider John Koerner playing electric guitar?) and lit into a set that was many things to many people. Besides being good music it was to a lot of us pure nostalgia. It was still the time of the Kingston Trio when the first red vinyl Audiophile disk of Koerner, Ray and Glover burst upon us all bringing to life what had previously only been names in the "Little Sandy Review." John had gone to school in Minneapolis and met the legendary Dave "Shaker" Ray. They had jammed together and were close friends. Close enough that on his way to New York City the Shaker stopped off in Rochester N.Y. to renew acquaintances. The anticipation of seeing his buddy caused John Koerner to pen his second, but most famous, composition, "Good Time Charlie's Back In Town Again." Sometime later Spider John returned the visit and at Dave Ray's apartment on Sheridan Square in New York met Tony "Little Sun" Glover, the harp player who was to complete one of the best if not the most popular of folk trios of the 1960's, Koerner, Ray and Glover.

"It was never all that much a group. It was just that we played some jobs together and recorded together and we hung out and got drunk together. We were all friendly, liked each other, played the same kind of music had similar interests."

So back to the woodshedding in Minneapolis went Koerner, Ray and Glover and through the pages of the only magazine that catered to the taste of the folk music purist, "Little Sandy Review" those of us outside of Minneapolis heared that there was something going on. Their first recording was on Audiophile and was later sold to Elektra who followed it with two more records by the trio plus various recordings by individual members of the group. The first recording experience was the strangest.

"We went down to Milwaukee and recorded in some women's club that they had down there. The guy was kind of a prude or somethin' like that. He didn't want us to do any drinkin' while we were makin' the record and he didn't want us to swear and all kind of things like that."

When Koerner, Ray and Glover came to New York their second album the people from Elektra records took them down to the Philadelphia Folk Festival where they sang late one evening and were asked by Betsy Siggins if they would work at Club 47 in Boston. So for a time the trio did work together professionally, They were other engagements, quite a few concert dates etc. and then...

"Dave and Tony were kind of livin' in Minneapolis cause that was home to them and they had things holdin' 'em there. I had the chance of travel and I could get the work so I stated travelin' around. Then we'd just meet whenever we were in the same town together and play jobs whenever anybody was willin' to put us together."

And what was the latest time that anybody was willin' to put Koerner, Ray and Glover together?

"It was kind of wierd. We played the Tyrone Guthrie Theatre in Minneapolis. We played one night opposite the Who. We were very drunk and fairly well stoned and we had practiced together just a couple of hours. It was kind of shakey but we had a hell of a good time.

And that's another thing about Spider John Koerner, everybody has a good time when he plays. There's a verse borrowed from here and a song learned from there and a general excess of good old timey enthusiasm for what he's doin' that goes along with the man. I asked John about Bob Dylan. Bob Dylan doesn't come out of hiding too often these days. He had been at the party for Dave Bromberg the night before and now he showed up, not for a party, but for a private party by himself listening to Spider John. Just how close were they?

"We were all kind of part of the same scene. There's a bunch of us who knew each other and played together. At the time he was just another one of the people although we could all kind of tell that he was pretty talented. I can remember some of the early songs he wrote. They were a little different than the later things. I can't remember exactly what they were."

So, Spider John Koerner came back to the Gaslight and found an audience that remembered, requested, demanded..."Good Time Charlie," "Lady Day," "Eugene C.," and all the oldies. Spider John Koerner has survived. He has survived the success syndrome that made instant superstars out of folksingers. He has survived the concerts before hundreds and today is not only content to play to smaller houses but in fact, finds it preferable. Spider John Koerner has survived success...the kind of success that makes an individual forget who he is.

"I guess I never had very much trouble gettin' jobs. The type of jobs changes. There's not so much club work now as there was three or four years ago. I've always been able to work. I haven't make my living any other way since I started. "I find that there's new kids startin' to play without big notions. They wanna make it at playing and all that but there's a lower keyed kind of thing and you can find local people in a town that just play around. I kind of like that kind of a scene you know."

Spider John Koerner picks up his guitar, originally a Gretsch 75 but not so you'd recognize it. New fingerboard, new pegs, new bridge and three extra strings. He begins his characteristic Spider John Koerner strum.

"Just slappin' around but there's a lotta good thumb action in it. Tony Glover calls it the oatmeal shake, cause it looks like you dipped your hand in a bucket of oatmeal and tryin' to get it off by shakin' your hand around."

Taj Mahal makes friends with the blues.

The blues is sweet. The blues is funky. The blues is as natural as a song. And Taj Mahal is everything the blues is. The basic homegrown stuff. Taj knows the blues. They're in his blood. And when he sings, people feel good all over. Taj calls his new album "Recycling the Blues and Other Related Stuff." One side live. One side studio. Homegrown blues, funk, gospel and a couple of smoothies just for fun. Listen to it with a friend or other related stuff. When the blues feels this good what could be bad?

On Columbia Records and Tapes

for really nice clothes
BAGGY PANTS
Jeans, Shirts & Jerseys

BEAUTIFUL LEATHERS
&
UNIQUE SILVER JEWELRY
(Birckhead-crafted)

also Western Shirts, Jackets & 2nd Hand Clothes

DOWN THE ALLEY • ACROSS FROM SOUND IDEAS CLIMAX DRYGOODS

Jane Fonda and Robert Redford
in
"Barefoot in the Park"
Fri., Dec. 8 7, 9, 11 p.m. 50¢ S.U.B.

LAFAYETTE
SEIDEN SOUND RADIO ELECTRONICS

Daily 10 a.m. — 9:00 p.m.
Sat. 10 a.m. — 5:30 p.m.

Use Our Convenient Lay-away Plan

What is a RTS-29?
It is a
AM-FM Stereo Receiver
8 Track Tape Deck
Full Sized Record Changer
2 Air Suspension Speakers
but it is also $149.95

BSR
McDONALD

BSR RTS-29

List $269.95

Now* $149.95

★ At The Sound Ideas People

LAFAYETTE
RADIO
ELECTRONICS

your BANKAMERICARD welcome here
master charge

Owned & Operated
By Seiden Sound

AMHERST
STORE
15 E. PLEASANT ST
549-1105

Pittsfield, Mass.
Colonie, NY
Albany, NY
Schenectady, NY
Glensfalls, NY

Tube Shots

By Zelda Gilroy

Saturday

Pro Football
The Browns vs. the Bengals. Channels 22 and 30.
2
The Boardwalk Bowl
UMass vs. the University of California at Davis. Channel 40.
Hollywood Television Theater
"The Shadow of a Gunman", Sean O'Casey's tragicomedy about the Irish rebellion. Set in a squalid Dublin tenement during the 1920s, the play revolves around Donal Davoren a would-be poet suspected of being a rebel gunman. The other tenants relish the romantic notion -- until the bloody reality of the revolution hits home. O'Casey's 1922 work was directed by Tony winner Joseph Hardy ("Child's Play"). Channel 57.
Pro Football
The Redskins vs. the Cowboys. Channel 3.
5
Wide World of Sports
Something for everyone. 1. The International Pro Skiing Championship from Snowbird, Utah. Frank Gifford reports. 2. The Ladies Demolition Derby from Islip, N.Y. Jim McKay covers the event. 3. The Florida State Circus from Pine Mountain, Ga. Channel 40.
8
All In The Family
Archie wins a lottery ticket. Channel 3.
8:30
Playhouse: New York
"To Be Young, Gifted and Black" has been called "an affecting (self-) portrait of a beautiful, talented, courageous and almost refreshingly complex woman." It tells the story of the late playwright Lorraine Hansberry, in her own words, and interweaves scenes from her plays, including "A Raisin in the Sun"; readings from diaries and letters relating her pride as a black artist in America; and films tracing her adulthood in Harlem and first trip to the South. With Barbara Barrie, Ruby Dee, Al Freeman Jr., Lauren Jones, Claudia McNeil, and Blythe Danner. Channel 57.
11:30
Thriller
Where have all the mirrors gone? A young couple move to an old house and find all the mirrors locked in the attic. Channel 40.
11:45
Pro Hockey
The Boston Bruins vs. the Philadelphia Flyers. Channel 22.

SATURDAY'S FILMS

9
Love is a Ball (1963)
That's what you think; silly romance set on the Riviera with Glenn Ford, Hope Lange, and Charles Boyer. Channels 22 and 30.
11:30
Rome Adventure (1962)
In the early Sixties Warner Brothers made an entire series of these romantic comedy-dramas featuring their stock of television players. Sappy stuff about a young librarian who goes to Italy on a holiday and meets a young American architectural student. With Suzanne Pleshette and Troy Donahue. Channel 3.
11:45
Boy Meets Girl (1938)
Hollywood is the topic of satire in this yarn about a pair of movieland hacks devising a cliche-ridden script. James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Marie Wilson, Ralph Bellamy. Channel 30.
1:45
Kiss of Evil (1963)
Couple menaced by vampire in an eerie chateau. Smoothly made; good creeps for devotees with Edward De Souza, Clifford Evans and Jennifer Daniel. Channel 3.

Sunday

1
Pro Football
The Dolphins vs. the Giants. Channel 30.
2
The Packers vs. the Vikings. Channel 3.
The Patriots vs. the Saints. Channel 22.
4
The Colts vs. the Chiefs. Channels

Earl Warren, the Chief Justice of the United States from 1953 to 1966, talks about the "Warren Court" in his first national television interview, "A Conversation with Earl Warren," Mon. at 8:00 on Channel 57.

22 and 30.
6
60 Minutes
Heroin traffic -- from Turkey through Marseilles to New York. Mike Wallace opens the film report in Afyonkarahisar, Turkey, a town whose name roughly translates as "black castles of opium." Included is a look at how poppies are processed into a morphine base. Morley Safer continues the report in Marseilles, the French connection of the route, where the morphine base is refined into heroin, in New York, Wallace tells how the heroin may be smuggled into the U.S., how it reaches the addict, and what is being done at Federal and local levels to stop its entry. Channel 3.

10
Firing Line
Vietnam and the Johnson Administration is tonight's topic. William F. Buckley Jr.'s guests are Walt W. Rostow, LBJ's National Security Affairs Adviser, and his brother Eugene Rostow, State Department consultant in the same period. Channel 57.

SUNDAY'S FILMS

9
The World of Suzie Wong (1960)
Suzie Wong, a Hong Kong courtesian, falls in love with an upstanding American photographer who is only interested in her modeling ability. Unpleasant and tasteless melodrama, taken from the highly successful theater success with William Holden and Nancy Kwan. Channel 40.
12
The Devil and Miss Jones (1941)
Hilarious yarn about the union-minded employees of a store whose hated owner takes a job in their ranks. Jean Arthur, Robert Cummings and Charles Coburn head the fine cast. Channel 40.

Monday

9:30 a.m.
Not For Women Only
Dustin Hoffman, Judith Crist, Rex Reed, screenwriter Eleanor Perry ("David and Lisa") and director William Friedkin ("The Fourth Connection") discuss movies all week. Channel 22.
8
Conversations with Earl Warren
Desegregation, the assassination of President Kennedy, reapportionment ... significant events in the career of Earl Warren, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court from 1953 to 1969. Tonight, Mr. Warren recalls his first day on the bench ("The most lonesome day of my life") and key decisions, from Brown vs. Board of Education (1954), a landmark civil rights case, to Baker vs. Carr (1962), which declared "one man, one vote" in state legislatures. Channel 57.
9
Pro Football
The Jets vs. the Raiders. Channel 40.
9
The Plot to Overthrow Christmas
The Golden Age of radio drama lives again in this re-creation of a studio broadcast of Norman Corwin's 1938 verse play about the devil's plan to kill off Santa Claus. Corwin, one of the great radio dramatists of the '30s and '40s, is seen directing radio and TV veterans in the drama. Host: Charles Champlin. Channel 57.

MONDAY'S FILMS

7
The Barrets of Wimpole Street (1957)
A dull remake of the tumultous love story of Elizabeth Barrett and Robert Browning. Best thing: John Gielgud's tyrannical father. Channel 3.
9
A Shot In The Dark (1964)
Peter Sellers returns as the "Monsier Clouseau" character he introduced so splendidly in The Pink Panther. This is an equally funny farce in which Sellers becomes involved in a murder investigation that leads him from night clubs to a nudist colony. Good cast, featuring Elke Sommers, George Sanders, and Herbert Lom. Directed by Blake Edwards. Channel 40.

Tuesday

8
Basketball
UMass vs UConn. Channel 3.
Hallmark Hall of Fame
"The Snow Goose." The marshes of England's Essex coast provide the setting for Paul Gallico's story about a withdrawn, deformed artist; an orphaned teen-age girl; and the injured snow goose that brings them together. Jenny Agutter won an Emmy for her portrayal of the shy orphan. Gallico adapted this drama from his 1941 novella. Filmed on location by British director Patrick Garland. Channels 22 and 30.
8:30
Bill Moyer's America
"America for Sale," a report on the land-buying phenomenon -- and swindlers who net $2 million a year by selling worthless or non-existent property. In focus: the Southwest, where one New York housewife discovered the land she bought "had washed away." Host Bill Moyers is the reporter. Channel 57.
10
America
"Part 3: Making a Revolution" -- why we fought for independence and won. In Washington, D.C., host Alistair Cooke views America's birth certificate, the Declaration of independence. Recalling events that led to its writing takes Cooke to ... the site of the Boston Massacre; inside the Old South Meeting House where "abbie rouser" Sam Adams founded an underground protesting British taxes and troops; and Concord (Mass.) Bridge, where an improvised militia routed the enemy. Cooke reflects on reasons for the American victory -- guerrilla tactics and a better musket -- and also profiles Thomas Jefferson, Patrick Henry and, at Mount Vernon, George Washington. Shown without commercial interruptions. Channels 22 and 30.

TUESDAY'S FILMS
Pursuit (1972)
Ben Gazarra and E.G. Marshall are adversaries in this story about a Government agent trying to keep a madman from committing a terrible crime. Michael Crichton ("The Andromeda Strain") makes his directorial debut with this TV movie, based on a novel he wrote under the pseudonym John Lange. Filmed on location in San Diego. Channel 40.
11:30
David and Lisa (1962)
Frank Perry's first and best film. A poignant and powerful study of tow pupils at a school for the emotionally disturbed. Two superb performances from Kerr Dullean and Janet Margolin; filmed in semi-documentary style in and around Philadelphia. Was the "sleeper" film of 1962 and the one which make a reputation for the directing-screenwriting team of Frank and Eleanor Perry. Our pick for movie of the week. Channel 3.

Wednesday

8
Harlem Globetrotters
The Globetrotters and Terein Graves in comedy, music and a bit of razzle-dazzle ball handling. Included: a spoof of "Shaft", with clips from the movie. Cameos by Bill Cosby, Norm Crosby, Dom DeLuise, Cass Elliot, Will Geer, Ted Knight, Jean Stapleton, Sally Struthers. Channel 3.

Thursday

8
The Advocates
Abortion on demand is the topic. Issues in focus: the marital right of privacy, legal rights of the unborn and medical ethics. Advocates: Brenda Fasteau, an ACLU lawyer who speaks for abortion; and Michael Uhlmann (opposed). Channel 57.
9
International Performance
A rare TV treat: three musical giants play Beethoven. Pianists Claudio Arrau and the late Robert Casadesus, and violinist Zino Francescatti perform two sonatas composed in the early stages of Beethoven's deafness. 1. Arrau is soloist for the tone poem "Appassionata (No. 23 in F Minor). 2. Casadesus and Francescatti do the "Kreutzer" sonata for violin and piano. Channel 57.
THURSDAY'S FILMS
How To Murder Your Wife (1965)
George Axelrod ("The Seven Year Itch") wrote and produced this farce about an accidental marriage. Jack Lemmon plays a comic-strip creator, a confirmed bachelor until disaster strikes. He awakens after a wild shindig with a hangover-and a wife, an Italian bombshell determined to domesticate him. Channel 3.

BORN FREE
Saturday, Dec. 9, 1972
7, 9, 11 o'clock 50¢
Hampden D.C. (Southwest)

SOUTH STREET
RHYTHM AND BLUES BAND
at Thoreau House
FRI., DEC. 8 9 - 1
50¢ admission entitles you to 2 free beers

Greenough presents — CONCERT/DANCE with
FAT and
SOUTH STREET RHYTHM & BLUES BAND
Sunday, Dec. 10 8:30 - 12:30 $1.00
Worcester Dining Commons (East Room)

"YOUTH WELL SPENT"
SAT., DEC. 9
BLUEWALL

Weekend

By Addison DeWitt

Special note: This edition of WEEKEND covers events through Sunday, December 17. A special edition of POOR RICHARD'S will be published Monday, December 18 and will cover the remaining events on campus this semester.

Theater

THE FANTASTICKS

The Schmidt-Jones musical about the fraility of love has been running for more than a decade off Broadway. It still is at the 199 seat Sullivan Street Playhouse. The play, when done well, is a charmer; with an attractive score that includes "Soon It's Gonna Rain," "I Can See It," and "Try To Remember." At the Patterson House Theater, December 7, 8 and 9, 8:30.

THE TAMING OF THE SHREW

The University of Massachusetts Theatre will continue its 1972-73 season with a free-form production of Shakespeare's The Taming of the Shrew. The play will be presented on Dec. 7-9 and 14-16 in Bartlett Auditorium at 8:30 P.M. The University Theatre Ensemble, under the direction of Gary Stewart of the Theatre faculty, considers the play as a comment on the complexity and ambiguity of male/female roles and relationships. While respecting the essential Shakespearian forms and language, the production explores unusual visual, physical and musical means of commenting on the text.

The Taming of the Shrew is the first of a continuing series of "Ensemble" productions, a special form of theatre which focuses attention on the actor and his art. Stage space in the ensemble concept is meant to be neutral; the wardrobe, of indeterminate style and period; properties and set pieces, generalized extensions of the actor rather than particular objects in time and space. Thus, in the absence of external supports, the ensemble production must rely exclusively on the interplay of actors' and audiences' imaginations for constructing the specific verbal and visual world of the play. The ensemble experience is perhaps the most crucial - and demanding - in the actors' training. Of all theatrical events, it is certainly one of the most stimulating and challenging for audiences.

Tickets for The Taming of the Shrew may be obtained at the Bartlett Auditorium box office beginning Monday, November 27, or by calling 545-2579.

The box office will be open from 10:00 A.M. to 4:00 P.M. Monday through Friday and on the evenings of performances. Tickets are $1.00 for UMass. students and $1.50 for the general public.

Lew Ayres in All Quiet On The Western Front.

Music

AMHERST FOLKLORE CENTER

Arlo Guthrie? Larry Corryell? See elsewhere for details.

CHAMBER MUSIC

The University of Massachusetts Amherst Trio whose members are Estela K. Olevsky, pianist; Julian Olevsky, violinist; and Leopold Teraspulsky, cellist will make its first appearance of this season Sunday, Dec. 17, at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium.

The program will include works by Schubert, Beethoven and Ravel.

Members of the Trio are internationally acclaimed instrumentalists and have appeared on the University campus concert series as soloists and in chamber music programs in past seasons, with public and press acclaim. The public is invited; admission is free.

THE NEW RIDERS OF THE PURPLE SAGE

This fine Columbia group comes to John M. Greene Hall, Smith, this evening at 8. Also on bill: Eric Anderson. $4.50 and $5.00.

UMASS CHORALE

The UMass Chorale will present its annual winter concert in Bowker Auditorium on Wednesday, December 13, at 8:00 P.M.

Under the direction of Dr. Richard du Bois, the Chorale has become known as one of the finest choralensembles in New England. The group has toured throughout the United States and Europe, and has made numerous radio and television appearances.

The Chorale's program will feature a performance of the rarely heard Gloria Concertata of Claudio Monteverdi, with organ and brass sextet. Also featured will be a contemporary setting of the Magnificat, for chorus, organ, and trumpet, by Halsey Stevens. Walter Chesnut, of the Music Department Faculty, will be trumpet soloist, and Miss Karen Thomas will assist at the organ. The program will also include two double choruses by Brahms and Pachelbel, and works by Faure, Howells, Phillips, Scarlatti and Corsi.

The Chamber Singers, a small ensemble of sixteen voices, will perform seasonal music of the Renaissance.

The Western Massachusetts Youth Chorus, directed by Dr. du Bois, will make its debut performance at this concert. The Youth Chorus, was founded under the auspices of the Massachusetts Music Educators Association for the purpose of providing outstanding young singers, selected by audition from High Schools in the Western Massachusetts area, with an ongoing outlet for their talents.

The concert is open without charge to the public.

Special Edition of Poor Richard's

Monday December 18

OLD WEIRD HAROLD'S
ROUTE 9 HADLEY
(NEXT TO WALTER'S)
OPEN: MON. - SAT. 10 a.m. - 8 p.m.
Tel. 586-3727

Amherst Cinema 253-5126 24 hr. phone
EVES. at 8:00 the ultimate trip
2001: A SPACE ODYSSEY
Wed. to Sun. 50¢ Discount with Student I.D.
MON. & TUES. ADULTS $1.00

Largest Retail Distributor for "Male" Jeans in Massachusetts
$18.00 values NOW 5.00
also New West. Denim Shirts 5.50
★New West Style Boots 10.00★
★Parkas & Snowmobile Suits 25.00★
Our Specialty Used Clothing
JEANS $2.50 FURS $15 - $25
FLANNEL SHIRTS $1.50
SWEATERS $4.00
LEATHERS $15.00
SUEDES $10.00
OVERALLS $4.50
P-COATS $12.00
DENIM JACKETS $4.50
NAVY 13-BUTTON PANTS $6.00
CORDUROY JACKETS $5.00

• TR 6
• TR 250
• TR 4-3
• SPITFIRE
TUNE UP!
TRIUMPH
Service Special
4 cyl. models $20.00
6 cyl. models 3.00 extra
INCLUDING PARTS
FREE Oil & Lube
(Reg. $26-$30 Value)
IMPORTS, LTD. by appointment only 584-5009
251 Russell St., Hadley
THIS SPECIAL GOOD THROUGH DECEMBER ONLY!

Films

ALL QUIET ON THE WESTERN FRONT (1930)

Even two generations removed from the war this film scathingly portrays, it remains one of the most gripping antiwar film ever created. Adapted from the widely read novel by Erich Maria Remarque, it stands as a remarkable social document reflecting the strong pacifist leanings found between the two World Wars. The story concerns a handful of German soldiers, students who volunteer, and how their romantic vision of war is shattered by the squalor of the trenches. The adaptation was by Maxwell Anderson, whose usual overripe poetic texts is thankfully restrained. Lewis Milestones direction never flinches from presenting the death of soldiers as an appalling waste of lives. By presenting the war from the German point-of-view, the universality of the horror made American audiences flinch with disgust. The craftmanship of this early sound film may seem naive by today's standards, but the strength of its message is not. Oscars for Best Picture and Director, with Lew Ayres, Slim Summerville, and Ben Alexander. Student Union Ballroom, Wednesday, 12/13, 7 and 9:15.

BAREFOOT IN THE PARK (1967)

Neil Simon's Broadway success about newlyweds and their six-floor walk-up apartment was made by stage director Gene Saks into a pleasant enough film comedy. It doesn't expand upon the material and seems a bit stagebound, but is performed well enough by Robert Redford, Jane Fonda, and Mildred Natwick. (See ad for time and place.)

BORN FREE (1965)

A commercially successful though aesthetically cloying version of Joy Adamson's book about a tame lioness in Kenya. Indifferently directed by James Hill apart from a few animal sequences: Virginia McKenna and Bill Travers perpetuate the myth of the stiff upper lip. (See ad for time and place.)

BUTCH CASSIDY AND THE SUNDANCE KID (1970)

A fresh and successful comedy-western which follows the exploits of two renegade outlaws in the early part of the century. The sardonic screenplay of William Goldman is based upon the real life exploits of Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid and in the process touches upon the theme of the closing of the American frontier. The direction is taut and ingenuous, the photography is beautiful, and the performances of Paul Newman, Robert Redford, and Katherine Ross are as likeable. Student Union Ballroom, Saturday, 12/16, 7 and 9:30.

BUTTERFLIES ARE FREE

The play ran for more than three years on Broadway and was a successful comedy - drama cut from the Neil Simon - Jean Kerr mold. Fast one-liners and the quick jab to the sentimental jugular. The story concerns a blind boy who breaks away from his well-meaning, but over bearing mother to live in a city apartment. He meets the girl-next-door, an amoral kook, and immediately falls in love. Complication arise in the shape of his meddling mother and her annoying boyfriend. Two dimensionally filmed, as if still on stage, it's only interesting in the performance of Eileen Heckart as Mom. Otherwise the blandness of Edward Albert as the blind boy and the mindlessness of Goldie Hawn as the kook prevail. Campus Cinemas, Hadley

CABARET

A superior film musical the best of the genre in twenty years. The film sets a love story between a young cabaret performer Sally Bowles and a British student against the turbulence of Berlin in the early 1930's. Vastly entertaining and beautifully performed by Liza Minelli as Sally Bowles, Michael York, and

Touch of Evil

Joel Grey as the Master of Ceremonies. The musical numbers, by John Kander and Fred Ebb, all take place within the cabaret. Impressively directed by Bob Fosse. Academy of Music, Northampton.

DIAL M FOR MURDER (1954)

Alfred Hitchcock made this film version of the successful stage thriller in the then faddish three dimensional process. The fad faded before the film's release and the studio released the film in the conventional mode. It is one of Hitchcock's less prestigious efforts, but diverting enough. Frederick Knott's stage play concerned a husband who wants to murder his wife and plots an elaborate plan to that end. With Ray Milland, Robert Cummings, and Grace Kelly. Gamble Auditorium, 12/9, 7, 9, 11.

DOCTOR ZHIVAGO (1966)

David Lean's adaptation of Boris Pasternack's modern epic amounts to One Man's Family - Cossack style. This stick production is long and overly romantic. It reduces the novel to stick magazine pulp. The direction plods, the performances are slack and sloppy, the screenplay is academic and confusing, and the overall effect is as empty as the Maurice Jarre music score. A large cast is led by Omar Shariff as Zhivago, Julie Christie as the ever-patient Lara, and Geraldine Chaplin, Tom Courteney, and briefly radiant in a supporting role is Rod Steiger. Calvin Theater, Northampton.

ELVIS: THAT'S THE WAY IT IS

A documentary about Elvis featuring his Las Vegas International Show. Mahar, Saturday, 12/9, 7, 9, and 11.

THE GOOD, THE BAD, AND THE UGLY (1966)

The American West during the Civil War is beautifully portrayed in this epic spaghetti western directed by Sergio Leone. The story tells of the relationships between three outlaws; Lee Van Cliff plays a sadistic murderer, Eli Wallach plays a nasty scoundrel, and Clint Eastwood is the anti-hero of the film as the Man With No Name. The photography evokes the dirty, sparseness of the time. Shot in Spain, it suggests the American West of a century ago. Campus Center Auditorium, Tuesday, 12/12, 7 and 9:30.

A HARD DAY'S NIGHT (1964)

The Beatles travel to London for a television show accompanied by their manager and Paul's grandfather. They enjoy various escapades but finally complete the show. The exuberant vitality of this episodic film derives less from the Beatles' own admirable charm than from the stylistic effects that Lester contributed. The camera runs, zooms, and swoops, with the fast cuts adding to the sense of hyperactivity. Despite appearances, only a few scenes were improvised; notably among these are sequences at the press conference and on the playing field. Although this is Lester's first important film, his technical training in making TV commercials and the anarchic The Running, Jumping and Standing Still Film served him well. Gamble Auditorium, Mt. Holyoke, Saturday, December 16, 8.

LADY SINGS THE BLUES

This musical bio of Billie Holiday oozes all over the screen with typical Hollywood razzle-dazzleness. Contrary to what the ads say Diana Ross is not Billie Holiday, but she makes a decent movie debut. The film lacks direction; it can't decide whether to be a depiction of the degeration of a musical great or a super spectacular vehicle for Miss Ross. Some award should go to this film for its audacity of having Miss Ross singing "My Man" near the film's close, a la Streisand in Funny Girl. Billy Dee Williams is commendable as the unidentified man in Billie's life. Showcase Cinemas, West Springfield.

THE LAVENDER HILL MOB (1951)

This lighthearted satire of British middle-class values is one of the best of the postwar British comedies produced at Ealing Studios under Michael Balcon. Its pace is continually lively, the robbery sequence and the final chase incorporate a fine sense of film comedy timing, and there is an exhilarating sequence on the Eiffel Tower. Alec Guinness' brilliant performance in this and the earlier Kind Hearts and Coronets helped make him famous. Main Lecture Hall, Hampshire College, Sunday, 12/17, 7 and 9:30.

THE LOWER DEPTHS (1957)

An adaptation of Gorky's play in an unusual setting - Edo during the last days of the Tokugawa period. "The cast and crew, with lights, full costume, makeup, and camera positions, rehearsed for forty days before the actual shooting...there were no leading characters, the film being entirely a series of vignettes. One of the most important results was an ensemble effect rare on the screen, an acting unit, one part very carefully balanced against the other. Another result was that the film had real style, a consistent set of rules governing characters, camera movements, formal composition and editing" (Donald Richie, Joseph Anderson). Sage Hall, Smith College, Saturday, 12/16, 7:15 and 9:30.

MARAT/SADE (1966)

Peter Brook's film version of the brilliant play about revolution and society by Peter Weiss is in some ways merely a cinematic record of the stage production. The forty-one members of the original British cast were retained, including the superb performances by Ian Richardson as Marat and Patrick Magee as de Sade. But it succeeds brilliantly as cinema, not only because the original play itself seems nearer to cinema than conventional theater, but also because Brook uses his cameras imaginatively to concentrate attention on details or to emphasize emotional mood in a way a stage production could never achieve. Maip Lecture Hall, Hampshire College, Friday 12/8, 8.

MARILYN (1964)

A pseudo-documentary which covers the actress's career at Twentieth Century Fox. It is made up mostly of film clips from the fifteen-plus pictures she made at the studio from the late Forties to the early Sixties. Cuts from The Asphalt Jungle, her first role of any substance; All About Eve, where she nearly steals a scene from Bette Davis, Magera, How To Marry A Millionaire, River Of No Return, Gentlemen Prefer Blonds, There's No Business Like Show Business, the famous "Heat Wave" number, Bus Stop, The Seven Year Itch, and Let's Make Love. The film excludes her work done at other studios specifically her Sugar from Some Like It Hot; but the film has its moments most memorably Marilyn singing "Diamonds Are A Girl's Best Friend" on a Parisean nightclub stage. Mahar, Saturday, 12/9, 8, 10, 12.

THE MECHANIC

Charles Bronson is currently the world's most popular star even though he is still considered a B-movie actor in this native country. This film will maintain this reputation; he plays a hired assassin who traps his victims in a number of gory situations. Sicky stuff. Showcase Cinemas, West Springfield.

MEDIUM COOL (1968)

Haskell Wexler's first attempt at writing and directing; he should have stayed behind the camera. The film covers the identity crisis of a Chicago television news photographer patterned against the turbulence of the spring and summer of 1968. It's as expedient and righteous a vendetta against America as you are likely to see on the screen, but its the rantings of guilt-ridden liberal. Wexler uses the semi-documentary mode to bring to his story as many of the important events as possible; the result is the interesting story of the photographer's romance with a women from Appalachia with a trouble son is lost to Wexler's rabid finger pointing. He wears his social conscience on his sleeve; an abominable film. Others have felt differently, John Simon

AMHERST CINEMA 253-5126 24 hr. phone
SKIN FLICK
Tonight at 11:30
Barbie's Hospital Affair
A SHOCKING STORY OF THE WOMEN IN WHITE
Adult Only Rated X
All Seats $1.00
No One Under 18 Admitted

ACADEMY OF MUSIC AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
NORTHAMPTON, MASS. 584-8435
ONLY AREA SHOWING at 7:00 & 9:10 See It TONIGHT!
"The movie lights up the sky! AN ARTISTIC TRIUMPH" —Gene Shalit, NBC-TV
"A DAZZLING MUSICAL FILM!" —Judith Crist, NBC-TV (Today Show)
CABARET
With Liza Minnelli — Michael York
MONDAY & TUESDAY BALCONY SEATS are $1.50

AMHERST FILM COOP
ROBERT FRANK & ALFRED LESLIE'S
'PULL MY DAISY'
NARRATED BY JACK KEROUAC
WITH allen ginsberg
HAMPDEN DINING COMMON
7:30 SUNDAY

NO EXIT
TONITE
ENDLESS KNIGHTS
Saturday Nite
Rusty Nail Inn
Rte. 47
Sunderland
665-4937

14 More Shopping Days Till Christmas

Weekend (con't)

has called it "a landmark in the new American cinema." Judge for yourself. Wright Hall, Smith, Sunday, 12/10, 7:30.

PLAY AS IT LAYS

Frank Perry's new film (David and Lisa, Last Summer, Diary of a Mad Housewife) deals with a woman on the brink of a nervous breakdown, as did Diary. This time without the assistance of his wife on the screenplay, he badly needs her. Adapted from the novel by Joan Didion, the film never captures the terse spirit of Ms. Didion's story of a Hollywood actress at a desparate point. Despite Frank Perry's overly conscious direction; he all but murders the American Art film. Tuesday Weld and Anthony Perkins give their typically faultless performances of two people who are slightly crazed. Campus Cinemas, Hadley.

PSYCHO (1960)

Hitchcock's bleakest and most gruesome comedy. The film concerns an ax murder, a runaway secretary, and a missing cache of money. Psycho was a relatively low-budget film, produced in black and white with the methods used for shooting television serials. However, the famous 45 second Marion Crane murder sequence alone took seven days to create. Hitchcock says that it was "made with a great sense of amusement on my part. To me it's a fun picture. The processes through which we take the audience, you see, it's rather like taking them through the haunted house at the fairground." Certainly Psycho is Hitchcock's most visually involving film and his most successful in terms of audience participation.

Critics were particularly turned off by the film when first released. The idea of showing brutal murders in such a flippant and sensational way repelled many of them. A good number have returned to the film with belated praise. Mahar, Friday, 12/8, 7 and 9.

PRETTY POISON (1968)

One of the best American films of the late Sixties, and probably the least known. Its studio, Twentieth Century Fox, chose to rush the film into release, capitalizing on its specious relation with other more sensational suspense films; the result was it played to empty houses and would have been completely lost if it ween't for the critics. Pauline Kael has called Lorenzo Semple Jr.'s script the best American screenplay of 1968; he won the New York Film Critics Award for it.

The story is of a bright but disturbed young man released from a New England house of correction who gets a job in a small Massachusetts town. The film was shot entirely in a town in the Berkshires. He falls in love with an equally neurotic high school drum majorette and they prove to give a perverse rationale to murder. An asorbing and subdued thriller; the first film by the young American film director Noel Balack and it is lucidly, unpretentiously shot; every shot contributes directly to the theme. Superbly played by Anthony Perkins and Tuesday Weld as the mixed-up lovers. Thompson 104, Sunday, 12/10, 7 and 9.

QUO VADIS (1951)

The only famous novel (1896) by the Nobel Prize-winning Polish author, Henryk Sienkiewicz, has been filmed three times. The first sound version came in 1951. It cost $8.5 million and was two years in production at the Cinecitta Studios in Rome. Its enormous sets, chariot races, spectacular fire, and a sea of extras are more forgettable than Peter Ustinov's brilliant performance as an effeminate Nero.

With Robert Taylor, Deborah Kerr, and Leo Genn. Directed by Mervyn LeRoy. Campus Center Auditorium, Monday, 12/11, 8.

RED DUST (1932)

The teaming of Clark Gable and Jean Harlow made this Malayan jungle adventure better than the routine jungle adventure of its day, but its tense sexuality and the presence of Harlow and the skilled Mary Astor give it an intensity over which Fleming may have had little control. The Harlow/Gable love scenes develop, even in the severely cut prints generally available, a great deal of heat, an effect accentuated by Gable's unshaven masculinity and the ruttish sensuality of Harlow. Student Union Ballroom, Wednesday, 12/13, 9:45.

RAGE

George C. Scott's directorial debut, he also stars in this film about a man who, with his son, is endangered by nerve gas which has escaped from an army storage center. Not a bad film, but the sort of stuff for the ultimate Scott enthusiast. Jerry Lewis Cinemas, Northampton.

A RAISIN IN THE SUN (1961)

Lorraine Hansberry's celebrated drama, it won the New York Drama Critics Award the season it played on Broadway, was brought to the screen intact. The film suffers from staginess; it looks like the play. Once over this obstacle it's a remarkably moving film about a black family on the South Side of Chicago and their hope to move from the slums to a home of their own. Ms. Hansberry wrote only two complete full length plays and this is the richest of the two; warm, human, beautifully acted cinema. With Sidney Poitier. Campus Center Auditorium, Wednesday, 12/13, 7 and 9:30.

Liza Minnelli and Joel Grey in Cabaret.

REBECCA (1940)

Alfred Hitchcock's splendid example of cinema as a popular story teller. This was his first American film, the one which David O. Selnick secured his talents after the British director's multiple success; The Man Who Knew Too Much, The 39 Steps, The Lady Vanishes. This was adapted from the highly successful Daphne du Maurier novel of passion and mystery in a Cornish stately home. Hitchcock fashioned an impeccable film both from the clever screenplay of Robert E. Sherwood and Joan Harrison and the splendid cast led by Laurence Olivier, Joan Fontaine, Judith Anderson, and George Sanders. It won an Oscar for Best Picture of 1940, the only Hitchcock film to be honored. Hitchcock himself has never won a Best Director statuette, an honor to his way of thinking. Student Union Ballroom, Sunday, 12/10, 7:30 and 10.

REBEL WITHOUT A CAUSE (1956)

One of the Fifties most memorable social dramas. It tells of the frayed nerve ends between generations. Jim, the teen-age son of unhappily married, mis-matched parents, gets involved with a teen gang at a new high school. He falls for the leader's girl who dies in a car game they play at a cliff. Jim also befriends the introverted, lonely rich boy Plato. The film works with the logic of a tragedy and although it is a bit hysterical, succeeds on that level due to the superlative acting and effectively staged sequences. The film is dominated by its character study of Jim. The late James Dean's moving portrayal of a tormented adolescent was a reflection of his own character and his blue jeans and T-shirt became the standard dress of other "rebels without a cause" during the late Fifties. This remarkable study of disturbed youth, ironic, tender, and understanding, is certainly one of Nicholas Ray's most personal films. Amherst Folklore Center, Tuesday, 12/12, 7:30.

THE RED BALLOON (1956)

A small boy chases a flying red balloon through the Belleville section of Paris. Not a documentary, but a large-budget short (25,000 balloons were used costing half a million francs). It was an enormous international success. Despite a Grand Prix at Cannes it was often attacked by French critics for its (inevitable) special effects and its (often real) affectations. Outside France, the film was acclaimed as an immortal masterpiece of lyrical poetry. Very good use of color, with the red balloon enhancing the greyness of Paris. Friday, Hampden Dining Commons, 12/8, 7, 8, and 9.

A SEPARATE PEACE

John Knowles classic story of the relationship between two boys at a New England prep school during the Second World War is filled with dialogue lifted from the book and spoken all over the lovely grounds of Philip Exeter Academy. Fine if you enjoy tours. Director Larry Peerce's attempt at naturalism eliminates the story's dramatic value. It unfolds in a series of lyrical scenes which lead nowhere. The non-professional actors do well enough. One of the year's major disappointments. Campus Cinemas, Hadley.

SUNDAY, BLOODY, SUNDAY (1968)

John Schlesinger's beautifully modulated drama about the resolution of a three-way love affair. Written with perception and superbly acted by Peter Finch, Glenda Jackson, and Murray Head. Schlesinger merges a kalledoscopic view of contemporary London with the past and present private realms of the characters. Quite possibly the Best film of last year and could well be Schlesinger's best. Sage Hall, Smith College, Saturday, 12/9, 7:30 and 9:30.

TAKE THE MONEY AND RUN (1969)

Some consider this to be the best Woody Allen comedy. In some ways they're not far from the truth. It is clearly his most vibrant and absurd. Simply, it's concerned with a bank robbery, or as much as a Woody Allen film could concern anything more than his perverse comic visions. The scene where his parents attempt to disguise themselves for a press interview is a gem.

2001: A SPACE ODYSSEY (1968)

Stanley Kubrick's philosophical fantasy has the breadth and intelligence of the Scopes' trial defense. Apes cavort with abandon in the opening "Dawn of Man" sequence, until a large, black monolith comes their way and cognitive processes are revealed to them. The film dissolved from a spiralling bone thrown by an ape to a twenty-first century spaceship effortlessly floating to the "Blue Danube Waltz." The film moves through time epochs with a casual logic that many found woefully obscure. Kubrick is a master satirist, cool and brash with a misanthropic tinge. His heroes are machines; sleek and efficient and he stages their interstellar choreography like a cosmic Nijinsky. The machines are more interesting than their vague and hollow masters. The film's sprawling scope has a shimmering surface and is contained within its unspecified mystery. Many films have implied meanings, this has an implied plot. It begins with monkeys and ends with a space baby, between are machines and men and machines vrs. men. The sort of legendary, unique, whoppingly good film which uses the cinematic syntax to speak a language all its own. The music is by Strauss, Richard and Johann, and Ligeti. Amherst Cinema, Amherst.

TOUCH OF EVIL (1958)

Orson Welles' only American film in twenty-five years; some regard it as his greatest, even superceding Citizen Kane. The story is of a Mexican narcotics officer who comes to a seedy Mexican border town to investigate the automobile bombing which killed the town boss. He receives the reluctant cooperation of the corrupt Ameican detective in charge of the case. They spar off, against each other and against the suspects. An often complicated and banal plot which Welles uses as a personal vendetta against police authority. Welles has said: I firmly believe that in the modern world we have to choose between the morality of law and the morality of basic justice. That is to say, between lynching someone and letting him go free. I prefer to let a murderer go free than to let the police arrest him by mistake." The film is heavily ladened with Goya-like imagery; the seediness is that of an infected universe. Welles twist reality with culmitative technical mastery. The slums, the dives, and the odd assortment of character types have a hypnotic authenticity. Especially fine are Marlene Dietrich pianola, Akim Tamiross's dope puher, and Mercedes MacCambridge's black leather dyke. A most memorable opening which encompasses an entire street to the ticking of a time bomb. The corrupt town detective, Quinlan, is memorably played by Orson Welles. With Charleston Heston and Janet Leigh. Main Lecture Hall, Academy Building, Hampshire College, 12/10, 7 and 9:30.

ULYSSES (1967)

Joseph Strick's splendid adaptation of James Joyce's novel. Understandably it simplifies the massive day in the life of three persons in the Dublin. Because of budgetry limitations, director -- producer Strik and producer Walter Reade Jr. updated the film. This chance doesn't hurt the project which holds up well as a film. The film eliminates much of the action but the flavor of the characters is realized. Some notable sequences: the spree in the interns room at children's hospital and Molly's soliloquy which closes the film. A fine primer for those reading the novel for the first time. The acting is first-rate, with Barbara Jefford, Milo O'Shea, and Maurice Rooves. Student Union Ballroom, Tuesday, 12/12, 8 and 10.

THE VALACHI PAPERS

Terence Young's dumb Mafia picture, taken from the true story of Joe Valachi the film capitalizes shamelessly on the success of The Godfather but isn't as nearly as good. Showcase Cinemas, West Springfield.

Rock On To "PHOENIX"
FRI., DEC. 8, 9 - 1
Crabtree Basement
Come on Down and Dance
DRAFTS 25¢

LEACH HOUSE presents:
Alfred Hitchcock's
REBECCA
SUN. DEC. 10
7 & 9:30 p.m.
SUB
50¢
BASED ON DAPHNE DUMAURIER'S NOVEL

'. . . AND THAT IS WHY WE CALL IT A CABINET.'

Letters To The Editor

Just A Few Good Men

To The Editor:

First of all, let it be quite clear that I bear no grudge against Reid Fishman. I would just like to supplement Reid's article "Just a Few Good Men" by writing this letter for the benefit of any people on campus who may have an interest in the Marine Corps, particularly Marine Officer Candidates School.

The Platoon Leaders Class Program (PLC) is a Marine Corps Officer Training Program offered to college undergraduates. It enables a man to prepare for commissioned rank in either the air or ground component of the Marines before he graduates from college.

College students (there is an OCS program for women also) who are regularly enrolled day students, majoring in a field other than Medicine, Dentistry, or Theology, and who are maintaining at least a "C" average, are eligible to initiate an application.

Features of the PLC program are (1) a draft deferment (re-classified 1-D), (2) no requirements for active duty if dropped from the program, voluntarily or involuntarily, (3) commission of Second Lieutenant upon graduation, (4) law school deferments for those who want to continue their education, (5) no on-campus training, (6) eligible members may elect to receive a $100 a month stipend for each of the nine months of the school year, and (7) there is free civilian flight instruction for eligible members of the PLC Air Program.

The Marine Corps is definitely not for everybody. However, for some people, it may be an enriching personal experience, not to mention a secure financial prospect after graduation (up to $11,908 annually plus military benefits). Therefore, I am inviting any men or women on campus who have any questions or interest in the Marine PLC program to come to Alumni (Memorial) Hall between 10:00 AM and 2:00 PM on December 11 and 12. There you will find people to answer any questions you may have.

Stephen White

"Gifted" Alcoholic

To The Editor:

This letter is in response to Wednesday's letter from the "gifted" alcoholic, W.C. MacIntosh, Jr. Mr. MacIntosh's letter showed a complete ignorance of the problem of alcoholism which is prevalent not only on this campus but in the nation. First let me say that I am not a vindictive non-drinker. On the contrary, I take pleasure in tipping a frosty quite often. I am aware of the tremendous consequences of problem drinking, however. If Mr. MacIntosh were able to see the thousands of alcoholics in jails, hospitals, and similar institutions he would most certainly change his tone and seek help.

He has acknowledged the fact that he is indeed an alcoholic, which is the first and most important step towards cure. Alcohol should be treated as a disease, because it is an illness of the mind. And, like other illnesses, can be treated and cured. The University of Massachusetts is fortunate to have an Alcoholics Anonymous group on campus which meets Thursday nights in the Campus Center. May I suggest that Mr. MacIntosh take advantage of this fact, and go and hear the stories of other alcoholics who became unhappy (to put it mildly) because of alcohol. Maybe Mr. MacIntosh is happy now, but I can guarantee that he won't be for long if he keeps up his present ways.

James H. Mayher

Keep Trying

To The Editor:

Recently, I had an opportunity to spend several days in the infirmary. Probably the most depressing part of being in any place such as the infirmary is the unending use of white (i.e., white walls, white everything). Apparently, the administration of the infirmary has also recognized this fact and initiated action to improve the situation. This is being accomplished by applying modern art wall paintings.

I wish to congratulate the administration of the infirmary for recognizing the need for change and for taking a step in the right direction. Unfortunately, the trash that is being applied is as tasteless as the white that is being covered. Keep trying.

Edward A. Miller

Consciousness Raising

To The Editor:

In our society men are oppressed to conform to stereotypical roles which stress competition, one-upsmanship, and stifle their human emotional needs. Our oppression is different, but is as serious as the oppression of women. Recently, more and more men are questioning the macho, superordinate role, and are searching for ways of being that fulfill their needs and foster co-operation and community. Some men have been getting together in groups with each other to discuss and explore their lives and ways of relating to others.

On Friday, Oct. 20, 1972, the first large meeting of men in the area was held at Hampshire College AB (Academic Building) lounge. About 30 men attended, and two support groups were formed. This Sunday, December 10 at 7:30 we will have the second large group meeting in the AB Lounge. All men who are interested in exploring men's issues and sex roles are encouraged to attend. We will be discussing what has transpired in our consciousness-raising support groups, problems and successes we have had. COME OVERBRING A BROTHER!

An Open Letter

To: Robert L. Gluckstern, Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs and Provost
From: Those students who waited in line for ninety minutes at Amherst Polling places last November 7.

We acknowledge, sir, your recent memo to all deans, directors, department heads, chairmen, and faculty members regarding the class schedule on Thursday, December 7:

At the request of the Athletic Department and the University Cheerleaders and Band, we are encouraging faculty to dismiss their 11:15 classes at 11:50 and to start their 12:20 classes at 12:30 to permit students to gather at the campus pond to give the football team an appropriate send off to the Boardwalk Bowl.

We ask you publicly, sir, why didn't you encourage the Chancellor to dismiss classes, or any portion of classes, to aid students with tight class schedules last Election Day? Horrendously long lines may have been avoided had more students been free to vote at all hours of the day on November 7. The overall turnout of voters, townspeople and students alike, may well have been greater than it was had students been free to vote at all hours of the day on November 7.

We are sure the football team would have received an appropriate send off had you not encouraged class cancellation today, and therefore consider your memo nothing more than a waste of good paper. (Especially since it went to all deans, directors, department heads, chairmen, and faculty members.)

Finally, we ask that future efforts of this nature be confined to situations where they are truly needed, i.e. the encouragement of participation on national election dáys.

(submitted by Denise Magnell, Student Senate)

Editorial Points

The Boardwalk Bowl ought to be an interesting event. Not only is it being played indoors, but UMass is playing Ronald Reagan's Alma Mater. We hear that UCal's big play isn't called the bomb, it's the Raygun.

Publish And Perish

To The Editor:

The only educational goals of value are the ones we determine for ourselves. So I tell my students. And I meet with wise scorn the perpetual queries: "How long does this paper hafta be?" "What do you want in this paper?" "Do I hafta do research?" If you are simply fulfilling the demands others impose upon you during your years in school, you are only marking time. So I tell my students.

I tell them this because I want their education to be qualitatively different than mine has been. Now that the link between the job and the degree has been decisively cut, I want them to experience new freedoms. Particuarly, I want them to take the risks of deciding for themselves whom they want to become. That, I thought, was what I would do once I had obtained the Ph.D.; once I had completed my schooling, I would begin my education. But, ah, the tenure crunch felt across the nation now dims that hope.

No one would deny that research and writing are an important part of an educator's endeavor. But to the extent that we educators engage in those pursuits simply because they are the way to job security, we are still on the treadmill of fulfilling goals imposed upon us by others. We postpone our authentic education yet another decade.

The choices are hard. Perhaps I should change what I tell my students.

Margo Culley
Department of English

You Have My Money, CC

To The Editor:

Campus Center Ripoff!!! With all the words that have been written, pro and con, about the operations of the campus center, no one has yet hit upon the real problem!! The campus center has, from its birth, been the real ripoff! I find it hard to believe that the burden of paying off a loan incurred by, and made by, beaurocrats has been laid in the unsuspecting laps of young people who are trying to learn through education, how to cope with a society who cannot even wait for students to graduate to perpetrate its hypocrisy upon them. It is incredible to think that the center was designed and built on the basis of an ASSUMPTION that the state would help to pay off the bonded indebtedness. What manner of "responsible" people are these who blithely make these assumptions? The real problem lies with these incompetents. They should be made to pay off their own debts, or, failing that, the center should be closed and an appeal made to the state for funds. As it is now, the prices of goods at the campus store are ridiculous! The irony of it all is that the RIPOFF being perpetrated on the students is being paid for by the students. I for one can't afford the outrageous prices of necessary materials, and wouldn't hesitate to "steal" what I need. This is supposed to be a state institution, and as such, is purported to be here to help students from the state who cannot afford an education under normal circumstances by offering them such an education inexpensively. Why, then the other states are able to accomplish this, is Massachusetts unable to? Don't blame the students for the problems!! Let's put the blame where blame is surely overdue!! Blame the hypocrits, the money makers, the beaurocrats and of course, the state government. And by the way, who does run the campus center store? What kind of salaries are being paid? Why doesn't anyone check the employee's pockets for the much mentioned contraband?

One way to stop the ripoffs is to close the store! Or perhaps if prices were in any way reasonable, the students might even buy more merchandise, and not find it necessary to steal it.

Congratulations UMass!!! You have $60 with which I could be feeding my family.

Thomas L. Reilly

Repression Worse

To The Editor:

This letter is a response to the "confused" Paul Mishler who wrote a letter yesterday concerning the Soviet Ransom tax.

It is no secret that the repression of Jews in the Soviet Union has worsened in the past few months. The head tax which has been imposed upon educated citizens has transformed the intelligentsia into a class of indentured servants. Since this mostly affects Jews, this is discrimination against Jews (in spite of the fact that it is couched to affect all citizens). This is just another harassment to impede Jewish emigration.

It is the duty of any society to provide an education for their citizens. What the individual does with this education is his choice. No, no Soviet citizen was informed when he received his education that he would have prescribed standards of repayment later. Each society takes a risk that those who are educated will become productive in their society. The Soviet government may have all the faith in its people but many Jews have lost faith in this system. Besides, whose money is being used for education? The money is not produced by the state but by the people who have paid copious amounts in taxes already. In addition the Soviet government has imposed another tax, which is diabolical. The educated Jew leaving the USSR has also greatly contributed through their work in research to the society already. (When he leaves the country he cannot sell his house either).

If it is right for the Soviet Union to impose such a tax then it would also be right for the United States too. Should the U.S. charge all those wishing to leave the country for all the educational subsidies provided by them and not allow them to leave until it is paid?

Absolutely no Israeli citizen is required to pay back their government for their publicly subsidized education before he can leave the country. Immigrants arriving in Israel receive subsidies, whether housing or loans. No immigrant is forced to pay back all the money the Israeli government has funded them! After three years all loans are rescinded. If he does not stay that length of time he is requested to pay back part of his loans. This he is informed of from the very beginning. But no immigrant has been denied emmigration because he cannot pay back his loans. NO ISRAEL IS NOT THE USSR.

Dov Gordon

MORE LETTERS NEXT PAGE

More Letters To The Editor

Pseudo, Reid

To The Editor:

The two most outspoken types of pseudo-authorities on the military are those who have friends on active duty and those who are in the reserve. Reid Fishman has a friend in the reserve. Having been recently discharged, I really get a kick of our hearing some clown spout off about something he so obviously knows little about. ("I live next door to a guy whose girlfriend babysits for a kid who used to be a Boy Scout, so I know what I'm talking about when I say that...") Personally, I'm glad as hell to be out, and I don't wave flags, but after reading Fishman's column over a few times I still fail to grasp the relation between having a friend on inactive duty and being on active duty as a Marine Officer Aviator. The harassment at Boot Camp that the sergeant exposed him to is typical. I hated it as much as anyone, but, justified or otherwise, there is really no other way to determine how much one can take, and if I've got to depend on some guy in combat I'd like to think he could at least stand a little abuse at Basic. Fishman's extensive "research" which led to his amazing discovery of "the other side of the coin" might have been unnecessary had he happened to pick up a particular issue of Life Magazine recently. He might even have learned how to spell "Paris" Island.

That's a tough break about your friend in Pennsylvania, Reid. He really got the shaft. I think the Marines should give everyone $300. per semester and then just let them quit after three and one-half years with no obligation, don't you agree? Tell me Reid, what's the Marine Corps really like?

S. R. Sprague

Read And Throw Away

listen.
you. in terms of your accepted sanity.
what the hell are you?

are you freudian, jungian, or marcusian?
are you rock, folk, jazz, or avant garde?
are you a freak, jock, greaser, or a "damn straight"?

fucked up, spaced-out, heavy duty, or determined overweight by your ego?
are you one of them niggas, chinks, polaks, wops,
or a gin drinking intellectual liberal?
or a communist, socialist, reactionary, or a pre cambrian third worldist?

are you a poet, musician, artist, or a folkloric pot head?
into smoke, scagiola, cocaine, lsd, or powerhouse blue-walled adultery?
are you a "fellow american" and "friend" or the same two people at once?

how about it?
are you cool, jive, hip, or bizarre?
are you the spokesman, or the spoken?
the taking, or the taken?

are you the one they talk about in the editorial pages, when "they" couldn't recognize you if they kissed you?

or doesn't that matter to you?
are you freed from the chains of established morality? or simply binded by your fears of becoming so?

are you a student, or a plastic puppet in the primate hands of a criminally owned governor?

are you fuckers in a university, or a gigantic political dollhouse?

listen.
you. in terms of your accepted sanity.
what are you?

who on earth am i talking about?

russ sether

Where They're At

To The Editor:

Well, I know where this University is at. While neither cancelling classes for one minute–much less 35 minutes–to commemorate the murders of Denver Smith and Leonard Brown at Southern University, nor on November 7th for the Presidential election, the University has seen fit to cancel 35 minutes of classes on Thursday so that "...the student body may attend the send-off rally being given the football team prior to heir departure for the Boardwalk Bowl..." Bon Voyage.

Jonathan Severance

Never Ending Battle

To The Editor:

Our new phone book came today, and as I looked through it I found some things students ought to know about in their never-ending battle to keep Ma Bell from beating their budgets inordinately.

Here's what I found:

It is not widely known, but long distance phone call rates are different for out of state long distance calls compared to within Massachusetts long distance calls. For example: Rates change at 5 p.m. and again at 11 p.m. for calls you dial yourself out of state. But, for calls within Massachusetts which you dial yourself, the rates are high all the way up to 7 p.m. (Most people I talked to thought it changed at 6 p.m.)

But the biggest rip-off is that on all calls within Massachusetts for which you need the operator's assistance, you pay the same high rate at any hour, day or night. Such calls include collect calls, calls billed to another number and all calls from a coin booth.

What it boils down to for students is: If you use the operator, you pay the highest rates and you do it every hour, every day (including Sunday and holidays.) if your long distance call is within Massachusetts.

If you are lucky enough to have a phone and can dial it yourself, then wait until 7 p.m. Better yet, wait until 11 p.m. when the rates are cheapest.

I hope this letter helps reduce what those of us at UMass put into the coffers of Ma Bell. Peace.

Sidney B. Simon

Greenough presents — CONCERT/DANCE with

FAT and

SOUTH STREET RHYTHM & BLUES BAND

Sunday, Dec. 10 8:30 - 12:30 $1.00

Worcester Dining Commons (East Room)

See the other side of the mountain this January.

Take a WINTER TERM COURSE at Mt. Holyoke course registration and info at Provost's now

PARKING METERS

Effective Monday, December 11.

"Installation of 254 parking meters on the University of Massachusetts - Amherst Campus has been completed. Effective December 11, 1972, enforcement of meter use will begin. Hours of control are from 7:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m., Monday thru Friday. Locations, limits, rates and numbers of meters are:

LOCATION	NO. OF METERS	LIMIT & RATE
Presidents Drive (Haigis Mall)	52	1 hr. @ 10¢/hr. (5¢/1/2 hr.)
Fearing Street (south side)	35	2 hrs. @ 10¢/hr. (5¢/1/2 hr.) (convenience slot, quarter/2 hrs.)
Southwest Mall	20	1 hr. @ 10¢/hr. (5¢/1/2 hr.)
Lot #2 (South Clark Hall)	26	1 hr. @ 10¢/hr. (5¢/1/2 hr.)
Arnold House (front)	13	1/2 hr. @ 10¢/1/2 hr. (5¢/1/4 hr.)
School of Education (South)	22	1 hr. @ 10¢/hr. (5¢/1/2 hr.)
Lot #4 (Worcester Dining)	8	1/2 hr. @ 10¢/1/2 hr. (5¢/1/4 hr.)
Skinner Hall	6	1/2 hr. @ 10¢/1/2 hr. (5¢/1/4 hr.)
Infirmary (loop road)	40	2 hrs. @ 10¢/hr. (5¢/1/2 hr.) (convenience slot, quarter/2 hrs.)
Physical Plant (South)	8	1/2 hr. @ 10¢/1/2 hr. (5¢/1/4 hr.)
Lot #5 (near Boyden)	10	1/2 hr. @ 10¢/1/2 hr. (5¢/1/4 hr.)
Women's Physical Education (Lot 15)	14	1/2 hr. @ 10¢/1/2 hr. (5¢/1/4 hr.)

Violations for overtime parking are $2.00 per infraction. Any vehicle remaining beyond the "limit" period is considered in violation.

Vehicles parked other than between the stall lines (parked over the line), are subject to a parking ticket regardless of the time remaining on either meter of the two spaces occupied. Such violations are $5.00 per infraction.

The meters have been installed to add greater convenience for visitors to our campus as well as for our University community."

MDC CLASSIFIED

FOR SALE

Pre-owned Zenith portable stereo. Speakers with 7" cord. Excell. cond. Asking $50, will take best offer. 549-1218 evenings. tf12-72

Attention: For sale, water bed, mattress, heater, frame, w/liner, thermostat, $50.95. Call Jack, 256-6800 or 546-8214. tf12-8

For sale, furniture: chest, dresser, double bed, table and chairs. Call 253-5513. tf12-11

Sweaters. Ski, V turtlenecks, 100% virgin wool, wash & wear, 50%-60% off. Call 549-0536. tf12-9

Guitars — new and used at discount prices. Many fine instruments and acc. in stock. The Guitar Workshop, 98 Main St., North. 586-1706. tf-sem.

Candle wax, vick, etc. All kinds handcrafted gifts, clothes. At People's Craft co-op in the Alley behind Aubnchou's. tf12-8

Hundy flute, excellent condition, good first flute. Call Rob in New Salem any time, 617-544-2921. tf12-8

Waterbeds ahead of time, $39.95 complete. Safeway btrs., bedspreads, fur rugs, 367-2787, 367-2858. Inter. Rte 63 & 47, Montague. tf12-13

Handcrafted pine beaches, tables, and boxes, all different and unique. 200 yds east inter. Rte. 63 & 47, 367-2787, Montague. tf12-13

Give a Shaklee gift for Xmas. New concept food taste, perfumes, colognes, allergenic lipsticks, shampoo, eye shadow, 253-2841. tf12-11

Head 360's with Marker bindings and men's Lange boots, 9 1/2. Package deal $100 or will negotiate separately. Call 546-6662. tf12-8

Musical inst. - Fender Telecaster, over 10 yrs. old - $150. Fender BassmanAM $150. AKAI model M9 reel-to-reel tape rec. $150. 730-0901.

Two sheepskin jackets, medium, boy & girl, also pair of VW rims and coffee table. All good condition and reasonable. Call 253-7533. tf12-8

Would you like to buy stereo components at tremendous savings? Yes. Then call me at 665-2598. I am an on-campus representative for a large stereo company. WE SELL ALL TYPES OF FINE COMPONENT SYSTEMS. Window shop anywhere, then give me a call and save $$ all purchases are guaranteed in writing so pls. call 665-2598 soon. tf 12-11

Christmas gift? Get travel calculator - large slide rule type - gives motorist needed information M.P.H., time, gas, speed. $2.19. Chasmar Co., P.O. Box 263, Elkhart, Ind. 46514. tf 12-8

Two studded snow tires — excellent condition, 600 x 13, $30 for both. Call 584-0300 anytime. Buy them before it's too late! tf12-8

For sale, long, gray, fur coat, excellent condition (the perfect Christmas present!!). Call Carol, 584-8000 after 4:30, $15. tf12-8

Holiday sale! 5-year factory guaranteed waterbeds, $17.50, heaters $27.50. Lowest prices in 5-college area. Gary, 1 p.m. - 11 p.m. daily. 546-0126. tf12-12

For sale — Smith Corona manual typewriter — excellent condition — great for term papers — asking $55, but will negotiate. Call eves., 253-7263. tf12-8

New refrigerator, 3.5 cu. ft., 10 mo. guarantee. Was $80, now $60. Carolyn, 546-6964. tf12-12

Trnk. ski rck., VW ski rack., full length, men's leather coat, size 42, 2 tires, Michelin X, 155x15, Sprit rall & Touneau cover. Judy, 5-2351. tf12-8

McIntosh pre amp., $300. New $150 or best offer. Craig cassette deck, $40. 546-5802. tf12-12

ROLLEI 35, $90. Sony 250A TAPE, $75, speakers, $75 pr. KASTLE skis, $40, also HEAD GS SUPER 8, $40, MINOX B, $80. 1-625-2080, nites. tf12-8

2 KLH model 17 spk., excellent cond. $95 or best offer. Call 546-7930. tf12-11

BAUER MEN'S HOCKEY SKATES size 11 1/2 & 10. Very good cond. $30 when new. Asking $25. Call Kathy 545-0731. Also woman's size 7 1/2, $3. tf 12-13

Polaroid land camera #305, 1 1/2 yrs. old but hardly ever used w/flash $19.00. Also 2-12 vlt. auto a.m. radios 1 w/built-in spkr. $5 ea. 665-2387. tf 12-12

Stereo — Audio Electronics The best buys on brand name stereo equipment. Call Greg at 546-6646. tf12-13

FOR SALE

Guitar-Hagstrom II solid body and heathkit, 240w amp with 2 12" speakers, $75 for all. Call Neal 546-6051. tf 12-13

Rubber Stamps
* * * * * * *
Stamp your address
$1.25/line plus
60¢ Shipping
10 Day Service
Send Check to:
Copycats Box 771
Hatfield, Mass.
tf12-11

Used furniture at Lamp Shop, 401 Pine St., Cushman, in rear of Whittemore's. All sorts of lamps, dishes, some antiques. Thurs. - Sat. 10-5:30. tf 12-12

ROOMMATES WANTED

Male roommate wanted in Squire Village apt. second semester very nice apt. plus low rent. Call 665-3286. tf 12-8

1 female roommate wanted to share house with 5 people, very near campus, off street parking, no lease. $57.50 per month. 586-2046. tf12-11

Male roommate for spring semester, $40/mo. University Park Apts. Call Perry, 253-5664. tf12-13

Female grad looking for female roommate, $85 mo. Own room and bath. Near campus. Call 549-3061 evenings. tf12-13

1 room Puffton Village, male or female, $70/month. Immediate occupancy or for Jan. Call John or Paul, 549-3626. tf12-13

We are looking for 1-2 quiet easy going females to share Brittany Manor apt. Pref. over 21. $55 a month. Call 253-5013 (for Jan.). tf12-8

Country apartment, own room, pets, grad. student only. Two in apartment, $97.50, includes all. Call 549-0499 after 10 p.m., quiet. tf12-11

Need roommate(s) Brittany Manor, Amherst. Total rent $210/mo. 1 will pay $105, 1 person, own rm., $105. 2 persons share $53. Call 253-5161, nite. tf12-12

M or F roommate wanted. Own bedroom. Rolling Green Apts., $80 month, includes utilities. Call 256-6438. tf12-11

Roommate needed to share 2 br. apt. with one male and one female. Prefer neat, quiet, mature adult of either sex. 549-6760 or 545-0345. tf12-11

Lani and Rose need a new roommate. Your own room, close to campus, about $80 per month. Call them at 549-1352. tf 12-12

Fem. rmmte. grad. stu pref. 2 bedrm apt. w/w, dswr, disp, swmmg pool. Sunderland, quiet resp. person, please call 665-4745. tf 12-12

Female roommate wanted for spring semester. Cliffside apartments. Call 665-2940 after 5. tf 12-12

Grad student to share 2-bedroom furnished apt. 665-4016 evening or coutact Hal, 129 Tobin Hall. tf 12-13

Female roommate wanted to share room starting Dec. $55/mo. Rolling Green Apts. 253-6661. tf 12-11

APTS. WANTED

Female student needs to find a furnished room or apt. before second semester. Call 1-413-544-6743 after 5 p.m. tf 12-13

One bedroom apt. or efficiency apt. wanted immediately, preferably by Jan. 1, not to exceed $100/mo. Call Ingrid 5-2751. tf12-11

Apartment wanted for two, close to campus for Spring '73. Call 549-8099.

1-2 bedroom apt. wanted. Not a complex — prefer old house in country. Will pay up to $105 — not more than 15 min. away. Call 515-2550. tf12-13

3 rm. apt. for at least 1 yr., within 10 miles of UMass. Needed by Jan. 15. Call Joe bet. 5-6 p.m., 1-739-5930. tf12-11

TO SUBLET

1 bedroom apt., 7 Colonial Village, 170 a month - utilities included, contact Jim at apartment 3 - 7 Mon. - Fri. tf12-8

To sublet -one bedroom apt. incl. utilities - $175 mo. - avail. Jan. 1 - call 549-6775. tf12-13

3 1/2 lg. rms. apt. Shutesbury 8 miles from campus. $100 utilities incl. 253-7380. tf12-8

Cliffside, 1 bedroom furnished, $153.38. Available immediately. Call 665-3098 after six. tf12-12

Furn. eff. apt. in W. Hatfield, 15 min. frou UMass., avail. Jan. 1. All util. inc., $110 per/mo. Call Doug, 247-9214, will pay Jan. $110 for you! tf12-13

SERVICES

Stay Dry!! Make your clothes water-repellent easily and inexpensively. To find out how, call 665-2301 between 4-6 p.m. tf 12-11

You click the camera, I'll print the vision. Quality processing of 35 mm B & W. Magick Photo 253-2400. tf 12-13

The Exec. Hair Salon, 151 State St., Northampton, Mass. Hairstyling: We begin where others leave off. For appt. call 584-2548. tf12-13

Mechanic, experienced in motorcycle and auto repair, (especially VW and foreign), looking for work. Call Bill at 625-2960. tf12-8

Protect purebred dogs, buy from a breeder who cares. Info: Pet referral, C.C. Concourse. tf12-8

OUT IN THE COLD ABOUT INSURANCE? We can help you get it together because at Alpha we care! Complete insurance protection. All Drivers — All Wheels. Alpha Insurance Agency Inc. 29 So. Pleasant St., Amherst. 256-8305. tf12-12

AUTOS FOR SALE

65 VW overhauled engine, r & b both work, new muffler, ex. tires, dented in rear. $295. Call 532-0473 anytime. tf12-8

70 Toyota Corolla, white, radio, excel. condition. $1095 or best offer. 584-8100. tf12-12

Cheap, warm, runs good. 63 Buick LeSabre. At., p.s., p.b., ins., stkr. snow tires. $200 or best offer. Must sell soon. Steve, 546-9165. tf12-12

Trip car. It'll get you to Florida or Bermuda with right fuel. 62 Chevy sta. wagon. New rear tires; tuned up $200. Call. 253-9670. tf12-8

1969 VW Bus — unusual camper — exc. cond. Best offer around. $1500. See at Chri's Garage, Rt. 9, Goshen, 268-7939. tf12-8

64 Ford custom 8 cyl. auto trans. Rear snow tires. Very good on gas. Good cond., $250. Call 584-8314 late afternoon - eve. tf12-12

Porsche, 1964, 356c convertible. Very clean and fast, but tuition must be paid. $1500. Call Peter, 546-5074 late eve. tf12-11

VW bus. Completely rebuilt '64 engine. Tools included. $400 or best offer. 542-3015 or 542-5013. tf12-8

67 Mustang, 6 cyl. new shocks, new brakes, new clutch, good tires, in excellent condition $700.00. Call Ron 253-7671. tf 12-8

1965 Rambler, 2 dr., automatic, in good running cond., $125. 369-4322, ask for Kathryn, leave mess. tf12-8

1963 VW camper, bed, frig., stove, sun roof, 1967, 50 h.p. engine completely rebuilt in Ang. New front end, call Bob, 549-1720. tf12-13

1972 VW fastback, 12,000 miles, perfect condition, $1950. Call Jeff, 628-9370. tf12-8

1967 TR4A, runs excellent, 53,000 mi., new generator, clutch, brakes, exhaust system. Body needs some work, $800. Write Box 126, Amherst. tf12-13

1963 Chevy — good condition, $200. Large peopies car worth more. Call Rich, 256-8325. tf12-13

For sale, 66 Ford, 289, 4-speed, studded snows, good cond. $325. 665-3200. tf 12-13

Chevrolet, Camaro SS 67, very good condition. Winterized, new snow tires, air cond. Asking $900. Call 256-6253 after 6 p.m. tf 12-13

49 'Chevy. 1 ton panel truck, 53' GMC truck, 6 cyl. engine solid truck. Also 1 yr old Gitane 10 spd. bike. Call Michael 253-7384. tf 12-13

1967 BMW, 1600, sunroof, new exhaust, shocks. Good mech. cond. needs tires, $850. Tel. 584-6537. tf 12-8

FOR RENT

Killington skiers. New 3 bdrm. chalet on Mt. Sleeps 8, $275 for season. Call Rick Laine at 802-422-3451 between 6 & 7 p.m. tf12-8

Large room available in quiet country house, Jan 1st to Aug. 31, lease $77. $50/mo. & util., about 7 mls. from UMass. Call 253-2779. tf12-8

Room and meals in exchange for baby sitting, 11 a.m. - 2 p.m. weekdays. Phone 584-2700, ext. 611 between 10 and 1 weekdays. tf12-11

Apt. for rent, 2 bdr. townhouse, Squire Vil. $240 mo., includes utilities, avail. Jan. 1. 665-2907. tf 12-13

Cliffside apts. 1 bdrm. efficiency, furnished, $100/mo. Available Jan. 1 - Sept. 1. 665-3429. tf 12-8

January 1st availability — large, newly remodeled apts. — 3/4 bedrooms — children & pets welcome — quiet country local. Call 256-8006 day, 253-7717 night. tf 12-13

WANTED

Used set of drums in good condition, name brand, call Vin 256-8037. tf 12-8

I need your personal experiences to aid research for a thesis on auto-eroticism. All ideas welcome. Strictly confidential. Box 421, North Amherst, 01059. tf 12-11

Room in house in Montague, N.Lev or North. Non-student responsible craftsman, age 24, country living prefrd. Call Suzy 584-7351. tf 12-13

Coins and stamps US and foreign bought, sold, traded. Estimates and appraisals. Call Bob 546-4716, 202 Chadbourne House. tf12-13

Refrigerator, 5 cu. ft. w/freezer. Needed by Dec. 23. Call Tony, 546-8841 after 4:30. tf12-12

Electronic technician, 20 yrs. experience, Mass. master license, wants part-time work nights & Sat. Call Larry, 545-0181 days. tf12-8

Composer-musician needs drummers — saxophonists — bass & cellists for new music ensemble — int. players at any level. 584-9707, 5-5:30 p.m. tf12-8

Term paper: In form of research grant application to Gov't. Agency on any topic relevant to ecology, remun. Call Rick at 546-5139. tf12-13

RIDE WANTED

Ride needed to Springfield 1 day a week, any day but Mon. from 2-3. Also ride back to UMass at 5. Will share driving and $. 546-6086. tf12-13

Help! Ride for 2 needed to Albuquerque or gen. vic., Dec. 26-28, to arrive by Dec. 31 (?) Will share driving, expenses. Call Rod, 546-6191. tf12-13

I need a ride for 8 o'clock MWF next semester, coming down Main St. in AMH from Pelham. Call Susan 256-6203. tf 12-12

PERSONAL

Hey fat knees: Don't you visit your friends anymore? Big Nurse. tf 12-8

Sarah you said we need us, we still do. One more time? Admit it, you love me. I love you a whole bunch. Chris. tf 12-8

L.H.I. and E.A.R. Best wishes for two happy birthdays. Tell us, do good things come in small packages? J.L.A. and R.J.C. tf 12-8

Ride wanted to ski area weekdays for 1 or more. Call Laurie after 6, 546-9921. tf 12-8

Aardvark, Sorry for the late response to your letter. I think it's about time we get together. If interested let me know. tf12-13

L.S.R. — Thanks for putting up with me as long as you did. True happiness is knowing that someone will always care. I do always. Me. tf12-8

Guys from project 20: Thanks for a dynamite, 1 month experiment! We can't wait for next semester — you too, Sully. Love, The Coeds. tf12-8

Have a nog at the concert, Dec. 13!! East Room, Worcester D.C., for fun. tf12-13

Penny F. — Why didn't you call? J.N. tf12-11

Will Arthur who knows Sandy Ehramjian, please call Joan at 584-8096. tf12-8

Guys — Don't forget the holiday dance this Sat., Dec. 9th at 8:00 p.m. in Farley Lodge (near the stadium). 75¢. For more info., 545-0154. tf12-8

Anyone with questions or wanting info on homosexuality, or to talk about personal problem, call 586-2811. Ask for Paul. tf12-12

TRAVEL

Want to get away for Christmas vacation? Try camping on the exotic island of Jamaica. For more info., call Jon Rubin, 549-0112, eve. tf12-13

Bienvenu everyone. Panam will take you to all your dream cities providing you with best comforts, call Lina 546-5319. tf12-13

See all the places you've dreamed of: London, Istanbul, Athens, Rome, an island in the sun, economically too... fly. PanAm. Ellen 253-7661. tf12-13

Skiing in Europe is cheaper than you think, call and find out. Call Shelley, 546-8258. tf12-13

How about skiing in Europe over the holidays? Contact Kathy, 549-0658. tf12-13

Going to Mexico after Xmas? 2 people want to share expenses, driving, tequila. Call Mary, 302 Greenough, 5-2642. Boston departure, O.K. tf12-8

Seeking house or apt. to sublet during intersession. Call 617-491-6234 or write, 72 Elm St., Cambridge. Linda or Madja Dimitrov. tf12-8

MOTORCYCLE FOR SALE

71 Honda 450 CB. Must sell $725. 584-5537. tf 12-8

ENTERTAINMENT

COME BACK TO THE 50's. SEE "ELVIS — A MUSICAL DOCUMENTARY" AND "MARILYN MONROE — HER LIFE AND TIMES" ON SAT., DEC. 9 AT 7-9-11 IN MAHAR. tf12-8

Ski!! Robert Redford & Gene Hackman star in the breath-taking ski adventure "Downhill Racer" in color, Friday, Dec. 8, Thompson 104: 7-9-11. tf12-8

Recreate your youth! See "Born Free", Saturday, Dec. 9, 7-9-11 p.m., Hampden D.C., (Southwest). 50¢ tf12-8

Arlo Guthrie & John Koerner, Sunday, Dec. 10, three shows 5:30, 8:00 & 10:30 at the Folklore Center. Tickets at door only. Bon Voyage. tf12-8

MISCELLANEOUS

$500 reward for information leading to the return of large Oriental rug, missing from Amherst College, November 27. Contact Box 38, Station 2, Amherst, Mass. 01002. tf12-8

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Recently remodeled — large 3/4 room apartment — heat & hot water provided — easy commuting to Amherst — children welcome — Immediate availability. A HUGE FIND @ $150/mo. Call 256-6806 or 253-7717. tf 12-13

HOUSE FOR RENT

Completely remodeled 8 bedroom colonial-type house, kids and pets welcome. Immediate availability... quiet country living. Call 256-6806 day, 253-7717 night. tf 12-13

ROOM WANTED

Male student would like to live in a house with other students in or near Amherst for second semester. Call Danny, 546-5451. tf12-8

HELP WANTED

Service station attendant 2-3 nights, weekend day, apply in person. Campus Arco by Zayre's. tf12-8

TAG SALE

Fri. & Sat. from 10 to 6. 40 Elizabeth St., Nump., opp. Tri County Fair Grounds. Bed, couch, chairs, tables, small gift items, etc. 584-0380. tf12-8

LOST

LOST grey covered U.M. notebook, contains. Biochem. tests & notes. If found contact Ron. 546-7512. Reward. tf12-8

Black dog in North Amherst area, Vermont tags, please call 549-1482. Reward. tf12-8

ROOM FOR RENT

Large room available in quiet country house. Jan. 1 to Aug. 31 lease. $77.50/month & util. about 7 miles from UMass. Call 253-2779. tf12-8

What's Happening At Hampshire College

Raul Hilberg, a specialist in the study of the Nazi genocide of the Jews in World War II, will speak at Hampshire College on Monday, December 11. His lecture, "The Holocaust in History: An Epoch-Making Event," will be delivered at 9 p.m. in the main lecture hall of the Academic Building.

Currently chairman of the political science department at the University of Vermont, Professor Hilberg served in the U.S. Army occupying Munich at the end of the war. Upon his return to this country he earned his Ph.D. at Columbia University. He was a member of the War Documentation Project, working on the files of captured German documents in the Federal Records Center at Alexandria, Va.

Professor Hilberg's documented narrative history, The Destruction of the European Jews, was the first major analytical book on the subject. It was followed by his compilation of Nazi papers, Documents of Destruction.

Born in Austria, Professor Hilberg was educated in the U.S., receiving his B.A. from Columbia University. He has taught at Hunter College and the University of Puerto Rico. His lecture, which is being sponsored by the Dean's Fund and the School of Social Science, is open to the public without charge.

•••

Robert A. Shanley of UMass will deliver the term's final lecture for the Environment and Society in Transitit

Robert A. Shanley of UMass will deliver the term's final lecture for the Environment and Society in Transition series. He will speak on "Models of Citizen Participation and Environmental Problems" on Tuesday, December 12, at 7 p.m. in the main lecture hall of the Academic Building.

An associate professor in the department of political science at UMass Shanley received his undergraduate and graduate education at Columbia and Georgetown Universities. His teaching centers on the politics of environmental policy, urban government, and metropolitan politics. Currently he is investigating the institutionalization of citizen participation in water planning under a grant from the Office of Water Research, U.S. Department of the Interior.

Professor Shanley's lecture is open to the public without charge.

•••

Jack Greenberg, Director-Counsel of the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, Inc., will speak at Hampshire College on Wednesday, December 13. Sponsored by the Symposium on Post-War America, the lecture will focus on "Segregation and the Courts: Civil Rights Cases After the War," and will be held in the west lecture hall of the Academic Building at 7:30 p.m.

Born and raised in New York City, Mr. Greenberg graduated from Columbia College and Columbia University Law School, where he is now also adjunct professor of law. At the age of 30 he joined Thurgood Marshall and other attorneys in arguing before the U.S. Supreme Court the historical school integration suits which led to the 1954 decision in Brown vs. the Board of Education.

In 1961 Greenberg succeeded Mr. Marshall as Director-Counsel of the LDF. An independent organization originally created by NAACP board members in 1939, LDF has been the leading force in the courtroom for civil rights of America's black citizens, as well as American Indians, Mexican Americans, and indigents without regard to race.

Mr. Greenberg's lecture is open to the public without charge.

•••

Homer Jensen, Director of Development for Aero Service Corporation, will speak at Hampshire College on Wednesday, December 13, at 8 p.m. in the main lecture hall of the Academic Building. His lecture, "Mapping the Amazon: Technical Triumph and Ecological Disaster," is being sponsored by the Science and Public Policy series.

During World War II Mr. Jensen was project leader in design of magnetic airborne geophysical studies. Since then, his commercial systems have covered some two millions miles of surveys all over the world.

Most of Mr. Janesen's explorations have been used to locate new deposits of mineral resources under the earth's surface. His most recent assignment has been a massive exploration of the Amazon Basin, now facing the prospect of full development.

GREENOUGH presents...
FAT &
South St. Rhythm
& Blues Band
SUNDAY, Dec. 10 — 8:30
12:30
Worcester D.C. $1.00

Prison Poet

Black Poet David Powell, a 19-year-old prisoner at the Concord Reformatory, is due to make an appearance at UMass this weekend. Powell was scheduled for release on October 30th, but has been held in general lock-up with other inmates since demonstrations and an escape there over Thanksgiving.

Tau Beta Pi Initiation

Tonight at the Campus Center Auditorium, Tau Beta Pi will initiate its new members. Tau Beta Pi is an honor society similar to Phi Beta Kappa.

The Tau Beta Pi Association, national engineering honor society, was founded at Lehigh University in 1885 by Edward Higginson, Jr., "to mark in a fitting manner those who have conferred honor upon their Alma Mater by distinguished scholarship and exemplary character as undergraduates in engineering.

The UMass Zeta chapter elected the new members according to their scholastic achievements and exemplary character. Undergraduate students must stand in the top eighth of their class in their next-to-last year or top fifth of their class in their last college year to be eligible for consideration."

Traffic, Parking Appeals Board Meets

The Traffic and Parking Appeals Board held two organizational meetings (November 9 and 15) and on November 30 held its first meeting dealing with specific appeals (estimated to be 150). At this time 26 appeals were reviewed - 5 were granted (unanimously), 5 denied (unanimously), 1 was granted in part, the balance returned to the Police or appellant for further information.

The Board hopes to review a minimum of 25 cases at each of its weekly meetings.

The mandate, function, procedure and structure of the Board are outlined in Article IX "Appeals" of the Motor Vehicle Regulations booklet. They are printed in part below:

Article IX. APPEALS

There shall be established at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst a Traffic and Parking Appeals Board the function of which shall be to provide all members of the University community with ready access to an impartial and informed review of actions resulting from specific applications of University of Massachusetts Traffic Rules and Regulations.

Section 1. Who May Appeal - Appeals may be made by an individual coming under the authority of the University of Massachusetts Traffic Rules and Regulations.

Section 3. Appeals Procedure- (a) Appellants prior to utilizing the appeal procedure should first attempt to obtain redress from the Director of Security or his designee. In the event that this appeal is rejected the appellant should follow the procedure outlined in (b) and (c).

(b) All appeals made to the Appeals Board must be submitted in writing to the Parking and Registration Office within seven (7) calendar days from the date of receiving the Parking Violation Notice. Forms on which appeals are to be submitted may be obtained from the Parking and Registration Office.

(c) The appellant will be informed at the time an appeal is submitted of the time, date, and location of the hearing for his appeal.

(d) Hearings of the Appeals Board and its rulings must be open unless otherwise requested by the appellant.

(e) The Appeals Board shall have complete discretion for accepting evidence and for any other procedural matters not otherwise mentioned in this section.

(f) All decisions of the Appeals Board shall be final except insofar as recourse to the Board of Trustees or Officers of the University of Massachusetts/Amherst is available.

Section 4. Composition of the Appeals Board - The Appeals Board shall be composed of six members as follows: 1) two undergraduate students, 2) a graduate student, 3) a member of the classified staff, 4) a member of administrative staff, and 5) a member of the faculty...The chairman of the board shall be selected by the members of the board.

D.J.
TONIGHT
at
The Pub

There is no time like Christmas to give a diamond.
For a wide range of diamonds at a wider range of prices
see
BAKER-WINN JEWELERS
31 S. PLEASANT ST. AMHERST
"...everyone's favorite jeweler..."

Get More of a Boot from the BOARDWALK BOWL
Convention Hall
ATLANTIC CITY, N.J.
Saturday, December 9
Featuring our own
University of Massachusetts
University of California - Davis
Reserve now and spend the big game weekend at Holiday Inn. 23 stories of luxury on the Boardwalk, adjacent to Convention Hall, site of the game. All rooms with 2 double beds and TV. Rooftop dining and dancing. Free parking.
RATES: $16 single $24 double
$ 6 third person in room
Children under 12 free when sharing room with adults
Instant reservations thru any Holiday Inn... or dial direct 609-348-4011
Holiday Inn® of Atlantic City
On the Boardwalk at Missouri Ave.

For a 20" x 28½" Budweiser Brewing Chart art print in full color, send $1 check or money order payable to: BREWING CHART, Anheuser-Busch, Inc., Dept C, Box 8861, St. Louis, Missouri, 63102

Notices

ARB & PK CLUB
Hatfield Barn, 8 p.m. All you can eat.

BABYSITTING SERVICE
Once again, Gorman House Babysitting Service has both male and female babysitters available to help. For further info call Bev, 546-6458.

BELCHERTOWN VOLUNTEERS
Last bus of semester leaves Sat. at 12:45 in front of Whitmore. Christmas party to be held at Belchertown. Bring a friend, see you there.

BOWLING
Boyden Bowling lanes open Fri. & Sat., 4:30-10:30.

CHRISTMAS PARTY
Brown House will present "Cuckoo's Nest" in Concert Wed., Dec. 13 in Worcester Dining Commons. Everyone invited.

COLLEGE CHURCH BUS
8:48 Newman Center, 8:50 Waiting Station, 8:51 Hamlin House, 8:56 U. Dr. by Emerson, 9:15 College Church, 9:30 Sunday School.

CONCERT DANCE
Featuring Fat & So. St. Rhythm & Blues Band Sun., Dec. 10, 8:30-12:30. Come boogie with us.

ENTERTAINMENT
Everyone is welcome at G. Washington's Upper Gala Xmas party, Fri. night, Dec. 8 from 9-1 on 19 fl. Music by Rush.

GAMMA SIGMA SIGMA
Pledge initiation and installation of new officers Sun. at 4 p.m., 905-909 CC. Be sure to be there!

HOTEL
Clean towels mix with dirty people when the "Hotel" opens up for business on Dec. 17 at 7:00 and 9:30 p.m. in CCA presented by Brooks.

MEN
Meeting for men interested in consciousness raising support groups Sun., Dec. 10 at Hampshire College Academic Building Lounge.

NEWMAN CLUB
There will be an open meeting of the Newman Club tonight at 7:00. Interested in what we are doing? See us at Newman.

OUTING CLUB
Fix it day is tomorrow at 9 a.m. at the locker. All help is welcomed. Don't forget to sign up for the Xmas party Dec. 16. Meeting Mon. night at 6:30 in 165 CC.

SKI CLUB
All sellers of equipment please pick it up Mon., Dec. 11, 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. CC Concourse.

LOST
Green hand purse in or near CC Wed. noon. Pens, ID's, etc., needed badly. Call Carlo, leave message. 1-628-3835. Reverse charges please.

Brown wallet lost on campus. Keep money but please turn in wallet - important papers and ID's.

One brown burlap-type ladies' clutch purse. License Carlo MacInnes. Call 253-2152 aft. or evenings or Apt. 8, Riverglade Apts.

Wallet. Save me the hassle of getting new ID's. Call Kevin Sullivan, 253-9239 at 58 Rolling Green Apts.

Gold, wire-rim glasses. Thanks, while hitching from Amherst to Greenfield. Please phone Wayne 586-1668.

FREE PUPPIES
Free lively robust puppies. Redbone hound-Sheperd combination. Call 253-2460.

ENGAGEMENT
Margaret Mary Colleary, 73, Knowlton House to Arthur J. Smith, Jr., 74, U. of Maine P.G.

Seminar To Explore Universe

The Division of Continuing Education will offer a course on modern astronomy and the night sky during the coming spring semester.

The seminar, entitled "Exploration of the Universe", will be Wednesday evenings and will use Five College facilities, particularly and planetarium and observatory at Amherst College.

From the early history of earth, revealed by ancient rocks and fossils, the course will study the planetary system and the void of space. As participants become more versed in the constellations of the night sky, they will learn the histories of the moon and other planets beamed back by recent Soviet and American space probes.

Outside speakers and many films will supplement the journey. Students will spend nearly one half of the semester at the Amherst telescope. There, they will photograph the landmarks of the grand stellar pinwheel that contains within its outer limits the sun. And without extensive use of mathematics, they will trace the birth and death of the stars.

They will study the many strange objects within the pinwheel galaxy-the final stage of massive stars, the black holes, so very dense that space bends around them forever hiding them from our view.

The seminar's goal is to instill an appreciation and familiarity for the night sky, for the methods and content of modern astronomical research, plus an understanding of current articles on space science and space research.

Full information on tuition, location and registration is available from the UMass Division of Continuing Education, 920 Campus Center, UMass Amherst, 01002. Registration by mail for the spring semester begins Dec. 26.

Correction

The headline on page 9, in yesterday's paper should have read "Disciple of 14 Year Old Guru To Speak", instead of "14 Year Old Guru To Speak". Mahatma Rajeswar, a disciple of the 14-year-old Guru Maharaj Ji, will speak on Monday, December 11th, at 7:30 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom, for free. The Collegian regrets the error.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

by SYDNEY OMARR

Aries usually is willing to take the lead. These natives are natural innovators and capable of bounding back after periods of adversity. Aries is a warrior, aggressive and more than willing to fight when the cause is right. In affairs of the heart, Aries is drawn to Leo. In money matters, if is Taurus who often comes through for Aries.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent now is on achievement. Promotion may be in offing. You are able to make room for yourself at top. Tear down in order to rebuild. One in position of authority will aid. Know it and act accordingly.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Good lunar aspect now coincides with journeys, higher education, publishing. You are capable of successfully getting message across. Refuse to be limited. Expand. Perceive potential. Write and advertise.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Joint efforts succeed. One who advises on money affairs is apt to be on target. Financial gain is distinct possibility. Virgo, Taurus individuals could play key roles. Mate, partner has good news for you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Public relations is accented. Be sure your message, image is coming across. What appears an obstacle is likely to boomerang in your favor. Special contract could be cause for celebration.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Vitality returns. You will be more cheerful. Those who depend on you are due to return many favors. Employment, health pictures will be brighter. Past efforts pay dividends. Legal affairs create promise, not problems.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Pleasure received through creative endeavors. Be ready for constructive change of scenery. You are able now to complete project. One you admire displays affection. Young person plays key role. Be receptive.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Follow through on ideas. Proceed along original, creative lines. Home environment is emphasized. Domestic life will be happier. Leo brightens atmosphere. Events occur which make you feel more secure.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You can be on better terms with neighbors, relatives. Ideas (all-you find solutions. Check calls, messages. What you seek is available. One who had long admired you may put feelings into words.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Obtain hint from Scorpio message. You are able now to fit together puzzle pieces. Money situation improves. You collect debts and gain rewards. Remain flexible. Accept offer which includes travel.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Element of timing favors your efforts. You can expand, make new conquests and be happier. Loose ends are put together. Your sense of direction is enhanced. You could win popularity contest. You're going places!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You get backing from club, organization. You gain now by aiding others. Means co-operate in project aimed at promoting special charity. Answer requests. Show that you do care-be available for personal appearances.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Now you benefit from friendships. What was a one-way street becomes a give-and-take proposition. Home life can also become more harmonious. Make conciliatory gesture to family member. It will be accepted, appreciated.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY conditions are due to settle. You will get off merry-go-round and begin to get greater results from efforts. You are a dynamic individual and a natural executive. More persons are due to become aware of that fact. April will be your most significant month in 1973.

Copyright 1972, Gen. Fea. Corp.

Crossword Puzzle

ACROSS
1 Bitter vetch
4 Wet
8 Grate
12 Obtain
13 S-shaped molding
14 Reverberation
15 Swiss river
16 Led
18 Quaff
20 Challenge
21 River in Italy
22 A state (abbr.)
23 Specks
27 Footlike part
29 Succor
30 Web-footed birds
31 Near
32 Beverage
33 Turf
34 Indefinite article
35 Gastropod mollusk
37 Music: as written
38 Skill
39 Caudal appendage
40 Secret agent
41 Teutonic deity
42 Mohammedan chieftain
44 Tropical fruit (pl.)
47 Story
51 Anger
52 Exchange premium
53 Short jacket
54 Transgress
55 Legume
56 Stitches
57 Spread for drying

DOWN
1 Mild expletive
2 Hind part
3 Denudes
4 Pier
5 Time gone by 6 Repaired
7 Foot lever
8 Fell back
9 Perform
10 Pronoun
11 Seed container
17 Chaldean city
19 Negative
22 Expire
24 Faroe Islands whirlwind
25 Former Russian ruler
26 Dispatched
27 Time gone by
28 Sicilian volcano
29 Everyone
30 Tibetan gazelle
32 Part of airplane
33 Pigpen
36 Three-toed sloth
37 Ghost
38 Painter
40 Locations
41 Babylonian deity
43 Parent (colloq.)
44 Lairs
45 Great Lake
46 Dispatch
47 Catch (colloq.)
48 Mature
49 Inlet
50 Solemn pledge

Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle

Distr. by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Open every day next to Weird Harold's
Don't forget your PET this Christmas!
A large selection of
Pet Stockings & Toys!
VACATION FEEDERS
New Arrivals
Boas, Huge Parrots, Exciting New Salt Water Fish

Paul Metallo Close-up: Dedication to the Game

By BOB ESTELLE

"From a personal standpoint, I will always remember Paul Metallo because one always remembers the friend that's around when you really need him. Last year, we were 2-3-1 and going nowhere and he dominated the Holy Cross game (254 yards rushing 4 touchdowns). This year, he saved his finest individual performance (146 yards rushing, 2 touchdowns) to give the UMass football family (players, coaches, band, cheerleaders, students, faculty, alumni and friends) what some call the most wanted victory ever."

Those are the words of UMass head football coach Dick MacPherson who is speaking of Paul Metallo, probably the best running back in the history of UMass football. The statistics for the 1972 season certainly point this out. The list starts off with 960 yards rushing (a UMass record) that put his career total rushing yards to 1678 yards (breaking Greg Landry's old record). It also includes 96 points (16 touchdowns), 16 pass receptions for 134 yards, and 176 yards passing (6 for 10) with one TD pass. But, as Coach MacPherson said, Paul's finest hour was against B.C. when he ran for 146 yards and scored two touchdowns, one on a three yard run for the first score and the other a 73 yard run in which he broke several Eagle attempts to bring him down.

Assistant Coach George Flood says of Paul, "He has tremendous talent. The biggest thing about him is his overall dedication to football and this is evidenced through hard work and his playing with pain caused by various injuries. His great asset is his speed and his quickness. He has good versatility and he shows it by running back kickoffs and as a pass receiver, even though he doesn't have the ball thrown to him that much."

Coach MacPherson says the same thing, only he's more terse about it, "I think Paul has the desire for greatness. In athletics, he has the one single attribute that can fulfill that desire for greatness-9.4 speed."

To point out the extent to which Paul dedicates himself, one can look back to last spring. Paul, a Pittsfield native, was student teaching in Adams. He not only commuted from there to spring football practice, but also competed on the varsity track team. Track Coach Ken O'Brien says of Paul, "Every day, he did his track workout during a free period he had in the morning, drove over from Adams to football practice and, on Tuesdays and Wednesdays, he competed for us in the 100 yard dash before going over to football practice. Doing what he did gave the rest of the team a big uplift, just seeing how hard he was working."

This paid off for Paul, for at the end of the track season, he not only won the Yankee Conference championship in the hundred with a 9.4 time, but also won the New England's in that event and thus earned the honor of being named the number one sprinter in the East.

This is the athlete that will be leading the Minutemen to the Boardwalk Bowl next Saturday. Paul's feelings about playing his final collegiate game in a post-season bowl are directed towards the team, as a whole, rather than on his own accomplishments. "It's great for the whole team and it reflects what a good season we had. It's just a bonus for us."

Paul has a close feeling toward his teammates, "We're all pretty close and there hasn't been any dissention on the team. We are all just good friends, we get along and have good times together."

He also has a great amount of respect for his coach, saying, "Coach MacPherson is well-deserving of the Coach-of-the-Year award he received."

He graduates in January. He offers the following on UMass, "I just think it's a good school and I have no complaints."

As far as his future is concerned, Paul would like to play pro football and he's waiting for the NFL draft in late January. He says that if he can't do that, he would like to get into graduate school here and use his Phys. Ed. degree to get a master's in Sports Administration.

Coach MacPherson is confident that Paul will make it in whatever he chooses to do. "Paul Metallo is loved at home," he says. "His parents are always with him in whatever he chooses to do. With that background, you always get a great person, a winner."

Gymnasts at New Haven for Meet with So. Conn

On Saturday afternoon at 2:00, Dec. 9, the University of Massachusetts Gymnastic Team travels to New Haven to meet a newcomer to the Eastern league, Southern Connecticut. As one of the more important meets of the season it should prove to be exciting competition, especially so early in the season. Coach Dunn's Minutemen will also be looking for their third straight win.

At 2:05 p.m. all-around Rich Seikunas will start UMass off on Floor Exercises. He'll be followed by Steve Scuderi and Gene Whalen also all-around men. Rounding out the event will be Jack Berner and Jay Thomsen in the specialist positions. I mention these five names because they will get UMass off to a good start.

On Side Horse senior Steve Nelson and sophomore Brian Hassig will tame the "four-legged beast" for the team. A solid performance here could have a lot to do with the outcome of the meet.

Co-capt. Jay Aronstein will lead the Ring team in the No. 1 specialist spot. He will be backed up by Dan Spier, whose performance in the last two meets should hold him in good stead.

Vaulting brings the talents of junior Jay Thomsen and Roy Johnson to the spotlight. Vaulting, which has always been a consistently fine event for UMass, should remain so in this meet.

Parallel Bars gives sophomore Bill Brouillet and Dan Spier a chance to exhibit their wares to the judges. At this point in the meet the Minutemen should be able to put together some capable performances to clinch the meet.

The final event, High Bar, should prove to be an interesting one for UMass. Representing the team here again will be senior Dan Spier and Roy Johnson. After this last event UMass should be able to leave with performances they are proud of.

Whatever the outcome of the meet the Minutemen will be well prepared for the encounter with Army next Saturday. Southern Connecticut has one of its strongest teams to date and a win here would leave UMass with a solid base for future competition with much stronger teams.

An interesting sidelight to this meet is the fact that Gene Whalen, one of the top competitors for UMass as well as a fine all-around man, has a twin brother, Jay, on the Southern Connecticut team. If you ask Gene which is the better team or has the better half of the Whalen family his answer would be obvious, UMass. (But don't let his brother find out).

In other action UMass beat Boston State on Tuesday afternoon by the score of 149.40-139.50. For this meet Coach Dunn changed the line-up to get an indication of what some others can do. Some notables who deserve mention are Bill Brouillet in the all-around, Brian Hassig on Side Horse, John Oliver and Jim Battisua on Still Rings, Jack Fabbricante on Vaulting, Phil Aubrey on P-bars and Roy Johnson on the High Bar. Steve Scuderi and Bill Brouillet represented UMass in the all-around with scores of 50.55 and 44.20 respectively. The meet was also valuable in that it provided a good warm-up for the upcoming Southern Conn. meet.

Runners Face UConn, Adelphi

By WALT POWERS

Winter track is BACK.

It begins tomorrow afternoon in Storrs, Connecticut when the UMass track team take on an Olympian-loaded team from Adelphi, and a UConn team that's won 29 dual meets in a row.

This year's team is a traditional one; weak in the throwing events, consistent in the jumping events, and strong in the sprints and the distance races.

The throwing events are the teams biggest weakness. The team has little depth here, and will depend on sophomore Carmen Letizia for most of the scoring in these events. Letizia has improved markedly since his freshman year and should continue to improve as the season progresses. He'll face some formidable competition from Adelphi's Bob Parrott and Tom Bessette and Ron Evans of UConn.

In the pole vault, UMass will go with Don McKeough and Dennis Lombardi. Both can vault in the high 13's, and Lombardi, a sophomore, is co-holder of the school record. UConn, with two vaulters capable of fourteen feet, will give them some tough opposition.

UMass brings consistency and balance to the jumping events. Sophomores Mike Gerahgty, Ken Banda, and Pete Ryan are the leading long jumpers. They'll face a stiff test from UConn's Ron Evans and Dennis Walker of Adelphi. Sophomore Mark Hughes and junior John Osborne have both reached 6'-4" in the high jump, but Ron Evans of UConn has done 6'-6".

Senior Tony Pendleton is the proven leader of a strong, well balanced group of sprinters. Dennis Busa and Tom Beland both placed in the New England Championships last year, and Steve Bradley has made a smooth transition from the jumping events to the sprints. Marshall Pendleton was the 1971 Massachusetts high school champ in the hundred yard dash, but a year of inaction makes him a question mark. UConn has a number of good sprinters, led by Heywood Woodward, a freshman who ran a 9.5 hundred in HIGH SCHOOL.

The Minutemen boast depth and experience in the hurdles, but lack an outstanding individual. Upperclassmen John Mounger, Jim Hennessey, and Bob Landry should score consistently throughout the season, and they'll be pushed by freshmen Kurt Stegerwald and Fred Kruse. New England champion Jim Verdon leads some strong opposition from UConn.

UMass is strong and deep in the middle distances. In the 600, school record holder Steve Levine holds the No. 1 spot, ahead of junior Barron Littlefield. Al Sawicki, a promising freshman, holds the No. 3 position.

In the 1,000 yard run, UMass is young and deep. John Maloney is an experienced, tough, competitor who placed last year in the conference, as a sophomore. Devon Croft broke Maloney's freshman record in the 1,000 last year and is in good physical condition. Peter Byron is an outstanding freshman from New Jersey, and should contribute a lot this year. Rick Barry could also run.

In the relays, UMass will be able to run a number of strong sprinters and middle distance runners. Steve Levine, Barron Littlefield, Tom Beland, and John Mounger should give the Minutemen a strong mile-relay team. Rick Barry, John Maloney, Peter Byron, and Devon Croft will run the two-mile relay.

Unfortunately for the Minutemen, Adelphi's middle-distance runners are among the best in the East, and they should hurt. Their I.C.4A. champion mile relay team, led by Rich Hardware of Jamaica, includes three Olympians. Dennis Walker and the McPherson brothers are almost unbeatable in the 600, and Peter Hulme of UConn is also a threat.

UConn will be running at home in probably the best indoor track facility in New England, and must be considered a big favorite. They are a powerful, well-balanced team centered around N.C.A.A. decathon champ Ron Evans. Only in the distance events has UMass clear superiority. Adelphi concentrates on the middle distance races, but their jumpers and weight throwers are strong. In these events, they figure to hurt UConn more than UMass.

Coach Ken O'Brien refuses to concede anything. In their last encounter, UMass pulled a big upset in the conference championships. Can they repeat? "I think we can, but a lot will depend on how Adelphi does. I'm hoping that they can beat UConn in the events we do poorly in, without hurting us in our big events. If they can do this, and we do well, I think we can win."

for really nice clothes
BAGGY PANTS
Jeans, Shirts & Jerseys
BEAUTIFUL LEATHERS & UNIQUE SILVER JEWELRY (Birckhead-crafted)
also Western Shirts, Jackets & 2nd Hand Clothes
DOWN THE ALLEY • ACROSS FROM SOUND IDEAS
CLIMAX DRYGOODS

More Sports Page 32

Yesterday's Sportshead was New England Patriot Quarterback Jim Plunkett.

Phone Area 413-253-7615
FOWLER INC. Jewelers
WATCH CLOCK and JEWELRY REPAIRING
66 NORTH PLEASANT STREET AMHERST, MASS. 01002
PEWTER & LEATHER MUGS
DIAMONDS WATCHES SILVERWARE CHINA

Everyone In Action This Weekend

Gridders On Boardwalk

By MARTY KELLEY

Atlantic City, N.J.–They've had the brass and the audacity to interrupt Canniff and Leaman. They politically scared off the pompous Blue Hen from Delaware. But more importantly, they let all New England in on a secret and a lesson to be learned about big-time, small-time football. And tonight in this tourist city, the entourage sleeps quietly in anticipation of the morning light when the "they" Minutemen stalk their Western opponent in a spectacle.

They call it the 1972 Boardwa'k Bowl and never before has the Bowl Committee brought together teams of geographical dimens'ons such as Massachusetts and the University of California at Davis. As Coach Dick MacPherson said, "This is a tremendous opportunity for us to spread the name and the respect of our program to the Far West. It's the type of challenge we enjoy."

And what do the students think? Well about a thousand or so will toast the Minutemen under the Boardwalk following the game, the Band and cheerleaders will have a drink or two after the fray and countless thousands back in Amherst as well as constituents all over the East Coast will watch the Minuteman through the auspices of ABC television.

And yes we had a rally...Yesterday noon the undaunted sheet of ice surrounding the Campus Pond was broken by the prints of about a hundred well wishers, the sound of the band and the curvacious stomp of the UMass Cheerleaders.

Athletic Director Frank McInerney gave a touching unbroken speech about relativeness and the Boardwalk and he also gave Coach Mac the verbal credit that he deserves, saying in essence that MacPherson is the man and the right man for our football program that because of him has grown tremendously.

Captain Clarence Brooks talked of his experience this week at a Boston Sports Luncheon. "We're finally getting the recognition we deserve," said Clarence. "We're going to Atlantic City with Boston on our side." And of course New England's Coach of the Year, no stranger to gangbusting, rowdy, sellout crowds, had to humor the near-freezing but patriotic conclave.

"Well, I guess I'll be checking with Marty sometime before the game to find out exactly what he wants to do," quipped Mac. Apparently he thinks that I should for my own good stay out of Jimmy's ballpark. "Kelley the Greek" (no pun intended)–don't try it. But I'll stick with 35-28. And MacPherson, the perfect gentleman, thanked the "Boosters" for their support, and with a quick burst disappeared in the team bus, and slowly guided his troops to their Boardwalk fate.

I analyzed the game yesterday from a man-on-man perspective. But much more goes into this one. Like BC and every clutch football game, this will be played exclusively from the heart. But just being there is a distinct once in a lifetime experience that in itself will automatically get the kids ready to play. As Dick Cummings said, "I felt the adrenalin all week. It's going to be just like BC. It's felt just like the BC week. We're going to explode."

A fast field, no Bucknell mud, cameras, a sellout, the mystique and the aura that accompanies a Bowl, the East vs. the West, two of the top two quarterbacks in the country (Peil and Bob Biggs), and of course the opportunity for UMass football to gain national attention as well as send a Christmas Card to the Delaware farm, well, these are but a few variables that make up the 1972 Boardwalk Bowl.

Hoopsters Play URI

By FRANK ANTOSIEWICZ

Depending upon what paper or magazine you read, either UMass or Rhode Island is the favorite to annex the Yankee Conference crown this year. The first of a two part saga begins tomorrow night at the Cage at 7:30 and ends February 17 in Kingston. The J-Vs play in the prelim against the Rhody J-V's at 5:30.

Last year, a blizzard hit Amherst and the RI Rams went home buried 109-64. The aggressive play of Tom McLaughlin, Al Skinner and Peter Trow ran the bedazzled Rams off the floor. A 21-4 lead snowballed into an impressive victory. In Kingston, it was another story, as Rhody edged away at the conclusion to take the YanCon crown, 71-63.

The Rams promise to be even tougher this year, as they have lost only one starter to graduation and the top two scorers and the top rebounder are back. So far, Rhody has beaten Brown 91-81 and lost a closer game than the score indicates to Boston College, 85-75.

The frontcourt of 6'4 Steve Rowell (top threat last year and averaging 29 pts/g this year), 6'6 Robie Young (the second leading scorer last year and who scored 18 in the only game he played this year–due to a one game suspension (BC) by the coach for disciplinary reasons) and 6'7 Baker Abu (who was called Don Blackman last year and is the team's leading rebounder).

In the backcourt 6'3 Tom Barao (averaging 14 pts/g this year) is complemented by junior college transfer, 6'0 Joe Charles (The brother of Ken Charles of Fordham, who gives the team a needed take charge ballhandler).

Other Rams expected to see considerable action are: 6'2 Larry Levane, 6'8 Tom Leone, 6'6 John Morley and the leading Rhody frosh scorer with 22.9 pts/g last year, Jerry Minetti.

For the Minutemen, the starters still are not decided and will depend on what defense Coach Jack Leaman wants to use to combat the Rams. The 1-3-1 zone defense, which utilizes a guard up front and in back and manages somehow to put two men on the ballhandler, with a full court press and whatever others employed (constantly changing defenses) have been effective thus far this season.

The starting roles are up for grabs among the seven who've seen considerable action so far. Charlie Peters, a 6'7 center has performed well in the two games, amassing 100 pts/g 13 rebounds/g. At the forwards, the competition between two hustlers Tom McLaughlin, the 6'4 Captain and Peter Trow, a 6'4 junior, are pushing two game starter, John Murphy. McLaughlin is averaging 9.0 pts/g, Trow, 16.0 pts/g, while Murphy has 13 pts/g and 10 rebs/g as his credentials.

Three are vying for the two guard spots. Al Skinner leads the list with 15 pts/g and 7.0 rebs/g, followed by two game starter Bill Endicott with 6 pts/g and Rick Pitino who only scored one free throw, but came on to run the offense quite well at St. Anselm's with 7 assists to lead the charge on the fast break.

Out of the myriad of possible line-ups comes the question, what if Al Skinner is at forward, which is also possible, but it is Coach Leaman who will decide who and at what position. There is no Dr. J on this team, but instead a host of players, who perform well in certain situations and that is where the non-starters will be of prime importance–to provide the spark.

Pucksters Home Twice

By BILL BALLOU

The Minutemen come home tonight after playing three games on the road, and you'd better catch the act while it's in town because you won't have another chance to see it until January 27.

The skaters play a two-game set this weekend, hosting Middlebury College at Orr Rink tonight and Norwich the same place tomorrow afternoon at 3:00 PM.

UMass has traditionally had a hard time with both these Vermont schools. Over the years Middlebury has a one-game edge over Massachusetts while Norwich has a 9-2 edge over UMass teams. Last year the Redmen took both clubs back-to-back in a two-game road trip, beating Norwich 8-2 and Middlebury 3-2.

Middlebury's biggest asset is a goaltender from Montreal named Larry Perlman. Perlman was the man responsible for keeping the Panthers in last year's game and, as a junior, he's got two years of varsity experience under his belt. The rest of the line-up shows 13 returning lettermen from a team which, although their record of 7-12-2 doesn't show it, played some real good hockey. For instance they tied Vermont 3-3.

Among those lettermen is senior Chris Burr, who's just about like any other hockey player except for the fact that his hometown is Boca Raton, Florida.

Saturday's game with Norwich promises to be one of the best of the season. The Cadets go in good-bad-good year cycles and last year was one of the worst, so they're due for a good one this season. And, from the limited action they've seen so far, it's going to be a really good one. They lost to Div. I power Clarkson and Div. II's Vermont by identical 5-3 scores and they beat AIC 9-3. So, if you believe in comparative scores, it should be an evenly matched game.

The Cadets, much like Middlebury, are led by a junior goaltender who's already got two years of service in. Norwich's man is Bill Cantwell, a little guy from Auburn. Cantwell didn't look too sharp against UMass last year, but he set a Division record for most saves in a season.

UMass is coming off a sluggish performance against Williams in which goaltender Peter Erickson turned the tide with another outstanding performance. Oddly enough, the two games the Minutemen have won, Boston State and Williams, have been rather lacklustre efforts, while the game they lost, Vermont, was a game in which they skated the best they could. A change to the more familiar scenery of Orr Rink may work wonders for the skaters.

Walton Gets Two

B's Blank St. Louis

BOSTON (AP) — Mike Walton continued his hot scoring with a pair of goals and veteran goalie Eddie Johnston earned his second shutout Thursday night as the Boston Bruins extended their unbeaten streak to 10 games with a 5-0 National Hockey League victory over the St. Louis Blues.

The Bruins, who have won nine and tied one since their last loss, moved into a tie with idle New York for second place in the NHL East, four points behind front-running Montreal.

Walton scored on a brilliant unassisted effort in a three-goal first period and then tallied again in the finale. He has 14 goals, 12 in his last 12 games.

Johnston, who shut out the Blues 4-0 Nov. 16, continued his mastery of St. Louis with 35 saves.

Other Boston scorers were Wayne Cashman, Don Marcotte and Phil Esposito.

Cashman and Esposito play on the same line along with Ken Hodge. Marcotte, off to his best start ever, skates with two rookies, Terry O'Reilly and Greg Sheppard.

After a calm first period, tempers flared with four fights in the final two sessions. Hodge and St. Louis goalie Bob Johnson exchanged punches, although neither draw a major penalty. And Espie went at it with the Blues Barclay Plager went at it in separate brawls in the second period.

Floyd Thomson of St. Louis and Boston's O'Reilly engaged in a pair of fights in the third period.

The Bruins' next game is Saturday night against the Philadelphia Flyers at the Spectrum in Philadelphia.

OTHER PRO HOCKEY RESULTS

NHL
Buffalo 6, Detroit 1
Philadelphia 6, Minnesota 2
WHA
New England 4, Ottawa 2

Wrestlers Down Central Connecticut; Face Ivies Next

By JOHN BOCK

"Central Connecticut is tough to beat when they are on their own mats." This was wrestling Coach Homer Barr's sole statement after guiding his wrestlers to a 28-16 victory over Central Connecticut State College.

For sure, the Blue Devils were tired from their match with Yale the previous evening (which ended in Yale's favor 28-15) but they were definitely in good shape and went the full eight minutes in most of the matches.

Minutemen bringing their records to 3-0 were Dave Amato, Larry Reynolds, Steve Rome, and Cliff Blom.

CCSC's lineup was without the services of John Hamilton at 134 and had another man that was obviously hampered with an ankle injury but wrestled nevertheless.

Amato got things off to a start by beating Central's Ed Sallie 11-4. Dave, who has been complaining lately about not shooting his takedowns as well as he did in pre-season tourneys, started showing the form again as he took Sallie down twice and put him right on his back to cash in on two five point moves.

"This was the first match I was Really psyched for," Amato responded after the match.

Larry Reynolds had a tougher than usual match with Al Specian but took the win 7-3. Larry's big score came in the second period when he reversed Specian and put him on his back for four points. In the third period Specian escaped and Larry took him down and then he escaped again but time was up and Specian was down four points.

Central Connecticut holds some kind of good luck for UMass 134-pounder Mike McGlaughlin as he pinned Bill Keiser at 5:31 in the match. Last year in his first performance on the Varsity mat Mike clamped a Central grappler. The fall almost came in the second period where Mike picked up six points in near falls but had the clock run out.

The team score at this point was 12-0 Massachusetts and it looked like it might go higher as Dick Muri came out for the 142-pound match. It was late in the first period, however, and both men were still jousting for the takedown when Blue Devil Kevin Holmgren shot in on Dick's knees and dislocated the kneecap in his right knee. Dr. George Snook was on hand, fortunately, and was able to put it back in place and determine that Muri couldn't go on. So Central collected an easy six on the default, while they collected some ice for Dick's knee. Dr. Snook predicted about six weeks in a cast and then some therapy before Muri sees action again.

At 150 "Tony" Rome beat Central's Kevin Miller in a runaway, 12-2. It was Rome all the way as he had three takedowns, two near falls and an escape to run up the score. Miller's ankle was sore but he insisted in going on with the match and suffered the loss as a reward.

Cliff Blom is enjoying his spot at 158 as he became three for three in wins and two for three in pins, sticking Marshall Quinn at 5:22. His pin came on a move where he reversed his man picked him up by the legs, pulled his legs apart and slipped in what is fondly known as the "Saturday Night" ride.

Steve Benson, Chris Cadwallader and Joe Acerra shared an off night as they gave Central the last 10 points they would score in the match.

The Daily Collegian SPORTS

The Heavyweight match turned into a demonstration of UMass' George Ireland's repetoire of pinning combinations. George never left any doubt that he would pin the kid he just had the fans guessing when. (Answer: 3:34 in the match.) George almost got taken down with an ankle pickup but shrugged it off with an easy smile and finished the evening's match.

Three and 0 is a fine record to have but it is not time to let up in practice. Definitely not with Harvard and Cornell scheduled for tomorrow at Harvard. Harvard finished fourth in the Ivy and well back in the Eastern's, from Yale. Cornell had the distinction of being the last place team in the Ivy and fourth to last in the Easterns.

But conference and tournament finishes aren't good indicators of what a team can do man for man in a dual match. Last year Harvard stuck it to the contingent of UMass that went down to the Yard.

This year they are probably not as strong as Yale and a recent drubbing they took from Boston University indicates they aren't in shape for an eight minute match yet.

"For the first time this year our lightweights are really going to be challenged, so it is going to be up to our heavyweights to really do a job," said Coach Barr.

Returning veterans that will give the Minutemen trouble are Dan Blakinger at 118, Carl Biello (third in the East) at 126 and Richie Starr at 190. This will be the first meeting between UMass and the Big Red of Cornell. Men to watch for will be John Grote fourth in the East at 190, second in this year's East Stroudsburg Tourney and Dan Crawford at 158 or 167.

The match is scheduled for 2:00, UMass versus Cornell and then Cornell vs. Harvard at 4:00, with the feature match of UMass-Harvard to be at 7:00.

New England's Largest College Daily

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

Weather
And the sky is a hazy shade of winter.

Recyclable

VOLUME C, ISSUE 64 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS MONDAY, DECEMBER 11, 1972

Chandler Backers Close School Of Ed.

Students and teachers arriving for classes Friday found doors blocked at the School of Education. (MDC Photo by Steve Smith)

By NATHAN GORENSTEIN

The occupation of the School of Education by the Third World Alliance entered its fourth day this morning with the outcome of the controversy over Paul Chandler's admission still in doubt.

Almost incident free, the occupation, which started Friday morning at 10:30, is centered around Dean Dwight Allen's refusal to make a decision on Chandler's application to the school's graduate program by a 9:30 Friday deadline set by the Alliance.

The Alliance and its supporters will stay in the school, according to spokeswoman Anne Saunders, until Allen, "Realizes the necessity of coming to a decision."

According to Allen the School of Education faculty meeting scheduled today to determine what action should be taken "vis-a-vis Chandler's admission" will still be held in the school.

Asked what he would do if the faculty voted to accept Chandler, Allen replied, "no dean likes to vote against his faculty."

A Third World Alliance spokesman said faculty would be allowed into Marks Meadow Auditorium for the meeting, to be held at 12 noon, but that students would not be allowed into class.

Allen said yesterday morning that classes were planned at the school and acknowledged that "The possibility of a confrontation is there."

Since Friday afternoon Allen has been meeting with small groups of school faculty. Allen said he was asking them what they think the decision making process should be.

Allen said the suggestions he had received included a secret ballot of the faculty; that it was inappropriate to ask the faculty because they were not informed, and if Allen did he would be "copping out;" to appoint a faculty committee to study Chandler's case and report back to the faculty or have the faculty affirm the right of the administration to make a decision.

In other developments, three statements were released yesterday.

One statement, signed by over 100 members of the five-college community, said no student should be denied admission to a school because of his political views.

A statement released by the Third World Alliance charged Allen's decision to have the faculty meeting in the School of Education was an attempt to stage a confrontation, and to gather faculty support. Allen released his own statement, in which he said the Third World Alliance, by closing down the school, had interrupted the faculty input it had itself requested. It also reaffirmed his intention to postpone a decision until after the faculty had met on the question.

Chancellor Randolph Bromery said he had seen the first statement that the Chancellor's office endorsed it on "principle". (See statements Page 2.)

Sunday night Bromery said he had met with three people from the Alliance but said he had not "negotiated" with them. He added he told them he would like to have the building open by today.

Bromery said it was important that Allen and the faculty have access to the building today so that "due-process" today's scheduled faculty meeting, could take place.

He added, however, that he did not foresee the need to open the building by force.

Bromery said he stood opposed to takeovers as a "mechanism to get due-process on this campus." However, Bromery said that the takeover indicated that the "normal" channels to get "grievances redressed" are not operating properly. He added some "vehicle" must be created to avoid them in the future.

The Alliance has made four demands to Allen:

--That Allen reply to the Alliance's Dec. 6th memo concerning Chandler.

--That Allen give a written decision on Chandler's application to the Alliance and the University administration.

--That Allen specify the precise criteria for graduate admissions to the school's graduate program.

--And that all people involved in the occupation be granted academic and legal amnesty.

In an interview Saturday night Allen said he had stated all along that he would have a decision on Chandler's application by Friday, December 15th, the University's deadline for graduate admissions. Allen reinterated that the decision process is not just based on academics. According to Allen half of all graduate decisions are made "independent" of academic criteria.

On the Alliance's request for amnesty Allen's aid he could not make a decision until he is aware what the "consequences" of the occupation are. However, Allen added that people who work "outside" the system deserve to bear the consequences.

Anne Saunders, an undergraduate in engineering, said there has been no communication with Allen. At this time, Saunders felt it would be "overwhelmingly futile."

She said the issue was not just Chandler's acceptance, but whether or not Allen has the authority to prevent an admission on the basis of "political posture."

The atmosphere at the school over the weekend was relaxed and quiet. Saturday the demonstrators cleaned the building and compiled information packets to be given out to the press and observers. The packets included stories on the takeover from the local newspapers, a short resume on Chandler, an account of the recent events dating from mid-November, and statements from the Third World Alliance.

That night a lively and at times heated workshop was held to discuss the dynamics of black leadership at the University and in the nation.

Throughout the weekend food was brought into the building by sympathetic members of the community while many of the students took the opportunity to study. Saturday evening there were 40 people, both black and white in the building. Spokesmen expected more Sunday night and Monday morning.

The only incident over the weekend was Saturday afternoon when a scuffle ensued between three of the demonstrators and the husband of a faculty member who had cut there way into the building to get some office material. A window was broken, the faculty member's husband has taken responsibility.

Adding to an already complicated situation Allen questioned

(Continued on P. 6)

UMass Bowls Over Davis, 35-14

By EARLE BARROLL

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. - Imagine, Eastern College Division football and the champion is from the West Coast. What was that? Dick Nixon and Abbie Hoffman on the same ticket?

And so it should come as no surprise for head coach Dick MacPherson if he comes across a letter this week that says: "Dear UMass football.....thanks for sparing us the embarassment....Signed, the Boardwalk Bowl Committee."

The score was 35-14. The crowd was a meager 2857, and understandably so mostly UMass, as the UMass football team (9-2) completed the most successful season in the history of this school with a Boardwalk Bowl victory at Convention Hall on Saturday.

Thus, UCal-Davis, the team that came in from the West, joined Harvard and Boston College. What are the good people of Delaware saying this morning?

Historians will point to many reasons behind this victory. But UCal-Davis coach Jim Sochor expressed it candidly when he said after the game: "We didn't have our usual sharpness and quickness today. UMass had a lot to do with it."

What Sochor was referring to was a stronger, heavier (by 20 pounds a man on the line) and more alert Minuteman squad that sprinted to a quick 20-0 lead, saw it cut by two-thirds and then rallied in the last quarter to secure the Bowl.

Their combined efforts thwarted the super individual performance of UCal-Davis first team all-American quarterback Bob Biggs who launched 60 passes, completed 27 for 388 yards, one touchdown and four interceptions.

You guessed it. The latter statistic provided him with the ultimate in achilles heals with two of the four thefts setting up UMass touchdowns. John Healy picked one off to set up the Minutemen's second consecutive score after Peil Pennington (12 for 22 for 145 yards)

(Continued on P. 20)

On The Inside:

● Coalition Formed — see page three

● Apollo Lands Today — see page four

● Boardwalk Bowl — see page twenty

Dean Allen's Statement

(Editor's Note: Statement by Dean Dwight Allen to the Daily Collegian)

During the past five years the School of Education has attempted to recruit and draw together a wide diversity of students and faculty devoted to implementing major change in American education. In this process we have faced conservative pressures that have questioned our "standards" and operational procedures; we have faced more radical pressures which have questioned--as a matter of politics--the sincerity of our intent to improve education in the United States.

I have reluctantly but realistically come to the conclusion that the sense of community of our school, which was originally fostered by shared commitment, has been stretched to its limits under the pressure of growth and dissent. As has been the experience of other institutions of higher education, clearly the School of Education has learned that dramatic social change cannot be fostered and maintained without some reasonable limits to diversity and dissent.

In the past five years the school of education has grown to embrace a community of more than 350 minority graduate students which are 85% of all minority graduate students in the entire university.

We have a higher proportion of minority faculty than any school or college in the university and half our deans are minority members.

The school has embarked upon programs which have had major impact upon educational institutions across the country including the public schools of Boston, Worcester, Springfield and New York City. We have come this far by taking innumerable risks and winning a fair share of them.

If these accomplishments can be written off by the university or others as racist, sexist, or inconsequential, we challenge any division, department or program in the University to match our dreams and our results. I regret, as we all regret, that we cannot do more.

Some people are saying that questioning the admissions decision of Paul Chandler stands as evidence of the School's lack of support for outstanding black candidates--particularly since Paul Chandler appears to be qualified on some of the more traditional academic criteria. These people are undoubtedly unaware of the large number of graduate applications to the School of Education, many of them from black and minority students. Last year, for example, we had more than 2500 applicants and admitted approximately 500. We have denied admission to students with substantially stronger academic records than Paul Chandler and accepted many with weaker records because we believed in their long run potential. Clearly such loose criteria leave the school vulnerable to charges of inadequate criteria yet the use of criteria is largely responsible for the present enrollment of highly promising students of great diversity.

At present some of the negative information brought to my attention which leads me to question the admission of Paul Chandler to the graduate program is the following:

1. The School of Education has many applications for every position and many "qualified" applicants must be denied admission. In the admissions process, the burden of proof must fall on the candidate and his supporters to demonstrate why that particular candidate should be chosen over others, unlike a "trial" where the burden of proof must overturn a presumption of innocence.

2. Since I made my presentation to a hearing called by the faculty last week to consider Paul Chandler's admission, a number of faculty have come to me with questions. Some have questioned the process by which Paul is seeking to be admitted. Several faculty have questioned his early graduation from the undergraduate program and his accumulation of 28 credits during the past spring semester while he had a half-time job as a part of his Career Opportunities Program.

3. Paul Chandler's behavior in the past provides considerable evidence that speaks against his admission to the graduate program. While his political beliefs are his personal right, his personal actions are accountable to the larger community. It is difficult to document specific actions. In general, however, Paul has acted in ways which have created personal harm to administrators, faculty and students, within the School of Education both black and white, which have served to disrupt the learning and working processes of the school community. On one occasion he used physical force against a faculty member; on another occasion he misrepresented the facts before a public meeting of the School Council.

4. Paul Chandler has stated on several occasions that the School of Education's methods and goals are detrimental to the Third World Community. He has also stated that he has "nothing to learn" from the School. Several faculty have questioned in writing how we could even consider the application of a student who they report has stated that he has nothing to learn from our programs and faculty.

5. In the past week, Paul Chandler has apparently supported actions which have disrupted the very process of consultation, discussion, and communication among the faculty concerning his admission. I have no reason to believe that Paul Chandler does not intend to continue to disrupt such processes

(Continued on P. 6)

3rd World Text

Editor's Note: The following is a statement from the THIRD WORLD ALLIANCE.)

For the second time within the year 1972, Dwight Allen is putting "his mess" in the laps of his faculty. Dean Allen, of the School of Education, attempted to call for a faculty consensus with regards to the legitimacy of the Third World Caucus of the School of Education during the Spring of 1972, and again, he is calling for a faculty consensus with regards to Paul Chandler's admission into the graduate progrm of the School of Education. Yet, it was he, Dwight Allen, that set up the controversial polling of Third World people to ascertain Third World suppoet of the body; and it is he that precipitated the current crisis by standing in opposition to Paul Chandler's admission, and publicly stating that non-academic criteria are the basis for his judgment.

Dwight Allen realizes that his only "ace-in-the-hole" is to provoke a confrontation between the faculty of the School of Education and the people occupying the School of Education building. By calling for a faculty meeting today, Monday, December 11, in the Marks Meadow Elementary School Auditorium, he is attempting to construct an atmosphere for such a confrontation. It has been public information that the Third World Alliance was having cultural activities at the School of Education, and any idiot could surmise that they were being held in the Auditorium.

If such a confrontation does actualize, Dwight Allen could feel sure that the consensus of the faculty would reflect his own sentiments. Dean Allen could have scheduled this meeting at an alternative location by simply informing his faculty of a new location during his sessions with them this weekend. It is this projection, that leads us to conclude that Sy Rudman's actions on Saturday, December 9, were no accident. The persons occupying the building at that time were not aware that he and his wife, Masha Rudman, had even gained entrance into the School. Yet, Mr. Rudman was not satisfied to pick up his wife's items, as he claims; he went upstairs to the main floor and attempted to exemplify his "superman" complex by pushing a 110 lb. woman, repeatedly asking "Are you going to hit me?", and kicking out a glass door pane. Dwight Allen would wish that a physical confrontation ensue, to obscure the issues which have resulted in the current takeover of the School of Education.

Characteristically, Dwight Allen is reportedly attempting to promote fear in the local Amherst community as well as the University community by stating that he is "unsure" of the Third World Alliance's intentions with regard to the children enrolled in Marks Meadow Elementary School. Third World Alliance members, in a meeting with Mr. Michael Greenebaum, principal of Marks Meadow, have assured him that the business of school would go on as normal, as was the case Friday, December 8th.

The academic and non-academic communities should be aware of Dean Dwight Allen's desperate endeavors to alleviate his present isolation.

Infirmary
(In An Emergency)
(54) 5-2671

Five College Petition

The following statement by faculty and administrators in the five-college area is supported in principle by the offices of the Chancellor, the Provost, and the offices of the Dean of the Graduate School of the University. The Administration affirms that these are the basic principles on which this University operates:

"As members of the faculty and administration of the five colleges, we are outraged by any suggestion that admission to the University of Massachusetts can be predicated on political and social attitudes on the part of the student, which have to be acceptable to a given ideology. The University of Massachusetts is a public land grant institution, available to all members of the society who meet the academic qualifications of the school. Admission to the University cannot be predicated on political, religious, or ideological criteria. Any suggestion to this affect is illegal, unconstitutional, a serious threat to the integrity of the entire institution, and a violation of academic freedom, which is to be resisted."

University of Massachusetts

Jeremiah Allen, Dean, College of Arts & Sciences; Seymour Shapiro, former Dean, College of Arts & Sciences; Chinua Achebe, Professor of Afro American Studies; J. Dovi Atesi, Professor of Afro American Studies; John Bracey, Professor of Afro American Studies; Johnnetta Cole, Professor of Afro American Studies; Chester Davis, Associate Chairman & Professor of Afro American Studies; Paul Carter Harrison, Professor of Afro American Studies; Julius Lester, Professor of Afro American Studies; Raymond Miles, Professor of Afro American Studies; Acklyn Lynch, Professor of Afro American Studies; Diana Ramos, Professor of Afro American Studies; Max Roach, Professor of Afro American Studies; Archie Shepp, Professor of Afro American Studies; Mel Smith, Professor of Afro American Studies; Nelson Stevens, Professor of Afro American Studies; Esther Terry, Professor of Afro American Studies; Michael Thelwell, Professor and Chairman, Department of Afro American Studies; Bill Darity, Professor and Chairman, Department of Public Health and Chairman, Board of CCEBS; T.L. Chin, Assistant Professor of Public Health; Salvatore R. DiNardi, Assistant Professor of Public Health; Joyce E. Goggin, Assistant Professor of Public Health; Allen J. Gross, Associate Professor of Public Health; Lillie R. Lynch, Associate Professor of Public Health; Normand Berlin, Professor of English; Jules Chametsky, Professor of English, Editor of The Massachusetts Review; David Clark, Professor of English; Charles Eldsuit, Professor of English; John Harrington, Professor of English; Richard Haven, Professor of English; Donald Junkins, Associate Professor of English and Director, M.F.A. Program, Department of English; Arthur Kinney, Associate Professor of English; Joseph Langland, Professor of English; Milton Mayer, Professor of English; Jack Shadoian, Professor of English; Robert Tucker, Professor of English; Dean Alberson, Professor of History; Milton Cantor, Associate Professor of History; Robert Griffith, Associate Professor of History; Joseph M. Hernon, Associate Professor of History; Bruce Lourie, Assistant Professor of History; Stephen Nissenbaum, Associate Professor of History; Stephen B. Oates, Professor of History; Michael Best, Professor of Economics; Samuel Bowles, Professor of Economics; Robert E. Cole, Professor of Agricultural Economics; John Cole, Professor of Anthropology; Pat Sackrey, Director, Every Woman's Center; Leone Stein, Director, University of Massachusetts Press.

Mt. Holyoke College

Walter Stewart, Professor and Chairman, Department of Afro American Studies.

Smith College

Mark Aldrich, Professor of Economics; Carol Jusenius, Professor of Economics; Charles Sackrey, Professor of Economics; Leonard Baskin, Professor of Art; Suzanne Bloom, Professor of Art; Peter Bloom, Professor of Music; Martha Fowlkes, Professor of Sociology; Murray Kitley, Professor of Philosophy; Reverend Richard Unsworth, Chaplain and Professor of Religion; W.H. Van Vois, Associate Professor of English.

Amherst College

Asa Davis, Professor and Chairman, Department of Afro American Studies.

Hampshire College

Jerome Liebling, Professor of Film Studies; Robert Marquez, Professor, School of Humanities and Arts; Eugene Terry, Chairman, Department of Afro American Studies; Gloria Joseph, Associate Professor, School of Social Science.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

The office of the DAILY COLLEGIAN is on the second floor of the Student Union on the campus of the University of Massachusetts, zip code 01002. Telephones: 545-2550 (news); 545-0344 (sports); 545-0731 (business).

Second class postage is paid in Amherst. THE DAILY COLLEGIAN publishes Monday through Friday during the academic year, except during vacation, exam periods or holidays. Accepted for mailing under the authority of an act of March 8, 1879, as amended by an act of June 11, 1943. Subscription rates are $6.00 per semester or $10.00 per year.

FREE DELIVERY
Weekdays 5:30 p.m. - 12:00 midnite
Weekends 4:00 p.m. - 2 a.m.
Kentucky Fried Chicken
256-8745
Student Special 99¢

Meet the COLLEGIAN EDITORS
TODAY
1-4
across from the Candy Counter in Student Union Lobby

- Register your complaints.
- Have your questions answered.
- Discuss Collegian news, editorial, and business policy.

umt
DECEMBER
7-8-9
14-15-16
THE TAMING OF THE SHREW
bartlett theatre (545 2579) 8:30pm u mass

Three persons suffered smoke inhalation during a fire in a suite lounge on the seventh floor of Brown House in the Sylvan Area Saturday night. (MDC Photo by George Withers)

Three Overcome In Dorm Fire

By BILL FOSTER

Three people were overcome by smoke inhalation and a suite lounge was extensively damaged when a fire broke out on the seventh floor of Brown House in the Sylvan Area at approximately 12:05 Sunday morning.

The Amherst Fire Department responded within five minutes of the first fire signals.

The first alarm was given simultaneously by the smoke detector in Brown House and by Phil Mason, a student who was on security duty at the time. Mason called the Amherst Police, who in turn notified the Fire Department.

The building was hastily evacuated and firemen rushed to the seventh floor, where the fire was contained to one suite. After about one hour the fire was brought under control.

The only casualties were three persons who were overcome by smoke inhalation; Ed Honeyman, a Police officer, a Brown House resident, and a member of the Area staff.

At about 1 A.M. the 7th floor was declared safe by firemen and students from the suite, who had been out at the time of the fire, spent the night in other student's rooms. Yesterday morning Physical Plant workers came to the suite to clean it out and replace the doors and locks that were destroyed by the fire and by firemen in their attempts to free students who may have been trapped in the rooms. They will return again tomorrow to paint and replace the doors.

Although there is a rumor that the fire was caused by a faulty electrical outlet in the suite's lounge, there has been no official confirmation of this and the cause of the blaze is listed as undetermined at this time.

Tanaka's Party Retains Majority

TOKYO (AP) - Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka's pro-American Liberal Democrats have retained control of Japan's ruling House of Representatives, giving Japan four more years of conservative rule.

Returns from Sunday's general election indicated, however, that the party's lopsided majority would be somewhat reduced in the face of Socialist and Communist gains.

At 55, the nation's youngest prime minister since World War II, Tanaka gained widespread popularity by recognizing the People's Republic of China in September. He won handsomely in his own Niigata district, with 124,000 votes more than his nearest opponent, a Socialist, but his coattails apparently were not sufficient to maintain the 297 Liberal Democratic seats in the Diet's lower house.

With 416 seats of the 491 at stake decided, Tanaka's party had won 246, the Socialists 102, the Democratic Socialists 11, the Buddhist-oriented Komei 19 and the Communists 26. There were 12 independents.

By topping the 100 mark in seats, the Socialists partially recovered from the crippling losses of the 1969 election when they dropped from 130 seats to the 87 held at dissolution.

HADLEY VILLAGE
- 6 month lease
- 1 and 2 bedroom available
- 15 minutes from Amherst
- rent includes heat, air conditioning, electricity

538-8269

Coalition Seeks Town Reform

By FRANK ANTOSIEWICZ

Such varied interest groups as the Grass Roots McGovern Volunteers and the Tea Party along with other community groups have banded together in an effort to make local government more responsive to the needs of the community.

The New Politics Coalition hopes to improve town government by providing a slate of 40 to run against the many incumbents, many of which usually run unopposed, and thereby provide a choice for the town meeting member seats. So far, the group has 20 members running for the seats.

The platform which all members of the Coalition agreed to, consists mostly of town issues. Some of the more important areas to be stressed are:

–Town government to be responsive to students, lower-income homeowners and tenants
–Rechartering Amherst to increase local self-government; for example, a home-town court –better town-student communication
–child-care center
–slowing town growth to protect farms and preserve open space, and to end University growth
–pollution control. (Rigorous local enforcement, exploration of conversion of sewage and the recycling of air-conditioned water)
–bicycle paths, "No Motor Vehicle" zones on N. and S. Pleasant Streets, hitchhiking stations and "safe ride" stickers for vehicles –detoxification centers instead of jails and a low law enforcement priority for marijuana laws –Civilian Review Board to review police policy and conduct –rent control
–lobbying for graduated income tax

The group also decided that any member of the Coalition who did not conform to the platform decided on by democratic vote would no longer be considered part of the Coalition.

The reasons vary for the various members running for office. William Sage, who is running for town meeting member in precinct 2, said, "At the present time there are only two students who are town meeting members." He continued by saying that no one has really campaigned before and this will be the first time that it will be done as a group and the issues will be presented to the people.

Jeffrey Boudreau, who is running in precinct 3, called the present town meeting members, "hardly a cross section of the town." He went on to describe them as primarily land owners.

Ms. Susan Bamford, who is running in precinct 2, said "We ought to be used, as we are a good resource. It is not like we are trying to take over, we want to work along with them (the townspeople)."

George Scheurer, who is running in precinct 5, was concentrating on the tenant situation in Amherst.

Eric Walgren, one of the three non-students at the meeting, said that he was running under the Coalition banner, but the Coalition itself was not radical enough and that his proposals went even further. In order to show a change in himself, Walgren presented a miniature coffin to illustrate the death of his reputation as "Eric the Rat" and also presented a black and white rabbit to characterize what he called his own threat to the town of Amherst.

The next meeting of the Coalition is tonight at 7:30 in Campus Center Room 178. The meeting will be open to everyone interested.

Karier Speaks On Campus Freedom

By JEFFREY LEVIN

Dr. Clarence Karier, professor of History of Education at the University of Illinois, spoke to about 40 people Thursday evening on "The History of Academic Freedom and Its Effect on Twentieth Century Education," in a lecture sponsored by the School of Education.

Professor Karier, author of "The Roots of the American Educational Crisis" drew his talk from a book on radical movements and academic freedom in America, that he will soon publish.

With an explanation of academic freedom in the German University in the 19th century, Karier began his speech. He said that severe limitations on the "freedom of inquiry" existed and that these limitations were threefold.

Firstly, the German University tended only to admit students of the higher socioeconomic class. Secondly, the professors, as hired officers of the state were well screened so that those who espoused radical views were not allowed faculty positions. The third limitation dictated that professors could not teach radical ideas, but only support "acceptable causes."

The effect of the German experience on American education was quite evident according to Karier. American university professors in the 19th century were screened for the values that they would impart to students and not for the new knowledge that they would convey, said Karier.

He illustrated his essay with two historical cases in which university professors were fired. The first was the Ely case of 1894 at the University of Wisconsin, where Professor Ely was charged with asking laborers to strike and consumers to boycott.

According to Karier, Ely was acquitted because his views were deemed "safe", and the case became known as "the Magna Carta of academic liberty."

A second case that Dr. Karier discussed was that of Professor Bemus of the University of Chicago in 1894. "Professor Bemus saw himself as an advocate of unpopular causes.

He was far more the Ralph Nader type who campaigned against the big business establishments," said Karier.

According to Karier, those particular big business leaders that Bemus derided were the ones who financially supported the University and were influential in the Chicago academic community. "Direct influence of the financial donor" said Karier "to the academic interests of the University is self-evident in this case."

In relating the history of academic freedom to the American educational system of the present, Karier noted that academic freedom has not advanced very far. He discussed the problem of professors who oppose the war in Vietnam; he said that they are not allowed to collectively commit their respective universities against the war.

He also related President Nixon to the concept of academic freedom. He told of a letter that was sent to all American university presidents by President Nixon in the fall of 1970 on how to achieve peace on the campuses.

In a discussion period that followed the lecture, visiting radical economist Professor Sam Bowles of Harvard University brought up the point that many of the American university professors that have been fired were advocates of the working class.

When asked what his ideal situation would be in regard to academic freedom, Karier replied "My society would be free enough to allow inquiry openly in all aspects of society. We wouldn't need academic freedom."

Smile, Please

MOUNT PLEASANT, Iowa (AP) - Two students at Iowa Wesleyan College did a social psychology experiment in downtown stores and found that a smile will get you a clerk faster than a scowl.

Ray Kress and Allan Harmeyer conductd the experiment by entering stores together and standing an equal distance from the nearest clerk. One wore a smile, the other a scowl.

They alternated smiling and scowling, so each student spent half his time smiling, the other half scowling. They kept track of who was waited on first in each case.

The result was that 82 per cent of the clerks headed first for the smiling customer.

And the only times that clerks waited on the scowling student before the smiler was when the scowler was Kress, who has shorter hair.

Wanted:
BUS DRIVERS
U/Mass students with a Class II License who wish to work during Spring '73 Semester. Apply Room 434 S.U. Phone 5-0056 or 5-2086.
Student Senate Transit Service
An Equal Opportunity Employer

Flicker 'n' Flame Flower Shop
Plants, Arrangements Novelties, Gift Items
Poinsettias from $1-$10
WEEKLY SPECIALS
come in & say "hi"
In the Amherst Carriage Shops
Free local delivery daily 10-6 Fri. 'til 9 549-1493

In The Nation And The World

Apollo 17 Prepares For Landing Today

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Apollo 17 swept into orbit around the moon Sunday and commander Eugene A. Cernan announced: "America has arrived on station for the challenge ahead."

A 6-1/2 minute burst of command ship America's engine propelled Cernan, geologist Harrison H. Schmitt and Ronald E. Evans into a perfect orbit and set them up for six days of scientific exploration and man's last chance for perhaps decades to probe lunar mysteries.

Cernan and Schmitt on Monday will detach the lunar ship Challenger for a tricky descent into a mountain-ringed volcanic valley named Taurus-Littrow.

The astronauts were excited at arriving in lunar orbit, causing Schmitt to remark· "We're breathing so hard, the windows are fogging up on the inside."

For Schmitt, it was a geologist's dream. The first scientist to travel in space immediately began describing lunar features.

Cernan, who had orbited the moon on Apollo 10 in 1969, said the sight "is still just as impressive."

The spacemen ended their quarter-million-mile outward journey from earth and slipped behind the backside of the moon, out of radio contact, at 2:36 p.m. EST.

Eleven minutes into the backside pass the astronauts fired their big spaceship engine for 6-1/2 minutes to slow their speed by more than 2,000 miles an hour, enabling lunar gravity to grip them into an orbit ranging from about 60 to 195 miles above the cratered surface.

Mission Control waited in suspense another 22 minutes until Apollo 17 reappeared around the moon's eastern rim, once again in radio range, and Cernan relayed the word of the successful ignition.

"Thumbs up," were his first words. Then he added: "Houston, you can breathe easier. America has arrived on station for the challenge ahead."

Cernan, Evans and Schmitt caught their first glimpse of the moon since their launching from Cape Kennedy Thursday when they were just 11,500 miles away. The angle of the spacecraft prevented them from seeing it out their windows sooner.

"We can finally see it out there," Cernan reported.

After a day of checkout, Cernan and Schmitt, the first scientist to travel in space, will board the lunar ship Challenger Monday and descend to a landing in a mountain valley named Taurus-Littrow.

The 11th and 12th Americans to visit the moon are scheduled to touchdown at 2:55 p.m. and four hours later are to begin their first of three outside excursions, each lasting seven hours. They are to spend a record 75 hours on the moon, three hours longer than Apollo 16 last April.

After breakfast Sunday, the astronauts jettisoned a 170-pound metal door covering science instruments and cameras in an equipment bay at the rear of the command ship.

The removal of the door, called the world's largest lens cover, uncovered two cameras and three multimillion-dollar scientific instruments which Evans will operate while orbiting the moon alone for more than three days.

After Cernan and Schmitt leave the moon and rejoin America on Thursday, the spacemen will spend an extra two days operating these instruments in orbit before heading home.

Rice Shortage Hits Indonesia

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) - Empty-eyed women stand in long lines under a light drizzle waiting for rice as leaders struggle to head off what could be Indonesia's worst crisis since the fall of Sukarno.

A disastrous drought, coupled with insufficient stockpiling, has left the nation's 125 million people short of their only major staple - rice. And the lean months are still ahead.

Some starvation deaths have been reported and many families are spending their entire income on food.

"If anything can upset the stability here, the rice can," said one Indonesian intellectual, reflecting an almost universal opinion here.

Government officials are dumping 120,000 tons of rice a month on the market to depress the prices which, in some places, are two to three times their normal level.

supposed to keep the price steady by such market operations, will not say how much rice it has on hand.

Emergency orders on the tight international rice market may have produced just enough grain to hold prices to the present level or lower during the crisis period, but shipping and labor problems may delay delivery.

"If you're going to ask me who is to blame, then I'd say I'm the one responsible," President Suharto said last week. But he added that the situation was in control despite efforts by antigovernment elements to exploit it.

He warned the people not to create unrest over the issue and assured that hoarding was not necessary. Atty. Gen. Sugih Arto, a day later, reminded the public that rice manipulators could be executed.

Few expect open rebellion or widespread riots, and Suharto's unopposed re-election by Congress in March is considered a certainty.

But analysts say there may be serious, if subtle, changes in the intricate social and political structure of Indonesia. There also may be increased robberies and tensions between the poor and rich.

"You'll find people coming to parties uninvited and some just sitting on rich people's front lawns until they are fed," said one Indonesian commentator.

Economists and agriculture specialists agree with the government that the extra 800,000 tons of imported rice, if it arrives on schedule, could avert a worsening of the situation.

Aides Examine Peace Details

PARIS (AP) - Henry A. Kissinger took time off Sunday from his bargaining marathon with Hanoi's Le Duc Tho while experts of the two delegations examined "technical details" of a possible Vietnam peace settlement.

The U.S. presidential adviser and Tho, who conferred for a total of 24 hours last week, were due to hold their next meeting Monday. Kissinger's top aide, Gen. Alexander M. Haig Jr., was in Washington to deliver a personal report to President Nixon on the protracted secret negotiations.

Haig flew to Washington on Saturday night, following reports that Kissinger himself planned to return home. Haig, who conferred with President Hguyen Van Thieu in Saigon before coming to Paris, has attended almost all the secret talks with Tho.

Both the United States and North Vietnam kept their agreed news blackout over the negotiations, and there was no official explanation of the one-day recess and the meeting of experts.

U.S., Allies Map New Foreign Policy

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP)–A picture has now emerged of how the United States and its allies will apply President Nixon's doctrine of "negotiation not confrontation" with the Soviet Union in 1973.

They are taking on a double job. They have uphill work in maintaining their own strength against popular pressure to cut military spending. At the same time they will be trying to edge the Soviets toward providing ordinary Europeans, East and West, with less-threatening military forces combined with more security, freedom and cooperation.

This is the tentative time table developed over the past week at the annual high level meeting of the North Atlantic alliance which ended Friday.

About next Friday there will be a recess in the preparations at Helsinki, Finland, for a 34-nation Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe–CSCE. It will resume in mid-January.

The Atlantic allies will insist that Moscow agree to consider what they call "confidence-building" measures. The most important one they have in mind is an agreement to notify one another in advance of big troop movements.

That would cool things in two ways:

—Either side would think several times about making such movements, since the other side would certainly expect not only notification but also some explanation.

—If a movement is made without notice, the side making it would be branded as a trouble-maker.

The West will also make it clear at Helsinki that if the Soviets want economic aid from the West, they will have to give something in exchange. The allies want to see more people and ideas–not just official delegations– moving more freely across the old Iron Curtain.

On Jan. 31 a dozen countries, East and West, will send their representatives to Geneva for the first consideration of a conference on force reductions in Europe. The West will be plugging some of the ideas that George F. Kennan, former U.S. ambassador to Moscow, tried unsuccessfully to popularize as "disagreement" in the 1950S. These call for the pulling back of troops from both sides of troublesome borders, and the cutting of troop and weapons strength.

If the exploration goes well in the eyes of the United States and other governments pressing for it, they will be more enthusiastic about the security conference that the Soviets have long been seeking. If it doesn't, they won't.

On June 14, the Atlantic alliance will be meeting again, this time in Copenhagen, Denmark to take a look at what has been accomplished.

If they find all has gone well in Helsinki, they would approve a conference of 34 foreign ministers to meet in June or July.

In Brief...

Truman Improves

KANSAS CITY (AP)–Harry S. Truman, battling old age and a tired heart, was removed from the critical list Sunday and was able to smile and tell a nurse he was feeling better.

Doctors said the 88-year-old former president's heart condition had improved and that he was more alert, although his overall condition remained serious.

Betting Continues

BOSTON (AP)–Edward Harrington, head of the federal Organized Crime Strike Force in New England, said Sunday the Massachusetts Lottery has not reduced underworld revenue from betting.

"All it has done is to stimulate further betting," Harrington told a radio interviewer.

Gear Lost

HYANNIS, Mass. (AP)–Russian trawlers destroyed lobster gear of two Cape Cod fishing boats last week, it was disclosed over the weekend when the boats made port.

ONGOING WEEKLY PERSONAL DEVELOPMENT GROUP
Edward Hougen and Rosemarie Brikowski
Fee $15.00 per month
Tuesdays Mornings
9:30 - 12:00
Beginning Jan. 30, 1973
U.Mass Campus Center

The focus of this workshop will be to develop an increasing awareness and understanding of yourself, to become more in touch with others and to explore new options in directing your own life. Primary emphasis will be upon the transactional Analysis model including ego states, life positions, scripts, injunctions and games. Open to students of the Five College Community.

For further information call Rosemarie 549-1351.

SAUNA
(It's Healthy)
$2/group
Jenny Lind Motor Lodge
247-5601 — Northampton

SENATE NOTE SERVICE
Needed for 2nd Semester
Note-Takers
Asst. Manager
Printer
Apply: Rm. 318 Student Union 545-2683

NOTE DISTRIBUTION OFFICE
Hrs. 10 a.m. - 3:30 p.m.
Open Through Dec. 19, (Tuesday)
All Notes Must Be Picked Up By Dec. 19

Jean Westwood was replaced by Robert Strauss as National Democratic National Committee chairman Saturday, after a month of maneuvering by organized labor and party regulars in the South and the big industrial states who opposed the nomination of Sen. McGovern.

Democrats Elect Strauss

WASHINGTON (AP)–By electing Texan Robert Strauss as their new national chairman, the Democrats have moved quickly to erase the McGovern image just a month after suffering their worst presidential defeat.

Yet the change has practical as well as symbolic importance.

It gives the Democratic National Committee a strong-willed leader from its traditionalist wing who nevertheless takes office pledged to retain the general thrust of reform that revolutionized delegate-selection procedures this year and created the most open party convention ever.

Strauss's main support in Saturday's climactic meeting after a month of post-election maneuvering came from organized labor and party regulars in the South and the big industrial states who opposed the nomination of Sen. George McGovern.

His opponents, Maine's George Mitchell and California's Charles Manatt, were supported mostly by the pro-McGovern forces and other party liberals.

But Strauss's backers included also the likes of Wisconsin's Donald Peterson, a long-time reform leader who said in seconding the Texan's nomination he would never do so "if I thought for one moment that Robert Strauss would turn the hands back on the reform movement."

The main objections to Strauss wrere that he was backed by the forces that fought party reform and that he came out of the conservative Texas establishment, counting John Connally, the former Texas governor who headed Democrats for Nixon, as a longtime, close personal friend.

Strauss complained that he has always backed the Democratic national ticket and was being subjected to guilt by association.

In his first moves in office, the new chairman sought to show his good faith by declaring that those who expect him to reverse the reforms "are in for a rude shock" and picking two liberals, Basil Paterson of New York and Caroline Wilkens of Oregon, as vice chairmen.

Astros Have A Way With Words

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — You train them for years, pack them off on a trip that costs $450 million and what are the first words when they see the moon up close? "Boy, is it big!"

Ah, astronauts, what a way you have with words.

"I'll tell you, when you get out here it's a Big Mamoo!"

"I'll tell you, when you get out here, it's a Big Mamoo!" says Eugene A. Cernan, on coming close the second time.

Good Lord, Apollo 17. A 19th century explorer, Sir Richard Burton, was a quarter million miles from your vantage point and he called it "a ruined world, a globe burnt out, a corpse upon the road of night."

Still, Cernan can be forgiven. "It's a sight to remember," he said Sunday. "Not just because of the uniqueness of the view, but because we all have to get to ask ourselves if we really know where we are and what we're really looking at right at this moment. And when you answer that question, it's yes. It certainly becomes an epic sight in your mind."

None of the Apollo astronauts has contributed much to immortal literature on the occasion of the first view of the moon. The philosophy comes later in the flights.

"Clouds and clouds of pumice stone...a great expanse of nothing," said Frank Berman on Apollo 8– the first flight around the moon. James Lovell, beside him, spoke of the "vast loneliness" of the moon, and William Anders said it looked like "dirty beach sand."

When Cernan saw it from Apollo 10, he commented: "It might sound corny, but the view is really out of this world."

Neil A. Armstrong, who put the "giant leap for mankind" into the literature when he became the first man to set foot upon the moon, wasn't all that grandiose when he first spied it.

"It's a view well worth the price," he said. "It looks very much like the pictures but like the difference between watching a real football game and one on TV–there's no substitute for actually being there."

Came Apollo 12, the second moon landing, and astronaut Al Bean described the color as "a sort of very light concrete.

"In fact, if I wanted to look at something that I thought was about the same color as the moon, I'd go out and look at my own driveway."

The guys on Apollo 13 had too much trouble to wax poetic about the moon. Earth and getting there was more important.

Peace Rumors Embitter Some POW Wives

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP) - Official signals that peace is near in Southeast Asia have only served to embitter some wives, whose husbands have been prisoners of the North Vietnamese for as long as seven years.

"Since Kissinger first said peace is near, I've been bitter," declared Mrs. Charlotte Christian. "I've had a terrible six weeks since then. I thought I'd lose my mind.

"Everyday we have rumors and hints of peace, that it's all but signed. But we don't know anything. It's all secret. We do know, though, when a black cat jumps on Kissinger's car," the mother of three young daughters said with no show of humor.

The "black cat" reference concerned a picture showing Kissinger looking at a black cat on a car as he left a recent negotiating session.

Another woman, one of the 21 in this coastal town whose husbands are among the more than 1,500 Americans held prisoner or missing, commented in an interview, "In 10 years I'm going to resign from being a POW wife. What is this - the 100 year war."

Mrs. Louise Mulligan once saved national magazines so her husband a Navy commander - could catch up on a world he left behind in early 1966. She gave that up, long ago, but she is still hopeful.

Other wives here are more embittered with every hint of peace.

Valerie Kushnar of Danville, Va., once one of the most outspoken of the POW wives, would only say, "I have nothing to say. What is there left to say?"

"They took a 10-day break in the peace talks recently, but 10 days in my husband's life is like 10 years," said Mrs. Christian in an interview.

"From where I stand, the Thieu regime is more important to this government than the POWs and the end of the war."

Mrs. Christian's husband, Cmdr. Michael Christian of Huntsville, Ala., was shot down in April 1966, and she hasn't had a letter since last March.

Old Games Prove To Be Popular

NEW YORK (AP) - Games that have been played for centuries appear to be in vogue for Christmas 1972.

Chess sets get a big boost this year from the publicity surrounding the matches between Bobby Fischer and Boris Spassky in Iceland. Stores were featuring pocket chess sets, easy-to-learn chess sets, ivory chess sets and three-foot-high chess sets.

The 3M Co., taking advantage of the game's new popularity, brought out Neo Chess, which is played like the classic game only until a piece is captured. Then the piece fights on the side of its captor.

For the so-called beautiful people, ancient backgammon was the game of the year, with some sets selling for $250. Lesser folk could play it on the reverse side of their checker boards.

Other centuries-old games enjoying renewed interest this Christmas included Japanese Go; Kanana, Hawaiian checkers, and Kalah, a Middle Eastern pebble game.

Family Games Inc. read the newspaper headlines, offering the Howard Hughes Game in which players build a fortune with tool companies, airlines, etc. Schuster & Miller marketed Eccentric, a global search for an elusive billionaire.

Dynamic Games Airport even has its players cope with a hijacking.

Volume 11 of Theme Production's Afro-American History Mystery game specifically highlights the contributions made by black women, while Education Ventures' Generation Rap is a board game designed to be played by parents and their offspring.

Guaranteed Reduced Rents
For June, July, August 1973
OFFER FOR A LIMITED TIME ONLY swimming pools
professional tennis courts
Now renting for January occupancy
OWNER MANAGED BY BRITTANY MGT
Brittany Manor
across from Cliffside on East Hadley Rd.

CLIP AND SAVE
The Best Student Skiing Pass Offer in New England $35
only 35 minutes from Amherst
Passes on sale at Berkshire East display on Concourse Level, Dec. 11 and 12. For more information call Russ Sobelman at 545-0585.
BERKSHIRE EAST
Rt. 2, Mohawk Trail Charlemont, Mass.
CLIP AND SAVE

EL TORO SAYS: "The time has come to learn of many things . . . order your tickets now!"

Carlos Montoya
The great Flamenco guitarist with the Springfield Symphony Orchestra in a special promenade concert.
Tuesday, January 30th - 8 p.m.
Curry Hicks Cage
Tickets $2 UM Undergrads/$4 others. Contact Fine Arts Council, 125 Herter.
TICKETS NOW ON SALE! ORDER NOW TO AVOID DISAPPOINTMENT LATER.

Chandler

(Continued from P. 1)

the "integrity" of people who would ask for a faculty review and then "boycott the faculty offer to review." Allen also said that if Paul Chandler was involved in the takeover it would be further evidence against him.

According to Saunders the only meeting the Alliance asked for was held last Wednesday, at the end of which the Alliance requested a decision by Friday morning. Saunders said that "satisfied" the request for a faculty meeting.

Saunders said what the Alliance had hoped for at that meeting was not, "Accomplished due to pressure exerted by Dean Allen on faculty who would not make up their minds." Saunders said all the mechanism for due-process have been exhausted.

Chandler reached at home would not comment on Allen's statement concerning him. However, the Associated Press Saturday quoted Rochelle Chandler, Paul's wife and a director of the Explorations program at the school, as saying, "My husband does not support the takeover and has not been involved in it." She added that a radio broadcast made by her husband on WMUA thanking those who occupied the building on his behalf was made, "to show his appreciation for those who expressed concern for him."

Allen (cont.)

(Continued from P. 2)

whenever it serves his ends. He has taken advantage of the openness and freedom of the School of Education to "force" acceptance to the graduate program without allowing for an open consideration of the merit of the case.

The task of peaceful change in institutions is a difficult one. Each success brings new risks. We have reached a point of growth and diversity which poses greater challenges than ever before. I would hate to jeopardize those achievements or abrogate my responsibilities to our students and faculty–present and future.

Accordingly, I have postponed any action on my part to allow faculty review of the merit of Paul Chandler's admission as requested by the Third World Alliance. I profoundly regret that the Third World Alliance has illegally acted to disrupt the School in the middle of the process that they themselves sought and initiated.

The faculty, after a Wednesday meeting, requested that I not act until they had opportunity to review the question of Paul Chandler's admission further. It would have compromised the appropriate faculty role in the admissions process to preempt a decision after the faculty had taken the extraordinary action to intervene in the normal process of review.

It is now imperative, in my judgment, though unprecedented in the history of the School, that the faculty take a firm and unambiguous position as a total faculty on the admission of a particular student, namely Paul Chandler. I await the outcome of that process and will facilitate it in every way I, can so that I may receive their considered advice prior to my decision.

Here's Your Big Chance

The Collegian editors, in order that the community and themselves understand each other better, have designated Monday, December 11, from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. as the time when anyone may feel free to comment or complain about anything related to the newspaper.

The editors will be available at that time to answer all questions brought forth from the UMass community. Questions concerning anything from specific complaints to general operating procedures will be welcomed.

To accommodate all concerned, a special table will be set up in the Student Union Lobby next to the Collegian bins across from the candy counter.

Yale Relaxes Female Admissions

NEW HAVEN (AP)–Ending a four-year experiment to see if Yale is compatible with women, the Yale Corporation announced Sunday the university is abandoning rigid admission quotas for women and will work toward an eventual ratio of two women to three men.

President Kingman Brewster Jr. said the Jan. 1 deadline for admissions applications will be extended two weeks so that more women can apply. Next year's freshman class will have between 100 to 130 more women than this year's total of 321, Brewster said.

"I personally favor something in the neighborhood of a three-to-two distribution of men to women in Yale College," said Brewster. He added that to get that ratio, Yale will have to actively recruit women.

"O many more men than women currently apply to Yale that a non discriminatory policy would produce a ratio of 70 per cent men to 30 per cent women," the statement said. The governing body indicated that pushing the application deadline back two weeks will produce a ratio nearer two-to-one.

Schools that have tried a "sex blind" admission policy have found their freshmen classes are only about 4 per cent female, the statement said.

"I am also strongly opposed to the exclusion of any single candidate for admission solely on the basis of sex," said Brewster. "If we want to keep a particular balance, such as three-to-two, we should do it by seeking out more competitive candidates from the under-represented group."

Brewster said, "To continue to impose a quota on the selection process would require us to admit a less talented class than we could have. We have an obligation to bring to Yale those who will make the best of all our resources for their personal development and for the good of the country."

Currently, 21 per cent of the 4,931 undergraduates are women. The four-year experiment began in September 1969, when 18 per cent of the entering freshmen were women. This year's freshman class has 321 women out of a total of 1,337 students, just under 25 per cent.

The exact number of women accepted next fall will depend on whether the freshman class remains at 1,350 or is reduced to 1,300, according to the statement.

UMass Raises Exceed Guidelines

By STEVEN A. COHEN
ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER

BOSTON (AP) — The University of Massachusetts administration in Boston underwent a "reorganization" about a year ago, providing many administrators salary raises well above the 5.5 percent guideline established by the Federal economic stabilization program.

According to UMass spokesmen, the salary increases were coupled with increased responsibilities, as well as job title changes.

A spokesman for the Internal Revenue Service said: "If an employee receives an increase in salary over the 5.5 percent merely by having his job title changed, it would appear to be an illegal increase.

"If the job title were changed and more responsibilities were added and the position he had left was filled by another individual, it could be considered that the new change would be in agreement with stabilization regulations."

According to records, in at least five cases there were no positions left open after the "promotions."

The personnel involved are Charles Spaulding, who went from "superintendent of the physical plant" to "director of the physical plant;" Edward Wille, who became "associate director of the physical plant" after serving under the title of "staff assistant to the superintendent"; Thor Olson, whose title was changed from "business manager" to "director of administration and finance"; Byron Drinkwater, whose title was changed from "accounting director" to "controller," and Stanley W. Haney, whose title was changed from "purchasing agent" to "director of material."

Spaulding's salary, under the plan, went from $17,500 to $22,500; Wille's from $14,000 to $18,500; Olson's from $17,500 to $22,500; Drinkwater's from $14,800 to $18,500 and Haney's from $15,800 to $17,000.

These administrators have fared well, in terms of salary advances, during their years at UMass, according to personnel records.

Olsen, a career Coast Guardsman stationed in Boston, started at $11,000 after retiring from the Coast Guard and joining UMass in 1967.

Wille was commander of the First Coast Guard District in Boston before joining UMass Mar. 1, 1971. He began at $14,000 and jumped to $18,500 Dec. 26, 1971.

Haney, another career Coast Guardsman stationed in Boston, joined UMass in 1969 at $12,000.

Drinkwater joined UMass July 12, 1970 at $14,000, went to $14,839 Dec. 27, 1970, and then to $18,500 a year later.

Spaulding joined UMass in July, 1968, at $12,500, went to $17,499 in December, 1970, after several raises, and hit the $22,500 level a year later.

Summer Counseling Posts Open

Applications are now being accepted for student group leader positions in the 1973 Summer Counseling Program, which will operate from June 3 through August 3, 1973. Ten sessions for fall entering freshmen will be held, along with two swingshift sessions and five transfer programs.

Training sessions for the thirty selected counselors will be held during the latter part of the spring semester and the week of May 8 through June 1. All positions require residence in an assigned residence hall for the ten-week period. Summer counseling positions require full time participation. Summer school courses cannot be taken.

Qualifications for counselor positions include successful work experience, a positive attitude towards University Life, knowledge regarding academic course planning, willingness to accept job performance standards and to attend the spring training sessions.

Interested and qualified students may obtain an application from the Counseling Center, 244 Whitmore. Applications must be returned on or before February 9, 1973. Selections will be announced during spring break.

Draft Counseling Moves

The offices of Draft Counseling Services have moved to a new location in the Student Union. The new office is in room 430, on the second floor of the building. It may be reached by going up to the balcony by the Cashier's windows, taking a right turn, then a left by the Hillel office, and another left at the end of the corridor.

Regular office hours are from 9 to 4 on Monday through Friday. The phone number is 545-0813.

Draft Counseling Services is a free service providing information, advice, and counseling on legal and extra-legal alternatives to military service. It is funded by the Student Activities Tax.

According to Gil Salk, co-ordinator of DCS, nobody has to be drafted if they are willing to exercise the legal options available to them. He urges anyone who is hassled by the draft to visit DCS and discuss how to best deal with the problem.

Poor Richard's Poll

Sorry to say we've comprised a standard list of the top ten solo artists and rock groups on the tiers of today's music scene. Few of our favorites appear here but there's no need to run through hundreds when in actuality the results will enhance one of these mentioned below.

What we'd like you to do is simply circle your top three, in no particular order, from each of the two categories and submit your entry to either the Collegian office or one of the two ballot boxes located on the Lobby desk in the Student Union and information desk of the Campus Center. The results will be published in Monday's edition of Poor Richard's.

1. Rolling Stones
2. Jethro Tull
3. Who
4. Moody Blues
5. Santana
6. Grateful Dead
7. Chicago
8. Alice Cooper
9. Allman Brothers
10. Grand Funk
11. Other

1. Bob Dylan
2. Elton John
3. Cat Stevens
4. Joni Mitchell
5. Joan Baez
6. John Lennon
7. James Taylor
8. Neil Young
9. Van Morrison
10. Carole King
11. Other

California over the Holidays

round trip jet L.A. $179.00

Leaves Boston Dec. 23 — Returns Boston JAN. 3

For more information please contact Russ Sobelman, 545-0585.

Xmas or New Year's at Disneyworld or Miami Beach

(or both if you prefer)

WONDER WORLD MOTEL VILLAS

$7.50 motel room each per-nite dbl. occup. color T.V.

Come with a group (3 or more) and we will give you a separate villa building with 2-3 bedrooms, kitchen, livingroom, etc.

(Special rates for Ollins-rent-a-car)

For more information, call 545-0585, ask for Russ Sobelman.

Station Meeting

8:00 p.m.

Tomorrow Night

C.C. 176

WMUA

91.1 FM

free form / informative radio

Mahatma Rajeswar (Ma-ha-tma Raj-es-Swar) a realized disciple of the 14 year old Guru Maharaj Ji (goo-roo ma-ha-raj-jee) will speak Monday, December 11th, at the University of Massachusetts Student Union ballroom, at 7:30 PM. Admission is free.

Mahatma Rajeswar will speak on the knowledge of God which Guru Maharaj Ji is revealing freely to all those who ask with an open heart.

Pilot Survives In Arctic 32 Days After Plane Crash

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (AP)–Pilot Martin Hartwell was reported in good condition Sunday after surviving 32 days near the Arctic Circle in Canda following a plane crash. His three passengers were found dead.

Hartwell was flown south to a hospital here. Armed forces search planes found him Saturday morning standing in snow holding a flare beside his wrecked twin-engine Beechcraft 18.

He suffered fractures of the ankle, knee and nose in the crash in a wooded area just south of Great Bear Lake, about 500 miles north of Edmonton. Doctors said he managed well and suffered no frostbite or exposure.

The 45-year-old native of West Germany, apparently ate some lichens growing under the snow, and dextrose from a nurse's supply kit.

The downed plane was well stocked for winter survival. There were five sleeping bags aboard, heavy canvas engine covers suitable for making shelters, and enough rations to last five persons about six days.

Hartwell was piloting a mercy flight when his plane went down Nov. 8 about 180 miles west of his scheduled course.

Judy Hill, a 27-year-old nurse from Britain who came to Canada three years ago, died in the crash. She had just completed her first year in the arctic stationed at Spence Bay.

Mrs. Neemee Nuliayok, a pregnant Eskimo woman suffering labor complications, died a few days after the crash.

David Kootook, 14, an Eskimo boy believed suffering an attack of appendicitis, survived for 23 days. Hartwell said from his hospital bed.

A spokesman for Gateway Aviation of Edmonton, Hartwell's employer, quoted the pilot as saying the Eskimo boy died soon after an aircraft passed almost directly overhead without spotting their fire.

Hartwell, based in Yellowknife, had been doing charter work when he volunteered to make the 3 1/2 hour mercy flight for the Eskimos from Cambridge Bay on Victoria Island in the high arctic to Yellowknife. Spence Bay, where his three passengers came from, is a tiny settlement without a doctor on Toothia Peninsula east of Cambridge Bay.

Temperatures in the crash area dipped as low as 26 below zero, with high winds creating a chill factor of 60 below.

Tanker Collides With Ice Floe

BREWER, Maine (AP) - A large ice floe has struck a coastal tanker, causing a 600 gallon oil spill into the Penobscot River, the Coast Guard reported Sunday.

The tanker "Christian Reinhauer" was hit by the floe late Saturday afternoon while it was transferring diesel oil at the Gulf Oil Terminal, officials said.

The floe's impact broke the vessel's mooring lines, severed its oil transfer hose and forced it aground on the river bed, a Coast Guard spokesman at Southwest Harbor reported.

He said the tanker, undamaged, was refloated on the incoming tide about five hours after the 5:30 p.m. incident. Brewer is across the river from Bangor and is at the head of navigation for ocean going vessels on the Penobscot.

Clear Sky

at

BRANDY'S 1

1110 Commonwealth Ave., Boston

Dec. 13 – 17

19 – 23

9:00 — 2:00

Sino-Soviet Clash Reported

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union's border dispute with China erupted into a fierce gun battle last month that left five Soviet soldiers and several Russian civilians dead, according to a secret Soviet report quoted Sunday by Western diplomatic sources.

The incident, which reportedly took place when Chinese crossed into Soviet Kazakhstan, was the first report of bloodshed on the Chinese-Soviet frontier since full-scale tank and artillery battles in 1969.

News of the latest clash was contained in a confidential report circulated among select Soviet journalists on Nov. 27, a few days after the firefight took place, the diplomats said.

The report said frontier troops battled with a band of armed intruders who entered Soviet territory from China's Sinkiang Province, attacked a group of Soviet shepherds and tried to withdraw into China.

Quoting from the report, informants gave this further account:

The invaders killed five Red Army soldiers and an unknown number of shepherds before fleeing across the border with a large number of sheep.

One Chinese was captured, but the report did not disclose the number of Chinese deaths, if any. The diplomats could not explain why the report did not reveal how many Russian civilians were killed.

A Kremlin protest to Peking was quickly rejected with the assertion that the maurauders were bandits and no concern of the Chinese government.

The Soviet Union and China have charged in the past that the frontier problems have been officially instigated, and the diplomats here expressed a belief the report on the November clash indicated Moscow believes the Chinese were more than ordinary sheep rustlers.

It was noted that on Nov. 29, two days after the report was allegedly circulated, Soviet Communist party chief Leonid I. Brezhnev took time out in a speech to workers at a Hungarian industrial complex to accuse China of being "openly hostile" toward the Soviet Union.

The two nations have been arguing for more than 10 years over 580,000 square miles of territory in Siberia and the Soviet Far East.

Negotiations were begun after the 1969 battles and have so far achieved little success.

And while Soviet officials conferred with the Chinese, the Kremlin committed 49 divisions of combat-ready troops, according to U.S. estimates, along their 4,350-mile border with China and Mongolia.

The force, backed by nuclear missile units, represents about a third of the entire Soviet army. The continuing border problem is considered a significant factor in the Kremlin's maneuvers for smoother ties with Europe on its western flank.

'Bormann Tracker' Denies Role

NEW YORK (AP) - The man credited in recent news reports with tracking down Nazi war criminal Martin Bormann says he never even looked for him, The New York Times reported Sunday.

Juan Jose Velasco told the Times he never even saw Bormann and has no knowledge of whether the German is alive or dead.

A recent series of newspaper articles claimed Bormann had escaped Nazi Gevany at the end of World War II and was living in South America as a prosperous businessman.

The series was done by author Ladislas Fargo in collaboration with Stewart Steven of the London Daily Express. Velasco, 36, was identified as a key informant.

In an interview last week in Buenos Aires, The Times reported he said documents used by Farago were forgeries and he had the originals himself.

Farago, meanwhile, repeated his claims after being told of Velasco's reported denials and said he had full documentation to prove his story, according to the New York Daily News which carried the stories here.

Velasco, who described himself as a former intelligence agent, also said pictures published with the series purporting to be of Bormann on the run in South America actually were those of a 54-year-old school teacher, not a 72-year-old Nazi.

He identified the man in the pictures as Rodolfe Nicolas Siri and said he was living in Argentina.

Farago in a statement issued through his lawyer said, "I categorically state that the statements attributed to Senor Velasco are patently false. The documents in my possession are either Xerox copies of originals prepared within the Argentina intelligence organization or so-called 'copia fiel' true copies of originals initiated in other agencies."

Meanwhile, Siri's wife said in Buenos Aires, "this whole Bormann story is ridiculous."

Siri was not at the residence Sunday but his wife quickly identified the man in the photograph as her husband. "Certainly that is he," she said, adding that "we live a very quiet life."

Mrs. Siri said her husband is 54. Bormann would be 72.

Gill Trust Fund

A trust fund in memory of the late Eileen Frances Gill of Chestnut Hill, Mass., who was shot and killed on Arch Street in Boston, on August 15, 1972, has been established by her parents and friends with the First National Bank of Boston, where she was employed.

Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John C. Gill, stipulated that the fund be administered by the Bank's Old Colony Trust Division.

Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John C. Gill, stipulated that the fund, to be named "The Eileen F. Gill Memorial Fund", be administered by the Bank's Old Colony Trust Division under Mr. Edward N. Dane, Secretary, with the proceeds to be used to defray educational expenses of children of "current and retired non-officer employees of the Bank".

Eileen attended Mount Alvernia Academy and Newton High School and was graduated from the University of Massachusetts in 1968.

WMUA 'Focus' To Consider Belchertown Controversy

Tonight at 10 P.M., WMUA's "Focus" series will broadcast a second special program on recent developments in the Belchertown State School controversy.

Ken Mosakowski's guests on tonight's live, 60-minute forum will include Dr. Benjamin Ricci, president of the Belchertown State School Friends Association, Tom Blanchette, president of Students Offering Support, a UMass support group, and several others concerned about present conditions at the institution.

The program will feature a taped excerpt from a speech given last Wednesday at UMass by Dr. Larry Brown, a member of the Task Force on Children Out of School, which recently released its critical report entitled "Suffer the Children: The Politics of Mental Health in Massachusetts."

Interested listeners may call in their questions tonight at 545-2425 or 545-2876.

For Alternatives To Abortion

Call:

Lifeline

584-8816

or write:

P.O. BOX 6

FLORENCE, MASS. 01060

Hours: M - F 9-11 and 1-3

SKI CLUB

Sellers from last week's sale!

PICK UP EQUIPMENT TODAY

Campus Center Concourse

10 a.m. - 4 p.m.

No waits for ski lifts or long drives to Vermont for them to enjoy the snow. These three horses had all the snow they needed in Leverett to frolic. (MDC Photo by Mark Majeski)

What Makes A Journalist?

By MARK VOGLER

In recent years, Journalism as an official curriculum at the University of Massachusetts, has become a hotly contested question for open debate.

There are some journalism professors who claim that journalism is a humanistic pursuit and should be offered in a very professionally oriented curriculum. These people are striving to establish a school of journalism at the university.

At the other end of the scale, there are those who view the study of jounalism as merely a social science; they find writing courses ineffective in producing well-rounded journalists. To them, a professional journalism school is amanufacturer of "hacks" and "cookbook journalists."

These two strong points of view will clash with other varying ideas tonight when a six-man panel meets to answer the question: "What Makes a Journalist".

The discussion will begin at 7:30 in the Student Senate Council Chambers Room on the second floor of the Student Union at the university.

Professors who have been invited to sit on the panel include Journalism Program Chairman Howard Ziff, Professors Barney Emmart, Arthur Musgrave, Milton Mayer, and Larry Pinkham. Robert Medeiros, a student at the university, is the sixth member of the panel.

The discussion will be moderated by Alvin Oickle, managing editor of the Greenfield Recorder. The program is being sponsored by Alpha Phi Gamma, the national honors fraternity for collegiat journalists.

Department Chairman Ziff, 42, of Amherst, is a graduate of Amherst College and had done graduate work at Columbia Graduate School of Journalism. Upon his leaving the service as a journalist, he went to work on the City News Bureau in Chicago.

Ziff was a city editor for the Chicago Daily News before entering academia as a journalism professor. He taught journalism for three years at the University of Illinois. In his second year at the university, he is an associate professor and director of the journalism program.

Plaque, Floss, And Smoke; Taking Care Of Your Teeth

Upon completion of the new addition to the Health Center (anticipated completion date is June 1974) the University will be in a position to offer limited dental health services to students on campus. It is intended that the dental health program place its primary emphasis on emergency dental needs of students and on the provision of dental health education programs.

Following are some questions related to dental health which may help students carry out a program of preventive dentistry on their own.

Q. What is plaque?

A. Plaque is a colorless, sticky, and nearly transparent film which continually forms on your teeth. It mostly is made up of bacteria, saliva and debris. The bacteria are recognized as the primary cause of dental caries (tooth decay) and periodontal or gum disease (pyorrhea). Thorough, regular brushing is very important in preventing plaque build-up.

Q. Is the use of dental floss a good habit?

A. The use of dental floss indeed is beneficial because much tooth decay occurs in etween the teeth where toothbruhes cannot reach. Use your dental floos as instructed by your dentist. With a little practice, this habit will take only a few minutes of your time every day.

Q. Does smoking have any effect on the teeth?

A. Smoking certainly does affects one's oral health. The American Dental Association points out that smokers have more periodonotal disease. Also, tobacco in any form can cause cancer of the mouth and throat. Each year, approximately 7,000 people die from oral cancer, and the number of deaths among smokers is about four times greater than among non smokers.

Q. How important is nutrition in terms of dental disease?

A. What, how much, and how often you eat are important factors, not just for dental health, of course, but for good overall health. Sucrose, table sugar, is used by certain bacteria in dental plque to form acids. This leads to tooth decay. The kinds of sweets you eat and how often you eat them are the most significant factors in getting dental disease. If you eat a snack, avoid sweet sugary things. Substitute foods such as vegetables, milk, cheese, nuts, fresh fruits. A well balanced diet with nutrients coming from the four basic food groups is always important.

All Collegian Photo Equipment Must Be Returned Before Wednesday.

Charming Leverett Home For Sale

(by Owner)

Elegant new Log Home on 2 1/2 acres, tucked behind a wooded knoll 400 feet off the road, and just 5 minutes from UM. Three large bright bedrooms, wide plank floors, beamed cathedral ceilings, and a massive brick center chimney with huge raised hearth in the living room and another hearth in the 32 foot master bedroom suite. Custom pine kitchen with all appliances, 2 full baths with colored fiberglass fixtures, large closets everywhere. Full cellar with huge garage, work-shop and laundry areas, and room for expansion. Many more custom features and details too numerous to list. This maintenance-free home must be seen to be appreciated. Priced at $40,500 and available NOW. Please call 549-4239.

Bilingual Course In P.R. Offered

During the January term the Department of Hispanic Languages at UMass in collaboration with Hampshire College, will provide students in Bilingualism and Biculturalism. Students enrolling in the program will go to Puerto Rico from January 4-22 and will visit bilingual classes in rural, urban and middle-class schools in different parts of the island.

They will also be able to attend classes at the University of Puerto Rico (Rio Piedras) and participate in a lecture series to be given by outstanding Puerto-Rican and resident American specialists in the fields of bilingualism, ESL (English as a Second Language), Puerto Rican culture and Caribbean affairs.

The prerequisites for the course are: 1) Knowledge of Spanish; 2) previous course work done in methods of ESL, Bilingual-Bicultural Education and/or Caribbean Affairs; 3) interview with the course leaders (Prof. Sy Pollock - Hampshire College; or Prof. Pedro Algarin-UMass). A limited number of students wishing to perfect Spanish language skills in a natural Spanish-speaking setting will be admitted into the course.

The cost of the program is $211.00, which includes air fare (New York-San Juan-New York) and room. Students will pay for their own food and transportation on the island (approximately $60-$80). For further information please contact Prof. Pollock (at Hampshire College call 542-4807, at UMass 545-0541) or Prof. Algarin (545-0517).

Tutors List

The Veterans Affairs Office (239 D Whitmore) is compiling a referral list of tutors. All veteran graduate students are urged to come to the Veterans' Office so that they may be listed as possible tutors for undergraduate veterans. Standard tutorial rates paid.

Take a Break from the Normal Hum-Drum Fare

SEE — HEAR

BILL STAINES

IN CONCERT

Tuesday Evening 9:00 Presented by
December 19 $1.25 W M U A 91.1

Tickets are extremely limited and will be on sale on the CC Concourse Mon. - Wed. (Dec. 11, 12 & 13 ONLY.

TOPPER—Earl Gargrove dresses as Santa to top off the 70-foot-high National Christmas Tree on the Ellipse near the White House. Gargrove is in charge of decorating the Wyoming Engelmann spruce. (AP)

'Personal Touch' In Politics

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

In an age of the mass media, politics tends to become impersonal with little or no direct contact between candidate and voter. Some politicos recently have begun to change this by walking the length and breadth of their constituencies to meet "the folks". Here is a report on the walking candidates and how they fared.

Don McCorquodale spent $30,000 to win the $16,500-a-year post as chairman of the Santa Clara, Calif., county board of supervisors. Some $400 of the total went for shoes.

The 37-year-old school teacher was one of a number of candidates who took to the streets in the recent election campaigns, reviving the old-fashioned walking tour in the modern-day search for votes.

The pavement politicos, many of whom patterned their campaigns on Lawton Chiles' winning race for U.S. senator from Florida in 1970, scored some impressive victories, defeating favored incumbents for governor in Illinois and U.S. senator in Iowa, for example.

Overall, however, they met with mixed results. Shoe leather alone was not enough to overcome massive media campaigns by well-known candidates in many areas.

McCorquodale completely wore out 12 pairs of shoes as he walked 3,000 miles in his campaign to defeat incumbent Charles A. Quinn, Sr.

The marathon march "was an effective way of finding out what people thought the problems are and to convince them that I was interested and concerned," McCorquodale said.

"I think today the problem with politics is like a lot of things," he said. "We tend to look for the easy way out. It's easy to spend a lot of money, make a lot of mailings and advertisements.

Another winner was Daniel Walker, 50, a former general counsel for Montgomery Ward & Co. Walker first defeated Lt. Gov. Paul B. Simon, who was backed by Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley, in the Democratic gubernatorial primary in Illinois, then went on to victory in the general election over Republican incumbent Richard B. Ogilvie.

The new governor walked the length of the state, covering 1,197 miles and billing himself as the "walking candidate."

"I believe in people-to-people campaigning," he said. "Every person I shake hands with tells 20 to 100 more people. Even in my travels around the state today I keep running into people who say, 'I met you on the walk.' "

"Walking Wendell Mitchell" unsuccessfully sought the Democratic nomination for the U.S. House of Representatives in Alabama's 2nd district. Will Kendlik, a former law school instructor, billed himself as "Walking Will" in his losing campaign for the lieutenant governor's post in Washington.

And state Rep. Bill Walker, a Minnesota Democrat who tried for the nomination for public service commissioner, used the slogan: "Walker's Running."

Democrat James P. McLoughlin, a Bridgeport, Conn., attorney who lost in his bid to unseat U.S. Rep. Stewart McKinney, a Republican, said his 80-mile walk through the state was "a way to get publicity without expending a great deal of money which I didn't have..."

Financial Aid

Financial aid applications for 1973-74, including Summer School 1973 and all special summer programs sponsored by the University, will be available in the Financial Aid Office, Room 232, Whitmore Administration Building, after January 1, 1973.

All students wishing to be considered for any type of aid whether or not assistance has been received previously, must file an application.

THE DEADLINE FOR FILING IS MARCH 1, 1973.

Graduate Fellowships At Wellesley

Fellowships are available beginning the academic year 1973-74 to women pursuing graduate studies at UMass or at other institutions. The Palmer Fellowship carries a stipend of $3,500, and the recipient may study in the U.S. or abroad, but must be no more than 26 years of age at the time of appointment and remain unmarried throughout the tenure of the appointment.

The Shackford Medical Scholarship is for the study of medicine with a view to general practice, not psychiatry and carries a stipend of $3,500. This announcement is posted on the Graduate School Bulletin Board, Second Floor, Graduate Research Center.

Applications may be obtained from the Secretary to the Committee on Graduate Scholarships, Wellesley College, Wellesley, MA 02180, and must be filed before February 20, 1973.

Handcrafted Sterling Silver Jewelry

Unique Designs — Pottery — Custom Work — Copper Etchings

Bitter Bloom Silver Crafts

Upstairs in the Amherst Carriage Shops Fri. 'till 9

PARKING METERS

Effective Monday, December 11.

"Installation of 254 parking meters on the University of Massachusetts - Amherst Campus has been completed. Effective December 11, 1972, enforcement of meter use will begin. Hours of control are from 7:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m., Monday thru Friday. Locations, limits, rates and numbers of meters are:

LOCATION	NO. OF METERS	LIMIT & RATE
Presidents Drive (Haigis Mall)	52	1 hr. @ 10¢/hr. (5¢/1/2 hr.)
Fearing Street (south side)	35	2 hrs. @ 10¢/hr. (5¢/1/2 hr.) (convenience slot, quarter/2 hrs.)
Southwest Mall	20	1 hr. @ 10¢/hr. (5¢/1/2 hr.)
Lot #2 (South Clark Hall)	26	1 hr. @ 10¢/hr. (5¢/1/2 hr.)
Arnold House (front)	13	1/2 hr. @ 10¢/1/2 hr. (5¢/1/4 hr.)
School of Education (South)	22	1 hr. @ 10¢/hr. (5¢/1/2 hr.)
Lot #4 (Worcester Dining)	8	1/2 hr. @ 10¢/1/2 hr. (5¢/1/4 hr.)
Skinner Hall	6	1/2 hr. @ 10¢/1/2 hr. (5¢/1/4 hr.)
Infirmary (loop road)	40	2 hrs. @ 10¢/hr. (5¢/1/2 hr.) (convenience slot, quarter/2 hrs.)
Physical Plant (South)	8	1/2 hr. @ 10¢/1/2 hr. (5¢/1/4 hr.)
Lot #5 (near Boyden)	10	1/2 hr. @ 10¢/1/2 hr. (5¢/1/4 hr.)
Women's Physical Education (Lot 15)	14	1/2 hr. @ 10¢/1/2 hr. (5¢/1/4 hr.)

Violations for overtime parking are $2.00 per infraction. Any vehicle remainingbeyondthe "limit" period is considered in violation.

Vehicles parked other than between the stall lines (parked over the line), are subject to a parking ticket regardless of the time remaining on either meter of the two spaces occupied. Such violations are $5.00 per infraction.

The meters have been installed to add greater convenience for visitors to our campus as well as for our University community."

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

BOARD OF EDITORS

EDITOR IN CHIEF James E. Gold
MANAGING EDITOR Nathan Gorenstein
BUSINESS MANAGER William L. Manburg
EXECUTIVE EDITOR Stephen G. Tripoli
NEWS EDITOR Donald J. Bishop
SPORTS EDITOR William E. Ballou
PHOTO EDITOR Gib Fullerton
FINE ARTS EDITOR Robert Nesti

ASST. MANAGING EDITOR Steve Fine
ADVERTISING MANAGER Jeanne Bauge
ASST. PHOTO EDITOR Alan Chapman
ASST. SPORTS EDITOR Roy Lyons

TODAY'S STAFF

ISSUE EDITOR Bob Scheier
NIGHT STAFF Tom Borkowski
EDITORIAL LAYOUT Ed Fogarty
SPORTS Bill Ballou
DARKROOM Steve Smith, Karasu, George Withers, and Marcia Lappin
AD LAYOUT Nadine Gray

Undergraduate newspaper of the University of Massachusetts. The Staff is responsible for its content and no faculty members or administrators read it for accuracy or approval prior to publication.

Unsigned editorials represent the view of this paper. They do not necessarily reflect the views of the faculty, administration, or student body as a whole. Signed editorials, columns, reviews, cartoons, and letters represent the personal views of the authors.

The Collegian subscribes to the Associated Press and the Liberation News Service. Publication of their material does not constitute endorsement.

Academic Freedom

Whether or not to admit Paul Chandler to the School of Education's graduate program has, over the weekend become a University wide issue with the occupation of the school by the Third World Alliance.

The Collegian will not judge Chandler's qualifications, that is better left to the academicians, but will strongly urge that he not be judged on his political philosophy.

If any institution in the country requires freedom of thought and expression it is the nation's colleges and universities, especially at this moment in the country's history.

Admittedly that is difficult to do, especially when the differences are so marked and as long as those between Chandler and the administration of the school. However, banishing a person is no way to deal with him. Ignoring an idea is no way for any institution especially an educational institution to behave.

We would hope that any decision the school makes concerning Chandler not be made on the basis of politics or ideology.

'SURE THERE'S A DIFFERENCE... THIS LITTLE BABY COMES WITH STEREO TAPE DECK, WHITE WALL TREADS, RECLINING-BUCKET SEATS, VINYL TOP AND REAR ARM RESTS!'

Question Of Committment

By KEVIN BARRY WEIR

A group of undergrads and myself met recently with Dean Allen to discuss the Dean's nondecision on Paul Chandler's application as a doctoral student. We told him that we support Paul and asked that he make a decision. Dean Allen told us that we should consider the other side of the issue and talk to people who oppose Paul. At that time we had not heard anyone publicly oppose Paul other than the Dean. We told him that was precisely why we come to him, to find information.

The Dean then proceeded to state the reasons that have been so easily dissolved at the faculty called hearing last week. After that discussion the Dean stated that he had to consider all the people who oppose Paul, but were not as vocal as we. That insinuates that he is basing his reasons partly on a silent minority or majority. I ask if there are indeed so many people who oppose Paul, why can I not see them, or hear them, just where are "they"? The Dean then asked why he should listen to just fifty undergrads and why we did not consider ourselves a minority. He asked what mechanisms we had followed to find out how other undergrads feel on the issue. I submit at this time what happened to this undergrad who tried to be informed on the issues.

I have been an undergrad at the School of Miseducation for three years. For those three years I have heard complaints from other undergrads within the school involving the lack of clarity, content, and procedural guidance within the school of miseducation. I did not just complain. I used my voice and took action within the legitimate system set up at the school. I joined the Teacher Preparation Program Council, the main force in determining programs and policy involved with under graduate education. I met with representatives from all the program centers and we discussed as undergrads our complaints, and ideas concerning the school. We came up with proposals and three of us went back to the main council to help initiate those proposals. We were divided into separate committees. We were delegated as advisors to administrators and faculty who chaired those committees. The information I gave was ignored. My committee chairperson had already created his moves, this involved creating a new administrative center (of which he would head.) This center involved the school's public image, not content, but image.

I joined the School Council. This was a theoretical legitimate decision making body in the school, consisting of all segments of the school. It dealt with all substantive issues from all sides, in the school. I saw issues being constantly muddled around the procedures leading to discussion. I saw any attempts to resolve problems being clouded by people not willing to listen or take stands or make any of the procedural criteria for action.

Last spring, I was on a committee to investigate the issue of the COP program. My committee was made up of doctoral, grad and undergrad students. We set up hearings and appointments with people involved on both sides. The COP students were always cooperative and met our appointments on time. Our efforts to talk to administrators, as reported in our findings, was at best evasive. They were late for appointments, interrupted during our talks and very noncommittal to taking stands. Again we were a group of people using the legitimate mechanisms of procedure to find information. I have a copy of that report.

This year I am in the Explorations! program. Paul Chandler is also a member. He has been active in New York City and Amherst in creating legitimate structures defined as excellent by the Amherst School Board. He has given and participated in seminars within our program. For those reasons I felt it necessary to go to Dean Allen's office with other members of the program to support and discuss Paul's application.

We arrived at our appointed time. We were told the Dean was behind schedule. We waited. We met and stated our support, and the need we felt for him to make a decision that involved Paul's life and ours. The Dean said he needed another week or so for evidence from all sides, then subsequently stated that he really didn't feel there would be any new evidence to change his decision. Why then doesn't he make IT?

We discussed this issue for an hour. At the end of that time I realized that Dean Allen had changed the conversation to insinuating we were being duped by certain black people, that by supporting Paul we were acting against a certain silent majority of black people who didn't want Paul. This further meant we were hurting black people's chances for the "goodies" of society. He told us that we were "white adolescent crazies" and to remember his words in ten years, when we shaved our beards, cut our hair and exercised our options to return "back" to society.

I question now, as I did in his office, his right to such base and insulting tactics as name calling. I question now his right to insult my conscience and my education by using such paternalistic arguments on our abilities to discuss issues intelligently just because we are not at some golden age of revelation ten years hence. I question his non-decisiveness on an issue that involves the future of all candidates to the school, to the right of information regarding their lives. I really have to question Dean Allen's committment to education at this time, and his committment to the people in OUR school.

Kevin Barry Weir is a Guest Columnist.

A Christmas Message For A Loved One

By CAROL MacINNES

Romanticists from all ages have glorified love as a feeling of response. The gentle beauty of a lovely face and long flowing hair, or the heroic strength of le bonhomme have often been idealized as the stimuli which evoke a response of admiration...or as the romanticists would have you believe, the incipient stages of true love.

But is love in the deepest sense of the word a mere response to some superficial stimuli...whether it be a well-developed and muscular body, a pleasing accent, or classic facial features. Characteristics which one may perceive as pleasing may evoke warm feelings...but is this love?

If so, then what of the philsophical concept of unconditional love?...and of the examples provided by Jesus of Nazareth in loving even the leper, the crippled, the blind, a prostitute, and a corrupt, greedy taxcollector...in other words the rejects and deviants of society. What stimuli do people such as these provide to evoke a response of love? Perhaps the truly loving person loves not only the lovable, but the unlovable as well. Or is, indeed, the condition upon which we receive love, and the depth of love we receive, rest upon the degree of our lovability. Are we loved because we are lovable, or because he who loves us is a loving person? For truly, it seems that the genuine loving person loves even those who may seem displeasing or repulsive to our senses, and his love is not contingent upon the inherent qualities of the love object.

Philosopher Eric Fromm speaks of love, not as an involuntary, passive feeling... but as a conscious decision. This decision is actively renewed again and again, reaffirmed, and each time it is renewed and reaffirmed, the commitment runs deeper and stronger.

If we accept this premise, then what do we in fact mean by "I love you, I have made the decision to behave lovingly towards you, to be as best I can a loving person in my relations with you." What do we seem to be striving for?

First of all, I am now and always will be an imperfect lover. Many flaws in my own character make it difficult for me, at times, to be the loving person I would like to be. As day by day I learn to overcome the undesirable aspects of my nature that marr my relations with others, I will become capable of loving you more...not necessarily because you have earned love...you need do nothing in order to deserve love other than simply to be...but I will love you more as I learn and grow in the ways of becoming a loving person.

In becoming a loving person, we reach the highest point of fulfillment it is possible for any person to reach...a point of fulfillment all men can reach, regardless of physical, emotional, social, or mental handicaps. In becoming a loving person, a man finds his truest strength, and becomes most deeply himself.

In loving you, I become the best I can...alienated from all others, I am but a crippled soul, giving or expressing nothing of myself. He that is strong is not afraid to care, and to express that concern...despite the risk of rejection. There is never a guarantee that by those we love, we will be loved in return.

I want to love.

I want to understand you both objectively and empathetically...your needs...your motivations...your fears... your dreams..your joys...your depressions.

To both understand and share.

I want to be there for you when you need me...when you need someone to pour out your thoughts to, your feelings to...when you need supportive encouragement in dark moments...when you need someone to hold, someone to love, someone to be loved by.

Sometimes my pride, my ego, may hinder me from giving you all I can give...of supporting you as you reach to fulfill your highest potentials...sometimes my ego may insist on my own self-reliance, and deny my own need of you.

These are the times I need you most...to help me recognize those flaws that are handicaps to becoming a fully loving person.

In loving each other, may we both become better people...may we develop a greater and greater capacity to give...and may we find in each other the support we need to strive to reach our fullest emotional, physical, intellectual, and spiritual capacities.

Through loving you I hope to learn to love all. For love does not limit otself to one object...but is rather an attitude. I strive not only to love you...but simply to love. Thank you for teaching me this.

It's a very happy thing.

Merry Christmas!

Carol MacInnes is a Guest Columnist.

Letters To The Editor

WMPIRG and University Health

To The Editor:

The recent dialogue between WMPIRG and the University Health Services raises some interesting points concerning the United States Pharmacoepia and the power of the Food and Drug Administration. All drugs sold in the United States are supposed to conform to the regulations set forth by the United States Pharmacoepia (USP) below which drug quality and quantity is not suppose to fall--that is for all prescription drugs both, generic and brand name.

The contention by the University Health Services "...that not all generally equivalent drugs are of equivalent quality." hints that either something is amiss with the USP and the FDA. If generics are made so that they are not bio-available then, why aren't they? Are the corporations manufacturing them below par and thus below USP standards or are USP standards set too low so that potency of the drug is erratic or else it loses its potency? It suggests to me that corporations and the FDA are both involved in who is more "potent" legally.

Another eyesore for Massachusetts is the non-complaince of doctors with the law. A law passed by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts requires doctors to write the generic name next to a prescribed brand name thus giving the consumer choice of generic or the brand name. Unfortunately, as a Boston Globe article pointed out many doctors, in fact, most doctors are not complying with the law. Doctors feel that when they prescribe a drug they want a reputable name to insure quality.

Here again, the consumer loses for where does the doctor get most of his/her information concerning new drugs? He does not get that sort of information by an FDA drug handbook. but from two sources: 1) an ad man promoting new drugs 2) or a drug digest book. That book is put out by the drug corporations. Unbiased information on the potency, quality, and purity, as well as safety of drugs is scanty. The only source for somewhat unbiased information is the FDA but they claim that they have only "limited resources" to devote to any project.

To get an idea what you are paying for drugs in profits, a New Republic article of Nov. 9, 1963 is quite interesting. This should be quite an eye opener for WMPIRG. I feel that the figures quoted here have not changed drastically in the time since the article was printed.

If I could, I would like to suggest a direction for WMPIRG to explore. The sampling and testing of a small quantity of generic drugs, to see if they meet USP standards. If the Chemistry Department and the Nursing Department are willing, the cost should no be extravagant. WMPIRG would then be in a position to get to the heart of the generic problem QUALITY. I'm certain that the regional office of the FDA in Boston would, also, be interested.

Robert G. Dewsnap

'Great' Society

To The Editor:

In his most sincere campaign pledge, Nixon announced "the era of permissiveness is over." Nixon recently turned the Statue of Liberty (you remember the old "give me your tired and hungry" ideal) into a museum. Following this the military gunned down dissenting students in Louisiana. Now the Supreme Court has ruled against Bachanalian revelries".

The Italian department dismisses the eminently qualified professor, Robert Bongiorno. Students call him by his first name. Apparently he is too open-minded and therefore has no place in a Classical, thus closed, system.

The School of Education refuses admission to the eminently qualified student, Paul Chandler. According to the school's leader, Chandler is not committed to the school's pre-ordained credo. In effect, he will not take the loyalty oath. In an educational program which gives credit for playing capture-the-flag and varieties of Gestalt (i kiss your ass you kiss mine everything's alright) thereapy, criticism of existing structures apparently has no place. School of Ed - love it or leave it. The committment to the correction of social injustice is discarded in favor of a system functioning for the sake of a system functioning.

The Great Society (for what it was worth) is dead. There is a new majority. The ice and snow turn the university into a cold solid white. The era of permissiveness is over. Apparently.

Dick Maloy

Orchard Hill

This letter is in response to Jeff Long's article entitled 'The Great Emasculation' which appeared in The Sage Revisited's Dec. 3 issue and the Collegian's Dec. 4 issue.

First of all, the Sage Revisted represents Orchard Hill's Area Government as well as the views of individuals and groups on the Hill as a whole. The evil really comes when a few people begin to dominate a "representative" paper and begin to channel their own views as those of a consensus. There were nine major articles in the Sage, five of which were written by the editor-in-chief, Jeff Long. If the Sage cannot adequately bring a cross section of views in its printing, its role as a "representative" paper has failed, and its services should be discontinued.

Second, Jeff long stated "Appointing token Blacks and women to committees and offices (solely or primarily on the basis of color, affiliation or sex) is the ultimate slur on that appointer's character," and then later states "If Grayson passes the proposed measure (unless it has been amended to state that no more than two Third World members will join the house council) it will be a prime example of ass kissing par excellence." First he argues that appointing token Blacks and women is a "slur" and then argues that if we appoint no more than two, then it's alright! Surely, as Jeff Long himself puts it, this "smacks of 'dirty politics' at its worst."

Third, the white community must realize that we, the Third World, will not be satisfied with token participation, but only with a viable voice capable of initiating action on our own behalf. The Third World is not a 'special interest group' as Jeff Long put it, but a special rights group seeking to gain that which has long been denied us. If the right of representation cannot be realized through the present system, then we should, and must, be prepared to abandon it.

Fourth, and now I am referring specifically to the Sage, Jeff Long stated "It remains somewhat of a mystery as to why the Third World has not opted to contribute material to the Sage." May I remind the editor-in-chief that this was his last issue, thus making it impossible for any sort of feedback?

Indeed, this is the time to reavaluate the system; its thoughts, ways, and ideals. People must be given equal, not proportional, rights.

Douglas West
Orchard Hill Third World
Caucus Head

Editorial Points

Former Mass. governor Endicott Peabody is one of the few men in the world to have four Massachusetts towns named after him: Peabody, Endicott, Marblehead, and Athol.

•••

The local trigonometry teacher wins this year's quote of the year award.."Whenever you see a radical put it in parenthesis and try to cancel it out."

•••

Damn that Harry Truman. First he puts the pollsters out of business. Then he dumfounds all the pundits and morticians by deciding he'd like to stick around a little longer.

Chandler — School Of Ed.

To The Editor:

We wish to record our outrage at the treatment Paul Chandler has been receiving recently at the hands of Dean Dwight Allen of the School of Education. The issue concerns a clearcut denial of Chandler's civil rights. His application to the graduate school of the School of Education has been pocket vetoed for six months because he is a political leftist who disagrees strongly with Allen's educational politics--especially his ideas on education for minority people. Chandler feels minorities should control their education and that they should be taught skills and knowledge necessary to help their people improve their situation so that they can take control of their lives, their schools and their communities.

Allen has said Chandler's political views are outside the range of diversity acceptable in the School of Education. What is this but denial of academic freedom--and an attempt to deny Chandler the right to a higher degree on the grounds of his political beliefs? Allen has also said he doubts Chandler's commitment to non-violence--but he has given no evidence for this doubt: and in any case Allen, who is not a police officer, should not attempt what even the police cannot do, to prevent a person from pursuing his life goals on simple suspicion that he might sometime in the future not be committed to nonviolence!

Up to now there has been very little faculty support for Paul Chandler. Why this silence? Why are University faculty not actively defending this black leader in his struggle for academic freedom? Faculty in the School of Education have repeatedly been intimidated by Dean Allen whose most recent tactic has been to call them in one by one to check out their loyalty to his position. This divisive intimidation is a standard practice for Allen, who brandishes his power over individuals to weaken potential opposition. Understandably the School of Ed. faculty are alienated from Paul Chandler for placing them in the compromising and/or dangerous position; understandably they are weak and divided in the face of Allen's obvious willingness to retaliate against all who oppose him. Thus we know why they are silent--they are confused and afraid. But no comparable excuse can be given for other University faculty, who have been passive and acquiescent on this issue. Do faculty feel that this is Dwight Allen's business? Do they assume that he, a Dean, would not unfairly deny a black student academic freedom? Don't the rights of a black student matter to the white faculty on this campus?

There is no justified reason, as far as we can tell, for denying Chandler, who is eminently qualified academically, (he will receive his B.A. magna cum laude), from pursuing a graduate career in education. Faculty members who remember the outrage of McCarthyism must be on guard to prevent the resurgence of such criteria of acceptability.

The Third World Alliance students and faculty who are holding the building have asked for very reasonable terms. They have not asked Allen to decide "yes" on Chandler--simply to decide yes or no immediately (since he has delayed doing this for six months), and to make public his criteria for evaluation. They are simply demanding due process for a black student who holds politically divergent views from the Dean. We urge all faculty members, black and white, who support civil and political liberties for all people to show support for the Third World Alliance demands, either (1) by joining us and others at the School of Education building to hold the building from doing business as usual until these demands are met; or else (2) by sending letters of support to Chancellor Bromery, Provost Gluckstern and Dean Dwight Allen for Paul Chandler's right to be considered on his academic record alone for admission to the graduate program of the School of Education.

Ann F. Brentlinger,
Ass't. Prof of Philosophy
John Brentlinger,
Assoc. Prof of Philosophy

Belchertown

An Open Letter to Dr. Milton Greenblatt:

It was with great dismay that I read a recent Associated Press release which quoted you suggesting that Dr. Benjamin Ricci volunteer as an attendant at the Belchertown State School on weekends. I personally consider such a statement inappropriate, and ill conceived, as well as a personal insult to Dr. Ricci.

Perhaps your statement grew out of the frustration of not being able to adequately respond to criticism directed towards your department. Nonetheless I consider it inexcusable for the Commissioner of Mental Health to offer such a thoughtless supposition.

For the record, Dr. Ricci spends approximately ten hours per week on the Belchertown State School grounds in various capacities. In addition to this approximately twenty hours of his time per week are spent planning, lecturing, and discussing the activities of the Belchertown State School Friends Association. The only motive of which is to improve the living conditions at the School. Just this week the new Superintendent of the Belchertown State School, Dr. William E. Jones said in reference to Dr. Ricci, "I admire his tremendous interest in trying to improve conditions. I think that with his help we will be able to reach our objectives.

It would appear obvious that Dr. Ricci's dedication and service are most superlative in nature, and that in this vein they shall continue regardless of any supercilious critique from the Department of Mental Health or its commissioner.

THOMAS R. BLANCHETTE
President
Students Offering Support

More Letters To The Editor

Dead Cats

To The Editor:

On Friday morning December first as I was walking behind my dormitory on my way in to Amherst I glanced up at a nearby tree and what I saw there both sickened and angered me. Some demented person had hung a cat by its neck from one of the branches of the tree. At first I felt like crying but then I became very angry. I cannot and never will be able to understand why this was done. I love animals and it hurt me very badly to see this.

The cat apparently had been stolen from a class using it for experimentation for it had been partially disected. Some people will rationalize by saying that it is not as terrible as it seems because after all the cat was dead and could not feel any pain but I ask what if there was a dead child hanging in that tree would those same people feel the way they do. I don't find it so hard to believe anymore that some so called humans would say heh, what a great idea we could use that for our next fraternity hell night and maybe a live child would even be more effective.

It frightens me to think that there are people who would do these things and have no feeling or consideration for animals or the people who witness their activities. I realize this article will do no good for the person who did this for I feel they must be beyond any help but to those who associate with them and call them friend or brother you may have some control over their actions so either stop them or allow them to do it but ask yourselves where you are and what you are becoming. I feel that anyone who would do something like this or do nothing to prevent it is a very sick person.

So on with peace and love thy brother but you damn well better find out who your brother is, if he can do this to a cat what clever things could he think up to do to you. The same person who is capable of doing this could hypothetically be the cop who loves to bust heads in, or the person who feels triumphant after slaughtering a village of women and children. The person who is responsible for hanging that cat must feel a deep regret that they missed all those exciting Indian massacres in the days when men were men and anyway Indians are just like animals, who gives a shit.

Arlene Kangas

Computer and University

To The Editor:

A petition has been presented to Dr. Charles Wogrin, director of computer services and to Dr. Paul Cade, chairman of the computer advisory committee urging them to exclude Honeywell from the bidding process for additional computer equipment at UMass. Reasons for this are based on moral grounds due to Honeywell's flagrant contribution to the war effort in Indochina through its production of anti-personnel weaponry. Granted, many companies are involved in some way in the war effort; however, none come close to Honeywell's massive weaponry production.

Dr. Wogrin stated that the moral issue should be considered "if the community feels and believes there are issues outside of the cost effectiveness." There are issues and one of the most important is the moral issue. Although Honeywell may well offer a reasonable bid, payment for its services can only be considered a further contribution to senseless destruction.

I urge those involved in the decision-making process to examine Honeywell's record and to realize the destruction wrought from its products. UMass must not itself contribute to that destruction by purchasing computer equipment from Honeywell.

Joan Parker

NOTICE

For those students who will be staying on campus, or coming back early, during the January break, the following snack bars will be able to serve you their usual bill of fare, including hot meals, at the following days and times:

Whitmore Snack Bar: Normal hours and services.

Hampden and Worcester Snack Bars: Open on weekdays from Dec. 22 to Jan 1, from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. Open on a seven day basis from Jan. 1 to Jan. 22, from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Hampden, Worcester, and Franklin Munchys: Same day operations as the snack bars, from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Hampden Games Room: Same day operations as the snack bars, from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Dining Commons: The dining commons will re-open for board plans on Jan. 22.

It should be noted that all of the above facilities will be closed on Dec. 25 and Jan. 1.

We suggest that you clip this notice out and save it for reference during the semester break.

Priorities

To The Editor:

This letter is in regard to the perverted priorities of this University. Why is it money has been appropriated for several flood-lit ice skating rinks on this campus for the amusement of the student, but no monies are provided for adequate lighting on all parts of the campus for the protection of the student? Have you ever walked from Bartlett to Southwest via the path behind Curry Hicks Cage, or up the hill by the Infirmary late at night alone? Speaking from personal experience, it isn't at all a feeling of security. We feel that in view of the recent assaults prevalent in the community, the issue of lighting is a grave one.

Of all the assaults on campus, only a small number are ever reported. Consider the three girls, each of whom during the span of the week received broken jaws, cheekbones, or noses walking up the hill. Or more recently, a girl in the Southwest area who was beaten up while walking back from the center of town. Incidents similar to this are daily occurences on this campus. Must this continue?

To the administrators directly responsible for these perverted priorities, we direct two questions. 1. Will the killings that are happening in Boston have to occur in Amherst before preventive measures are taken? 2. Are you willing to accept full responsibilities for these assaults?

Aline L. Routhier
Kristine L. Johnson

Misrepresentation

To The Editor:

This letter is in response to the one entitled "Misrepresentation", which appeared in last Thursday's Collegian. Its intent is to clarify both (1) my position as editor-in-chief and (2) the views of my editorial.

(1) The Sage Revisited should, ideally, serve as a barometer of Hill feelings and attitudes. As editor-in- chief, I have desired to print divergent views; believe me, I do not want the paper to be the mouthpiece of only a few people. Unfortunately, major groups and individuals on the Hill do not usually make use of this service made available to them. The result is that only a few views, those of the few people who contribute, appear in the paper.

I wrote my editorial in order to express my views. It was on the front page of the Sage Revisited because the report on the previous Monday's Orchard Hill Area Government meeting was unexpectedly not turned in. As there were no major news stories which could be substituted for it, the decision was made to print my editorial on page one.

I submitted the editorial, as a letter, to the Collegian because I felt it merited university-wide exposure. If I were not editor-in-chief of the Sage Revisited, I would have done the same thing. Signing "editor-in-chief of the Sage Revisited after my name was not done to lead people to believe I was speaking for the "whole Hill". I am aware that not everyone holds my views; similarly, I do not believe that some OHAG members can accurately voice the whole Hill's reaction to my editorial (unless they have conducted a poll). The reason I did sign "editor-in-chief" after my name is simple: I thought Collegian readers should know I edit the paper my article appeared in. I did not expect, nor did want, those views to be taken as gospel for the views of 1300 people.

(2) I suggest everyone concerned re-read my editorial for its content. In it, I advocate hiring based on qualification and (for those who represent special segments of the Hill community), representation based on equitable ratios. I am frankly surprised that these views should offend so many people.

Jeff Long

Old World Bazaar
A Gift here is an ADVENTURE in Russia * Poland * Ireland
Czechoslovakia * Israel
Egypt * China
North Amherst Shopping Center
(behind the post office)
Mon. - Wed., & Sat. 10 - 5:30 Thurs. & Fri. 10 - 8

Family Night at Ponderosa® Steak House

Tuesday only.
Steak, potato, salad and roll.
Reg. $1.39 99¢
Family Night From 4 P.M. on.
King Street in Northampton

Even More Letters To The Editor

From Senator Jackson

To the Editor:

The following is a letter which I received a few days ago from Senator Henry Jackson. I would like to share this with you.

Dov Gordon

Dear Mr. Gordon:

Thank you for your generous letter and the clippings from the University of Massachusetts Collegian. It is most important and appropriate that our own academic community rally in protest against the outrageous emigration restrictions imposed on their counterparts in the Soviet Union, and I applaud the impressive efforts undertaken by the Western Massachusetts Student Struggle for Soviet Jewry in this connection.

Please be assured of my continued best efforts on behalf of the Jewish and other oppressed Soviet minorities whose government does not want them but will not let them go. You may be interested to know that during my trip to Europe and the Middle East last month I had the opportunity to meet with a group of new Russian emigrants in Israel. It was a very rewarding experience.

With appreciation to all the cosigners of the statement for their encouragement and support.

Henry M. Jackson, U.S.S.

'AND DON'T FORGET TO HANG YOUR STOCKINGS...'

Fine Print

To The Editor:

Have you ever read the fine print on the UMass Certificate of Residency? Rule #4 states that "The domicile and residence of a wife shall follow that of the husband." I have written to the Board of Trustees urging them to abolish this discriminatory requirement. Please join me in requesting the Board of Trustees to reject this sexist ruling, and impress on them their obligation to treat the women of this university as persons in their own right, rather than as non-persons or mere possessions. Write today to ask immediate repeal of this archaic rule.

Connie LaRoche

Virginia Apologizes

Dear Mr. Leaman,

We are students at West Virginia University and attended the game this evening. As a matter of fact, we sat three rows behind you during the Junior Varsity game (right behind Chuck Olson).

Let us begin by apologizing for the conduct of some of our fellow students. As we are sure you know, in a school as large as ours (16,000), there are always a few like you encountered tonight. Believe us, we are not all like that.

The period between the end of the preliminary game and the start of the main event can sometimes be long and boring. Therefore our Mountaineer brought a frisbee to the opening game last season. It served to liven up our student body, which is sometimes a little slow to get excited. The frisbee was thrown through the student section before the game and put away when the game started. This new tradition was even carried over to football season this year. Thus it was no surprise that a frisbee showed up this evening.

We are sure you realize that, just like everybody cannot play basketball, everybody cannot throw a frisbee. So occasionally one will end up on the playing floor due to a rather poor throw. It does not end up there on purpose. If our Athletic Department even had an inkling that the frisbee was being deliberately thrown at the opposing team, they would ban it. When this has happened in the past, the frisbee was usually thrown back into the student body.

However, we can understand how you reacted to the situation. We would have done the same thing, figuring that they were throwing at our players or that someone could get hurt. The heckling you and Charlie Peters received was more or less a "game" - one played by most student bodies to "raz" the opposition. The paper cup throwing and the scuffle at the end of the game was not part of the "game". We feel that it was disgusting and frankly, we are embarrassed that it happened. In our seven years of attending WVU basketball games, we have never seen anything like it before.

In conclusion, we hope you understand the reason behind the frisbee and the heckling - we neither condone nor excuse what happened after that. Please accept our humble apologies for what took place here this evening and please convey them to Charlie Peters. And please do not judge all Mountaineers by the action of a few. Good luck in the remainder of your season.

James L. Hornor
Gregory W. Gillespie

LYNN
is as beautiful as she sounds
Tuesday Evenings
at
The Rusty Scupper

CHRISTMAS HAFAS
•ANSWERS•
TO YOUR CHRISTMAS SHOPPING DILEMMA
(finals are coming and so is christmas ~ pressed for time??)
→ EVERYTHING FOR ←
THE SELF-PROPELLED SET
IN BICYCLING AND CROSS-COUNTRY SKIING
CYCLING SHOES • GIANNI CLOTHING • BICYCLE BASKETS • DAY PACKS • MODEL BICYCLES • CYCLING - A BOOK FOR EVERY CYCLING ENTHUSIAST •
KNICKERS • SKI SOCKS AND HATS • WAX KITS • REAL PINE TAR • KIDS' SKI SETS • BOOKS • FANTASTIC NEW X-C GLOVES •
SKI PACKAGE SPECIAL
$65.85 and up
SKIS • POLES • BINDINGS • BOOTS • WAX KIT • MOUNTING • BURN-IN TAR BASE Peloton
* SPECIALS *
— NOW 'TIL CHRISTMAS —
* ATALA 10 SP. BIKE - REG. $110.00 - NOW $93.00
* 5% STUDENT DISCOUNT WITH I.D. - ON EVERYTHING come see us ~ we're only 4 short blocks from campus
OPEN MON. THRU SAT. 9-6
Peloton • 1 EAST PLEASANT ST. • AMHERST • 549-6904
CHRISTMAS HAFAS

LAFAYETTE
SEIDEN SOUND RADIO ELECTRONICS
Daily 10 a.m. — 9:00 p.m.
Sat. 10 a.m. — 5:30 p.m.

"Why is he smiling?"

Look what he bought for $149.95

The RTS-29 includes
1 AM-FM Stereo Receiver
2 8 Track Tape Player
3 Full Sized Record Changer
4 2 Air Suspension Speakers
5 Dust Cover for Turntable

LAFAYETTE RADIO ELECTRONICS
Your BANKAMERICARD welcome here
master charge
Owned & Operated By Seiden Sound
AMHERST STORE 15 E. PLEASANT ST 549-1105
Pittsfield, Mass. Colonie, NY Albany, NY Schenectady, NY Glensfalls, NY

Everywoman's University Starting January 8th

By ANNETTE TOWNLEY

The following is the tentative schedule for the Everywoman's University that will be held from Jan. 8th-Jan. 11th. The final schedule can be picked up on Monday morning Jan. 8th, during registration. There will be a small registration fee of $2.00 to cover some of the exponses and entitles you to enjoy all the events.

DEFINITE EVENTS:

Monday, Jan. 8:
10:00 A.M.: Coffee and registration; Opening of Arts & Crafts exhibit (S.U. Art Gallery)
10:30 Workshops
12:00-1:30: Films and discussion
1:00-5:00: Information Fair (Concourse)
1:30: Glendora Putnam (MCAD), Chairperson Mass. Commission against Discrimination, "What You Can Do About Discrimination;;
3:30-5:00: Back Talk
8:00: Films

Tuesday, Jan. 9:
8:30-10:00: Discussion Groups
10:00-3:30: Arts & Crafts Exhibit
10:00: Workshops:
Slater-Women's Contributions to Physics
Grievance Procedures for UMass employees
12:00-1:30: Films and Discussion
1:30-2:30: Estela Olevsky and Peg Lindeman-pianist and interview
2:30: Workshops:
"Perception of Discrimination and Socialization to Careers among Women"-Barbara Turner
The Part-time worker-job sharing-a viable alternative for women/for UMass-Barbara Burn
3:30-5:00: Back Talk
8:00: Films

Wednesday, Jan. 12:
8:30-10:00: Discussion Groups
10:00: Workshop: Non-active, Non-competent, Non-productive person? Carol Oglesby
10:00-3:30: Arts & Crafts Exhibit
12:00-1:30: Films and Discussion
2:30: Workshops
1. Grievance Procedures
2. "Is the study of history relevant to the Women's Movement today?" Joyce Berkman
3:30-5:00: Back Talk
8:00: Poetry Reading (808 Campus Center)

Thursday, Jan. 11:
8:30-10:00: Discussion Groups
10:00-3:30: Arts & Crafts Exhibit
10:00: Workshop: Educational Opportunities-Mary La Sota
12:00-1:30: Films and Discussions
2:30: Workshop: Cross-Cultural Woman's Group-Jane Luck and Maharukh Khamalta
3:30-5:00: Back Talk
4:00: Workshop: Grievance Procedures
8:00: Dance Concert (Campus Center Auditorium)

Friday, Jan. 12:
8:30-10:00: Group Discussions
10:00-3:30: Arts & Crafts Exhibit
10:00: Workshops
12:00-1:30: Films and Discussion
2:30: Workshops
3:30-5:00: Back Talk
8:00: Feminist Plays (Campus Center Auditorium)

The rest of the schedule will be printed in tomorrow's Collegian.

Below is a pre-registration form Everywoman's Center would appreciate you filling out and returning to the Center in Munson Hall:

Name:

Workshops you are interested in:

On Sat., Jan. 6, please bring your contribution to the Arts and Crafts exhibit to the S.U. Art Gallery between 10:00 A.M. and 4:00 P.M. Due to the limited space, we ask you to bring only one piece of work and if possible nothing too large. If you are contributing a painting or photograph, please have it framed and ready to be hung. Everyone is invited to participate in sharing their work. Below is a form we would appreciate you filling out so we have some sense of how much work will be submitted. Please return it to Everywoman's Center in Munson Hall.

Name:

Address:

Phone:

Medium:

Approximate Size:

Value (for insurance purposes):

Applications Accepted For Univ. of Freiburg

Applications are being accepted for the 1973-74 Freiburg Program of the University of Massachusetts. Students who will be upper division or graduate students next year and who have a good command of German are eligible to apply. The program is not restricted to German majors. Students enrolled in the program enroll in University of Freiburg courses in the arts, social sciences and humanities.

Students interested in learning about the program are urged to attend a special meeting Thursday, December 14 at 8:00 p.m. in the Colonial Lounge of the Student Union. A number of students and faculty who have been in the Freiburg Program in past years will be at the meeting to answer questions about the program, including how to find housing in Freiburg.

Students interested in learning about the program are urged to attend a special meeting Thursday, December 14 at 8:00 p.m. in the Colonial Lounge of the Student Union. A number of students and faculty who have been in the Freiburg Program in past years will be at the meeting to answer questions about the program including how to find housing in Freiburg, living costs, and other aspects of life as a student at the University of Freiburg.

Slides of Freiburg and surrounding countryside will be shown and light refreshments will be served. Further information is available at the Office of International Programs, 239B Whitmore.

"Politics As Soul" Offered

MacKimmie Humanity House in Southwest is offering courses on racism, sexism, and "politics as soul" in January for academic credit.

The session will last from January 4, to the 24, and will have only a minimal charge.

For the month the dorm will be co-ed. Any interested woman from Southwest is invited to participate.

The courses are for three credits and will meet every day for fifteen days. Teachers have been chosen for three courses so far: Politics as soul for the new man/woman; Sexism: a course in unlearning; and the Dynamics of white racism.

Faculty members with backgrounds in related areas are welcome to offer a course or colloquium in MacKimmie Humanity House during the January session.

To Students & Faculty of U. Mass:
We sincerely wish that all of you have an out-a-sight Holiday Break —
Bert Champoux
Charlie Joubert

First Class Foreign Car Auto Body Work in Amherst

Complete Factory Paint and Parts Available

Windshields Collision Estimates

All Makes All Models

BART AUTO Paint & Body Specialists

Next to Town House

Rte. 9 Belchertown
256-8712

The best fender de-benders in town!

The debut Columbia album of an inspired songwriter and performer.

Loudon Wainwright III
On his debut album for Columbia Loudon Wainwright III writes and sings about dead skunks, drunks, bees, his muse, love, sports, an East Indian Princess and burnt guitar.
On Columbia Records and Tapes

Notices

CHRISTIANS
Fellowship meeting tonight, 7:30 p.m. 811 CC.

CONCERT COMMITTEE
Mon., Dec. 11, Rm. 801 CC - Booking Comm. 7-7:30 p.m., Security Comm. 7:30-10. Wed., Dec. 13, 7 p.m., Rm. 901 CC - to discuss plans for Feb. 3, proposed concert.

IVCF
Business meeting tonight, 9:00 p.m. Everyone is welcome.

OUTING CLUB
Meeting tonight at 6:30 p.m. in 165 CC. There will be a slide show and discussion of upcoming trips.

GROUP PSYCHOTHERAPY
Openings are available for men interested in an ongoing co-ed group psychotherapy. Group forming now for second semester. Call UMass Psychological Services center, 5-0041.

HOME EC
Regular meeting of Home Ec Club, all welcome. Plans being made for next semester. Skinner Lounge, 6:30 Mon.

JUDO CLUB
Important meeting in class tonight at 7 p.m. Boyden Wrestling Room. All members are urged to attend.

NEW POLITICS COALITION
We are a coalition of students and non-students interested in making Amherst a better place to live. There are town meeting seats still open. If interested, come tonite at 7:30 to CC 178.

READING MAJORS
Compulsory meeting for all current reading majors - undergrads & grads - Tues., Dec. 12 at 11:15 in Marks Meadow Aud. Bring list of Reading courses taken this semester.

SKI CLUB
All sellers of equipment pick it up today 10 a.m.-3 p.m. CC Concourse.

SPRING PRE-REGISTRATION
Orchard Hill pre-reg. for Spring courses will be as follows. Mon.-Fri.-O.H. students Wed.-Fri., Non-Hill students. In 103 Field. 1st come 1st serve. No waiting lists or exceptions.

UNDERGRADUATE WOMEN
Women! Participate in weeklong Athletic Council survey in today's Collegian. Show interest in women's athletics. Questions, extra copies, Julie, 221 Leach 5-2512. Sisterhood is Powerful!

WOMEN
There will be a general meeting of all interested women tonight, Mon., Dec. 11, in the S.W. Women's Center. Everyone is welcome.

ZOOL MAJORS
Free movie! "Wild Wings" Ecology of Game Birds in England will be shown in Morrill 349 noon-1 p.m. Tues., Dec. 12. Part of the Zoo bag lunch program.

LOST
Notebook with name Norman Rodham, History 320, lost at football rally by the pond Thurs. Urgent. Call 6-9765 or 202 MacKimmie.

Set of keys between Boyden and Whitmore, early Friday morning. If found, please call Vin, 256-8037.

FOUND
Irish Setter, female, about 8 mos., flea collar, white spot on chest. If not wanted, I will keep. Call Lee 665-4104.

On road in Puffton - "Mountaineering" and computer cards with name R. W. Abele. Claim at CC Lost & Found.

Television Tonight

5:00 JIM AND TAMMY (18)
MISTER ROGERS' NEIGHBORHOOD (24) (57)
SUPERMAN (27)
HOGAN'S HEROES (30)
GOMER PYLE (40)
5:30 HOGAN'S HEROES (22)
ELECTRIC COMPANY (24) (57)
GOMER PYLE (27)
BEVERLY HILLBILLIES (30)
NEWS (40)
5:55 WHAT'S HAPPENING (3)
6:00 NEWS, SPORTS, WEATHER (3) (8) (22)
12 O'CLOCK HIGH—"The Fighter Pilot" (18)
HODGEPODGE LODGE (24) (57)
PETTICOAT JUNCTION (27)
TO TELL THE TRUTH (30)
WILD WILD WEST—"The Night of the Red Eyed Madman" (40)
6:30 NEWS WITH WALTER CRONKITE (3)
ABC EVENING NEWS (8)
NBC NIGHTLY NEWS (22) (30)
DESIGNING WOMEN (24)
MOVIE—"The Colossus of Rhodes" (27)
PROFILE: VINCENT PRICE (57)
MOVIE—"The Barretts of Wimpole St." (3)
TRUTH OR CONSEQUENCES (8)
DICK VAN DYKE—"Stacey Petrie...Part I" (18)
NEWS (22) (30) (57)
OPEN LINE (24)
ABC EVENING NEWS (40)
7:30 LET'S MAKE A DEAL—Monty Hall, host (8)
MOVIE—"Al Jennings of Oklahoma" (18)
MOUSE FACTORY—"Pluto" Guest Host: John Austin (30)
APOLLO 17 REPORT (40) (22)
THE REPORTERS (57)
8:00 THE ROOKIES—"A Bloody Shade of Blue" (8) (40)
ROWAN AND MARTIN LAUGH-IN—Guest: Steve Lawrence (22) (30)
SPECIAL: A CONVERSATION WITH EARL WARREN (24) (57)
8:30 LAUREL AND HARDY (27)
9:00 HERE'S LUCY (3)
NFL MONDAY NIGHT FOOTBALL (8) (40)
700 CLUB L (18)
MOVIE—"A Shot in the Dark" (22) (30)
SPECIAL: THE PLOT TO OVERTHROW CHRISTMAS (24) (57)
GOMER PYLE (27)
9:30 DORIS DAY (3)
TWILIGHT ZONE—"A Passage For Trumpet" (27)
10:00 BILL COSBY (3)
STATE OF CONNECTICUT (24)
NEWS (27) (57)
10:30 NEWS (24)
MOVIE—"Flame of the Islands" (27)
HOW DO YOUR CHILDREN GROW? (57)
11:00 NEWS, SPORTS, WEATHER (3) (18) (22) (30) (57)
11:30 FLIGHT OF APOLLO 17 (3) (22)
JOHNNY CARSON (30)
12:00 MOVIE—"Johnny Tiger" (3)
FLIGHT OF APOLLO 17 (8)
NEWS (27) (40)
12:30 FLIGHT OF APOLLO 17 (40)
12:45 NEWS (8)
1:00 NEWS (22) (30)
NCAA HIGHLIGHTS (40)
1:15 DEATH VALLEY DAYS
1:45 NEWS (8)
2:00 NEWS (3) (40)

Getting An Xmas Tree? Remember These Rules

Christmas trees, lighted candles, arrangements of evergreen sprigs, and traditional decorative touches which spread the holiday atmosphere can also spread the horror of fire unless great care is taken.

Follow these suggestions when planning Christmas trees, lighting, decorations, wrappings, etc.

Trees - Select a firm, fresh one, and put it at once in a cool place with its base in water. Before setting it up, cut about an inch off the base to help the tree absorb water, then place the tree in a sturdy stand containing water. Be sure the water level stays above the cut – check it daily. Locate the tree away from heat and where it won't block exits. Take it down as soon as possible before Christmas vacation - the more it dries out, the more of a hazard it becomes. Don't rely on do-it-yourself flameproofing treatments.

Christmas trees should not be used above the street floor in any residence hall except in the 5th, 12th, and 19th floor lobbies of the Southwest High Rise Buildings. (Artificial trees with the Underwriters Laboratories (UL) label may be used anywhere.)

Lighting - Never use lighted candles on a tree or near evergreen decorations. Check sets of electric lights closely for worn insulation, broken plugs, loose bulb sockets; use only sets with Underwriters Laboratories label. Use extension cords sparingly. Never hang sets of lights on a metallic, artificial tree - to avoid shock hazard, use only indirect spot lighting on such trees. Turn off all indoor tree and decorative lights when leaving the building or retiring for the night. Outdoor lights should have special wiring.

Decorations - Use materials which are non-combutible, such as glass and asbestos, or which are flame-retardant. Keep natural evergreens and polystyrene foam decorations away from candles, fireplaces and other open flames.

Candles - Candles, when used, should be used with extreme care. When used for table decorations, a sturdy holder shall be provided. Lighted candles should never be left unattended.

Sylvan Accepting Colloquia Plans

The Sylvan Area Academic Affairs Committee has announced that it is accepting proposals for Spring semester colloquia program.

The format for the spring semester will be a series of approximately twenty colloquia and a variety of lecture series and workshops experiences. The duration of the colloquia courses will be either three weeks, seven weeks, or ten weeks in scope, depending on the nature of the subject matter and the degree of intensivied study which the instructor deems appropriate.

At present the colloquia program is comprised of accredited and non-accredited offerings. The dispensation of credit is made by the faculty, student, and staff of the Academic Affairs Committee based upon the degree of academic quality each course offers. The courses are taught by a wide variety of individuals from within the University community including undergraduates, grad students, and faculty members.

Pay will be offered to all instructors.

If you have expertise in a specific area, and are interested in sharing this in the form of a colloquium or workshop experience stop by the Sylvan Student Affairs Office located on the ground floor of Cashin House or call 545-1391 for an application form. For further information concerning this program please ask to speak with either Dick Palomba or Tom Trotman. The deadline for all applications is Friday, January 5, 1973.

Dorm Head Info.

"Information on applications for Head of Residence and Resident Director positions for the 1973-74 academic year is now available at the Information Desk inside the ramp entrance, second floor of Whitmore Administration Building. Head of Residence positions are full-time, twelve-month professional appointments.

Resident Director positions are part-time service assistantships, September through May, available to students enrolled in the Graduate School."

NORTHAMPTON JERRY LEWIS CINEMA
U.S. Route 5 586-3209
Mon. & Tues. Adults $1.00
R RAGE
George C. Scott (PG) 7:00 & 9:00.
You'll Like My Mother
a thriller
7:30 & 9:30
PG
College Students 50¢ Off
Wed. Night 1,000,000 Night! Free Lottery Ticket with each $1.75 adm.
Sat. & Sun. Matinee
MUNSTER GO HOME
1 & 3 p.m. All Seats 75¢

ACADEMY OF MUSIC
AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
NOW - Ends Tuesday at 7:00 & 9:10
Balcony Seats $1.
NORTHAMPTON MASS 584-8435
CABARET
with LIZA MINNELLI and MICHAEL YORK

Bogus Films
CLINT EASTWOOD
in
The Good The Bad and The Ugly
Tues., Dec. 12
7 & 9:30
CCA 75¢

SHOWCASE CINEMAS 1 2 3 4 5
ROUTE 5 RIVERSIDE RD
24 HR TEL 733-5438 WEST SPRFLD
CHARLES BRONSON IN "THE MECHANIC"
SANDRA SEW COMO IN "THE SANDERS" DEC 20th
A crackling gangster movie. Well made, entertaining and frightening.
"The Valachi Papers"
CANCEL MY RESERVATION
GENE HACKMAN "THE POSEIDON ADVENTURE" DEC 27th
In this Hospital the Nurses are Contagious. The Doctors have caught them already!
CARRY ON DOCTOR
JON VOIGHT - BURT REYNOLDS "DELIVERANCE" DEC 27th
LADY SINGS THE BLUES A RED HOT SMASH!
MILT DISNEY'S "ROBIN HOOD" EXPRESS DEC 20th

"My Oscar bet for best American film, best Director, best (non-original screenplay), best performance by an actor (Anthony Perkins) and actress (Tuesday Weld) —Just about the best of everything." —Cosmopolitan Magazine
Starts Friday! December 8
"SLAUGHTERHOUSE 5" (R)
TUESDAY WELD ANTHONY PERKINS
"PLAY IT AS IT LAYS" (R)
It ranks high among the best movies I've ever seen. One of the most rewarding experiences you'll ever have in a motion picture theatre." —Alex Read, Syndicated Columnist
From the best seller that really knew a generation
A SEPARATE PEACE
(PG)
Daily at 7:00 & 9:00
"1972 Berlinger Award" — Scholarly Mag.
Campus Cinema
DOLLAR NIGHT: Every Monday Night Admission Only $1.00
an exceptional love story, funny and moving!
BUTTERFLIES ARE FREE
GOLDIE HAWN · EDDIE ALBERT
Shows daily at 7:00 & 9:00 (PG)
I could love you if you'd let me.

Judge Declares Mistrial In Pentagon Papers Case

LOS ANGELES (AP)–The Pentagon Papers case, initiated more than one year ago in angry controversy over the Vietnam war, is ending and beginning again.

U.S. District Court Judge Matt Byrne, presiding at pretrial hearings for Daniel Ellsberg and Anthony Russo, says he will declare a mistrial Monday and order a new jury chosen to judge the matter. No testimony was taken at the pre-trial proceedings.

Although the law forbids the trial of any defendant twice for the same crime, Ellsberg and Russo have said they will waive their protection from double jeopardy in order to get a new jury and a fresh start.

The Ellsberg-Russo defense fund says the trial already has cost them $250,000 and they are $75,000 in debt. By the conclusion of the second trial, they estimate their expenses will reach $750,000.

Ellsberg, 41, and Russo, 35, former researchers on secret government projects, have admitted roles in releasing to news media the Pentagon study of the Vietnam war origins. They said they hoped to help end the conflict. The government has charged them with espionage, conspiracy and theft. It has been 18 months since Ellsberg was first indicted. A second indictment, including Russo, was issued last December.

The trial was the first prosecution of Americans for giving government secrets to a newspaper in their own country. Espionage laws previously were interpreted to apply only in cases in which a person intended harm to his country or aided a foreign power in doing such harm.

"Farewell To Jewry" Coming Tomorrow

Tomorrow evening Dov Gordon will present the third lecture in the Henry M. Gordon Lecture Series. Mr. Gordon's topic will be "A FAREWELL TO AMERICAN JEWRY". The lecture will be held in the Colonial lounge of the student Union at 6:30.

Mr. Gordon, who is a senior at the University has been involved in many facets of Jewish life, especially in the college youth movements. During his freshman year he was chairman of the student-faculty committee for a Judaic Studies Program at UMass. He spent his sophomore year at Hebrew University in Jerusalem. Last year Mr. Gordon founded and chaired the Western Massachusetts Student Struggle For Soviet Jewry and this past year he organized Concerned Jewish Students in the five college area.

In two weeks Mr. Gordon will be leaving this country to make ALIYAH to Israel where he plans to pursue a career in Law.

The lecture series which is sponsored by Concerned Jewish Students is named in memory of Mr. Gordon's father, Henry M. Gordon, who during his lifetime was actively involved in American Jewish Communal life.

MDC CLASSIFIED

FOR SALE

Pre-owned Zenith portable stereo. Speakers with 7" cord. Excell. cond. Asking $50, will take best offer. 549-1218 evenings. tf12-72

For sale, furniture: chest, dresser, double bed, table and chairs. Call 253-5513. tf12-11

Sweaters. Ski, V turtlenecks, 100% virgin wool, wash & wear, 50%-60% off. Call 549-0536. tf12-0

Guitars — new and used at discount prices. Many fine instruments and acc. in stock. The Guitar Workshop, 98 Main St., North. 586-1760. tf-oem.

Waterbeds ahead of time. $30.95 complete. Safeway htrs., bedspreads, fur rugs, 367-2787, 367-2858. inter. Rte 63 & 47, Montague. tf12-13

Handcrafted pine benches, tables, and boxes, all different and unique. 200 yds east inter. Rte. 63 & 47, 367-2787, Montague. tf12-13

Give a Shaklee gift for Xmas. New concept tool taste, perfumes, colognes, allergenic lipsticks, shampoo, eye shadow, 253-2841. tf12-11

Musical inst. - Fender Telecaster, over 16 yrs. old - $150. Fender BassmanAM $150. AKAI model M9 reel-to-reel tape rec. $150. 730-0901. tf12-11

Would you like to buy stereo components at tremendous savings? Yes. Then call me at 665-2500. I am an on-campus representative for a large stereo company, WE SELL ALL TYPES OF FINE COMPONENT SYSTEMS. Window shop anywhere, then give me a call and save $$ all purchases are guaranteed in writing so pls. call 665-2500 soon. tf 12-11

Holiday sale! 5-year factory guaranteed waterbeds, $17.50, heaters $27.50. Lowest prices in 5-college area. Gary, 1 p.m. - 11 p.m. daily. 546-9126. tf12-12

New refrigerator, 3.5 cu. ft., 16 mo. guarantee. Was $40, now $60. Carolyn, 546-6064. tf12-12

Mcintosh pre amp., $300. New $150 or best offer. Craig cassette deck, $40. 546-5882. tf12-12

2 KLH model 17 spk., excellent cond. $95 or best offer. Call 546-7930. tf12-11

BAUER MEN'S HOCKEY SKATES size 11 1/2 & 10. Very good cond. $50 when new. Asking $25. Call Kathy 545-0731. Also woman's size 7 1/2, $3. tf 12-13

Polaroid land camera #305, 1 1/2 yrs. old but hardly ever used w/flash $19.00. Also 2-12 vlt. auto a.m. radios 1 w/built-in spkr. $5 ea. 665-2387. tf 12-13

*Stereo — Audio Electronics * The best buys on brand name stereo equipment. Call Greg at 546-4648. tf12-13

Guitar-Hagstrom II solid body and bratbklt, 240w amp. with 2 12" speakers, $75 for all. Call Neal 546-6051 tf 12-13

Rubber Stamps
Stamp your address $1.25/line plus 60¢ Shipping
10 Day Service
Send Check to: Copycats Box 771 Hatfield, Mass. tf12-11

Used furniture at Lamp Shop, 401 Pine St., Cushman, in rear of Whittemore's. All sorts of lamps, dishes, some antiques. Thurs. - Sat. 10-5:30 tf 12-12

ROOM FOR RENT

Furnished room in private house. No cooking, close to campus, immediate occupancy, quiet location. Call 549-6207. tf12-13

1 bedroom, everything included, $155. University Park Apts. Call Tom anytime, 253-2220. tf12-13

FOR SALE

Those bombs carry your name; let's shoot baskets instead. Vinly bumper stickers, 75¢ ea., Box 95, Cambridge, N.Y. 12816. 3/$1.50, 20/$9. tf12-13

5 cu. ft. refrigerator. Leaving dorm, excellent cond. Must sell, $70. 4 years left on guarantee, see at 318 James, or call 546-5583. tf12-13

If you want fine furniture you're reading the wrong ad. Used couches, easy chairs, lg. rug, lamps, etc. For sale, 253-5010. tf12-13

Skis — like new! Skis (Fischer), buckle-boots (Lange) size 7 girls, poles, boot rack. All $150. Must sell! Call 253-5406. tf12-12

Movie posters, lobby cards, 8x10 stills, comic books, original art nostalgia items. We buy and sell. Rebel Peddler, 1587 Main St., Spfld. tf12-13

ROOMMATES WANTED

Two girls looking for two guys to share 3 bedroom apartment at Puffton. Rent $55. Call 549-0114 after 6. tf12-13

Fem. roommate wanted — own rm. in 3 bdrm. apt., with 2 other girls. Rent negotiable. Avail. Jan. 7. Pleasant atmosphere. Call Amy, 549-0088. tf12-13

1-2 fem. rmmate(s), to share apt., $58.50 ea. Avail. Dec. 15. Call 549-0062. tf12-13

Male roommate wanted in Presidential Apts., for spring semester. $48/mo. furn. & util. included. Call 549-1716 after 6 p.m. (for John). tf12-13

1 female roommate wanted to share house with 5 people, very near campus, off street parking, no lease. $57.50 per month. 586-2048. tf12-11

Male roommate for spring semester, $80/mo. University Park Apts. Call Perry, 253-5664. tf12-13

Female grad looking for female roommate, $85 mo. Own room and bath. Near campus. Call 549-3661 evenings. tf12-13

1 room Puffton Village, male or female, $70/month, immediate occupancy or for Jan. Call John or Paul, 549-3628. tf12-13

Country apartment, own room, pets, grad. student only. Two in apartment, $97.50, includes all. Call 549-6409 after 10 p.m., quiet. tf12-11

Need roommate(s) Brittany Manor, Amherst. Total rent $210/mo. 1 will pay $105, 1 person, own rm., $105. 2 persons share $52. Call 253-5161, nite. tf12-12

M or F roommate wanted. Own bedroom, Rolling Green Apts., $80 month, incindes utilities. Call 256-6438. tf12-11

Roommate needed to share 2 br. apt. with one male and one female. Prefer neat, quiet, mature adult of either sex. 549-6760 or 545-0345. tf12-11

Lani and Rose need a new roommate. Your own room, close to campus, about $80 per month. Call them at 549-1352. tf 12-12

Fem. rmmte. grad. stu pref. 2 bedrm apt. w/w, dwr, disp, swmmg pool, Sunderland, quiet resp. person, please call 665-4745. tf 12-12

Female roommate wanted for spring semester. Cliffside apartments. Call 665-2900 after 5. tf 12-12

Grad student to share 2-bedroom furnished apt. 665-4010 evening or contact Hal, 429 Tobin Hall. tf 12-13

Female roommate wanted to share room starting Dec. 956/mo. Rolling Green Apts. 253-9641. tf 12-11

ROOMMATES WANTED

Sr. female looking for quiet easy going same or grad. furnished, $85.00. Chris, 256-6808 after 6. tf12-12

F. roommate, own room in Cliffside Apartments. Call Barbara, 253-7571 evenings. tf12-13

Female — own room in new Puffton. Low rent in exchange for some babysitting eves. 549-0309 after 5:00. tf12-13

Room in house near Colonial Village. Approx. $80 per month, includes everything — even food. Female wanted. 253-9668. tf12-13

APTS. WANTED

Female student needs to find a furnished room or apt. before second semester. Call 1-413-544-6743 after 5 p.m. tf 12-13

3 rm. apt. for at least 1 yr., within 10 miles of UMass. Needed by Jan. 15. Call Joe bet. 5-6 p.m., 1-730-5030. tf12-11

One bedroom apt. or efficiency apt. wanted immediately, preferably by Jan. 1, not to exceed $100/mo. Call Ingrid 5-2751. tf12-11

1-2 bedroom apt. wanted. Not a complex — prefer old house in country. Will pay up to $165 — not more than 15 min. away. Call 545-2550. tf12-13

TO SUBLET

To sublet - one bedroom apt. incl. utilities - $175 mo. - avail. Jan. 1 - call 549-6775. tf12-13

Cliffside. 1 bedroom furnished, $153.38. Available immediately. Call 665-3900 after six. tf12-12

Furn. eff. apt. in W. Hatfield. 15 min. from UMass., avail. Jan. 1. All util. inc., $110 per/mo. Call Doug, 247-0244, will pay Jan. $110 for you! tf12-13

Three bedroom Puffton apartment to rent, beginning January 1st. Call 549-1471. tf12-13

SERVICES

Stay Dry!! Make your clothes water-repellent easily and inexpensively. To find out how, call 665-2301 between 4-6 p.m. tf 12-11

You click the camera, I'll print the vision. Quality processing of 35mm B & W. Magich Photo 253-2460. tf12-13

The Exec. Hair Salon, 151 Shoff St., Northampton, Mass. Hairstyling: We begin where others leave off. For appt. call 584-2548. tf12-13

OUT IN THE COLD ABOUT INSURANCE? We can help you get it together because at Alpha we care! Complete insurance protection. All Drivers — All Wheels. Alpha Insurance Agency Inc. 29 So. Pleasant St., Amherst, 256-8505. tf12-12

FOR RENT

Room and meals in exchange for baby sitting, 11 a.m. - 2 p.m. weekdays. Phone 584-2700, ext. 811 between 10 and 1 weekdays. tf12-11

Apt. for rent, 2 bdr. townhouse, Squire Vil. $240 mo., includes utilities, avail. Jan. 1. 665-2907. tf 12-13

January 1st availability — large, newly remodeled apts. — 3/4 bedrooms — children & pets welcome — quiet country local. Call 256-8806 day, 253-7717 night. tf 12-13

HOUSE FOR RENT

Completely remodeled 4 bedroom colonial-type house, kids and pets welcome, immediate availability .. quiet country living. Call 256-8806 day, 253-7717 night. tf 12-13

LOST

Cat wearing grn. collar w/bell. Fem., shrt. hrd., grey stripes, white stomach & throat. Thanks from Amherst Col., 549-6358, 542-2541. tf12-13

AUTOS FOR SALE

70 Toyota Corolla, white, radio, excel. condition. $1095 or best offer, 584-8168. tf12-12

Cheap, warm, runs good. 63 Buick LeSabre, AL, p.s., p.b., htr., stkr. snow tires. $200 or best offer. Must sell soon. Steve, 546-9485. tf12-12

1963 VW camper, bed, frig., stove, sun roof. 1967, 50 h.p. engine completely rebuilt in Ang. New front end, call Bob, 549-1730. tf12-13

1967 TR4A, runs excellent, 53,000 mi., new generator, clutch, brakes, exhaust system. Body needs some work, $600. Write Box 126, Amherst. tf12-13

64 Ford custom 8 cyl. auto trans. Rear snow tires. Very good on gas. Good cond., $250. Call 584-8314 late afternoon - eve. tf12-12

Porsche, 1964, 356c convertible. Very clean and fast, but tuition must be paid, $1500. Call Peter, 546-3074 late esp. tf12-11

1963 Chevy — good condition, $200. Large peoples car worth more. Call Rich, 256-8325. tf12-13

For sale, 66 Ford, 289, 4-speed, studded snows, good cond. $325. 665-3200. tf 12-13

Chevrolet, Camaro SS 67, very good condition. Winterized, new snow tires, air cond. Asking $900. Call 256-6253 after 6 p.m. tf 12-13

69 Chevy, 1 ton panel truck. 53' GMC truck, 6 cyl. engine solid truck. Also 1 yr old Gitane 10 spd. bike. Call Michael 253-7384. tf 12-13

1966 Dodge Dart, GT convertible. Good cond., $250 or best offer. Call 549-0079. tf12-13

69 VW Bug. New trans. and clutch. Exc. bod., radials. Wood St. wheel. $950. Call 6-5004. tf12-12

1965 Corvair Monza. Good cond., 4 excellent tires & snows. Really "owned by a lady schoolteacher," $350. 586-3701, 7:30 - 8:30 p.m. tf12-13

1961 VW Bug, inspected. $25. Call 253-2058 after 4 p.m. tf12-13

WANTED

I need your personal experiences to aid research for a thesis on auto-eroticism. All ideas welcome. Strictly confidential. Box 421, North Amherst, 01059. tf 12-11

Room in house in Montague, N.Lev or North. Non-student responsible craftsman, age 24, country living prefrd. Call Sury 584-7351. tf 12-13

Coins and stamps US and foreign bought, sold, traded. Estimates and appraisals. Call Bob 546-4716, 302 Chadbourne House. tf 12-13

Refrigerator, 3 cu. ft. w/freezer. Needed by Dec. 23. Call Tony, 546-8841 after 4:30. tf12-12

Term paper: in form of research grant application to Gov't. Agency on any topic relevant to ecology, remun. Call Rich at 546-5139. tf12-13

RIDE WANTED

Help! Ride for 2 needed to Albuquerque or gen. vic., Dec. 26-28, to arrive by Dec. 31 (?) Will share driving, expenses. Call Rod, 546-6191. tf12-13

I need a ride for 8 o'clock MWF next semester, coming down Main St. in ASH from Pelham. Call Susan 256-6203. tf 12-12

Ride needed to Springfield 1 day a week, any day but Mon. from 2-3. Also ride back to UMass at 5. Will share driving and $. 546-6088. tf12-12

To Chicago. Leave Dec. 15, 16. Will share driving & expenses. Leave message for Max, 549-6304 or 545-1377, or 665-4122. tf12-13

Ride needed to California (bay area preferred) sometime after Dec. 18. Will share driving expenses. Call Mary, 546-1664. tf12-11

Ride needed to or from Florida area, or both. Leave Jan. 2nd, return approx. Jan. 20. 2 girls. Call Donna, 665-3877 after 5:30. tf12-13

TRAVEL

Want to get away for Christmas vacation? Try camping on the exotic island of Jamaica. For more info., call Jon Robin. 549-0112, evg. tf12-13

Bieaveeh everyone. Panam will take you to all your dream cities providing you with best comforts, call Lina 546-3110. tf12-13

See all the places you've dreamed of: London, Istanbul, Athens, Rome, an island in the sun, economically too. . .fly. PanAm. Ellen 253-7661. tf12-13

Skiing in Europe is cheaper than you think, call and find out. Call Shelley, 546-8258. tf12-13

How about skiing in Europe over the holidays? Contact Kathy, 549-6658. tf12-13

Crimson Travel Service offers a low cost spring vacation trip to Bermuda. For more info., call Rich Margil, 317 Dwight, 545-0790. tf12-12

ENTERTAINMENT

Worried about final exams? Ease your tension. . .all it takes is a few songs from a beautiful person in a relaxing setting. Give yourself a tension break. Lynn Holoway pours love into her work for your pleasure. Tuesday evenings at The Rusty Scupper, Route 9, Amherst. . .tell her a friend sent you. tf12-11

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Recently remodeled — large 3/4 room apartment — heat & hot water provided — easy commuting to Amherst — children welcome — immediate availability. A REAL FIND @ $150/mo. Call 256-8806 or 253-7717. tf 12-13

PERSONAL

Aardvark, Sorry for the late response to your letter. I think it's about time we get together. If interested let me know. tf12-13

Have a nog at the concert, Dec. 13!! East Room, Worcester D.C., for fun. tf12-13

Penny F. — Why didn't you call? J.N. tf12-11

Anyone with questions or wanting info on homosexuality, or to talk about personal problem, call 586-2811. Ask for Paul. tf12-12

To George in Brooks who has my pocketbook. Keep the money, but please give it back. I need the I.D.'s. Betsy in 404-E Cashin, 546-4019. tf12-11

To the person that found a set of keys with an Alfa Romero insignia: Thank you for returning them. They were my only set. Dave. tf12-11

Ira, happy belated 21st birthday. tf12-11

Judy: Believe in me, believe in yourself, believe in us. We'll make it. John. tf12-11

Hi Judy Pudy! Have a good day. Lisa. tf12-11

Passport photos, fast, fast service, Lang's Photo, 197 N. Pleasant St., Amherst. tf12-13

Photo lab for rent. Lang's Photo, near Wearhouse, 197 N. Pleasant St., Amherst. tf12-13

To the UMass employee who hit my bronco behind Marshall on Monday — Thanks for not leaving your name. tf12-11

Dr. Flyan — 2 guidesaex, a poster, & a best friend dancing around 21 cedars, because it's your birthday! Peace, Patty, Sandra & Chris. tf12-11

Happy 19th Dana. May your days be bright and filled with Joy(ce). Love, Joyce. tf12-11

Happy 21st J.J. Love, D.D. Bug. tf12-11

Lisa, have a good day! Have you guessed yet who I am? Your secret Santa. tf12-11

MARK PALAU (9) kicks an extra point in the Boardwalk Bowl against UCAL (Davis). Holder for Palau is Peil Pennington. Other identifiable Minutemen are Rich Herman (41) and Bruce Pinto (55). (MDC Photo by Karasu)

Rhody JV's Dump UMass

By MDC STAFF

The UMass J-V basketball squad lost their second straight game Saturday, as the quicker, more polished Rhode Island J-Vs extended an eight point halftime lead to a 79-65 victory.

A junior from East Providence, RI, Nelson Lopes, tossed in 30 points, while Carlton Smith, a frosh from Boston, contributed 18 points and 11 rebounds, to lead the Ram J-Vs over the cagers at the Cage.

For UMass, 6'3 sophomore, Greg Duarte, who was ineligible play for the freshmen last year, was the top scorer and rebounder with 29 points and 8 caroms. The J-Vs as a whole were sloppy and sorely showed their need for a playmaker.

Freshman guard, Michael Stokes, who was being counted on as the key to the offense by the Minutemen, played only sparingly due to a sprained ankle sustained early in the game last Wednesday versus St. Anselm's. Coach Gaudette said that he has no one with the quickness to eplace him and that he probably would not be ready until next Saturday.

The press along with two quick buckets by Duarte pulled the J-Vs within three early in the second half, but the Rams soon pulled away to ice the game.

The next game is against UConn at Storns on Tuesday.

Wednesday Nite

FAT

Next Wednesday
Dec. 20th
FLIGHT

at the

Rusty Nail Inn

Rte. 47 Sunderland
665-1937

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

By SYDNEY OMARR

Which sign is the most passionate? Classically, Scorpio would be said to be the most intense, while Leo would emphasize love. Libra is marriage and Aries is direct, romantic and daring. Taurus requires the well being that comes with love and can be passionate. Capricorn expresses an undercurrent of passion, while Sagittarius is apt to verbalize inner feelings. All signs are passionate in varying degrees and different ways. The Water signs–Cancer, Scorpio and Pisces–are most obvious about intimate feelings. The Air signs–Gemini, Libra and Aquarius–are the least obvious in this area.

***

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Friends exhibit tendency to criticize your business, professional associates. Key is to form your own conclusions after careful analysis. One who handles your business affairs should be required to provide an accounting.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Conflict of interest is emphasized. What was your goal shifts. You will have to change long range plan. Be responsible enough to move with times. Don't rush into partnership, including marriage.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Utilize contacts obtain needed service. Take care of your own interests. Others may want to help, but their interest tends to lag. Key is to apply gentle pressure. Those who owe you favors can be made to pay.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Bring forth creative abilities, imprint your individual style. Refuse to be coerced. Relationships are intensified. New start proves profitable. Don't hang on to past, instead, plan for future.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Emotions tend to dominate. Proper diet, exercise are necessities. Otherwise, you compound minor setback into major problem. One who aided in past could make reappearance. Be willing to listen, learn.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Spread wings. Means diversity. Don't feel there is but one method. Look around, experiment and utilize alternatives. Avoid senseless disputes with neighbors, family members. Sense of humor now is your greatest ally.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Attention to details can result in monetary gain. Affair of heart could dominate. Lovers' quarrel could be on agenda. Be ready for abrupt changes. Ride with tide. What appears major conflict is only temporary.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You will have greater freedom to move, travel, make choices and changes. This will be so despite family opposition. Key is to utilize natural ability as character analyst. Find out the "why" of events.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Take special care in traffic. Carelessness of others could involve you in altercation. Wise now to stick close to what is familiar. Includes home and family–be diplomatic, buy gift for special occasion.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Money situation needs attention. Be patient. Don't jump at first offer. Be discreet, even coy. By temporarily holding back, you almost ensure ultimate gain. Know it and respond accordingly. Pisces is in picture.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Relative takes initiative and aids you in achieving goal. Cycle continues high–you can benefit from new contacts, projects. Emphasize personality. Be direct. Let others know exactly where you stand.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Gain indicated through correspondence, other writing. Key is to express yourself to large numbers of people. Fine for initiating formal for advertising campaign. On personal level, open dialogue with loved one.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are intuitive, a natural teacher, interested in astrology, electricity, television, subjects many consider unorthodox. Domestic adjustment made in September was the "right thing." January and October for 1973 will be most significant for you.

Copyright 1972, Gen. Fea. Corp.

Fencers Win

Adding to their impressive string of victories over the past two months, the UMass Fencing Club took first place in a three team foil meet against Colgate and Berkshire Community College at B.C.C.

The UMass team handily won their first competition against B.C.C., 17-7. Then while the Minutemen rested, Colgate was upended by B.C.C., 16-14, as the team from Pittsfield suddenly looked strong.

Then is an extremely close match, the UMass Swordsmen lost to Colgate 8-8 (Colagate scored 59 touches while UMass had 57). The Minutemen had the overall victory though, winning 25 bouts, to 23 for B.C.C. and 22 for Colgate.

Fencing for UMass were Bernie Desaultels (9-1), Tom Ebitz (7-3), Pete Dillard (6-4), and Jim Rose (3-7).

Jets Face Crucial Test

OAKLAND (AP) - The New York Jets will be fighting to keep their National Football League playoff hopes alive when they take on the Oakland Raiders Monday night.

The Jets will go into the game with a 7-5 record and a chance for the American Conference's fourth playoff berth. The Raiders, 8-3-1, already have qualified by winning the AFC West.

"We know excatly where we stand," says Jets' Coach Weeb Ewbank. "We win these two and we're in. Nothing else matters."

If the Jets win Monday night and again next Sunday at home against 9-4 Cleveland, the New Yorkers will join Oakland, Pittsburgh and Miami in the AFC playoffs.

If the Jets lose to the Raiders, it's all over for them for the season and Cleveland gets the fourth berth.

Crossword Puzzle

ACROSS

1 Sea eagle
4 Hebrew month
6 Wheel teeth
11 Large class of celestial structures
13 Amend
15 Spanish (abbr.)
16 Hat ornaments
18 Symbol for nickel
19 For example (abbr.)
21 Mature
22 Goals
24 Wan
26 Memorandum
28 Household pet
29 Bog down
31 Narrate
33 Legal seal (abbr.)
34 Expired
36 Face of watch
38 Tuberculosis (abbr.)
40 Sow
42 Place for combat
45 Electrified particle
47 Barracuda
49 Platform
50 Girl's name
52 Unusual
54 Note of scale
55 Spanish article
56 Chief officer
59 Prefix: with
61 Challenges
63 Mortified
65 Remains at ease
66 Conjunction
67 Peer Gynt's mother

DOWN

1 Abstract being
2 Iterate
3 Take notice (abbr.)
4 Winglike
5 Sink
6 Welcomed
7 Lamprey
8 Part of church
9 Note of scale
10 Heelless shoe
12 Guido's low note
14 Rosters
17 Blemish
20 Merry
23 A state (abbr.)
24 Postscript (abbr.)
25 Ancient Greek district
27 Lamb's pen name
30 Dregs
32 Fat of swine
35 Sadden
37 Shakespearian king
38 Wearied
39 Cistern
41 Hard of hearing
43 Female relatives
44 Conjunction
46 Symbol for niton
48 Lock of hair
51 Sacred bull
53 Reverberation
57 Soak
58 Symbol for tantalum
60 Poem
62 Symbol for iron
64 Parent (colloq.)

Answer to Saturday's Puzzle

Distr. by United Feature Syndicate, Inc. 11

Skaters Win, Tie In Weekend Tilts

By BILL BALLOU
and
CINDY GONET

The Minutemen finished off the pre-Christmas part of their schedule over the weekend and the results, while not all they could have been, weren't all that bad either.

UMass pulled off a win and a tie against Middlebury and Norwich, respectively, as the Minutemen offense clicked for six goals both Friday night and Saturday afternoon. The final against Middlebury was 6-3 and versus Norwich naturally enough was 6-6.

The big guns in the 12 goal weekend outburst were, surprisingly enough, Jim Coleman, Jim Lynch, and John Muse, the UMass third line. This trio had done absolutely nothing in the three games previous to the weekend but something about the familiar surroundings of Orr Rink woke them up. Coleman had four goals, including three against Norwich, while Lynch had a goal both games. Muse didn't score but picked up a few assists.

Pat Keenan also kept up his streak of having scored in every UMass game as he picked up two goals against Middlebury and one versus Norwich. So, counting the four he picked up in the first three games of the year, Keenan now has seven for the season.

Also having a hot stick for UMass was sophomore Kevin Connors who picked up two goals Friday night and one more on Saturday afternoon.

Friday night turned out to be a total loss for Middlebury. Their bus got in an accident on the way down from Vermont, making them about an hour late for the game. And despite the fact that, according to one of their players, they played their "best game of the year", they were soundly thumped.

The Panthers jumped out to a 2-0 first period lead, thanks to some sloppy defensive play by UMass and the great goaltending of Larry Perlman.

That lead didn't last too long as the Minutemen stormed back for four goals in the second period. Pat Keenan made it 2-1 at 4:31 thanks to a fine set-up by Lonnie Avery. Jim Lynch tied at 2-2 at 9:45 and just 21 seconds later Kevin Connors converted a perfect cross-ice pass from Chico Shea to give UMass the lead, 3-2. Connors scored again before the period ended and that one proved to be the game-winner.

Keenan and Jim Coleman added third period goals to give UMass its 6-3 edge. Rick Simourd scored for Middlebury.

Saturday was a little different, where at a deserted Orr rink, the civilians of UMass tied the military of Norwich 6-6 on Saturday afternoon.

In the first period, it looked like the Minutemen would have an easy victory when Jim Coleman scored within 2:38 minutes of play. UMass seemed strong when Pat Keenan increased the lead to 2-0 at 5:39. The puck managed to find its way into the UMass net when Tom Cadigan of Norwich made the score 2-1. Phil Coleman, a Cadet, tied the score after stealing a Bob Shilaile pass.

The poor defenses of UMass allowed Pomponi of Norwich, to bring the score to 3-2, Norwich. UMass rallied, and at the end of the period, Coleman tied it up at 3-3.

The second period was a good one for coffee; the action was slow. Phil Coleman of Norwich fired a hard shot past Peter Erichson for the lead. Kevin Connors retaliated with a goal at 14:46. The Cadets took the lead once again when Pomponi scored.

The third period picked up in action, when, at 0:55 Doug Howard, a short hair from Norwich, increased their lead to 6-4. Jim Lynch, a UMie, pleased on-lookers with a goal. Coleman made it 6-6 near the end of the period.

Sudden death overtime killed no one. UMass didn't win or lose; however a good tie is better than a poor loss.

UMASS' JIM COLEMAN beats Norwich goalie Bill Cantwell on a breakaway in Saturday's game at Orr Rink. Coleman beat Cantwell twice more to score half of the Minutemen's goals in the 6-6 tie. (MDC Photo by Alan Chapman)

Grapplers Remain Unbeaten at 5-0

By JOHN BOCK

Everybody likes to win. Some people like to win more than others, of course, but they like to win just the same.

As of this writing the UMass wrestling team is the winningest team on the winter sports scene. They are 5-0 including a first-in-the-history clean sweep of their Ivy League opponents.

Saturday at Harvard the Minutemen defeated the Big Red 18-15 and the Crimson 22-15. Now anyone that has been to Harvard's Briggs Cage knows that it has about as much to psyche an athlete as a rainy day. When a team has to spend all afternoon in the same gym then they are bound to be a little less than energetic by the end of the day.

The team left Amherst early so they could get to Cambridge early to scout the opposition. When they arrived they found that the order of the day was six minute matches instead of the normal eight minute matches. It seems that Cornell and Harvard had decided that being so early in the season (which is half over next week) it would be nice to take it easy on each other and get a two minute respite.

This writer also recalls another Ivy League team that wished they could have wrestled six minutes because they weren't in shape and they are one in the loss column as of two weeks ago.

It was UMass against Cornell, with three victories right off the bat at 118, 126, and 134. Dave Amato bested Andy Little 5-4, "Whirlwind" Larry Reynolds (who has scored 56 points on opponents in five matches while they have scored 15 on him) beat Dave Scaeffer 10-4, and Mike McGlaughlin beat Hawaii State Champ Kevin Lilohei 4-2.

Al Elmont in his Varsity debut at 142 dropped his first of two, to Dave Damour 4-1 and Steve Rome lost his first 7-3 to Cornell grappler Dave Porter.

Cliff Blom is still undefeated at 158 as he posted a 4-1 victory over Jerry Locke. At 167 Steve Benson had a great day as he beat one of Cornell's finer wrestlers, Dave Crawford, 5-1. Crawford was the boy who beat Yale's Eastern Champ, Alan Gaby, in a dual match last year.

In the last three weight classes the only win came at Heavyweight by George Ireland as he shut out Big Red grappler Mike Olander.

The team seemed to pick up momentum going into the evening match with Harvard. Dave Amato has yet to beat Crimson 118 pounder Dan Blakinger but he is certainly closer. Amato sustained an injury in the first match and found it hard to shoot on Balkinger and lost 4-0. At 126 Larry Reynolds wiped Mitoh Silverman 14-0 while Mike McGlaughlin brought his record to 4-1 with a win over Bill Haley.

Tony Rome avenged his earlier loss by defeating Mike Dee 5-2. At 158 Cliff Blom recorded his third pin of the year as he stuck Harvard's Rock Hinkle at 5:11 in the match.

Steve Benson continued on his winning ways with a 7-4 victory over John Keough.

Harvard picked up wins at 177 and 190 but George Ireland proved his worth again as he defeated Crimson Heavyweight Paul Dowling 7-0.

Pro Football Roundup

Pats Beat Saints 17-10; Giants Lose

NEW ORLEANS (AP)–Quarterback Jim Plunkett threw two touchdown passes to receiver Reggie Rucker in the first half and the New England Patriots went on to defeat the New Orleans Saints 17-10 Sunday in a National Football League game.

The victory was the Patriot's first after nine consecutive losses, and gave them a 3-10 record while the Saints fell to 2-10-1 and stayed in line for pro football's number one draft pick.

Plunkett's first touchdown pass to Rucker covered 31 yards and ended an 88-yard drive. He threw a 25-yard strike just over a minute later on the first play after tackle Rick Cash had recovered a fumble by Saint quarterback Archie Manning at the New Orleans' 25.

Manning took the Saints 80 yards with the second-half kickoff, culminating the drive with a 26-yard scoring pass to wide receiver Dannie Abramowicz.

Happy Feller had kicked a 30-yard field goal for the Saints in the first quarter, and Mike Walker booted a 36-yarder for the Patriots in the third period to wrap up the scoring.

Steelers in Playoffs

HOUSTON (AP)–Roy Gerela kicked Pittsburgh into the National Football League's playoffs for the first time in club history Sunday with field goals of 24, 39 and 13 yards as the Steelers downed the Houston Oilers for a 9-3 victory.

The victory assured the Steelers of at least a tie for the American Football Conference Central Division championship and gave them their best record in history at 10-3. Pittsburgh is assured of at least a "wild card" berth in the playoffs, even if they lose their final game next week.

It was an expensive victory for the Steelers, who had to play the entire second half without starting quarterback Terry Bradshaw, who jammed a finger on his throwing hand in the second period and did not return.

However, rookie quarterback Joe Gilliam guided the Steelers to two third-quarter field goals after the first half ended in a 3-3 deadlock.

Houston also lost its starting quarterback when Dan Pasterini went out with a hamstring injury with 13 minutes left in the game in the rugged defensive matchup.

The Oilers held Steeler rookie sensation France Harris under 100 yards rushing for the first time in six games. Harris still got enough yards to go over the 1,000 mark for the season, to become only the fifth rookie ever to achieve the mark.

The loss was Houston's 10th in a row, setting a club record and dropping them to 1-12 for the year.

Pack Makes it Back

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP)–The running of MacArthur Lane and John Brockington and a big-play defense powered the Green Bay Packers past the Minnesota Vikings 23-7 Sunday and into the National Football League playoffs for the first time since the Vince Lombardi glory days.

The Packers, down 7-0 at halftime, clinched the NFC's Central Division championship with a 9-4 record and one regular season game to play after staggering the Vikings with a 17-point third quarter in bitter Minnesota cold of two degrees below zero.

Lane, who rushed 19 times for 99 yards, set up Green Bay's first score, a 36-yard field goal by Chester Marcol, with a 37-yard run. He also bulled in from the three for a touchdown. Brockington, Lane's bruising running mate, carried 24 times for 113 yards, making him the first NFL player to rush for more than 1,000 yards in each of his first two seasons.

The Packers close the season next Sunday at New Orleans, then travel to Washington to meet the Redskins in a NFC semifinal playoff on Christmas.

Broncos Slam Chargers

DENVER (AP)–Haven Moses caught two touchdown passes from Charley Johnson and Denver converted three San Diego turnovers into scores as the Broncos routed the Chargers 38 -13 Sunday in a National Football League game.

The victory for the Broncos, 4-9, was their first at home since their season opener. San Diego fell to 4-8-1 and hung on to third place in the American Conference's West Division.

Denver took a 7-0 lead in the first period after cornerback Billy Thompson intercepted a Hadl pass at the Denver 25. Several plays later, Floyd Little rammed over from the two for the score.

The Chargers moved from their own one-foot line as Garrison caught five passes, setting up rookie Bill McLard's 26-yard field goal early in the second quarter. That cut the margin to 7-3, but it was as close as San Diego got.

A fumble on a punt return gave Denver the ball at the Charger 25, and four plays later Joe Dawkins ran over for the TD. Less than two minutes later, Charles Greer raced 65 yards on a punt return and Denver had a 21-3 halftime lead.

A 17-point outburst by the Broncos in the third quarter put things completely out of reach.

Miami's 13th

NEW YORK (AP) - The unbeaten Miami Dolphins became only the fifth team in National Football League history to win 13 games in one season as Mercury Morris ran for one touchdown and Earl Merrall passed for another, paving the way for a 23-13 victory over the New York Giants Sunday.

The playoff-bound Dolphins, champions of the American Conference's East Division, matched the season winning mark shared by the 1934 Chicago Bears 1962 Green Bay Packers, 1967 Oakland Raiders and Miami Coach Don Shula's 1968 Baltimore Colts.

And they moved within a victory of a perfect season, a feat last achieved by the Bears in 1942's 11-game schedule. The Giants' hopes for the National Football Conference "wild card" playoff berth were snuffed out by Dallas Saturday when the Cowboys earned it with a 34-24 victory over Washington.

Miami, stung in the opening minutes by the first of two Ron Johnson touchdown runs, marched 80 yards on 10 plays with the ensuing kickoff, capping the drive with Morris' 12-yard scoring sweep that put the Dolphins ahead 7-6.

They built the lead to 17-6 on Gare Yepremian's 37-yard field goal and Morrall's 34-yard touchdown pass to Paul Warfield before Johnson cut the margin to 17-13 with his second one-yard scoring plunge in the final minute of the first half.

But Yepremian widened the Miami edge to seven points with a 31-yard field goal four seconds into the fourth quarter, then added the clincher from 16 yards out with 3-1/2 minutes to play.

Bears, 21-12

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - Quarterback Bobby Douglass' only pass completion of the game set up a one-yard touchdown that carried the Chicago Bears to a 21-12 victory over the Philadelphia Eagles Sunday in a battle of National Football League also-rans.

The Bears, trailing 12-7, in the third period, had a third down and one at the Eagles 45, when Douglass hit tight end Earl Thomas for a 43-yard gain to the one. Roger Lawson then belted into the end zone for the winning touchdown.

Chicago notched its fourth victory against eight defeats, but might have lost a strategic position in next month's player draft to the hapless Eagles, who are 2-10-1.

Bowl Win Makes It 9-2

JOHN HEALY (21) runs off with one of the four Bob Biggs passes the Minutemen intercepted. Leading the interference for Healy are Doug Winslow (50) and Bob Parrott (23). (MDC Photo by Karasu)

(Continued from P. 1)

connected with Tim Berra from 27 yards out on UMass' first series.

Healy's steal which placed his teammates on the Aggie 27, led to Steve Schubert's 10 yard end around. Steve's gallop was the first of two non-conventionals in the half.

After Ed McAleney, Paul St. Onge and company withstood four UCal downs inside their five yard line (actually the ball was on the one), UMass drove 99 yards behind the running (67 yards in the drive) and throwing of Paul Metallo. The rock-shouldered halfback ripped off four first down runs to keep the march alive and found UCal off guard with a 20 yard pitch to Pennington to give the Minutemen a 20-0 lead at the time (8:08 into the second period).

This play was last used against Boston University and likewise was successful. Paul ended the season 7 for 11 on options. He also played some defensive halfback, made some tackles and for his efforts was picked as the offensive player of the game by ABC which gives UMass a $1,000 scholraship from the Chevrolet Corporation.

UCal scored just before halftime when fullback Dick Cummings fumbled and the Aggies recovered on the UMass 26. This was the third such error for the Minutemen in the half (Metallo and Phil Roland committed the others). On the latter two UCal had the ball deep in UMass territory but on both occasions they were stopped, notably by the charge of linebacker Dennis Kiernan who also won a $1,000 scholarship for the school as the defensive player of the game.

Biggs connected with Frank Altick from the 20 for the first Aggie score. Immediately into the second half, the momentum changed hands and UCal cut the lead to 20-14 when Biggs drove his team 74 yards with Joe Mangiarcina wedging over from the one.

Now exit Pennington, now enter Mark Tripucka, the guy who could start for any other team in the region. It was early in the fourth quarter and the son of Frank Tripucka (the former quarterback of the Denver Broncos) lent a spark to the sluggish UMass attack with crisp aerials to Bill Hanifan and Steve Schubert, mixed this with a selection of Metallo and Cummings scampers and completed his perfect roll as hero as Metallo took his hand-off and raced untouched from 12 yards out. Dennis Cunningham opened the hole with a block that sent the UCall defensive end in the second row on the sideline seats.

To top all this off, Trap (a.k.a. Tripucka) pulled out memory lane again when he hit roommate, prep school teammate and Yogi Berra's son, Tim, for a two point conversion and a 28-14 lead.

And yes there was that second heist. Bob Parrott a sophomore as is Healy, as is Kiernan, as was....jumped in front of a Biggs bullett, saw open field and the dream of every defensive player came true as 58 yards latter he was standing all alone in the UCal-Davis endzone.

(Related story tomorrow)

Hoopsters Rip Rams

By FRANK ANTOSIEWICZ

While the football team was getting all the fanfare in Atlantic City, a few remained behind to watch the Minutemen hoopsters overpower URI, last season's Yankee Conference champs, 85-73.

Senior captain, Tom McLaughlin, who before the season started was called by Coach Jack Leaman, "a very emotional player. When he's good, he's very good," was just that. In a game which was tied seven times in the first half and 33-33 at the half, McLaughlin started the second half with two quick hoops from underneath. Then, he grabbed four straight defensive rebounds to allow the cagers to lengthen the lead to twelve.

Hitting 7-8 field goal attempts and grabbing 8 rebounds, all in the second half, the 6'4 forward seemingly answered Coach Leaman's cries for a big man, as he dominated the game in the true sense of the word "captain". After the game, Coach Leaman, said, "Several times Mac was totally exhausted (due to his furious play at both ends of the court while he was in the game) and had to be taken out." To sum up McLaughlin's contribution, Leaman said, "he won the ball game for us."

Though it may not sound that way, others played well also. Peter Trow came on to play 22 running minutes (about half the game) and pour in 17 points. Rick Pitino, valuing his growing reputation as the ball handler on the team, let the others do the scoring and accumulated eight assists. His reputation as a gambler (as a frosh, many remember his behind the back passes-some errant, some not) is changing to that as a tactician (The open man was getting the easy score).

Al Skinner, playing sometimes as a guard and sometimes as a forward, was the leading rebounder with 10 to match his 10 points. Skinner spent most of the night guarding the Rams leading scorer, Steve Rowell and though the stats may make you believe otherwise, Rowell was under control. Many of Rowell's points were gotten after the game was under control.

Charlie Peters put in another strong showing at the center spot, grabbing 9 caroms and holding his own against Abu Bakr and John Morley. Though it may not seem possible, the 6'7 center's dribbling and passing was instrumental in stopping a last gap effort by the Rams to slow down the Minutemen with a pressing defense.

Sophomore Bill Endicott also played very well against the tough Ram zone defense. His outside shooting enabled the cagers to stay close in the early going.

In the first stanza, the Minutemen had problems penetrating against the tough Ram zone, and their outside shooting kept the game even. Leaman said after the game, "In the first half the openings were underneath, but the guards did not see them. We wanted to run a little more in the second half and Pitino did a great job in getting us going."

For Rhody, Rowell had 28 points and Robie Young, 16, but the key was in the rebounding (Bakr had only 4 and RI was out-rebounded 42-33) and the two guards, Tom Barao and Joe Charles had only 12 points between them.

The Minutemen are now 2-1 (1-0 in the Conference), while the Rams fall to a 1-2 (0-1 in the conference). The next game is Tuesday night at Storrs against the UConn Huskies.

BILL ENDICOTT (in white) goes high in the air against Rhode Island in the late stages of Saturday's game. Looking out from between the two URI players on the right is John Murphy. (MDC Photo by Alan Chapman)

Daily Collegian

SPORTS

Frank Antosiewicz

A Weekend for UMies

UMass sports saturated the minds of UMies this past weekend. First, there were two hockey games (Friday night and Saturday afternoon) in Orr Rink. Then, there was the televised Boardwalk Board, to be followed by J-V and varsity basketball games at the Cage. There was no way that you could attend all, but there was enough action to thrill the fancies of most and to keep the avid fan busy, to say the least.

First, UMass took on the Middlebury pucksters. There were a few doubts, since ten had graduated from last year's squad and they had lost a close one to Vermont in Vermont. Middlebury scored on its only attempts in the first period and the opposing goalie just kept plucking the pucks out of his glove. Then, faith in UMass hockey was restored and those that were there, (most of the seats were taken, but it was not a capacity crowd) witnessed gladly as the reversal took place. Final score was 6-3 and after the celebration, the next phase began.

Awaking late, it was possible to catch the opening action of Minutemen v. Aggies. In your heart you have to favor the name Aggies (After all, that is what we are known as eastward). Jimmie the Greek predicted an eighteen point margin and the action continued as though it was a replay of the Boston College massacre. Timmy Berra, Steve Schubert, Piel Pennington, Paul Metallo, et al, were at it again. The tallies went up quickly, with the variety of surprises. Paul threw to Piel, Piel threw Tim, and Schubert did the old end around, but not in that order. UCal Davis came back to make the score 20-6 at the half, but there were no worries.

At the half, UCal Davis's self destruct band performance (It was humorous. They played mission impossible and then admidst a few smoking cylinders, the bandsmen ran around in circles) did not compare to the UMass display. The flaming batons and the precision marching was never better. Then, it happened, the network seemed to be pushing Cal Davis by continually mentioning the number one small college passer in the nation, Bob Biggs and his tremendous passing. There seemed to be more females shown from UCal also. The plot was then made known. A film telling all about Cal Davis was shown and then shown again with a description of UMass. Showing a myriad of bicycles while mentioning the library and ending with a combine against the farm setting, was just too much to take (the Boston crowd must have been up to their old tricks again).

Cal Davis came back to make a game of it, but Mark Tripucka wrapped it up. With all the exposure on TV, both bad and good, the afternoon hockey contest was missed, but the game ended in time to go see the J-Vs play.

Looking like the walking wounded (Mike Stokes has a sprained ankle, Glenn Cooper's knees are heavily bandaged and the rest are just slow) the J-Vs lost their second straight game.

The cheerleaders and band were down south, and the Cage during the first game seemed like it had been transposed to Kingston. A small but vocal group of Rhody fans did the yelling. The top two teams in the Yankee Conference last year and the preseason picks as 1-2 this were were playing as though it were a neutral site (33-33 at the half). Then, Tom McLaughlin and Company provided the antics for the runaway. The 3,000 plus fans present cheered and oooed and ahead at the good plays, but the Cage mystique with the sounds reverberating and the enthusiasm rampid, was subdued, Saturday.

Maybe, it was the great variety of events this weekend or maybe it was the lack of organized cheering, but whatever it was about as normal as the UCal Davis film with the UMass sound track.

New England's Largest College Daily

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

Weather

"So long, small fry...it's time to say good-bye."

Recyclable

VOLUME C, ISSUE 65 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS TUESDAY, DECEMBER 12, 1972

Ed. School Still Occupied; Bromery Acting

By NATHAN GORENSTEIN

An attempt by the University administration to end the occupation of the School of Education by the Third World Alliance appeared to have failed for the time being in the wake of Dean Dwight Allen's refusal to admit Paul Chandler to the school's graduate program.

In a letter signed by Dean M. H. Appley of the University graduate school, the administration informed the Alliance of Allen's negative decision which was made during a mid-afternoon School of Education faculty meeting. (see related story on page)

The letter also announced the creation of a special committee to review Chandler's application, should he decide to appeal Allen's ruling. Chandler's intentions are unknown at this time.

According to Chancellor Randolph Bromery, the letter is an answer to two of the Alliance's four demands. One, that Dean Allen give the Alliance a written decision regarding Chandler's admission, and two, the demand that he specify the precise criteria for admission to the school's graduate program.

At 1:30 Tuesday morning, Alliance said they had not yet reached a decision on what course of action to take. However, they said they expected to have an announcement by this afternoon. Bromery said early Monday evening that he considered the demand for a written reply from Allen on Chandler's application answered by Appley's letter. Bromery also said that if Chandler requested a review of Allen's decision the special committee would have to deal with the school's admission criteria during that review process.

The letter was hand delivered by Appley to the Alliance at the School of Education at approximately 8:00 Monday evening.

At a news conference at 5:00 pm. Monday, after Allen's decision, the Alliance stated their intent to remain in the building until all four demands, issued last Friday are met. (see related story on page)

In an interview early Monday evening, Bromery said he had never received an official copy of the Alliance's demands, but, according to newspaper accounts of them, he felt the letter would satisfy the request for an answer on Chandler's application and for precise admissions criteria.

On a third demand, legal and academic amnesty for the demonstrators Bromley said, if the building was evacuated Monday night he would, "tend to be very lenient." However, he stressed his intention to "get the building back."

If need be, Bromery said he would take further action.

Bromery said he had many options to choose if the need arose. Two of them are another appeal to the Alliance and a court injunction to clear the building.

Bromery said if he could not get the building vacated and return the School of Education to "normal" then an injunction, he said, would be a "vehicle" to achieve those ends.

Bromery said he did not know how long he might wait before taking another "step" if the Alliance refused to leave the building. He said a number of times the decision on what further steps to take and when to take them depended on the "specifics" of the Alliance's response.

He acknowledged that the letter did not answer the Alliance's demand for a written statement from Allen on Chandler's ad-

However, Bromery said communication between a Dean and the University's graduate admissions office is confidential, and he couldn't ask it to be disclosed.

Later Monday evening, Bromery said it was University policy for the University Graduate Admissions office to inform all applicants to all schools on the status of their admission.

In a new development Bromery said he had received inquiries on the situation from the "federal level". Bromery would not specify what those "inquiries" consisted of, but he did say it was not clear to him why they had come.

Speaking on the occupation's campus impact, Bromery said he was afraid the entire campus would "lose." Bromery said the occupation was receiving bad press coverage (he said in Washington, D.C. the newspapers were reporting that UMass was "under seige"), that it would polarize the campus, and that everyone's objectives would be lost in the "muddle." Bromery added that from every perspective someone is a "bad guy."

The Chancellor also said he was not interested in returning to specific University admission requirements. He said the nature of the university made specific criteria impossible to use. He pointed to the CCEBS program as an example, saying if the University returned to specific criteria, most CCEBS students would not be admitted.

Dean Dwight Allen, School of Education, talks to newsmen during faculty meeting recess. (MDC Photo by George Withers)

Allen Says No On Chandler

By JAMES GOLD

Dean Dwight Allen decided Monday during a faculty meeting of the School of Education not to recommend Paul Chandler for admission to graduate studies.

The decision came following a vote by the faculty to delete the words "the faculty support our colleagues recommendations regarding Paul Chandler's admission to graduate study" from a motion under consideration concerning general admissions procedures at the school.

In other business at the meeting, the faculty adopted three motions. One endorsing an injunction to end occupation of the School of Ed building, one affirming procedures of graduate admissions while a calling for further admissions criteria to be specified, and one which states that the faculty intentionally did not vote directly on Chandler's application.

Allen, in interviews and press conferences after the faculty meeting said he would not admit Chandler on academic and behavioral grounds. He said both Chandler's academic and general record were not good enough. He also expressed disfavor with Chandler's behavior.

Allen said the Chandler case is now out of his hands, and added that he hoped his recommendations and those of the faculty would be upheld by the Chancellor.

In an interview following the meeting- Assistant Professor Glenn Hawkes and Associate Professor Pat Sullivan said some faculty felt Allen was misinterpreting the action to delete Chandler's case from a motion which concerned admissions procedures.

"Dwight interpreted this as faculty making a final decision on the case," he said.

The rest of that motion reads as follows:

"The faculty affirm its support for those procedures that continue to be used in recommending students for admission to graduate study in the School of Education and, the faculty recognize the urgency in establishing new governance procedures including the further specification of admissions criteria and procedures.

According to Bob Wellman, associate professor and chairman of the meeting, debate over the entire procedures motion continued for over two hours. The vote to delete the section directly concerning Chandler passed 42-32, he said.

Previous to this, the faculty, after one hour debate, passed a motion which said "the faculty ...repudiate the coercive tactic of occupying or blocking buildings as an inappropriate and illegal means of resolving conflict situations, and therefore recommends the serving of an injunction or other appropriate measures to seek those ends on occupants of the building.

"The faculty pledges further to institute governance processes designed to secure the institution against threats to individual freedom, institutional authority, and due process," it concluded.

After Allen announced his decision, the faculty passed a motion which said "we have intentionally not taken a faculty vote directly on Paul Chandler's application." The motion states that because of the traditional small committee reviews in admission procedures, "we believe it is highly inappropriate for the faculty to subject any one candidate's application to a review and vote of the entire faculty."

The meeting, which was called to order a few minutes after noon ended about 5:35 pm. Allen's decision on Chandler came about 3:15.

On almost all votes on the different motions which were presented, Wellman said that there was always a "ten to fifteen vote margin."

A resolution supporting Allen, as Dean, disagreeing with his decision on Chandler, and urging Chandler to pursue the process of appeal had gained 18 signatures of School of Ed. Faculty by late Monday afternoon.

The resolution was circulated by those who perceived Allen's action to be "precipitous," according to Hawkes and Sullivan. "He hadn't allowed faculty to finish deliberation on the substantive issues, he said.

Alliance Vows To Stay Until Demands Are Met

By BOB SCHEIER

Facing a threat of a court injunction from the University against their occupation of the School of Education, the Third World Alliance vowed last night to remain in the building until their demands are met.

The conference held in the lobby of the school, occupied since last Friday, came after a public announcement by Dean Dwight W. Allen of the School of Education that he was opposed to the admission of Paul Chandler, to the school's graduate program.

However, alliance spokespersons said the alliance would stay in the building until their demands for a written answer from Allen to the graduate program at the School of Education, and his specific criteria for admission to the program are met.

Allen has indicated he would not make such a specific listing.

Other Alliance demands include complete academic and legal amnesty for all those involved in the current shutdown.

Earlier in the day, the director of the UMass Security Dept. had asked the students to leave the building, and told them the university might turn to an injunction or force to remove them.

When asked what they would do if confronted by an injunction from the university before their demands were met, group spokesmen simply restated their demands.

Alliance spokesman asked members of the media to print their statements in both Spanish and English, to avoid offending Spanish-speaking students and to not divide the students.

The Third World Alliance was described as a political and cultural association designed to deal with the problems of Latin Americans, Asians, native Americans, African, and people of African descent in North America.

A spokesman also charged Dean Allen with "attempting to construct an authoritarian state of affairs by not specifying the precise criteria" for admission into the school, and attempting to define the political posture of Third World community leaders.

The spokesman also said that the dean, by his failure to respond to communications from the alliance, has "exemplified his contempt and respect for Third World people."

Mahatma Rajeswar sits under the gaze of Guru Maharaj Ji before addressing a large audience in the SUB last evening. The attentive gathering heard him espouse the Guru's teachings on the importance of a complete spiritual life. (MDC Photo by Alan Chapman)

WTOY Offers Video Services

By DON GLICKSTEIN

Thousands of people are barred from attending UMass basketball games. There is no room for them in Curry Hicks Cage.

Almost 3,000 students sign up for Food Science 101. Two-thirds of them are dropped from the course. There is no room for them in the lecture hall.

A chancellor resigns in a dispute with the president. This is on a Friday. Most students don't hear about it until the following Monday.

Someday, the communications revolution will come to UMass.

***

It was 1969, and two graduate students saw a need.

UMass had a daily newspaper, but the paper was limited to written communication and a few photographs. Once the paper came out every morning, there was a 24-hour delay before more news got out.

Without equipment, with no money, and with only an idea, the students formed a television station — WTOY.

Funded by allocations totalling $23,000 from the undergraduate student senate, WTOY today owns portable cameras, monitors, and video-tape decks. The President of WTOY, senior Ron Massicotte, teaches two video-tape production courses with a total enrollment of 35. Total membership of the organization is 20.

WTOY differs from a commercial television station because it does not broadcast over the air, and thus, is free to produce shows that the F.C.C. might look askance at.

The station is developing a video-tape library which includes UMass Theater productions, concerts, speakers such as Ralph Nader and Ken Kesey, and news events, like the mass arrests in Washington in 1970. In the near future, the station will show a video-tape of the Faculty-Senate debate on the rhetoric requirement to the Board of Trustees.

Students are free to use WTOY equipment for class projects or other creative endeavors. The demand for equipment use is so great that there is a month-long waiting list.

WTOY has tried to make itself visible to the campus by showing its tapes in the Campus Center lobby. Most recently, WTOY rented "Groove Tube", a commercial video-tape satire, and played it daily.

Much of what WTOY can do is limited by the lack of money and by the non-existence of a campus-wide cable-TV system.

Such a cable system would link all the major buildings on campus, and even the dormitories, with a closed-circuit network. A study by the Associate Provost's office for Special Programs estimates that cabling the campus would cost almost $100,000. The advantages, the May, 1972, study notes, are great.

A closed circuit network would allow greater enrollment in lecture courses, because the classes could be taped and shown at a student's convenience, perhaps in the student's dormitory. Special events could be preserved for the archives. Important news events--a chancellor's resignation or the cancellation of classes--could be communicated instantaneously, without the need to wait for the Collegian to appear.

Regional and even national exchanges of tapes and information could be made; Hampshire College, Ohio State, Indiana University, and UConn, to name a few, already have cable-TV systems.

But the money necessary to institute cable-systems has not appeared, and it is unlikely that it will. Until it does, WTOY will continue to expand, but mos of its possibilities will be hampered by its physical capabilities.

(Reprinted from the Greenfield Recorder.)

Ricci Accuses Greenblatt Of 'Deceiving The Public'

By MARK VOGLER

Dr. Benjamin Ricci of Amherst, president of the Belchertown State School Friends' Association, said Sunday night that Massachusetts Mental Health Commissioner Milton Greenblatt's plans for community residences for the mentally retarded is "deceiving the public into false assurance that progress is being made."

According to Ricci, the commissioner has made plans to displace 750 residents from institutions across the Commonwealth during the forthcoming year, placing them in community residences which will be financed by federal funds amounting to $991,000.

Of that sum, Ricci said $291,000 will be deducted by the Massachusetts department for administrative and consultance costs.

The remaining $700,000 would then be divided by seven, the number of Mental Retardation regions in the state. Ricci estimates that each building would cost about $30,000 and would be constructed to house no more than 12 persons.

"Assuming that $30,000 is the purchase price per dwelling, and we divide this figure into 700,000, we come up with 23 plus," Ricci said. "Furthermore, if we multiply 23 times 12, we come up with a figure of 276-the number of residents we can possibly house.

"It's a slight discrepancy," I'd say. In order for the commissioner and the Massachusetts Department of Mental Health to meet their established goal of putting 750 accounted-for people in the community residences, 474 people would have to die this year."

"How the hell can they say they're making progress when the figures don't jive," Ricci declared.

Ricci referred to Greenblatt's plan as "prostitution of the normalization principle" and said the commissioner was handling the lives of human beings with an interest of quantity over quality.

"It's downright criminal that these people can play the game of numbers like they can add, multiply, and divide. They're magicians when it comes to numbers.

"The great shame of it all is that we pay these people thousands of dollars a year to play tricks. In the meantime, we could pay five bucks and see a good magician perform for two hours."

Afro-Am Dept. Makes Statement

Editors Note: The following is a statement from the W.E.B. Dubois Department of Afro-American Studies, Mike Thelwell, Chairman.

Because there have been a number of misconceptions and distortions which have emerged, concerning the position of the W.E.B. DuBois Department of Afro-American Studies on recent developments in the School of Education, I, as Chairman of the Department, have been instrumented to release the following statement, which represents, without dissent, the position of the Department on this question.

We are again witnessing the annual occupation of the School of Education by Third World students. This action, and the developments which led to it, are of sufficient importance to merit the serious concern of all elements of the University community.

The W.E.B. DuBois Department is deeply distressed that the Administration of the School of Education has apparently not learned anything from their confrontation with minority students last spring.

Dean Allen has apparently not learned that the School of Education at the University of Massachusetts is a public educational facility, and not his personal fiefdom, to be run in the arbitrary and high-handed manner of a colonial administrator.

Nor, apparently, has he learned that Third World people will not tolerate his imperious disregard for their expressions of discontent and his ignoring elementary considerations of due process and administrative fairness.

The action by the students came as a result of gross provocation, and while, as members of the faculty of this University, we can not support the seizing of University buildings as a general principle, it is not easy to see that they had any alternative, through normal administrative processes. It is inconceivable and outrageous that any qualified student should be denied admission to any university, much less, a public, state-owned institution, merely because an administrator does not agree with his political views, or what the administrator perceives to be the student's political views.

We call upon the Administration to make it clear to the Dean that he is not running a religious sect, nor a political cell, but a public institution of higher learning. It must be made clear to him that ideological purity in his terms is not a requirement for admission to this, or any other reputable university in the world.

The statements that Dean Allen has been making to the effect that Paul Chandler is "not a good citizen" or that he does not support the "principles of non-violence," or "the goals of the School," apart from being blantantly outrageous, are patently not issues on which an application to graduate school can be decided. The attempt to do this violates every principle of academic freedom and of the administration of public resources that we know. Indeed, Dean Allen's posture in this affair is a profound embarrassment to the reputation and prestige of the entire University.

The Dean of the School of Education MUST be forced to establish clear, visible, accountable processes for the administration of the school, if the entire community is to be spared this kind of confrontation in the future.

He should also be made to show, if any exist, acceptable academic reasons why Paul Chandler cannot be admitted to Graduate School, or else he must be made to admit him immediately.

It is as though, for reasons best known to himself, the Dean, through his arbitrary and arrogant misuse of power, is deliberately provoking these confrontations. Third World people did not come to this University to spend their time and energies playing Dean Allen's games. There must be some agency or machinery somewhere within the structure of the University, which can be evoked to arbitrate matters in the School of Education, so that the University and the Third World community can be spared future crisis of this nature. Dean Allen seems clearly to be unwilling and unable to do this.

Mike Thelwell, Chairman

SW Gets Dog Officer

Dogs and cats wandering around the Southwest Residential Area at UMass after tomorrow may be rounded up by the newly appointed special dog officer.

Robert Ryan, an undergraduate from Amherst, is licensed for one year by the Town of Amherst and paid for by student funds to collect animals, licenses or not, running loose near the residences, either inside or outside the buildings. He will not enter student rooms.

The Southwest Residence Area Student Assembly authorized the action in an attempt to eliminate recent problems with dogs running in packs, biting students and staff members, violating health laws in the dining commons, and creating clean-up problems for the maintenance department. There is a no-pet policy at the University.

Further information on the new pet collection policy may be directed to Mr. John O'Connell, Southwest business manager, 545-1400.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

The office of the DAILY COLLEGIAN is on the second floor of the Student Union on the campus of the University of Massachusetts, zip code 01002. Telephones: 545-2550 (news); 545-0344 (sports); 545-0731 (business).

Second-class postage is paid in Amherst. THE DAILY COLLEGIAN publishes Monday through Friday during the academic year, except during vacation, exam periods or holidays. Accepted for mailing under the authority of an act of March 8, 1879, as amended by an act of June 11, 1943. Subscription rates are $6.00 per semester or $10.00 per year.

Room To Move
Drop-In Center
5-0400, 5-0401

FREE DELIVERY
Weekdays 5:30 p.m. - 12:00 midnite
Weekends 4:00 p.m. - 2 a.m.
Kentucky Fried Chicken
256-8745
Student Special 99¢

Veda Ross, President of the Graduate Student Senate, said at last night's meeting, "If the suit (for not paying the Campus Center fee) is won, then a precedent will be set for the undergrads." (MDC Photo by Jim Pappas)

Grad Sen Supports 3rd World

By FRANK ANTOSIEWICZ

Last night, the Graduate Senate voted to support the four demands of the Third World Alliance and to institute a class action suit against the University for the removal of grad fees charged for the Campus Center.

During a 45-minute span, the 33 people present along with two representatives of the Third World Alliance discussed the School of Education situation. A few senators offered what they said was the chain of events involved in the takeover. They said originally thirty Third World members occupied the building. Then, they were joined by others, who escalated the original demands.

A spokesman for the Alliance said there was no change and "the underlying issue is Dean Allen's attempt to not recognize the Third World Alliance." He went on to say that, "the issue involved is constitutionality--whether a dean has the right to deny entrance to a grad school due to his political views."

The spokesman also said that the senate could help by asking for an investigation into the School of Education, to include such matters as the budget and the hiring procedures.

Grad Senator Jim VanderWyk introduced the bill calling for the adoption of three of the four points, with each of the four to be voted on separately. The four points are: 1. The provost be asked to respond to the Alliance with a written response. 2. The criteria be made public concerning admission to the School of Education graduate school. 3. The official reasons for Paul Chandler's not being accepted be told to Chandler, and 4. Amnesty be granted to those occupying the School of Ed. building.

VanderWyk, the framer of the proposal, favored only passage of the first three points saying, "(Point 4) would turn it into a political cause rather than an educational cause."

A spokesman in favor of point 4 said, "If we are concerned about the issue, then we must be concerned about the people who made it known."

The first three points passed with little opposition, while amnesty passed by a 17-10 margin.

Using a list of alternatives prepared by Student Attorney Richard M. Howland, who was not present at the meeting, the Grad Senate decided in favor of a class action suit against the University and later passed another motion which would relocate the Grad Senate office outside of the Campus Center complex.

Grad Senator, David Henderson filed the motion for the class suit to be instituted. After much discussion as to the consequences especially for Teacher Assistants, which could lose their jobs if they refused to pay the fee, they decided in favor of protesting against the fee.

The three alternatives offered in a report prepared by Howland, were: 1. Sue under the Fourteenth Amendment which deals with due process of law (Howland said in the report that this was the most unreasonable), 2. Put the money in an escrow fund (This entailed withholding the fee by a large number of grads and putting it in a bank account) and 3. Put the money in a symbolic escrow fund (A small number withhold the fee and file a class action suit against the University).

Due to the numbers and risks involved, the senators chose the safer method, whereby they are suing the University as opposed to the second alternative where the University could sue or not allow them to register if they did not pay the fee.

Ms. Veda Ross, the President, said, "If the suit is won, then a precedent will be set for the undergrads." That is, a method for not paying for the Campus Center funding will have been established.

In other action, the Senate passed motions granting $1500.00 for the University Day Care Center and granted funding for the English Dept. Grad Club. A request for funding for the Grad Business Club was tabled until the next meeting, along with the rest of the agenda.

Board To Consider Caucus Date

By TOM BARNES

After a lengthy legal argument with Eric Walgren, who is running for the office of selectman in the 1973 Amherst town election, the Amherst Board of Selectmen moved to consider changing the set dates for the annual town caucus (primary election) and election to take place after students return from intersession, in order that they may participate in the voting.

The selectmen hope to have a decision by next Monday.

Currently, the town caucus is scheduled for January 20th. If it were held as planned, most of the 3000 students registered to vote would be home on vacation and unable to do so. The Board of Selectmen had previously thought that there was nothing they could do for the students who would be home and would miss the vote, since they felt bound, by past legislation, to follow prescribed guidelines which set a specific date for the election. However, Walgren presented a four point reinterpretation of the same memorandum by which the selectmen felt bound, and convinced them that there was no law that bound them to a specific date and that by an original article they had the power to schedule the election any time from January to March and that they weren't bound to schedule it for the Friday following Washington's Birthday.

If Walgren's argument is proved legally sound, the caucus can be changed to give the students the opportunity to participate in the primary elections and that will also change the general election since law requires that it follow the caucus by at least 31 days.

What Walgren pointed out was that the selectmen had overlooked an interpretation of Article 55 of the memorandum which rescinds a previous article taking away the selectmen's power to set the date of the annual election. The controversy is basically over the language of the memorandum, which can be interpreted either way.

The principle behind Walgren's argument is that it is undemocratic for the selectmen to exclude the students from the vote when they have the power to move the election ahead. He said, "The responsibility of democracy is to encourage the electorate to participate, not discourage them. The current approach disenfranchises 25% of the voters (3000 students). As a policy issue, the democratic system has to re-enfranchise the students."

Walgren also said that he felt the election as currently scheduled could be proved illegal and that, "If you have an illegal election, you'll get sued. I'll sue you.'"

In response, Mr. Bouchard of the Board said, "We'd hate to have an illegal election," and Mrs. Eddy, also of the Board said, "I agree that we should change the election. Last year we sat and let it go by."

In closing that part of the agenda, Mrs. Eddy moved that the board of selectmen go on record as desiring to change the date of the election so that the caucus be moved out of intersession to include the student vote.

Mr. Bouchard seconded the motion, but it was made clear by Chairman Howes that, until further notice, the dates for the caucus and election are set and will be followed as scheduled.

Affairs Committee Submits Security Council Proposal

By JAMES GOLD

The Student Affairs Committee of the Student Senate submitted a Security Policy Council proposal to the administration yesterday.

Under the act, if it is accepted by both the senate and the administration, a group of 14 UMass community members would be empowered to establish major policy, review and approve the operating budget, evaluate the director, and establish a grievance procedure for the UMass Security Department.

The fourteen would be made up as follows: one from Union Local 1776, one from the Massachusetts State Employees Association, ten undergraduates including four from the Third World and one from each governance constituency, one faculty, and one graduate student.

In addition the Director of Security and the Associate Director of Security would have ex-officio and non-voting positions on the board. The Chancellor's office would hold veto power over council actions.

The council would also act in an emergency advisory function during disturbances or unusual circumstances.

According to Elliott Sherman, chairman of the Student Affairs committee, "I'm confident the Undergrad Senate will accept it. The whole question," he said, "is whether or not we can pressure the administration into accepting it."

He indicated that administration officials did not like the approval power given to the council. He said that the committee had been negotiating since last April over what would be appropriate.

Sherman called the proposal "responsive to all the constituencies of the community."

Report On OSCAR Says Most Goals Achieved

OSCAR, the new computerized course scheduling system at UMass is successfully doing what it was designed to do--tailoring an administrative function to students' needs in a better way.

In a report released today on OSCAR's initial semester, its designer said that the pioneering system achieved just about all of its goals and would continue to be used with only minor modifications. The designer is William C. Starkweather, coordinator for student personnel systems development for all UMass campuses.

OSCAR (Optional Section Choice with Assignment Regulation) is the country's first computerized scheduling system that not only assigns students to specific class sections, but re-schedules courses added at registration, taking full advantage of openings made possible through course drops. Programmed into the system are such variables as the student's academic major, campus residence and whether he's been denied class access previously because of space limitations.

According to Starkweather, in the main scheduling for the fall semester on Aug. 15, involving 17,454 students and 110,088 course requests, 60 percent of those registering got their complete schedule as requested. Among all students, 84.3 per cent were assigned to the specific section requested; another 13.5 percent were scheduled to an alternate section.

At a re-scheduling of registration course changes on Sept. 6, the report continued, 86 percent (7664) of the requests to add courses were granted, 74 percent as requested and 15 percent to alternate sections. More important, according to Starkweather, was that the system scheduled these 7664 adds while leaving virtually every other student course assignment unchanged.

"This means that the computer successfully simulated an activity previously requiring many people and man hours at a day-long conventional field house add and drop session," Starkweather explained.

Only 0.7 percent or 119 students drew a blank or received no schedule; most of these were scheduled by hand before registration. Also, 1.6 per cent of all requests were dropped as unschedulable; about 7.5 percent of the add and drop transactions were unprocessable because of bad marking and other factors. A high 29 percent of all add requests were rejected because they were for sections already closed, due mostly to inattention to published information on overenrolled, closed, and cancelled courses, Starkweather reported.

"In general students should be very satisfied with OSCAR's efforts on their behalf," he said. "Add and drop activity (a traditional indicator of dissatisfaction) was somewhat below the pre-OSCAR level; we predict some additional reduction of this activity in subsequent semesters through student familiarity with the system and improvements in programming."

What can students do? "The earlier you make up your mind about courses and sections and the earlier you respond, the more efficiently the system works for you," he advised.

Lost dog four month female brown Lab puppy. Call Sam 253-5295.

Wanted:
BUS DRIVERS
U/Mass students with a Class II License who wish to work during Spring '73 Semester. Apply Room 434 S.U. Phone 5-0056 or 5-2086.
Student Senate Transit Service
An Equal Opportunity Employer

In The Nation And The World

Challenger Makes Bull's-Eye Landing

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Two American explorers Monday made a bull's-eye landing on a boulder-strewn volcanic valley of the moon where they are to conduct a scientific treasure hunt for missing links in lunar history.

Man's sixth moon landing, and the last one planned in this century, was logged at 2:55 p.m. EST as Apollo 17 astronauts Eugene A. Cernan and Harrison H. Schmitt skillfully guided their lunar ship Challenger on a long, gliding sweep over mile-high mountains.

"The Challenger has landed," Cernan shouted as the spider-like legs of the lander settled into the black dust of a box canyon named Taurus-Littrow.

"We is here. Man, is we here," he added.

For geologist Schmitt, the first scientist to fly in space, it was the realization of a personal dream. Emotionally, he said:

"This is the majestic moment of my life."

"You can tell America the Challenger is at Taurus-Littrow," Cernan told Mission Control. He wanted the word of their success passed to their crewmate, Ronald E. Evans, flying a solo orbit in command ship America, 60 miles overhead.

The moonmen plan to remain a record 75 hours at Taurus-Littrow, making three outside excursions in their quest for lunar secrets. Most of the first exploration period was to be spent setting up a science station.

Schmitt could hardly contain himself as he gazed out Challenger's window after landing.

"Boy, are we going to have some nice boulders in this area," he reported enthusiastically. "Oh, man, look at that rock over there. It's absolutely incredible."

He said he could hardly wait to start the first excursion later in the day.

Mission Control reported Challenger had landed about 2,000 feet short of a precise landing area, well within the target zone.

Cernan and Schmitt had cast off for their lunar adventure 2-1/2 hours earlier when they separated from America, leaving Evans alone to conduct photographic and scientific experiments for more than three days.

Separation occurred behind the dark side of the moon, out of radio contact. As Challenger reappeared around the eastern rim, Cernan reported:

"We're looking at America the beautiful. We're floating free out here."

At 2:43 p.m., Cernan and Schmitt triggered the lunar craft's engine to brake their speed from 3,800 miles per hour to start the tricky 12-minute drop to the surface.

As on some previous landing approaches, Challenger started out slightly high and off track, but the computer driven guidance system soon had them on a perfect course.

On Tuesday at 5:03 p.m. Cernan and Schmitt will start their second seven-hour surface excursion, a 4.5-mile drive to a mountain they call the South Massif where they may collect the oldest material yet found on the moon.

Truman Resting Quietly

KANSAS CITY (AP)–Harry S. Truman rested quietly without pain Monday, but doctors cautioned that he "still is serious and will continue to be so for an indefinite period."

Physicians at Research Hospital and Medical Center, where the 88-year-old former president was taken by ambulance last Tuesday, were keeping a close watch on irregularities in Truman's heartbeat.

The hospital said he was receiving continuous oxygen by face mask to reduce the stress on his heart, which has had to work overtime since his hospitalization with lung congestion and bronchitis.

Truman was placed on the critical list last Wednesday after development of heart and kidney complications and a failure to respond to antibiotics. His condition was upgraded to serious Sunday after he spent a restful night.

"Truman seems to be in a semiconscious state but can be aroused at any time and speak in a perfectly lucid manner," Dr. Wallace Graham, Truman's long-time personal physician, said in a statement. He is in no pain and is usually in a slightly elevated position in bed, the statement said.

A hospital spokesman said Truman continued to receive intravenous medication to maintain his body chemistry. His lungs were said to be relatively free of fluid.

In Brief...

Mark Van Doren Dead at 78

TORRINGTON, Conn. (AP) — Pulitzer Prize-winning poet Mark Van Doren, 78, head of a prolific literary family and teacher to many successful authors, died Sunday night.

A Cornwall resident, Van Doren entered Charlotte Hungerford Hospital last Thursday with an undisclosed ailment. The hospital said he died at 11:40 p.m.

Soviets Tour Woods Hole Institute

BOSTON (AP) — A delegation of seven Soviet oceanographers met with officials and scientists and toured facilities yesterday at the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution.

The Russian scientists will remain at Woods Hole to visit the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's National Marine Fisheries Service Atlantic Center Tuesday before leaving for Columbia University.

Kissinger And Tho Meet Again

PARIS (AP) — Henry A. Kissinger and Hanoi Politburo member Le Duc Tho have quickened the pace of their secret peace talks with an agreement to convene three separate sessions Tuesday.

The two top negotiators met for four hours in suburban Neuilly Monday and later announced they would continue their talks Tuesday afternoon. For the first time since their secret bargaining reopened Nov. 20, the session will be preceded by two meetings of lower-level officials.

There was speculation that the added preliminary talks indicated a settlement might be imminent. But both sides maintained a blanket of secrecy.

The state-controlled French radio and television network, quoting dispatches from Peking, said Premier Chou En-lai told newsmen Monday: "An agreement could be signed in Paris in the next two or three days."

The newspaper Le Monde reported from Saigon that a cease-fire proclamation was expected by Dec. 20.

The U.S. delegation announced one of Tuesday's two preliminary meetings will be in Neuilly.

William J. Porter, head of the U.S. delegation at the semi-public peace talks, and William Sullivan, deputy assistant secretary of state for Southeast Asian affairs, will lead the U.S. delegation. Xuan Thuy, Hanoi delegate at the semi-public talks, and Deputy Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach will represent North Vietnam.

The other meeting, in a North Vietnamese villa in Choisy-Le-Roi, will be the same group of experts who met Sunday while Kissinger and Tho took a day off. The American delegation will be headed by John Negroponte.

The experts are discussing "technical details" apparently concerning matters not under major dispute.

Monday's Kissinger-Tho meeting was the 13th since they began efforts three weeks ago to revise and conclude the cease-fire agreement they drafted in October.

The meeting began and ended with the usual lengthy handshakes and broad smiles from both sides. Porter took part for the first time, replacing Kissinger's top aide, Gen. Alexander M. Haig, Jr., who flew to Washington over the weekend to give Nixon a first-hand report.

Vo Dong Giang, member of the Viet Cong Central Committee, flew in from Moscow.

ELEANOR F. ROBERTS
PERMANENT REMOVAL OF SUPERFLUOUS HAIR
*Member & Past President, Mass. Assoc. of Electrologists
*Member & Past Pres. Amer. Electrolysis Assoc.
*Member & Past Director Electrolysis Sec. Amer
*State Lic. Electrologist & Instructor
*Past Comm. Board of Reg. of Electrologists
*Professional Electrology Consultant
*Dean of E.F. Roberts Institute of Electrology
*Male and female electrologists in attendance
*By appointment only
*Evening appointments arranged
Other offices at Boston, Framingham, Greenfield, Holyoke, Lowell, Pittsfield, Mass., Manchester, N.H.
14 CENTER ST. SUITE 316 NORTHAMPTON 586-3345

LYNN
is as beautiful as she sounds
Tuesday Evenings
at
THE Rusty Scupper

STATION MEETING
TONIGHT
8:00 p.m.
C.C. 176
WMUA
91.1 FM
free form / informative radio

an unusual 'BEFORE' XMAS SALE
starts Wed. 13th
SHOES for men & women
good selection of styles
SRO
SANDLER
STUDIO 26
BATES
VERDE
DONNATE MARRONE
10.95
the SHOE-BIN
187 NORTH PLEASANT ST.
AMHERST, MASS.

WEEDING OUT THE FOE-South Vietnamese soldiers rest near machine guns on a landing craft as other troops search the Mekong Delta area for the foe. Operation is part of a program to curb enemy infiltration of the northern Delta from bases in Cambodia. (AP)

N. Viet Forces Ambushed

SAIGON (AP)-Alerted by a defector, South Vietnamese forces lay in wait Monday and then attacked a North Vietnamese battalion infiltrating from Cambodia northwest of Saigon, military sources reported. The enemy suffered heavy losses in the fierce battle.

The South Vietnamese sources said the North Vietnamese defected Sunday night and told military authorities where the enemy battalion could be found in the jungled area. South Vietnamese planes spotted the battalion, launched a series of air strikes and called in artillery. Ground forces then attacked nine miles south of the provincial capital of Tay Ninh, which is about 50 miles northwest of Saigon.

The sources said the North Vietnamese battalion was based in Svay Rieng, the easternmost province of Cambodia, and had been in Tay Ninh less than 24 hours.

Svay Rieng is in the Parrot's Beak, a jumping off point for North Vietnamese units attempting to infiltrate the Saigon area. Tay Ninh is near the Parrot's Beak.

In apparent response to a possible enemy offensive on Saigon, the U.S. Command reported sending 13 B52 strikes into an arc 23 to 48 miles northeast and northwest of the capital.

85 Cubans Land In Miami

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Waving, clapping their hands and shouting "muchas gracias," 85 Cuban refugees landed in Miami Monday aboard the first "freedom flight" since the Castro government suspended the program last May.

"I've waited five years to join my relatives," one elderly woman said in Spanish as the refugees filed off the Eastern Air Lines prop-jet which carried them on the 45-minute flight from Veradero, a resort city 70 miles east of Havana.

The group included 33 men, 47 women and 5 children. Most of the refugees were more than 50 years old, and three elderly passengers left the plane in wheelchairs.

The U.S. State Department said the flight was the first of 40 which will operate on a daily basis for five days each week for the next eight weeks.

Cuba had halted the flights May 12, saying not enough people were on the waiting list. Since then, the government has said that some 3,200 persons have requested to make the trip.

The flights were a regular fixture from 1965 until August 1971, and then were continued on an irregular basis until May. More than 279,000 Cubans have taken the flights.

The refugees were taken to Freedom House, a U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare facility which processes arriving refugees.

UN To Study Terrorism

UNITED NATIONS (AP)- A United Nations committee buried prospects of early action against international terrorism Monday by approving a nonaligned proposal that the issue be studied instead.

The General Assembly's legal committee voted 76 to 34 for the Arab-supported study resolution. Sixteen countries abstained.

A similar outcome is expected in the assembly itself, since the legal committee is a full-membership body.

The nonaligned resolution, sponsored by Algeria, Zambia and 14 other countries, establishes a special U.N. committee to recommend "possible cooperation for the speedy elimination" of the international terrorist problem.

It won over a Western-backed measure introduced by Italy, Britain and 12 other countries asking the International Law Commission, a world body of jurists, to prepare an antiterrorist treaty.

U.S. Ambassador W. Tapley Bennett Jr. said the nonaligned resolution "is conspicuously silent" on legal measures against terrorism. Its adoption, he said, meant nations will have to act outside the world organization against terrorism and "the United Nations will lose what ought to be its primary role on this world problem."

Britain also opposed the nonaligned resolution. British delegate J.R. Freeland said it was "unspecific, ambivalent and lacking in urgency," adding that Britain would continue to seek international measures "either through...the United Nations or, if necessary, through other machinery."

The United States gave up Friday on its bid for immediate U.N. action, and thew its support to the Western-backed proposal.

Price Controls May Continue

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon Monday disclosed he will seek extension of wage-price controls beyond their April 30 expiration date and will freeze new hiring and promotions as well as pay increases for executives in the federal government.

Treasury Secretary George P. Shultz made known the long-awaited presidential decision on continuation of the wage-price control system now slightly more than a year old. But the secretary said consultations will begin immediately to determine how the control system will be changed.

The series of consultations will be held with people from labor, management, Congress and the agencies which control wages and prices from day to day, Shultz told reporters at the White House.

Nixon has also decided that he can, and is determined to, hold federal spending in the current fiscal year to $250 billion, Shultz said. This would be accomplished by cutting back spending through withholding money appropriated by Congress.

At present, the fiscal 1973 budget is about $8 billion to $9 billion over the amount sought by the White House.

The freeze on new federal hiring and promotions will last until the new budget is sent to Congress in January, Shultz said, and will be accompanied by very substantial cuts in the White House staff.

Shultz said the freeze on pay increases for federal executives applies not only to the executive branch, but to Congress and to the federal judiciary as well. He said it would last through 1973.

The freeze on executive pay is made possible because Congress named a commission to study the matter. Shultz said the President has asked the commission to make a report by June 30 of next year and any salary increases would be contained in the budget going to Congress early in 1973.

Shultz ruled out a return to voluntary controls on wages and prices in the near future.

Open every day next to Weird Harold's
Don't forget your PET this Christmas!
A large selection of
Pet Stockings & Toys!
VACATION FEEDERS
New Arrivals
Boas, Huge Parrots, Exciting New Salt Water Fish

Henry M. Gordon Memorial Lecture Series
"A FAREWELL TO AMERICAN JEWRY"
DOV GORDON
Tonight! 12 December, 1972
Colonial Lounge 6:30
Discussion and social hour following the lecture.
Sponsored by Concerned Jewish Students

Join us at
The Pub
on
New Year's Eve
for a Party with
D.J.
Open Buffet - Open Bar
$30 per couple
8 p.m. to 2 a.m.
Call 549-1200 for information — Call Early!

Take a Break from the Normal Hum-Drum Fare
SEE — HEAR
BILL STAINES
IN CONCERT
Tuesday Evening 9:00 Presented by
December 19 $1.25 W M U A 91.1
Tickets are extremely limited and will be on sale on the CC Concourse Mon. - Wed. (Dec. 11, 12 & 13 ONLY.

ROTC Opening To Women

Associated Press

Imagine middle class, American college girls shooting M16 rifles, flying jet fighter planes, scrubbing floors for inspection and marching in military parades.

It is happening now as the armed forces open college ROTC programs to women.

Even in New England, an area which the secretary of the Army recently called anti-military, women are marching to the military drum.

Since 1968 the number of male students in college ROTC programs has declined dramatically, but in the same few years the number of women in the programs has jumped from six in 1969 to about 1,700 this year.

Most female ROTC students are in the Air Force program which was originally started in a few schools in 1969. Women are now allowed in every Air Force ROTC program in the country.

The Army and Navy have each started pilot programs this year. The Army has 209 women in 10 schools and the Navy has 17 in four schools.

Male and female students in the ROTC programs undergo essentially the same training. During the school year, training consists mainly of classes and marching drills. Each student must attend a summer training camp between the sophomore and junior year of college before he makes any formal commitment to serve in the military after college.

Elsie Wilson, 23, a junior at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, was at the Air Force summer camp this year, one of the first women from a New England school to attend the camp.

She compared the co-educational summer training in Montgomery, Ala., to a "cross between a Girl Scout camp and a parochial school."

"There were fun times like the day we marched to the old Mickey Mouse theme song, but there were rules and regulations, too. We even had to wear pastel underwear."

"The first day," she said, "I tidied my room and even dusted, thinking that I had outdone myself. I soon learned that wasn't enough. They wanted us to wax floors, wash windows and remove dust from wierd places like the top of the door frame."

Elsie's camp unit included 23 men and six women, about the average ratio at the camp.

The day, for all cadets, started at about 5:20 a.m. with reveille followed by calisthenics, breakfast and inspection. During the day the cadets attended classes, marched, drilled, paraded, practiced with firearms and played games like volleyball and softball.

"Sports caused some confusion," Elsie said. "They didn't know what to do with women."

Poor Richard's Poll

Sorry to say we've comprised a standard list of the top ten solo artists and rock groups on the tiers of today's music scene. Few of our favorites appear here but there's no need to run through hundreds when in actuality the results will enhance one of these mentioned below.

What we'd like you to do is simply circle your top three, in no particular order, from each of the two categories and submit your entry to either the Collegian office or one of the two ballot boxes located on the Lobby desk in the Student Union and information desk of the Campus Center. The results will be published in Monday's edition of Poor Richard's.

1. Rolling Stones
2. Jethro Tull
3. Who
4. Moody Blues
5. Santana
6. Grateful Dead
7. Chicago
8. Alice Cooper
9. Allman Brothers
10. Grand Funk
11. Other

1. Bob Dylan
2. Elton John
3. Cat Stevens
4. Joni Mitchell
5. Joan Baez
6. John Lennon
7. James Taylor
8. Neil Young
9. Van Morrison
10. Carole King
11. Other

Fund Cutback Protested

BOSTON (AP)-Massachusetts Welfare Commissioner Steven A. Minter planned a trip to Washington Tuesday to protest with other welfare administrators a threatened cutback in federal aid.

He will attend an emergency meeting of the National Association of State Welfare Administrators, called after the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare announced it will hold back the portion of its assistance payments that goes out to ineligible recipients.

The cutback, scheduled for Jan. 1, 1973, could cost Massachusetts $28.5 million in federal funds over the next 18 months, the department said.

HEW said it would withhold the money it calculated would be misspent on ineligible payments or overpayments.

"It's a buck-passing thing," said Minter. "It's a way of saving federal revenue, but only by making the states pick up the difference."

Regional HEW officials said reports for the last six months of 1971 showed 4.7 per cent of Massachusetts recipients for Aid for Dependent Children were ineligible and 22.3 per cent were being overpaid.

Ed. School Petition

A RESOLUTION:

In seeking to take "a firm and unambiguous position" regarding the admission of Paul Chandler, we the undersigned:

1. support Dwight Allen as Dean of the School of Education,
2. disagree with Dean Allen's decision to veto the admission of Mr Chandler.
3. encourage Mr. Chandler to pursue the process of appeal.

James Carmody	Assistant Professor	Don Carew	Professor
David Day	Assoc Professor	Jack Hruska	Asst. Professor
Ann Lieberman	Assistant Professor	Emma Cappelluzzo	Assoc. Professor
Edward Harris	Lecturer	Jeanie Crosby	Lecturer
Wilesse Comissiong	Instructor	William Tutman	Assoc. Professor
Robert Wuerthner	Assistant Professor	Roy Williams	Lecturer
Richard Schaye	Lecturer	Glenn Hawkes	Asst Professor
Michael Greenebaum	Lecturer	Philip DeTurk	Asst Professor
Horace Reed	Professor	Patrick Sullivan	Assoc Professor
		Fred Preston	Asst. Professor

This list is incomplete, and additional School of Education faculty signatures are being solicited.

Infirmary
(In An Emergency)
(54) 5-2671

Meeting Today

Russell Johnson of the American Friends Service Committee will visit Amherst this week. He will speak on his recent visit to the People's Republic of China at Amherst College, Merrill Science Center Lecture 2, today at 7:30 p.m., and at Hampshire College, Main Academic Building, East Lecture Hall, on Thursday, December 14th, at 8 p.m.

Russell Johnson spent five years in Indochina coordinating diplomatic seminars for the American Friends Service Committee. He is acquainted with Prince Sihanouk of Cambidia. His lectures in the Amherst Area are part of the Indochina Film and Lecture Series sponsored by UCF.

Wednesday
Nite
FAT
Next Wednesday
Dec. 20th
FLIGHT
at the Rusty Nail
Inn
Rte. 17 Sunderland
665-1937

ROOM TO MOVE
Campus Drug
Drop-In Center
CALL 5-0400
24 HOURS A DAY
7 DAYS A WEEK

UNIVERSITY STORE Campus Center
End of Semester Sale
BSR

RTS-40A
— 40 Watt Receiver . . . 179.95
— 310/X Full Size Turntable . . . 80.00
— SS-2 Speakers . . . 70.00
Mfg. List $329.95 Sale Price $183.00

RTS-30
— 30 Watt AM/FM Receiver . . . 129.95
— 310x Turntable . . . 80.00
— SS-1 Speakers . . . 60.00
Mfg. List $269.95 Sale Price $145.00

RTS-28A
— 20 Watt Receiver/Tape Player & Speakers . . . 209.95
— 2000/x Turntable . . . 39.50
Mfg. List $249.45 Sale Price $138.00

RTS-28 — Special Demo Unit — Special Sale Price — $129.00
Mfg. List $279.45

RTS-21
— 20 Watt Receiver . . . 129.95
— 6500/x Turntable . . . 59.50
Mfg. List 189.45 Sale Price $119.00

RTS-20A
— 20 Watt Receiver . . . 129.95
— 2000/x Turntable . . . 39.50
169.45 Sale Price $106.00

TD8S - 8 Track Playback Unit Mfg. List $49.95 Sale Price $29.00
EP-1 Stereo Headphone 10' coil cord w/jack Mfg. list $34.95 Sale Price $18.75
RT8-70 Blank 8 Track Cartridge (70 min. play) Buy One at Regular Price - Get One FREE

The coupon for RCA, SCM & BSR is void on BSR products during this sale. Remember — quantities are limited.

RCA Stereo Unit Turntable, Receiver & Speakers
VS1400 Mfg. List 139.95 Sale Price $89.95

RCA Portable Phono
VZP13 $17.45

RCA Portable Phono
VZP21 $26.25

Great for Language Records!! Great for Kids!!

SKI
CLUB MEETING
TUES., 8:00 p.m.
DEC. 12 MAHAR
Deadline to sign up
on intersession trips

Rudmans Respond To 3rd World Charges

(Editor's Note: This letter is by Masha and Sy Rudman in response to the Third World statement published in yesterday's Collegian.)

My wife and I regret that the portion of the Third World text published in the December 11 issue of the Daily Collegian referring to us was both a misrepresentation of the event and a misinterpretation of our intentions. We appreciate this opportunity to respond to the text's allegations.

We were first informed that the group had publicized the incident by a reporter asking for a response to Rochelle Chandler's radio statement. In this statement she claimed that we had "broken into" the School of Education with the "obvious intentions" of provoking an incident. She chose further to imply that these inferred intentions were of a violent nature by saying I "pulled out" a pair of scissors and "kicked out a window." The radio stations which broadcast that statement were fair enough to accept and broadcast my statement replying to those charges.

The following is the statement I made for the radio: "My wife, who is a School of Education faculty member, and I wish to state categorically that it was not our intent to create or provoke an incident but simply to exercise our right of entry and egress. Furthermore, a window was broken but certainly not kicked in.

My wife and I had gone to the School of Education building to obtain from her office materials which she needed in order to prepare for her Monday classes. To enter (which I believe was certainly my wife's right) I snapped a rope which someone had used to tie the door shut. After leaving her office we decided, partly because of the weather conditions, to leave by a door nearer to where we had parked our car. On our way through the halls we passed one group of people who said nothing to us and to whom we said nothing. A second group of people, upon seeing us, blocked the way out and attempted to physically restrain me by putting their hands against my chest, raised their fists as if to punch me, called me a mother-fucker several times, and grabbed hold of my coat. I asked if they intended to hit me and if they were ready to pay for my coat if it was torn. I also told them they had no right to restrain me and that my wife and I were leaving the building. And we simply kept walking, while three of the males continued in their attempt to stop us. At about this point we were told that if we wanted to leave we had to do so by the main entrance. Again I replied they had no right whatsoever to tell us how to leave the building and we kept right on walking.

When we arrived at the double doors by which we wanted to leave, in order to cut the wire tying it shut, I took out a scissors which I had taken from my wife's office. I had brought it with me since I had a reasonable expectation that the door would be tied shut. I cut what I thought was the only wire tying one side of the door shut but failed to notice that someone had wired a chair to the crossbars in such a way that when I opened one of the double doors the leg of the chair broke the pane of glass in the door. I then cut the chair free and my wife and I left the building.

In sum, I believe that part of the statement read by Rochelle Chandler which related to my wife and me was inaccurate, and distorted the event, and reflected a double-think version of the rights involved. Both they and we had the right to be in that building but they had no right to physically restrain and verbally abuse us."

In addition to this statement we now feel it is necessary for us to respond to the further allegations, distortions, and name-calling which appeared in the Collegian yesterday. Of course my wife's and my action was "no accident." She takes her teaching commitment seriously and needed materials from her office in order to fulfill that commitment. We therefore went and obtained those materials. Furthermore, since the University has seen fit to give my wife an office in that building, together with a key for both the office and building it is legitimate for her to "gain entrance" into the school on weekends without either having to request permission or to inform anyone of her intentions to do so.

For me, personally, the most abusive and distorted portion of the Third World Text was the statement that I "attempted to exemplify (my) 'superman' complex by pushing a 110 lb. woman, repeatedly asking 'are you going to hit me?', and kicking out a glass door pane." Not once did I raise a hand or threaten anyone. I refused to be intimidated by the three males who continuously pushed me, pulled me, made threatening gestures with their fists, and called me distasteful names. I simply tried to keep walking toward the door. It was to these individuals, not to Rochelle Chandler that I addressed my question, "Are you going to hit me?" I felt that they were in the process of losing control over themselves and needed to be made aware of what they were doing. The question could hardly have been addressed to Rochelle Chandler because, since she was standing behind me, I could not see her. When I was told that I had been pushed into her I apologized to her, and everyone present heard me do so. I added that I did not want to engage in any physical acts, but that my wife and I simply wanted to leave the building. It was at this point, and in the manner described in my radio statement that the glass pane in the door was shattered. I did not kick it.

It is a sad commentary on the academic world where reason should reign that physical and verbal abuse, accompanied by gross distortion of fact, can so easily take control.

Meeting on Jobs

The third floor lounge of Herter Hall will be the scene of a panel discussion centering on the foreign language job market.

Also to be discussed will be a comparison of the student teaching experience with the first year of actual teaching. Featured on the program will be three graduates of UMass who have been teaching French professionally since September.

The program should be of interest to prospective teachers of all foreign languages. Festivities begin promptly at 7:15 p.m. Tues., Dec. 12.

SAUNA
(It's Healthy)
$ 2/group
Jenny Lind
Motor Lodge
247-5601 — Northampton

NOTICE

For those students who will be staying on campus, or coming back early, during the January break, the following snack bars will be able to serve you their usual bill of fare, including hot meals, at the following days and times:

Whitmore Snack Bar: Normal hours and services.

Hampden and Worcester Snack Bars: Open on weekdays from Dec. 22 to Jan 1, from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. Open on a seven day basis from Jan. 1 to Jan. 22, from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Hampden, Worcester Munchys: Same day operations as the snack bars, from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Hampden Games Room: Same day operations as the snack bars, from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Dining Commons: The dining commons will re-open for board plans on Jan. 22.

It should be noted that all of the above facilities will be closed on Dec. 25 and Jan. 1.

We suggest that you clip this notice out and save it for reference during the semester break.

BRANDY'S 1
1110 Commonwealth Ave. Boston, Mass.
CLEAR SKY
Dec. 13 → 17
19 → 23
9:00 → 2:00

HIGH FLYING HARMONIES, UNRELENTING MUSIC, SOME OF THE MOST MOVING ROCK AND ROLL POCO'S EVER RECORDED. FROM ONE OF THE TIGHTEST BANDS IN THE COUNTRY, AN ALBUM YOU'RE GOING TO SEE AND HEAR EVERYWHERE. NEW POCO. ON EPIC RECORDS AND TAPES

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

BOARD OF EDITORS

EDITOR IN CHIEF James E. Gold
MANAGING EDITOR Nathan Gorenstein
BUSINESS MANAGER William L. Manburg
EXECUTIVE EDITOR Stephen G. Tripoli
NEWS EDITOR Donald J. Bishop
SPORTS EDITOR William E. Ballou
PHOTO EDITOR Gib Fullerton
FINE ARTS EDITOR Robert Nesti

ASST. MANAGING EDITOR Steve Fine
ADVERTISING MANAGER Jeanne Bauge
ASST. PHOTO EDITOR Alan Chapman
ASST. SPORTS EDITOR Roy Lyons

TODAY'S STAFF

ISSUE EDITOR Tom Borkowski
NIGHT STAFF Christine Olthoff, Jerry Lazar
EDITORIAL LAYOUT Jeannette Martineau
SPORTS Geoffrey Kurinsky
DARKROOM Alan Chapman, Jim Pappas, Roberta Martone
AD LAYOUT Lisa Saunders

Undergraduate newspaper of the University of Massachusetts. The Staff is responsible for its content and no faculty members or administrators read it for accuracy or approval prior to publication.

Unsigned editorials represent the view of this paper. They do not necessarily reflect the views of the faculty, administration, or student body as a whole. Signed editorials, columns, reviews, cartoons, and letters represent the personal views of the authors.

The Collegian subscribes to the Associated Press and the Liberation News Service. Publication of their material does not constitute en-

COLLEGIAN STAFF

NEWS STAFF: Don Bishop, News Editor, Bob Scheier, Bob Medeiros, Bob Callahan, Mark Vogler, Jim Dempsey, Don Glickstein, Susan Hubbard, Shelley Lauzon, Steve Seche, Kevin Kevit, John Donnelly, Laura Dubowski, Steve Fisher, Mary Goodyear, Hugh Owen, Ethel Harris, Pam Hylek, Joanne Resteghini, Joyce Kosofsky, Avis Yuni, A.J. Bastarache, Arnie Newberger, Roberta Martone, Buffy Spencer, Jeff Levin, Wait Laliberte, Kevin Downey, Barbara Voorhees, Carolyn Caldwell, Cindy Gonet, Pam Pimpao, Gary Twardzik, Steve Ruggles, Pat Crowley, Brian Coyne, Pat Roberts, Kerry Melio, Anne Collington, Imelda Rojak, Susan Hogan, Chris Rossamando, Susan Habeeb, Mary Sheridan, Patrick Coffey, Susan Shepard, Nancy Basmajian, Frances Brock, Neil Simonds, Tim Harrigan, Kent Best, Shelley Bakst, Jerry Altman, Marilou Barsam, Jeannette Martineau, Linda Craven.
ISSUE EDITORS: Jerry Lazar, Tom Borkowski, Steve Ferrara, Mary Vorderer, Bob Scheier.
NIGHT STAFF: Dick Fitzgerald, Joe Vinsky, Sharon Lempicki, Pam Hylek, Christine Olthoff, Jan Liva, Gail McDonnell, Richard Abaid, Jan Alexander, Caroline Malka.
BUSINESS STAFF: Bill Manburg, Business Manager, Jeanne Bauge, Advertising Manager. CIRCULATION: Tom Miller, Mike Saleeba. AD LAYOUT: Lisa Saunders, Shelley Sack, Jan Auman, Norma Friedman, Nadine Gray. AD REPRESENTATIVES: Jeff Billig, John Mullen, James Longstreet, Richard Rothstein, Kevin O'Malley, Joan Plante, Michael Wallace, Laura Sicklick, Michael Shor, Brent Wilkes, John Edmund.
EDITORIAL STAFF: Steve Tripoli, Executive Editor, Ed Bryant, Ed Fogarty, Gabe Imperato, Randy Shuldiner, Jeannette Martineau, Reid Fishman, Steve Anderson, George Daniel, Matt Tackeff, Dan Caruso, Andrew Barraford, Don Glickstein, Bill Foster.
SPORTS STAFF: Bill Ballou, Sports Editor, Roy Lyons, Asst. Editor, Earle Barroll, Dan Kamal, Marty Kelley, Bob Estelle, Walt Powers, John Bock, Doug Fidler, Geoffrey Kurinsky, Steve Crowe, Avis Yuni, Diane Bissonette, Frank Antosiewicz, David Yoffe, Mark Vogler, Bill King.
PHOTO STAFF: Gib Fullerton, Photo Editor, Alan Chapman, Asst. Editor, Steve Smith, Peter Manera, John Neister, Steve Schmidt, Mark Majeski, Steve Schuster, Bill Beggs, Pam Perry, Kevin Mack, Marcia Lappin, Doug Hurst, Sue Goldbaum, Kevin Erkkila, George Withers, Steve Ruggles, Steve Quigley, Jim Pappas.
POOR RICHARD'S STAFF: Bob Nesti, Fine Arts Editor, Ken Sulin, Jim Lavrakas, Co-Editors, Brian Dailey, Jeffrey Malenza, Carl Greenburg, Ed Smith, Steve Feld, Mike Kostek, Christine Sullivan, Bill Densmore, Ed Bryant, Gauri Bhatia, Howard Bloom, Steve Ferber, Mark Vogler, Shelley Bakst, Donna Roberts, Richard Bean, Galen Tinder, Michael Ferry, Gary Gomes, Carl Kaliszewski, Ellen Colbert, William Stefano.

Andrew E. Barraford

A Neglected Responsibility

UNIVERSITY vs XYZ

(This is the text of a preliminary motion made to the Non-Residential Court, Wednesday, Dec. 6th, 1972.)

I am making the motion for dismissal of this case on the grounds that this trial has for 'capricious' and 'unnecessary' reasons been delayed.

My client was served a subpoena and fulfilled his responsibility to the community by appearing for his trial. The portion of the Student Judiciary that my client was to go before, Non-Residential Court, with an equal responsibility to the community and the defendant did not appear fully to ensure the right of my client to a quorum (three or more justices to hear his cases).

I claim that this was a capricious delay by the synonym from Webster's Collegiate Dictionary. (Peppers vs. Daniels, 1969. – State vs. Beckworth.)

"Caprice emphasizes lack of motivation and suggests willfulness."

There has been a lack of motivation, or neglect with the maintenance of this part of the Student Judiciary. In a negative manner willful injustices are occurring by this neglect. Operationally, it is damaging the general fairness of the court system.

Secondly, I do not insist that there was an unreasonable delay, but an unnecessary delay (Wheeler vs. State, 1966.) Whether caused by the Student Judiciary or the political forces which effect the performance of the Student Judiciary, there is a constant pattern that a full quorum cannot be met by this court (Non-Residential).

Lastly, I contend that, although there has been a delay of only one week through this situation, this constitutional guaranty "depends on circumstances" (Hall vs. State, 1968). The circumstances warrant that a continuing injustice and incapability by the court to operate fairly, is taking place.

I submit as evidence copies of the Sixth Amendment from the Constitution of the United States, requiring a "fair and speedy trial", as evidence in support of my case. Also I wish to use as further evidence the court that is in session at this moment. (Two Non-Residential Justices were in a patched quorum, with one borrowed Justice from another court.) Decision: Case Dismissed (unanimous decision 3-0)

COMMENT: The portion of the Student Judiciary that is in question is the Non-Residential Court. It is the work-horse court of the Student Judiciary, taking all of the shoplifting cases from the University Store. In its weekly sessions over the semester, I can remember this court putting together a quorum two times out of its own Non-Residential Justices. Early in the semester there was a resignation and other losses in the court personnel, whose replacement has not been effected.

There should be five justices in this court. I have seen no more than two in the last two months. Three make a quorum. The Judiciary is the responsibility of the Student Senate. It has now reached the point of being a neglected responsibility.

Andrew Barraford is an MDC Editorial Columnist.

Steve Anderson

Change The System

Those advocates of women's rights who demand equal pay and equal chance for jobs seem to be missing the point. Women deserve equal pay for equal work. They deserve an equal chance to develop a career. The present economic and social system hinders the development of women's talents and will continue to do so.

At the present time the unemployment rate is about 5.2%. President Nixon thinks this is a decent rate since it's close to his ideal rate of five percent. Democrats usually favor a lower employment rate but still not full employment. Unemployment is maintained to avoid a high rate of inflation. This unemployment is not a true picture. Some groups of people have been restricted from the labor force. Some people have given up looking for jobs and have left the labor force. People who use to work in mills around Lowell often fall into this category. There just aren't any jobs for people with their skills so they give up looking.

If the American economy needs a number of its workers out of jobs to assure a low inflation rate and it has a hard time providing jobs for those who do work, it could not handle a flood of new workers caused by the liberation of large numbers of women. The labor force would double if all women went out to look for work right now. The present system of employment could not handle that and the unemployment rate would be high enough to scare even Richard Nixon.

It is unrealistic to assume that all women will at some point become liberated and go out and look for jobs. Many women will reject the message of women's rights. They will prefer to remain in the kitchen. Some women will accept the message of the different organizations but will want to remain in the house. They will realize that their housework is equal to their husband's work in terms of the family. They may remain at home because they are too old to look for work or because they do not have any valuable skills. Women who do seek unemployment would be skilled it is hoped.

The skills most women have are defined as women's skills. They are nurses, secretaries, teachers and dining commons ladies. They are not plumbers, doctors or engineers. The reason people seek work that is defined by their sex is the way they were raised. Most of us were brought up to believe that there are important sex roles. The man is the strong husband who works forty hours a week to provide for his family. The woman is the mother-wife who works at home to make life better for her husband and kids. The man's job is important; in most cases it is more important than the kids or the marriage. Men work to provide the necessities for the kids, the women raise them. If the woman has a job it is of secondary importance. She stays home with the kids if they are sick. She arranges her working schedule so she can be home when the children get home from school. Women hardly ever earn more than their husbands. In fact if they do it is considered a crisis in the marriage according to many marriage counselors.

People who advocate equal job opportunities for women should look at the entire system. Under our present economic system equal rights can only be achieved over a long period of time. Women should have to be absorbed into the labor force much the same way immigrants were. There aren't very many professional women. Most women have skills in low income fields. Until women can achieve equal wages with men they cannot achieve equality in a system that defines people by what they earn and own. If women are to train for the high paying jobs they must reject the traditional ideas about women's work being of marginal importance. Society must no longer put a stigma on the professional women with a family. Wives should no longer be afraid of embarrassing their husbands by earning more than they do.

The process of giving women their rights will be a very gradual occurrence under the present economic and social systems. Just look how long it took for women to get the right to vote and how long it has taken women to use their vote effectively. It seems that the present social and economic system must be changed before women can achieve equality.

Steve Anderson is an MDC Editorial Columnist.

Racist Decision

By MICHAEL PATTERSON

Once again the oppressor has forced us to take drastic action. Dwight Allen's refusal to admit Paul Chandler to the School of Education Grad School can be termed as nothing other than an overt racist decision. Since when is a student judged academically unqualified on the basis of his political ideologies?

Let's take a look at the situation. Allen himself has reportedly admitted that Paul Chandler is a brilliant student and academically qualifed for the Graduate Program at the School of Education. But, the dean, owner of several plantations in racist South Africa insists that Chandler's Political ideologies are incompatible with the philosophy of the School of Education. Doesn't he mean incompatible with his own philosophy?

Allen believes that alternate education should be reflected in alternate modes of education, a kind of touch me feel me concept involving sensitivity sessions, etc. In short, he would like to see minority students in the School of Ed. play all day. Did you know that 75 percent of Allen's funds for the School of Ed. are obtained by his having Third World People enrolled there?

Chandler believes in Alternate Education through alternate content. Political Education, the right of all Third World People to define ourselves, to know who we are and who the oppressor is.

If Dwight is the liberal he claims to be why does having a Paul Chandler in the School of Ed. scare him?

The UMass School of Education is reputed to be the finest in this country. Third World Students don't flock to the school from virtually every continent in the world to participate in sensitivity sessions. We are here to equip ourselves with the skills and knowledge to deal with oppression and also to equip ourselves to teach others what we have learned. Since several white students have joined us in this protest we know that this is not just a concern of Third World people but of anyone who knows right from wrong.

In my opinion, Dwight Allen is administering the School of Ed., in much the same way colonial powers administer and oppress their colonies.

In examining the takeover at the School of Ed., it must be remembered that the takeover isn't merely a "Power Play" on the part of Third World students but a direct reaction to a racist, oppressive action on Allen's part.

A blatant racist or any kind of racist for that matter has no place, in such a progressive and innovative School of Education as we at UMass have.

I'm asking for one of two things. That Dwight Allen immediately reverse his decision regarding Paul Chandler's admission to the Grad. school or that he be replaced by some responsible person that knows right from wrong and is able to deal with people on the basis of their qualifications and character not merely on the basis of personal likes and dislikes.

Michael Patterson is a Guest Columnist.

Letters To The Editor

'Sage Revisited' Is 'Failure'

To The Editor:

This is my response to the letter by Mr. Douglas West, which appeared in Monday's Collegian.

The alleged discrepancy pointed out between my attitudes of hiring based on qualification and maintaining proportions in dorm government is easily resolved. I stress, however, that my following remarks are intended to be pertinent specifically within the context of the two situations cited in my editorial.

The respective roles of that coordinator of certain programs for the Hill and a house council representative are simply not analogous to one another. I still maintain that the position of coordinator should not be filled by judging applicants on criteria no more pertinent to the position than "color, affiliation or sex". A comprehensive review of an applicant's accomplishments and personal history is warranted for such an office.

No such screening does- or needs to- occur in the election of a representative for house council. To suggest the responsibilities of these two positions are comparable is ludicrous. A simple vote usually (if not always) decides who is to represent a corridor.

The Third World community on Orchard Hill sees itself as having needs which are often divergent from those required by other residents of dorms. Here I entirely agree. Thus, the Third World is allowed to choose a person (or persons, depending on the size of the community) to represent their community.

Years ago it was arbitrarily decided that each corridor of students should be represented by one person on house council. On this basis, the Third World must occupy four corridors (two floors) in Grayson in order to justify its demand for four or five representatives. Grayson's house council has a strong record of passing proposals introduced by the Third World. Therefore, I see no reason for compensatory action to balance the odds beyond the equitable ratio of two or three Third World representatives for the dorm.

If Mr. West attended last week's Orchard Hill Area Government meeting, he is aware that another Sage Revisited could have been printed in rebuttal to my editorial. The condition that those who submit material should help in the issue's production was acceptable to those concerned. Typically, however, not one article was submitted. The result: no issue.

Perhaps Mr. West is correct in suggesting that, as a cross-section of Hill views, the Sage Revisited is a dismal failure. However, I intend next semester to continue to voice my opinions from time to time and hope that others will begin to do the same.

Jeff Long

Social Awareness-ism?

To The Editor:

Lucky for all of us we have engineers in this world. For, according to engineering student Stephen M. Lord, engineers represent reality and that is what we should be striving for. Of course, Mr. Lord has not always been interested in engineering, having worked out with Economics for awhile, and therefore we will respect his experience on both "sides". Engineers versus society; that's what Mr. Lord will end up pushing for. If he was around a few decades ago, he would have wanted to design the Big Bomb because wars are inevitable; and "social activists" attempting to prevent the inevitable should keep their weightless opinions to themselves. He would have wanted to design automobiles and power centers without thinking about what his precise, technological mind can do to the lives of ignorant social activists. Social activists, i take it, are those people who stop for a moment, turn, and ask the people behind them, "Where the hell are we going?". Too bad for them, people like Stephen M. Lord are deciding exactly where they are headed, wiretapping their politics, and igniting substances sticking to their skin. People Stephen M. Lord give a bad name to engineers, keep them away from party invitations, help tag them as conscience-less puppets, and unfortunately cement their feelings that "all is well at the office" (which no one should do for anyone, we can all use a shake-up). I'm a senior in Computer Systems Engineering, don't consider selfishness intelligent, welcome a cross-section of value judgements in my friendships, and do not consider my future profession any more "useful and true" than any other pasttime", including social awareness-ism.

Jim E. Brown

Publish or Perish

To The Editor:

Once again the publish or perish syndrome has struck here at U-Mass. Next to the Asian flu, it is the most predictable disease to strike this campus, and probably just as contageous. However, it isn't quite as noticeable since the symptoms are not as evident. It begins with a professor who cares too much about teaching and helping students learn. he spends too much time in class and never refuses to help a student at his office door. The disease reaches the critical stage quickly, and the professor soon learns that he will not be reappointed for the following semester. Soon he is gone.

When will this University and the people that run it realize that they are the ones that are truly diseased. The true worth of a school and its education cannot be measured by the amount of papers that are published from within its walls. Last year the disease struck in the School of Economics, and unless the rumors I've heard are false, it will soon strike the School of Business Administration. Isn't it strange that whenever the administration becomes ill, it is always the students who suffer!

Respectfully yours,
Mark Karll

Fourth World Unite

To The Editor:

I wish to advocate to all my fellow brothers and sisters, the Fourth World Alliance. I demand my rights in overthrowing society and the destruction of education for its own sake. I demand my rights of infringing on the rights of other people, in order to exercise my right to the control of other people by abolishing their culture and replacing it with my own. If my demands are not met all the bathrooms on campus will be shut down in the belief they are racist against the Fourth World Alliance. I demand my own music on WMUA, and my own dorm. The Brentlingers, whose letter was in the Collegian, will obviously support me in my struggle, as it has radical overtones and pertains to rights. I wonder if they would understand the shutting down of their classes until they give someone the grade that is desired by the student. I hope all the members of the Fourth World Alliance do not stand for the National Anthem at basketball games, until our lives can be made full again.

Mark Dlugosz

Editorial Points

Anyone who's waited in the CC Coffeeshop on Sunday night for the pizza and grinder department to set up has no doubts as to why the CC Food Services are losing money. If the person had any doubts, they would be erased when they tasted the grinders and pizzas. And they're even out of meatballs.

•••

Believe it or not, the UMass marching band was better than Cal-Davis'. The California boys (all male) sang "Happy Trails". UMass fought fire with fire and produced the entire United Nations. That showed those people that we were from Massachusetts.

•••

Not even an apology. During half-time, ABC described the beautiful UMass campus while flashing slides of palm-treed California.

Chinese Liberation

To The Editor:

Several Chinese and I feel it time for end to degredation of Chinamen at University of Massachusetts and rest of United States. We urge you to think what it would be like if you were in China with 700 million Chinese around and all looking at you like you were some sort of inferior being.

We demand the end to all jokes such as, how long does it take a Chinaman to iron a shirt?

We demand the end to all reference to Chinese as "slanteves," "Chinks," "Chinky Winkies," "Gooks", a "race of midgets," and other derogatory terms.

We also demand the end to the immediate impression of Chinese as either one who works in a Chinese restaurant or one who works in laundry. We do other things such as teach mathematics at University. Visit third floor Arnold House for proof if you so desire.

We ask only for your understanding. This does not seem to be very, very much to ask. Back in homeland we have very, very little, but at least we are not looked down on by others.

HarryLee

First Step

To The Editor:

I want to go on record as endorsing Paul Chandler 100%. Any failure to admit Paul to graduate school is in my opinion a gross injustice.

When a man supposedly intellectual uses his position to keep one from achieving his goal, simply because of their difference of opinion only proves to me the saying is true, "One has to choose whom he can disagree with."

I too am a COP student and I am quite familiar with the exploitation of, and false promises made to these students.

When Paul is admitted to the School of Ed. Graduate program, then and only then the School will have made its first step toward ending racism in the school. Come, Dean Allen, once the first step is made you will find the remaining steps quite easy.

Wilma Jennings

Protect Reporters

To The Editor:

The right of newsman's privilege the protection of a reporter's confidential sources has been seriously undermined by the Nixon Court. Two reporters, Peter Bridge and William Farr, have already been jailed because they refused to relinquish their First Amendment right not to divulge their sources before a grand jury.

In response to the Nixon Court, several bills have been introduced in Congress. Most of them would protect a newsman's privileze, but they would limit the protection of "qualified" reporters. These qualifications would unduly restrict members of the underground press, newspapers, like SALT and the Phoenix, as well as the college press.

I urge all concerned citizens to write to their Congressman and Senators in support of HR 15972 and its companion Senate bill S 3786. Sponsored by Representative Jerome Waldie and Senator Alan Cranston, these are the only bills which protect newsman's privilege without defining a newsman's qualifications. Letters to Speaker of the House Carl Albert and to the majority and minority leaders of the Senate, Mike Mansfield and Hugh Scott, will also be effective.

Don Glickstein

'No Justification'

To The Editor:

So! The Third World is outraged by the treatment Paul Chandler has been receiving recently at the hands of the School of Ed., are they? Well, I'm just as outraged by the shabby treatment hundreds of Ed. students have been receiving at the hands of the Third World Alliance recently, with the shutdown of the School of Ed.!! It is an outrage when one self-interest group can shut down an entire school, and deprive hundreds of students of their rightful classes and education so casually! They have no right to penalize other students in this manner, merely because one member is having a squabble with one member of the Ed. department. If those persons are having differences, let them take it up privately with the Dean like everybody else on this campus. This is not a major issue (although the Third World seems to be trying to make it an excuse for one), it is a personal problem, and I for one am damn sick and tired of having my education disrupted every time someone on this campus thinks they're getting a bum deal! O.K., so Chandler is having his difficulties. I feel for him personally, I really do, because I, too, have had my problems, and I too have gotten bum deals, and I know the anger and frustrations such a situation causes.

But Chandler is a big boy now big enough to settle his problems on his own, without dragging everyone else into it, hurting a lot of innocent people in the process, and without employing hooligan strong-arm methods to coerce one member of a department to capitulate! This is self-centered, and it is irresponsible! And that is a bad-news combination! There is no No., No, NO justification for this for anybody, be they Establishment or Third World. So next time somebody feels like closing a school, give a thought to the rights of others!!

Nancy Kesulis

LAFAYETTE
SEIDEN SOUND RADIO ELECTRONICS

SOUND IDEAS FOR CHRISTMAS

OPEN DAILY 10 - 9
SAT. 10 - 5:30

THE STARTER FEATURING...
1 SHERWOOD S7050 AM/FM stereo receiver 159.95
1 BSR 310x TURNTABLE with base, cover, shure cartridge 54.95
2 LAFAYETTE CRITERION 50 2 way full sized speaker systems 31.95 63.90
RETAIL VALUE 278.80
SAVE 40.80
NOW $238.

DELUXE FEATURING...
1 FISHER AR1-150 Watt AM-FM receiver with wireless remote control 449.95
2 FISHER XP-651L 3 WAY 10" deluxe speaker systems 109.95 219.90
1 BSR-510X deluxe changer, base, cover, shure v-15/type cartridge 74.95
RETAIL VALUE 744.80
NOW $449.95

ALL STORES OPEN EVENINGS 'TIL 9 MON. - FRI.

TOPS AT LAFAYETTE
1 PIONEER SX-939 270 Watt AM-FM receiver - our best 429.95
2 BOSE 901 direct reflecting speaker systems with equalizer 476.00
1 BSR-810X TRANSCRIPTION turntable system complete with cover, wood base and shure M-91E cartridge 189.95
TOTAL RETAIL 1095.90
COMPLETE $947.

WOW! BELL & HOWELL
AM-FM PHONO CASSETTE RECORDER records off records or Radio with air suspension speakers
NOW COMPLETE $199.95 REG. $259.95
#3450CST

8 TRACK CARTRIDGE TAPE DECK
99-1589W $29.95 REG. 49.95

WOW BSR
• 8 TRACK TAPE PLAYER
• FULL SIZE TURNTABLE WITH CUING
• AM-FM - STEREO RECEIVER
• ACOUSTIC SPEAKER SYSTEMS
RTS-29 $149.95 ORIG. $199.95

RANGER AUTO STEREO
DELUXE 8 TRACK CAR STEREO TAPE PLAYER WITH FINE TUNING SELECTOR ... ILLUMINATED DIAL REG. 74.95 $39.95

EXTENSION SPEAKER SALE...
MODEL 9-CREATIVE 2 WAY 6"
LIST $24.95 1/2 PRICE
2 FOR $25

Dynasound Stowaway cassette storage unit 4.95

7 PIECE BEGINNERS GUITAR OUTFIT
REG. $29.95 $19.95
13-52920

PANASONIC
SC-555 STEREO MUSIC CENTER $199.95 REG. 269.95

STEREO HEADPHONES
1/2 PRICE $4.20 REG. $8.40
WITH THIS COUPON
EXPIRES 12/16/72

CASSETTES
3-C-60 99c
REG. 3 for 1.99
WITH THIS COUPON
EXPIRES 12/16/72

AMPEX CASSETTES
HEAD CLEANER 99c REG. 2.95
WITH THIS COUPON
EXPIRES 12/16/72

DYNA SOUND
80 MINUTE-8 TRACK
TAPES 2 for $2.99
REG. 2.99 EA.
WITH THIS COUPON
EXPIRES 12/16/72

LAFAYETTE RADIO ELECTRONICS
your BANKAMERICARD welcome here
master charge
Owned & Operated By Seiden Sound
AMHERST STORE
15 E. PLEASANT ST
549-1105
Pittsfield, Mass.
Colonie, NY
Albany, NY
Schenectady, NY
Glensfalls, NY

The University of Massachusetts-Amherst Trio—whose members are Estela K. Olevsky, pianist; Julian Olevsky, violinist; and Leopold Teraspulsky, cellist—will make its first appearance of this season Sunday, Dec. 17, at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium.

The program will include works by Schubert, Beethoven and Ravel.

Members of the Trio are internationally acclaimed instrumentalists and have appeared on the University campus concert series as soloists and in chamber music programs in past seasons, with public and press acclaim. The public is invited; admission is free.

Schedule of Hours, December 1972-January 1973
Goodell Library

EXAMINATION PERIOD
December 14-20 (Thurs.-Wed.)	Continuous opening from 8:00 a.m., Dec. 14 through 1:00 a.m., Dec. 21
December 21 (Thursday)	8:00 a.m.-1:00 a.m.
December 22 (Friday)	8:00 a.m.-1:00 a.m.
December 23 (Saturday)	8:00 a:m.-5:00 p.m.
INTERSESSION AND REGISTRATION
December 24-January 24
Monday-Friday	8:00 a.m.-5:00 p.m.
Saturday & Sunday	CLOSED
Closed Christmas and New Years' Day
SECOND SEMESTER
Regular hours resume January 25.
Monday-Friday	8:00 a.m.-12:00 midnight
Saturday	8:00 a.m.-10:00 p.m.
Sunday	1:00 p.m.-12:00 midnight

During continuous opening, December 14-December 20, only the Reserve desk and level 4 study hall will be accessible from 1:00 a.m. to 8:00 a.m.

Xmas or New Year's at Disneyworld or Miami Beach
(or both if you prefer)
WONDER WORLD MOTEL VILLAS
$7.50 motel room each per-nite dbl. occup. color T.V.
Come with a group (3 or more) and we will give you a separate villa building with 2-3 bedrooms, kitchen, livingroom, etc.
(Special rates for Olins-rent-a-car)
For more information, call 545-0585, ask for Russ Sobelman.

Jewish Activist To Speak At Smith

Two events in behalf of Soviet Jewry will be held at Smith College Wednesday (Dec. 13) in conjunction with United Nations Human Rights Week.

At 1 p.m. a call will be made to a Jewish activist in the Soviet Union from Wright Hall Auditorium. The conversation will be amplified, and translators will be available both for the recipient of the call as-well-as for the audience.

That evening at 8 p.m., also at Wright Hall, Professor Roman Rutman, a Jewish activist from Moscow who was permitted to leave the Soviet Union for Israel last month, will speak.

Professor Rutman, a Cybernetics specialist and long-time activist in the struggle for Jewish rights, has a doctor of sciences degree in cybernetics and, until 1970, worked at the Academy of Sciences in Moscow. In 1971 he began his struggle to receive a permit to go to Israel. He was immediately demoted from his positions as lecturer and laboratory chief and dismissed in 1972.

Detained and interrogated many times, Professor Rutman was arrested for a ten-day period prior to President Nixon's visit to Russia.

Professor Rutman is currently in this country for the United Jewish Appeal.

The public is welcome to attend these events which are sponsored by the Hillel Foundations at Smith and Amherst Colleges.

PARKING METERS

Effective Monday, December 11.

"Installation of 254 parking meters on the University of Massachusetts - Amherst Campus has been completed. Effective December 11, 1972, enforcement of meter use will begin. Hours of control are from 7:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m., Monday thru Friday. Locations, limits, rates and numbers of meters are:

LOCATION	NO. OF METERS	LIMIT & RATE
Presidents Drive (Haigis Mall)	52	1 hr. @ 10¢/hr. (5¢/1/2 hr.)
Fearing Street (south side)	35	2 hrs. @ 10¢/hr. (5¢/1/2 hr.) (convenience slot, quarter/2 hrs.)
Southwest Mall	20	1 hr. @ 10¢/hr. (5¢/1/2 hr.)
Lot #2 (South Clark Hall)	26	1 hr. @ 10¢/hr. (5¢/1/2 hr.)
Arnold House (front)	13	1/2 hr. @ 10¢/1/2 hr. (5¢/1/4 hr.)
School of Education (South)	22	1 hr. @ 10¢/hr. (5¢/1/2 hr.)
Lot #4 (Worcester Dining)	8	1/2 hr. @ 10¢/1/2 hr. (5¢/1/4 hr.)
Skinner Hall	6	1/2 hr. @ 10¢/1/2 hr. (5¢/1/4 hr.)
Infirmary (loop road)	40	2 hrs. @ 10¢/hr. (5¢/1/2 hr.) (convenience slot, quarter/2 hrs.)
Physical Plant (South)	8	1/2 hr. @ 10¢/1/2 hr. (5¢/1/4 hr.)
Lot #5 (near Boyden)	10	1/2 hr. @ 10¢/1/2 hr. (5¢/1/4 hr.)
Women's Physical Education (Lot 15)	14	1/2 hr. @ 10¢/1/2 hr. (5¢/1/4 hr.)

Violations for overtime parking are $2.00 per infraction. Any vehicle remainingbeyondthe "limit" period is considered in violation.

Vehicles parked other than between the stall lines (parked over the line), are subject to a parking ticket regardless of the time remaining on either meter of the two spaces occupied. Such violations are $5.00 per infraction.

The meters have been installed to add greater convenience for visitors to our campus as well as for our University community."

Carlos Montoya Here In Jan.

Carlos Montoya, who has been described as "a legend in his own time", will appear here at the beginning of Spring semester in an all-Spanish program. Also featured is the Springfield Symphony Orchestra.

Carolos Montoya, the noted flamenco guitar virtuoso, will be featured as soloist in a promenade concert here, Tuesday, Jan. 30, at 8 p.m.

Joining Mr. Montoya in an all-Spanish program in Curry Hicks Cage will be The Springfield Symphony Orchestra, under Robert Gutter's direction. This concert is offered by the Fine Arts Council as a special event marking the opening of the spring semester.

The promenade concert will be an informal evening of light classical music falling between a regular symphony concert and a pops concert.

Carlos Montoya has been described as "a legend in his own time" by critics throughout the world and guitar aficionados, particularly on college campuses. He has appeared at the University several times previously, always to sell-out crowds. This year's appearance will feature him as both soloist and composer, since the January 30 program includes his own "Suite Flamenca" for guitar and full symphony orchestra.

The balance of the program will include excerpts from Manuel de Falla "El amor brujo", the ballet suite "Estancia" by Alberto Ginastera, Chabrier's "Espana", music from "Man of La Mancha" as well as a group of solos by Mr. Montoya. A special feature of the promenade concert will be "Carom", a new work by Robert Stern, a member of the faculty of the University's music department. "Carom" was commissioned by The Springfield Symphony Orchestra last season.

Tickets are available now at $2 for UMass undergraduates and $4 for others and may be obtained through the Fine Arts Council, 125 Herter Hall, telephone 545-0202. The Council urges early reservations for this event, which is expected to draw a large audience. The program will be repeated, with the exception of the Stern work, at Springfield Municipal Auditorium on Sunday, Feb. 11, under the auspices of the Springfield Symphony Orchestra.

Summer Counselors Needed

Applications are now being accepted for student group leader positions in the 1973 Summer Counseling Program. The program will operate from June 3 through August 3, 1973. Ten sessions for fall entering freshmen will be held, along with two swingshift sessions and five transfer programs.

Training sessions for the thirty selected counselors will be held during the latter part of the spring semester and the week of May 8 through June 1. All positions require residence in an assigned residence hall for the ten-week period. Summer counseling positons require full time participation. Summer school courses cannot be taken.

Qualifications for counselor positions include successful work experience, a positive attitude towards University Life, knowledge regarding academic course planning, willingness to accept job performance standards and to attend the spring training sessions.

Interested and qualified students may obtain an application from the Counseling Center, 243 Whitmore. Applications must be returned on or before February 9, 1973. Selections will be announced during spring break.

Pre-Meds

The Pre-Medical Advisory Committee is now taking applications for the pre-professional programs. If you are interested, fill out an application (which can be found in Room 217, Hasbrouck Lab.) before December 15. You may not be a pre-med, dent, or vet major without going through this interview, and application procedure.

Television Tonight

5:00 JIM AND TAMMY (18)
MISTER ROGERS' NEIGHBORHOOD (24) (57)
SUPERMAN (27)
HOGAN'S HEROES (30)
GOMER PYLE (40)
5:30 GOMER PYLE (27)
BEVERLY HILLBILLIES (30)
NEWS (40)
6:00 NEWS SPORTS, WEATHER (3) (8) (22)
12 O'CLOCK HIGH "To Seek and Destroy" (18)
ZOOM (24) (57)
PETTICOAT JUNCTION (27)
TO TELL THE TRUTH (30)
WILD WILD WEST "Night of the Human Trigger" (40)
6:30 NEWS WITH WALTER CRONKITE (3)
ABC EVENING NEWS (8)
NBC NIGHTLY NEWS (22) (30)
MAGGIE AND THE BEAUTIFUL MACHINE (24)
MOVIE "Pigskin Paradise" (27)
ELLIOT NORTON (57)
7:00 KRESKIN (3)
TRUTH OR CONSEQUENCES (8)
DICK VAN DYKE (18)
NEWS (22) (30) (57)
OEAF CITIZEN (24)
ABC EVENING NEWS (40)
7:30 I'VE GOT A SECRET (3)
THIS IS YOUR LIFE (8)
MOVIE "Cruisin' Down the River" (18)
I DREAM OF JEANNIE "Jeannie, the Recording Secretary" (22)
FAMILY GAME (24)
GOLDDIGGERS (30)
ORAGNET "The Bookie" (40)
THE REPORTERS (57)
8:00 UCONN BASKETBALL (3)
TEMPERATURES RISING "The New Head Nurse" (8) (40)
SPECIAL: THE SNOW GOOSE (22) (30)
FOURTH ESTATE (24)
THEONIE (57)
8:15 ERICA (57)
8:30 MOVIE "The Pursuit" (8) (40)
BILL MOYERS' JOURNAL (24) (57)
LAUREL AND HARDY (27)
9:00 700 CLUB (18)
BOLO ONES "End Theme" (22) (30)
BEHIND THE LINES (24) (57)
GOMER PYLE (27)
9:30 BLACK JOURNAL (24) (57)
TWILIGHT ZONE "Mr. Bevis" (27)
10:00 DON RICKLES: ALIVE AND KICKING IN AMERICA (3)
MARCUS WELBY "Heartbeat For Yesterday" (8) (40)
AMERICA (22) (30)
STATE OF CONNECTICUT (24)
NEWS (27) (57)
10:30 NEWS (24)
MOVIE "The Flame" (27)
SOUL (57)
11:00 NEWS, SPORTS, WEATHER (3) (8) (22) (30) (40)
EL SUPER SHOW GOYA (18)
11:30 FLIGHT OF APOLLO 17 (3) (8) (22) (40)
JOHNNY CARSON (30)
NEWS (57)
12:00 MOVIE "David and Lisa" (3)
DICK CAVETT (8) (40)
NEWS (18) (27)
JOHNNY CARSON (22)
1:00 NEWS (30)
1:30 NEWS (8) (22) (40)
2:00 NEWS (3)

NORTHAMPTON JERRY LEWIS CINEMA
U.S. Route 5 586-3209
Mon. & Tues. Adults $1.00
1 RAGE
George C. Scott (PG) 7:00 & 9:00.
You'll Like My Mother
a thriller
7:30 & 9:30
PG
College Students 50¢ Off
Wed. Night 1,000,000 Night Free Lottery Ticket with each $1.75 adm.
Sat. & Sun. Matinee
MUNSTER GO HOME
1 & 3 p.m. All Seats 75¢

TUESDAY DEC 12
8:00 & 10:30
Fearless Fly Fearlessly presents
James Joyce's
ULYSSES
U of Mass. S.U.B.
TONITE!

Bogus Films
Clint Eastwood
in
The GOOD the BAD and the UGLY
Tues., Dec. 12
7 & 9:30
C.C. Aud. 75¢

JAMES DEAN IN REBEL WITHOUT A CAUSE
HAMPDEN DINING COMMONS
TONIGHT 7:30
Amherst Film Co-op.

Take a break and see the original ★Lone★ Ranger
and his faithful companion
TONTO
full length feature film also original
4 Popeye Cartoons
7 & 9 Thompson 104 - 50¢
TONITE, Tuesday, Dec. 12, 1972

Everywoman's University Starting January 8th

(This is the second part of the tentative schedule for Everywoman's University. For Part I, see Monday's Collegian.)

Saturday, Jan. 13:
Women's Dance in the Blue Wall from 9 P.M. 'til 1 A.M. "The Deadly Nightshade" plays music
WORKSHOPS THAT STILL HAVE TO BE SCHEDULED:
Women in Folklore-Rayna Green
Neglected Women Writers-Lee Edwards
Death-Juliette Seaver
Non-Sexist Children-Kathy Walsh, Patti Poliatis
Feminist Curriculum-Pat Freedman
Life Planning-Alice Sargent
Medical Issues for Women-Linda Ceriale School of Nursing
Non-Professional Staff-"Polishing the manacles"-Mary LaSota
Nuts and Bolts of UMass Structure and Administration-Zina Tillona POSSIBLE WORKSHOPS:
Feminism and Men
Auto Maintenance
Affirmative Action
Organizing Women
Why Join a Labor Organization-pros and cons
Professional and Non-Professional
How-To's for Job-Hunting
Where are the Jobs for Women?
The Value of Volunteer Work
Women as Homemakers
Role Stereotypes-They are there but...
New Trends in Employment
Vocational Guidance for Women
Sharing Ideas for Life Planning in a Changing World
A Brief Guide to "Do it Yourself"
Career Planning
Dual Careers: Homemakers and Workers
The Trap of Professionalism: How to isolate women from decision-making jobs and keep them in the role of facilitators and supporters

Below is a pre-registration form Everywoman's Center would appreciate you filling out and returning to the Center in Munson Hall:
Name:
Workshops you are interested in:

On Sat., Jan. 6, please bring your contribution to the Arts and Crafts exhibit to the S.U. Art Gallery between 10:00 A.M. and 4:00 P.M. Due to the limited space, we ask you to bring only one piece of work and if possible nothing too large. If you are contributing a painting or photograph, please have it framed and ready to be hung. Everyone is invited to participate in sharing their work. Below is a form we would appreciate you filling out so we have some sense of how much work will be submitted. Please return it to Everywoman's Center in Munson Hall.

Name: Medium:
Address: Approximate Size:
Phone: Value (for insurance purposes):

Phone Area 413-253-7615
FOWLER INC. Jewelers
WATCH CLOCK and JEWELRY REPAIRING
66 NORTH PLEASANT STREET AMHERST, MASS. 01002
PEWTER & LEATHER MUGS
DIAMONDS WATCHES SILVERWARE CHINA

MDC CLASSIFIED

FOR SALE

Pre-owned Zenith portable stereo. Speakers with 7' cord. Excell. cond. Asking $30, will take best offer. 549-1218 evenings. tf12-72

Guitars — new and used at discount prices. Many fine instruments and acc. in stock. The Guitar Workshop, 86 Main St., North. 586-1904. tf-oem.

Waterbeds ahead of time. $39.95 complete. Safeway htrs., bedspreads, for rugs. 367-2787, 367-2858. inter., Rte 63 & 47, Montague. tf12-13

Handcrafted pine benches, tables, and boxes, all different and unique. 200 yds east inter. Rte. 63 & 47, 367-2787, Montague. tf12-13

Holiday sale! 5-year factory guaranteed waterbeds, $17.50, heaters $27.50. Lowest prices in 5-college area. Gary, 1 p.m. - 11 p.m. daily. 548-9126. tf12-12

New refrigerator, 3.5 cu. ft., 16 mo. guarantee. Was $80, now $40. Carolyn, 546-6065. tf12-12

McIntosh pre amp., $300. New $150 or best offer. Craig cassette deck, $40. 546-5882. tf12-12

Used furniture at Lamp Shop, 401 Pine St., Cushman, in rear of Whitemore's. All sorts of lamps, dishes, some antiques. Thurs. - Sat. 10-5:30 tf 12-12

BAUER MEN'S HOCKEY SKATES size 11 1/2 & 16. Very good cond. $50 when new. Asking $25. Call Kathy 545-0721. Also woman's size 7 1/2, $3. tf 12-13

Polaroid land camera #305, 1 1/2 yrs. old but hardly ever used w/flash $19.00 Also 2-12 vlt. auto a.m. radios 1 w/built-in spkr. $5 ea. 665-2387. tf 12-13

*Stereo — Audio Electronics * The best buys on brand name stereo equipment. Call Greg at 546-6608. tf12-13

Guitar-Hagstrom II solid body and heathkit, 240w amp with 2 12" speakers, $75 for all. Call Neal 546-6051 tf 12-13

Those bombs carry your name; let's shoot baskets instead. Vinly bumper stickers, 75¢ ea., Box 95, Cambridge, N.Y. 12816. 3/$1.50, 20/$9. tf12-13

If you want fine furniture you're reading the wrong ad. Used couches, easy chairs, lg. rug, lamps, etc. For sale, 253-3016. tf12-13

Skis — like new! Skis (Fischer), buckle-boots (Lange) size 7 girls, poles, boot rack. All $150. Must sell! Call 253-5408. tf12-12

Movie posters, lobby cards, 8x10 stills, comic books, original art nostalgia items. We buy and sell. Rebel Peddler, 1587 Main St., Sptfld. tf12-13

For sale, 1 pair of Goodyear snowtires, whitewall with studs, used one winter. Mounted on Volvo rims. Call 584-0537. tf12-13

For sale, Hanover skiis, in good condition. Selling for $30.00 or best offer. Call 549-3722. tf12-13

For sale, Martin 00-16 guitar w/case, $250. Call 253-5256 or come nites, 224 Northampton Rd., Amherst. tf12-13

Ski equipment, boots 7 1/2, 9 1/2, (Festa) pants, man's 30R White Stag, woman's 12 Sun Valley Bollag. Call 545-2588 or 256-8204. tf12-13

FOR SALE

Would you like to buy stereos and components at tremendous savings? Yes! Then call me at 665-2508. I am an on-campus rep. for a large stereo company. We sell ALL KINDS OF FINE COMPONENT SYSTEMS. Window shop and price the system you want; then call me and save $$. All purchases guaranteed in writing. So pls. call 665-2508 soon. tf12-12

Gibson super-medalist guitar. Amp. excellent condition, 2-12's. 584-0065. tf12-13

2 fur coats — perfect condition — med. over knee length, grey & brown. Best offers, be warm! Call Peggy, 253-2681. tf12-13

Ski boots, men's 16 1/2, Lange Pros. Used 2 mos. Half price. Call 665-4046. tf12-13

Ski rack, trunk type. Holds 4 pr., plus poles, $15. Call 665-4046. tf12-13

Complete stereo sys. Delmonico amp AM/FM Panasonic turntable, speakers, 50 plus records. Must sell, $100. Rich, 797 Main St., Amherst. tf12-13

Ski boots — Henke Strato Pro. Used 1/2 season, ex. cond. New foam bladders available, very cheap. Size 9, asking $75. 6-6091, Ross. tf12-13

Winter boots at the Shoe-Bin. Hiking boots starting at $17.95. Good selection of work shoes and other practical footwear. tf12-12

UNUSUAL OPPORTUNITY

Chance for before-Xmas bargains. Selection of men's and women's shoes only $10.95 at Shoe-Bin, No. Pleasant St. Starts Wed. 12th. tf12-12

ENTERTAINMENT

Love is a precious word. Defining it is nearly impossible. But love is the reason why Lynn is so entertaining. Singing is her profession, not her work. Every song has a unique quality with a special ingredient: Love. Experience Lynn Holoway at the Rusty Scupper, Route 9, Amherst — Tuesday nights. Love is a precious word: Lynn. tf12-12

WANTED

Room in house in Montague, N.Lev or North. Non-student responsible craftsman, age 24, country living prefrd. Call Suzy 584-7261. tf 12-13

Coins and stamps US and foreign bought, sold, traded. Estimates and appraisals. Call Bob 546-4714, 202 Chadbourne House. tf12-12

Refrigerator. 5 cu. ft. w/freezer. Needed by Dec. 23. Call Tony, 546-6841 after 4:30. tf12-12

Term paper: in form of research grant application to Gov't. Agency on any topic relevant to ecology, remun. Call Rick at 546-5139. tf12-13

Guitarist needed for full-influenced band. Call quickly. Jeff, 6-7522. tf12-12

RIDE WANTED

Help! Ride for 2 needed to Albuquerque or geo. vic., Dec. 20-28, to arrive by Dec. 31 (?) Will share driving, expenses. Call Rod, 546-6191. tf12-13

I need a ride for 4 n'clock MWF next semester, coming down Main St. in Amh from Pelham. Call Susan 256-6303. tf 12-12

Ride needed to Springfield, 1 day a week, any day but Mon. from 2-3. Also ride back to UMass at 5. Will share driving and $. 546-6095. tf12-12

To Chicago. Leave Dec. 15, 16. Will share driving & expenses. Leave message for Max, 549-0204 or 549-1377, or 665-4122. tf12-13

Ride needed to or from Florida area, or both. Leave Jan. 2nd, return approx. Jan. 20. 2 girls. Call Donna, 665-3977 after 5:30. tf12-13

HOUSE FOR RENT

Completely remodeled 8 bedroom colonial-style house, kids and pets welcome. Immediate availability . . quiet country living. Call 256-8204 day, 253-7717 night. tf 12-13

AUTOS FOR SALE

70 Toyota Corolla, white, radio, excel. condition. $1095 or best offer. 584-0160. tf12-12

Cheap, warm, runs good, 63 Buick LeSabre. Ai., p.s., p.b., hts., stkr. snow tires. $200 or best offer. Must sell soon. Steve, 546-6485. tf12-12

1963 VW camper, bed, frig., stove, sun roof. 1967, 50 h.p. engine completely rebuilt in Aug. New front end, call Bob, 549-1730. tf12-13

1967 TR4A, runs excellent, 53,000 mi., new generator, clutch, brakes, exhaust system. Body needs some work, $800. Write Box 126, Amherst. tf12-13

64 Ford custom 6 cyl. auto trans. Rear snow tires. Very good on gas. Good cond., $250. Call 584-8314 late afternoon - eve. tf12-12

1963 Chevy — good condition, $300. Large peoples car worth more. Call Rich, 256-8325. tf12-13

For sale, 66 Ford, 289, 4-speed, studded snows, good cond. $325. 665-3200. tf 12-13

Chevrolet, Camaro SS 67, very good condition. Winterized, new snow tires, air cond. Asking $400. Call 256-6253 after 6 p.m. tf 12-13

49 'Chevy, 1 ton panel truck, 53' GMC truck, 6 cyl. engine solid truck. Also 1 yr old Gitane 10 spd. bike. Call Michael 253-7384. tf 12-13

1966 Dodge Dart, GT convertible. Good cond., $250 or best offer. Call 549-0079. tf12-12

69 VW Bug. New trans. and clutch. Exc. bod., radials, Wood St. wheel, $950. Call 6-5004. tf12-12

1965 Corvair Monza. Good cond., 4 excellent tires & snows. Really "owned by a lady schoolteacher." $350. 586-3701, 7:30 - 8:30 p.m. tf12-13

1961 VW Bug, inspected, $25. Call 253-3058 after 4 p.m. tf12-13

'65 power wagon, 4 wd w/snowplow, 4 speed trans., new battery, $1,300. '67 VW w/70 engine, runs excellent, body good, $550. 625-9200. tf12-13

HELP! MUST SELL MY 65 CAPRICE THIS WEEK. NEW BALL JTS., EXHAUST & MORE. 396 ENG., A.T., P.S., P.B., R & H. EVERYTHING WORKS PERF., $350. BARRY — 549-3626. tf12-17

ROOM FOR RENT

Furnished room in private house. No cooking, close to campus, immediate occupancy, quiet location. Call 549-6207. tf12-13

1 bedroom, everything included, $155. University Park Apts. Call Tom anytime, 253-2220. tf12-13

TRAVEL

Want to get away for Christmas vacation? Try camping on the exotic island of Jamaica. For more info., call Jon Riblin, 549-0112, evg. tf12-13

Bienvetu everyone. Panam will take you to all your dream cities providing you with best comforts, call Lina 546-5319. tf12-13

See all the places you've dreamed of: London, Istanbul, Athens, Rome, on island in the sun, economically too. . .fly PanAm. Ellen 253-7061. tf12-13

Skiing in Europe is cheaper than you think, call and find out. Call Shelley, 546-5258. tf12-13

How about skiing in Europe over the holidays? Contact Kathy, 549-0686. tf12-13

Crimson Travel Service offers a low cost spring vacation trip to Bermuda. For more info., call Rich Margil, 317 Dwight, 545-0700. tf12-12

LOST

Cat wearing grn. collar w/bell. Fem., shrt. hrd., grey stripes, white stomach & throat. Thanks from Amherst Col., 549-6380, 547-2541. tf12-13

ROOMMATES WANTED

Sr. female looking for quiet easy going same or grad. furnished, $85.00. Chris, 256-8005 after 6. tf12-12

F. roommate, own room in Cliffside Apartments. Call Barbara, 253-7571 evenings. tf12-13

Female — own room in new Puffton. Low rent in exchange for some babysitting eves. 549-0300 after 5:00. tf12-13

Room in house near Colonial Village. Approx. $80 per month, includes everything — even food. Female wanted, 253-9060. tf12-13

Two girls looking for two guys to share 3 bedroom apartment at Puffton. Rent $56. Call 549-0114 after 6. tf12-13

Fem. roommate wanted — own rm. in 3 bdrm. apt., with 2 other girls. Rent negotiable. Avail. Jan. 7. Pleasant atmosphere. Call Amy, 549-0888. tf12-13

1-2 fem. rmmate(s). to share apt., $58.50 ea. Avail. Dec. 15. Call 549-0062. tf12-12

Male roommate wanted in Presidential Apts., for spring semester. $46/mo. furn. & util. included. Call 549-1716 after 6 p.m. (for John). tf12-13

Male roommate for spring semester, $60/mo. University Park Apts. Call Perry, 253-5664. tf12-13

Female grad looking for female roommate, $85 mo. Own room and bath. Near campus. Call 549-3061 evenings. tf12-13

1 room Puffton Village, male or female, $70/month. Immediate occupancy or for Jan. Call John or Paul, 549-3626. tf12-13

Need roommate(s) Brittany Manor, Amherst. Total rent $210/mo. I will pay $105. 1 person, own rm., $105. 2 persons share $53. Call 253-5181, nite. tf12-12

Lani and Rose need a new roommate. Your own room, close to campus, about $80 per month. Call them at 549-1352. tf12-12

Fem. rmmte. grad. stu pref. 2 bedrm apt. w/w, dswr, disp, swmmg pool, Sunderland, quiet resp. person, please call 646-4745. tf 12-12

Female roommate wanted for spring semester. Cliffside apartments. Call 665-2949 after 5. tf 12-12

Grad student to share 2-bedroom furnished apt. 665-4018 evening or contact Hal, 420 Tobin Hall. tf 12-13

2 female upperclass or grad. pref. Good eating habits, own room on first floor of house, close to campus, but not in country. $62.50 ea. 549-6499. tf12-13

Fem. roommate wanted. Approx. $46, own rm. nr. campus. 253-3077. tf12-13

M. or f. roommate wanted, own bedroom, $67 mo. Call 253-7941. Excellent location, good neighbors. tf12-13

1 male needed to share apt. in Puffton Vil. Own room, $80/month. Occupancy from January. Call Emmanuel, 549-0715 (evenings). tf12-13

SERVICES

Wanted: native speaking Arab to tutor me in pronunciation. Am eager, willing to work, and serious. Call Rebecca, 253-7217. tf12-13

The Exec. Hair Salon, 151 Hatfield St., Northampton, Mass. Hairstyling: We begin where others leave off. For appt. call 584-2548. tf12-13

OUT IN THE COLD ABOUT INSURANCE? We can help you get it together because at Alpha we care! Complete insurance protection. All Drivers — All Wheels. Alpha Insurance Agency Inc. 39 So. Pleasant St., Amherst, 256-8505. tf12-52

You click the camera, I'll print the vision. Quality processing of 35mm B & W Magick Photo 253-2409. tf 12-13

PERSONAL

Aardvark. Sorry for the late response to your letter. I think it's about time we get together. If interested let me know. tf12-13

Have a nog at the concert, Dec. 13!! East Room, Worcester D.C., for fun. tf12-13

Anyone with questions or wanting info on homosexuality, or to talk about personal problem, call 586-2811. Ask for Paul. tf12-12

Passport photos, fast, fast -service, Lang's Photo, 197 N. Pleasant St., Amherst. tf12-13

Photo lab for rent. Lang's Photo, near Wearhouse, 197 N. Pleasant St., Amherst. tf12-13

Jinx — they say it's your birthday — it's my birthday, too, yeah! Happy birthday to you! T. tf12-12

Happy birthday Punchinella. Love from a little head. tf12-12

To the lady of my heart — Kiss me you fool! Luve, your Towhead. tf12-13

Go-od ke-ed. Do a bowl in celebration today and forget. L. in Washington and remember your memories. Happy B.D. S.V.O. tf12-12

Diane, love is a special way of feeling. You'll always be special to me. tf12-12

FOR RENT

Apt. for rent, 2 bdr. townhouse, Squire Vil. $240 mo., includes utilities, avail. Jan. 1. 665-2907. tf 12-13

January 1st availability — large, newly remodeled apts. — 2/4 bedrooms — children & pets welcome — quiet country local. Call 256-8806 day, 253-7717 night. tf 12-13

1 room in 3 bd. Puffton apt. for spring. Female or male. Call Gene, 549-6065. tf12-13

Couple need a place? Lg. room in 5 room house, 2 miles from campus. Available 1-15-73, $100/month. See Rick, 797 Main St., Apt. 4. tf12-13

MISCELLANEOUS

Invitation to openness display of the exotic art works, by Mehran Vajdi at S.U. art gallery from Dec. 15-22 at 1-4 p.m. tf12-13

'APTS. WANTED

Female student needs to find a furnished room or apt. before second semester. Call 1-413-544-6743 after 5 p.m. tf 12-13

1-2 bedroom apt. wanted. Not a complex — prefer old house in country. Will pay up to $165 — not more than 15 min. away. Call 545-2556. tf12-13

1 bdrm. apt., fr. Jan to June, 150 to 165/month, util. incl. within 7 mi. radius of campus. Pref. furnished. Call Michele, 546-7317 after 6:00 p.m. tf12-13

TO SUBLET

To sublet - one bedroom apt. incl. utilities - $175 mn. - avail. Jan. 1 - call 549-6775.

Cliffside, 1 bedroom furnished, $193.38. Available immediately. Call 665-2000 after six. tf12-12

Furn. eff. apt. in W. Hatfield, 15 min. from UMass. avail. Jan. 1. All util. inc., $110 per/mo. Call Doug, 247-0344, will pay Jan. $110 for you! tf12-13

1 bdrm. furnished, apt for 2 near campus. Convnt. location, spacious, comfty., quiet. Air cond., pool, cable, utilities, $145 mn., avail Jan. 1. 253-7217 tf12-13

To sublet — furnished 1-bedroom apt., $155/mn., avail. Jan. 25. Bus service. 253-9884. tf12-13

Notices

CHESS CLUB
Meeting tonight, 7:30 to midnight, in CC 804-808. There will be a D.B. tournament (free) if enough are interested.

CHRISTIANS
Prayer meeting every day, 11:30 am-1:00 pm. Join us in praising the Lord. 177 CC (or check daily schedule).

CHRISTIANS
Praise God through the singing of Christmas Carols. Meet at the Colonial Lounge, S.U. at 5:30 pm, Fri., Dec. 15.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE
Success in examinations is the theme of this week's meeting. All are welcomed tonight at 6:45 pm in Rm. 803 CC.

DAMES CLUB
Tomorrow night, 7:00 pm in the Farley 4-H House. UMass Dames Club will hold its annual pot luck supper. For info and reservation call Doe Zottolie, 665-4774.

EXOTIC ART-EXHIBIT
Display of works by Memran Vajdl at S.U. Art Gallery from Dec. 15-22 at 1-4 pm.

FRANKENSTEIN
Tonight open tryouts for U.T. Production of Frankenstein CC 163-7:00 pm.

G.S.S.
Meeting tonight at 6:30, Rm. 905-909 at 6:30.

LECTURE
Russell Johnson of AFSC will speak on his visit to Republic of China tonight, 7:30 pm, Amherst College Merrill Science Center Lecture 2.

NAIADS
Meeting today at 4:00 at WoPE Pool. Attendance is a Must. If you can't make it, call Trina, 6-9556.

N.E.S. TUTORING
There will be no more tutoring for the rest of the semester. The N.E.S. building was heavily flooded over the weekend. See the Collegian at the beginning of next semester for tutoring info.

VALUES CLARIFICATION
Tues. afternoon at 4. Last class of the semester. Social get together and party. Bring refreshments. Come if you want credit! Patterson Lounge, Tues. Dec. 12.

LOST
Plain dark brown hat lost in CC Sat. either in Hatch or U. Store. Please call Susan, 6-7407.

Wallet with IDs, Social Security, Gas cards-contact owner, Oriol Prsunyer, 253-3891.

Pair of tan leather gloves near Worcester D.C. w/name inside. Call Helinka, 546-6835.

Patched Suede pocketbook, brown and beige. Lost in CC-Deborah Weiner, 546-5912.

If anyone knows the whereabouts of a stolen green snorkle parka, I would appreciate hearing from you. It's cold outside. Call Michael 546-6851, 615 Field.

FOUND
Ladies Bulova Watch. Call Bill Hunt, 546-5478.

Black kitten-white paws found Sat. near Whitmore. Call Linda 6-8519.

Robert G.-the glasses you lost in parking lot behind So. College are in CC Lost and Found.

Chorale To Feature 'Gloria'

UMass Chorale will present a program of choral music tomorrow at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium.

Under the direction of Dr. Richard du Bois, the Chorale has become well-known in New England, has toured throughout the United States and Europe, and has made numerous radio and television appearances.

Featured will be a performance, with brass sextet and continuo, of the rarely heard "Gloria Concertata" by Claudio Monteverdi. The "Gloria", a highly festive work, is the surviving portion of a mass of thanksgiving composed for the city of Venice in 1631. Also featured will be a contemporary setting of the "Magnificat", for chorus, trumpet, and organ, by Halsey Stevens. Walter Chesnut, of the University music faculty, will be trumpet soloist, and Miss Karen Thomas will assist at the organ. The program will also include two double choruses by Brahms and Pachelbel; and works of Corsi, Scarlatti, Faure, Phillips, and Howells.

A small ensemble of sixteen voices, called The University Chamber Singers, will perform seasonal music of the Renaissance.

The Western Massachusetts Youth Chorus, directed by Dr. du Bois, will make its debut performance at this concert. Organized under the auspices of the Massachusetts Music Educators' Association, the Youth Chorus was formed to provide outstanding young singers, selected by audition from high schools in the Western Massachusetts area, with an ongoing outlet for their talents.

The concert is open to the public, without charge.

Veteran Tutors

The Veterans Affairs Office (239 D Whitmore) is compiling a referral list of tutors. All veteran graduate students are urged to come to the Veterans' Office so that they may be listed as possible tutors for undergraduate veterans. Standard tutorial rates paid.

Weather
(9) 256-6714

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

☆ By SYDNEY OMARR ☆

Many born under Aquarius are brilliant,progressive and capable of perceiving future trends. These persons are drawn to Leo, harmonize with Libra and Gemini, have much in common with Aries and Sagittarius. However, Aquarius should exercise caution in dealing with Taurus and Scorpio. When it comes to making financial arrangements, Pisces seems capable of aiding the Aquarian.

***

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Don't reach too far afield. If you do, be ready to pay for privilege. Key now is to utilize material at hand. You are capable and others know it. You will be given more responsibility. Accept challenge.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Friend may have misgivings regarding investment. Heed your own counsel. Get rid of deadwood. Prepare for new period ahead. Stress independence, originality. Leo can play prominent role. Highlight creativity.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Obtain hint from Taurus message. Be ready for new starts in new directions. Mate, partner may not be seeing issues too clearly. Know it and do some personal checking. Accent is on career, ability to advance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Follow hunch. Your intuitive intellect works overtime. You are able now to perceive what is to occur. Accent is on long distance communications, special writings. You have unusual allies.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Diversity. Emphasize versatility. Relationship is due to intensify. Budget requires checking. Reach money agreement with mate, partner. Young person is going through period of self-deception. Respond in mature manner.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Go slow. Be thorough in checking apparent minor matters. Security could be at stake. Know this and insist on solid base. You get backing from those with experience. Express willingness to learn.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You gain more freedom. Don't abuse it. Be aware of promises, obligations connected with relatives. One who wants to communicate should be heard. Change occurs in employment area. Don't neglect health.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Overcome temptation to be extravagant. You can please loved one without being foolish. Consult family member before purchase of any luxury item. Strive for more understanding at home. Taurus, Libra persons are involved.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): See in light of actuality. It may seem as though details have been handled. But it will be necessary for you to review facts. Sharpen sense of perception. See beyond the obvious. Obtain significance of secret.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Extra responsibility is indicated. You may be getting message on wrong wire. Means take care with interpretation. Ideas that seem perfect could lack substance. Know it and give yourself more time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Finish rather than begin project. Find ways of reaching more people with product, message. Friend may not be too practical about your money. Laugh at your own foibles. But protect possessions.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): One who makes promise may not intend to keep it. Assert your needs. Don't fool yourself. Maintain independent stance. There is room at top-but you will have to make your own way. Leo could be in picture.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you travel, study and experiment. You are interested in wide variety of subjects. You teach, share kowledge and you will be more fulfilled in 1973, with September indicated as your outstanding month of the coming year.

Copyright 1972, Gen. Fea. Corp.

Crossword Puzzle

ACROSS
1 Indonesian tribesman
4 Dropsy
9 Cheer
12 Ordinance
13 Citrus fruit
14 Female sheep
15 Province in India
17 Title of respect
19 Arrow poison
21 Chinese mile
22 Antlered animal
25 New Deal agency (init.)
27 Unit of weight in India
31 Seed container
32 Runs away in panic
34 Pronoun
35 Old French coin
36 Distress signal
37 Near
38 Make merry
41 Haiti
42 Paradise
43 Before
44 Dock
45 Compass point
47 Woody plant
49 Stick
53 Put on, as clothes
57 Simian
58 Pick out
60 Devoured
61 Obstruct
62 Shuts noisily
63 Prohibit

DOWN
1 High mountain
2 Greek letter
3 Beard of grain
4 Verve
5 Certificate issued as evidence of debt
6 Printer's measure
7 Parent (colloq.)
8 Dye plant
9 Soak
10 Reverence
11 Pronoun
16 Irish dance
18 Locations
20 Period of time
22 Seasoning
23 Carried
24 Paid notice
26 City in The Netherlands
28 Hypothetical force
29 Depart
30 Showy flower
32 Cry
33 American essayist
35 Intelligence
39 French article
40 Skill
41 Three-toed sloth
44 Writing implement
46 Units of energy
48 Periods of time
49 Uncouth person
50 New Deal agency (init.)
51 Dress border
52 Cloth measure
54 Catch (colloq.)
55 Greek letter
56 Lair
59 Babylonian deity

Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle

Distr. by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

B. C. by Johnny hart

THE WIZARD OF ID by Brant parker and Johnny hart

FLORIDA

Jan. 5 - 14

Only $130

includes:
Deluxe Continental Trailways Accommodations
Champagne Pool Party
Live Entertainment
400 foot Ocean Beach
Two Pools
Game and Billiard Room

Admission and Transportation to Disneyworld and Kennedy Space Center

Also Available

Daily Happy Hour with 1/2 price drinks and hors d'oeuvres

Tennis and Golf Courts — Charges

FOR MORE INFORMATION CALL 545-0585 or come to 818 CAMPUS CENTER, ask for Russ Sobelman.

Gymnasts Edged By So. Conn.

By JOHN CALABRIA

This past Saturday, in what turned out to be a last event effort, the UMass Gymnastics team lost to a capable Southern Conn. team by a score of 155.8-153.30.

Southern, coached by U.S. Olympic Coach Abe Grossfeld, took an early lead in Floor Ex. behind the 9.2 of Vic Ziniewicz, but the meet was by no means over. Satisfactory performances were turned in by Jack Berner and Jay Thomsen, with one of his best Floor Ex. routines to date.

Pommel Horse saw UMass regain some of its momentum and move ahead of Southern Conn. The performances on Side Horse lead the way for the Ring team. Behind the solid routines of Jay Aronstein and his well-deserved 9.45, as well as Dan Sperr with a 9.15, Still Rings lengthened the lead for UMass. Southern wasn't sitting still either and the meet score was only a difference of tenths.

The second half of the meet proved to be the turning point and downfall for the Minutemen. Southern began chipping away at the UMass lead with Vaulting. Vaulting, which started a little shaky in previous meets, has been steadily improving and kept the two teams within close range of each other, still giving UMass the edge.

Parallel Bars saw UMass lose their lead by two tenths. One bright spot here was Gene Whelan's fine 8.90 performance.

Moving to High Bar UMass had its last chance to end the meet with a victory. But Southern, which is known for its strong High Bar, capitalized on its reputation and walked away with the event. The Minutemen, trying so hard to pull this one out, faltered and had some bad breaks which cost them the meet.

The All-around saw Gene Whelan turn in some good performances and total 50.60, which was three-tenths short of first place.

Although this was a disappointing loss for UMass key lessons were learned by the young team. With hard workouts this week they should be able to correct errors and perform well in their first home meet against Army this Saturday. In addition to Jay Thomsen, Jay Aronstein, Dan Spier and Gene Whelan, UMass will rely on strong performances from Roy Johnson, Steve Nelson and Rich Seikunas, who also performed well at Southern.

Saturday, Dec. 16, will find UMass going against the Army Varsity and JV teams at 2 and 4 PM respectively. Army is currently 1-1 after losing to Cornell 152-143. Their JV team defeated Suffolk Community College 119.85-99.40 and is 1-0. Army is coached by former ass't. coach at Springfield, Ned Crosley and is captained by Jack Rutherford, one of the all-around men. This will be the first outing for the UMass JV team which is a composite of JV as well as some Varsity members. Whatever happens it will be a full day for Gymnastics at UMass.

Harriers Upended

(Continued from P. 16)

Maloney and Rick Barry of UMass. On the gun lap, Cantin pulled away, winning in a time of 4:13. Maloney was second, in a career-best time of 4:15. Rick Barry was 4:16.5, three tenths of a second ahead of Gillin, and Adelphi's Nick Papain.

Freshman Tom Maguire of UMass jumped into an early lead in the two-mile, and held for six laps. Randy Thomas and Bill Gillin advanced steadily, and at the twelfth lap, UMass appeared headed for a 1-2-3 sweep. Pete Bortolotti of UConn advanced at about the fourteenth lap, however, and at the same time, Maguire began to fade. Bortolott's long, hard kick at the final lap carried him past Gillin and Thomas to victory in a time of 9:23.9, and Bill Cantin sprinted past Maguire to finish fourth.

UMass failed to score in the mile or two mile relays, both won by UConn.

The Minutemen travel to Connecticut again this afternoon where they will face Yale in the finale of their pre-Christmas schedule.

CAPTAIN DON RILEY scores Saturday against Norwich, bringing the goaltender out to meet him, then putting it by. In a game in which the Minutemen were outplayed, they managed to pull off a 6-6 tie. (MDC Photo by Alan Chapman)

TONITE
See
John Morgan
featuring RICO FLASHBACK
at
The English Pub
9:30 - close

CO-CAPTAIN JAY ARONSTEIN is shown performing his speciality, the rings in the meet on Saturday at Southern Connecticut. He will see action again this Saturday when the gymnasts face a tough Navy squad.

Raiders Win, 24-16

OAKLAND (AP)--Oakland's Daryle Lamonica threw long touchdown passes to Fred Biletnikoff and Raymond Chester Monday night and Marv Hubbard became the ninth National Football League player to rush for 1,000 yards this season in a 24-16 victory over New York which killed the Jets' playoff hopes.

The loss also spoiled a record-breaking night for Jets; receiver Don Maynard, who caught seven of Joe Namath's passes for 132 yards to establish an NFL mark of 632 career receptions, one more than Baltimore's Raymond Berry.

The Jets led 13-10 at the half but Oakland opened the third period by driving 75 yards in 13 plays to set up Charlie Smith's one-yard touchdown run that put the Raiders ahead to stay.

Hubbard, who hit the 1,000-yard mark in a first-half touchdown drive, picked up 24 yards on the third-quarter scoring march.

Bobby Howfield kicked his third field goal of the NFL's final 1972 Monday night game, a 42-yarder early in the fourth period, to lift the Jets within 17-16, but Lamonica came back with a touchdown pass to tight end Chester on a play covering 68 yards for the clinching score in the nationally televised contest.

Notice

Both Men's and Women's basketball squad listings are due in the IM office Wednesday and Thursday between 8:30 and 5:00.

WMUA

Kent Best and Don Gorsky will be at the WMUA Microphones when the Minutemen face the UConn Huskies in a Yan-Con tilt. The game will be telecast beginning at 8:00 from Storrs, Connecticut.

Yesterday's Sports Head featured Peil Pennington, Minutemen QB.

HOW DOES YOUR CAR SAY
HELP! QUICK!

IN AUTOMATIC TRANSMISSION LANGUAGE?

Strange sounds . . . sluggishness . . . delayed response to shift changes . . . these are all SOS signals from your transmission meaning, "Quick, get me serviced before my ailments become serious."
We know the language well. And we've built our business on your confidence in us by applying "band aids" in time to avoid "major surgery".

United Transmission Exchange Inc.
389 King Street Northampton, Mass.
584-6790

California over the Holidays

round trip jet L.A. $179.00
Leaves Boston Dec. 23
Returns Boston JAN. 3
For more information please contact Russ Sobelman, 545-0585.

PLANNING A YEAR OF STUDY ABROAD?

Tel Aviv University Overseas Student Programs offer credit-earning programs open to American students.

- One Year Programs for Freshmen, Sophmores, Juniors including special divisions in the Exact Sciences & Jewish Studies.
- Spring semester at Tel Aviv University.
- Summer Sessions & Archaeology Programs.
- A unique & meaningful life experience.

Send coupon for more information and application.

American Friends of Tel Aviv — University, Inc.
41 East 42nd Street
New York, N.Y. 10017
(212) MU 7-5651

Name
Address
City State Zip

TEL AVIV UNIVERSITY
ISRAEL 1973-74

Leaman Shoots For 100th

By EARL BARROLL

The very thought of it turned a reverse dunk into a double dribble. It transformed pre-game meals into the last supper. Bus rides became a one way deal.

Who was the villain of all this mess? The home court advantage, that's who. Last year wins on the road were as frequent as Haley's Comet. For UMass, it was a nightmare as the hoopsters could only manage one victory on the Yankee Conference road and that was at Vermont during winter vacation.

And so tonight (8 p.m.), the venture to break this jinx begins as the UMass basketball teams travel to UConn, a team that defeated them last year at Storrs, 58-56. Yes, the then Redmen did defeat the Huskies at the Cage as they did to nine out of ten opponents (P.C. was the only loss) last season.

Of all the significants that surround this game, there is one and only one that commands center stage. And that's Jack Leaman's bid for his 100th coaching victory of his career. Actually Leaman and many others were envisioning the century mark when last year's schedule began, but again it was the road that cost him his chance.

As for the hoopsters themselves, Leaman's chief worry revolves around Saturday's win over Rhode Island. "I'm hoping that our kids can come back after the Rhody game," he said. "It was such an emotional game for everyone. But I've never had a team that wasn't ready for UConn."

The Huskies are big, strong and talented. When you put together the forces of Cal Chapman (6'6), Gary Custick (6'8), and super-soph Earl Wilson (6'5 with springs) up front along with the wiley veteran Al Vaughn and a highly touted Junior College transfer Jim Foster, in the backcourt you can expect more than literary restraint from Storrs.

Actually the experts are waiting on the Huskies. Wilson of course, if you got to see him last year as a frosh, is a super talent. And Foster is being counted on to control the show and bring together the multi-skills of the other four. But, we'll just have to wait and see.

Leaman will be countering with his "small team", meaning Charlie Peters, Tom McLaughlin and Al Skinner up front with Rick Pitino and Bill Endicott at guards. "I'm worried about UConn's size," admitted Leeman. "We'll be giving away about two inches per man. But we have to be able to handle the UConn press and these are the five who can."

With his team at 2-1 Leaman also had a few reflections on the season so far. "This club has played the closest to its potential than any other club I've ever had," he noted. "Eleven out of eleven players are working hard every day and at least seven or eight of them are playing to their maximum.

"When this happens, it's the ultimate in coaching. I just can't ask for anything more."

The University of Massachusetts was represented by a rather small but very dedicated crowd at the Boardwalk Bowl in Atlantic City on Saturday. This fan was so determined to see the game, he went down without assurance of a return ride. The Minutemen proved worthy of this, with a clean victory over Cal-Davis. (MDC Photo by George Withers)

Daily Collegian

SPORTS

Grapplers (5-0) Face MIT

By JOHN BOCK

It has been a short two weeks. After almost a month and a half pre-season the UMass wrestling team has almost completed its "mini-season".

Tonight at 8:00 PM in Boyden Auxiliary Gym the defeated Minutemen play host to the Engineers of MIT in the first of only three home meets this season.

Thus far the grapplers under the guidance of mentor Homer Barr have compiled a 5-0 record including wins over three tough Ivy League foes. Yale was beaten 28-16, Harvard 22-12, and Cornell 18-15. UConn fell 46-2 and Central Connecticut was left behind 22-15.

The lineup has probably the best talent in New England and maybe some of the best wrestlers in the East. Transfer Larry Reynolds has an unblemished 5-0 record wrestling at 126 pounds while Frosh Cliff Blom holds a similar honor at 158. The rest of the team is mostly 4-1 and have beaten some of the best wrestlers in the Ivy League in the process.

MIT comes to Amherst with a team that could give the Minutemen some trouble. They are 2-1 with wins over UNH and Wesleyan while dropping a big one to Boston University.

The Engineers highlight talent in the lower weight classes and so it could quite possibly be up to the usually dependable UMass heavies to come through.

At 118 MIT's NEIWA fourth place finisher Ed Hanley will wrestle Freshman Steve Ruggeri. This will be Steve's varsity debut after having an undefeated JV season thus far. He will be filling in for Co- Captain Dave Amato who is still feeling the effects of knee injury sustained in last Saturday's match against Cornell.

The 126 pound weight class will see highly touted Bob Backlund wrestle another unbeaten freshman, Dan Abdun-nabi. Dan comes in as Larry Reynolds moves up to 134 for the evening and Mike McGlaughlin goes in at 142 pounds to try and provide some balance in the middleweights.

Steve Rome will hold things down at 150 and Cliff Blom will be at 158. The next two weight classes will see a shift as Steve Benson moves up to 177 and Chris Cadwallader moves down to 165. Benson, in his days with New York Maritime's top notch team, wrestled every weight class between 158 and heavyweight and claims that the guys get easier to handle as they get heavier.

The Minutemen are going to play it safe at 190 and have made sure that Carl Dambman is ready to perform. Last year Carl had a very quick pin against his MIT foe and is looking for another this year. Heavyweight George Ireland, 4-1 on the season, has a 340 pound behemoth to keep him busy.

Coach Barr maintains that the team will have to be sharp to get a big win.

"We will probably be behind 15-3 going into the 150 pound class and our heavyweights will have to do it for us."

That doesn't sound like the kind of performance one would expect from an undefeated team, but the real measure of any wrestling team is how well they can come from behind to win.

Chances are they can engineer it.

Harriers Defeated At UConn

By WALT POWERS

Performing before a big, enthusiastic hometown crowd in one of the best indoor facilities in New England, the UConn indoor track team rolled over Adelphi and UMass to win their thirtieth dual meet in a row. The final score in Saturday afternoon's meet was UConn 88, Adelphi 33, and UMass 27.

UConn dominated the field events, 50-10-6 over Adelphi and UMass, and held their own in the track events, outscoring Adelphi and UMas 40-23-21.

The Huskies started fast, sweeping the No. 35 weight throw. Andy Bessette was the winner with a throw of 56'5 1/2". Sophomores Ken Banda and Mike Geraghty were impressive in the long jumps. Adelphi's Ray Lee won it with a jump of 22'3 3/4". over UConn's Chuck Lindner. Ken Banda was third with a jump of 21'4 1/2, and Geraghty, who fouled on a 22-footer, was fourth with 21'3 1/2.

UConn dominated the shot-put, but Adelphi's Dave Arcieri won it with a heave of 52'3". UConn earned another sweep in the high jump, Bob Marceau winning with a jump of 6'6".

UConn swept their third and final event in the pole vault, where John Acosta brought the crowd to its feet with a number of fifteen foot vaults. He broke both the school and the field house records, eventually winning with a leap of 15'3 3/4".

In the final field event, Chuck Lindner beat out Minuteman Mike Geraghty, to take the triple-jump with a jump of 45'8 1/2". Geraghty's jump was 44'9". Dwight Estey of UConn was third, at 41'1 3/4".

The Minutemen got their lone victory in the sixty yard hurdles, where Jim Hennessey won in a time of 07.9 seconds. John Braccio edged Minuteman John Mounger at the tape, to finish second, also in a time of 7.9.

The big battle in the 600 came in the third heat, where Adelphi's Dennis Walker ran against UMass record holder Steve Levine and UConn's Steve Hulme. Hulme and Walker moved ahead in the second lap, but Steve Levine's gun-lap kick caught a fading Hulme at the end. Walker beat Levine by a second in a time of 1:12.8. Adelphi's Keith Davis was third.

The Minutemen failed to score in the 60 yd. dash, won by UConn's freshman sensation Heywood Woodward in 6.3 seconds. In the J.V. 60', Marshall Pendleton won easily in a time of 6.4', which would have given him third, had he run varsity.

UMass never seriously threatened in the thousand', but Freshman Pete Byron did run a 2:17.6. good enough for fourth place.

Distance races highlighted the meet for UMass. In the mile, Bill Gillin of UMass battled Yankee Conference cross country champion Bill Cantin of UConn for the first six laps. As the race neared the finish, Gillin faded slightly, and was passed by John

(Continued on P. 15)

Marty Kelly

We Didn't Need The Blue Hen

From the Podium, Atlantic City, N.J.-In a region where Delaware is king, a few UMass alumni hide and hope. And that hope became reality captured by the unassuming eye of the ABC lens. And in a Hall that was hosted the best in the political arena, it was a "sleeping giant" from the Berkshires that spoke loudest at the Podium, and everyone less the Boardwalk pigeons heard the noise.

And the pigeons, permanent residents of the Boardwalk domain, could really care. As they patrolled the top of Convention Hall in lazy, everyday fashion, and soon became lost in the morning fog, it became obvious the Boardwalk wasn't quite ready for college football. And the mild-somewhat provoking 50 degree temperature, left you with the Cape in October let alone football in early December.

However the tourist entrepreneurs opened their doors to the visitors 3,000 miles apart. And you kind of got the impression that the Bars and Lounges, both empty and perverted, had to bring back their summer act. Similarly , the Boardwalk Committee felt that they too had to import an act for mid- December and that they too were guilty about really being unprepared for the tourist reception. For in a way, the promoters of the Bowl failed.

Or did the Blue Hen turn chicken?

Yeah, you could say that the Boardwalk was somewhat sullen and condensed this past weekend. Except for the upper ten floors of the Holiday Inn that fell to the UMass ethic, a few post game receptions, and a late night glance at the darkened Atlantic that even Puff the Magic Dragon occasionally enjoyed some solace was offered the visitors. But the game was a tough act to follow and may never be in such similar circumstance in this decade. But you never know.

Oh, it was a nice gesture setting up one of these East-West affairs. So you had an All-American and perhaps the most explosive, individually talented offensives in New England to match-up, and although it looked good on paper, and the U-Cal campus over the UMass voice at the half disturbed people, and the TV cameras caught the grace of Pennington, Parrott, Metallo and Biggs, the three thousand miles really hurt.

But it didn't keep the Minutemen from convincing the East and countless numbers of recruits all over the East coast that UMass football has the potential and the braintrust to reign somewhat at supreme in its weight class. And what about the weight of the Mud Hen. From the fat cat of a month ago, the Delawareites have now dwindled to ameciated poultry for daring to sellout the Boardwalk and then hope for that vacation with the Camelia Bowl in California. Neither dream came true.

And if the Hens were to challenge for their fifth straight Boardwalk, the Bars and Lounges would have been a bit more livelier this past weekend. The pigeons would have smelt and then felt the aura of excitement. And the summer stage would have been alive again.

So the 72' Boardwalk went with regionalization instead of rationalization. "We had packed our bags after Thanksgiving", said the attention getting Biggs in the Hotel later that evening. "Before we knew it, we were headed East. It's really tough when there's no one in the stands for you."

And I'm sure although eight years apart the Boardwalk Bowl had a bit in common with the Tangerine Act of 64'. And then again it didn't. But in both your top legislators all showed up to link politics and football with "their" fine state university that they'll visit once every two years-when BC comes to town. In both you had your big spenders who could afford to buy rounds at the Casa de Sol (roof top palace at the Hotel), and in both the parents flocked to share the precious moments of again that sporting experience that is a rare privilege to experience especially in the case of Atlantic City.

So the Kiernan's showed up from New York and the Cummings from Williamstown and the Metallo's from Pittsfield. And the hour of victory belonged to them as well. And although Phil Roland scrapped his elbows for it, Tripucka relieved to strengthen it, and Metallo ran to keep it, the 72' Bowl not only belonged to the players but to the university as well. And even in the Far West where the Berkshires have far less tourist appeal than Atlantic City, the Aggies from the Sacramento Valley will remember the Amherst institution for much more than the tallest library in the world.

So the East-West gimmick was a promotional blunder, the affair itself lost no luster. But maybe the Hall itself should have relegated itself to Pageants and meeting space for political hacks of all dimension and intention. Of all the names that have augmented their prowess here, add two-Metallo and Kiernan and don't forget the scholarships established in their behalf. It remains Boardwalk history forever.

So the 72' Boardwalk is past us now, and although it once stood for wide-eyed fancy seekers one Saturday afternoon in Pennsylvania, five weeks later it helped write perhaps the most attractive piece of UMass sporting heritage...And we didn't need the Blue Hen to help do it...

New England's Largest College Daily

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

Weather

Yubbada, yubbada...that's all folks.

Recyclable

VOLUME C, ISSUE 66 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 13, 1972

Spokesmen for the Third World Alliance, at a press conference held last night announcing that they would leave the School of Education, which they had occupied since Friday morning. (MDC Photo by Mark Majeski)

School Of Ed. Occupation Ends Peacefully

By BOB SCHEIER

The occupation of the School of Education ended last night after the persons who had been in the building since Friday were left at 10 p.m., after being served an injunction ordering them to leave.

Members of the Third World Alliance, who had been demanding a written decision from Dean Dwight W. Allen on the admission of Paul Chandler to the school's graduate program, said they would not honor any further communications from Allen on this or three other demands they had made. The early numbers of the occupiers ranged from 40 last night to almost 200 Monday.

There was no time limit mentioned on the injunction, issued by Judge Samuel T. Tisdale in Northampton Superior Court Tuesday afternoon, but a court spokesman said "immediately" is always implied in such orders.

The injunction, requested by UMass President Robert C. Wood, UMass-Amherst Chancellor Randolph W. Bromery, and UMass-Amherst Director of Security David L. Johnston, was served shortly before 6 P.M. by Deputy Sheriff Richard Wall, at which time the students said they would leave if given four hours to clean the building.

Listed in the injunction were five persons who had been seen in the building, followed by the words "et al".

An Alliance spokesman said the group had received no assurances of academic or legal amnesty for those involved in the occupation, one of the Alliance demands.

As of 5:30 last night Bromery said he was not considering any disciplinary action. He said that if there is no damage to the school and no charges are pressed by any segment of the University community, he would not, at this time, take action against the demonstrators.

Bromery said his contacts with the Alliance, especially Anne Saunders, were open and positive. Bromery said they understood his responsibilities to the University, and that he realized they were "fully committed" to staying in the building.

Dean William Field of Student Affairs, Vice-Chancellor Robert Gage and Director of Security David Johnston were sent to the building to "fulfill the procedure as outlined in the University's picketing code," said Bromery.

The three informed the Alliance of the consequences of not heeding the restraining order and explained the legal technicalities.

Accompanying them, Bromery said, were a group of faculty, administrators and students to insure the occupiers' rights were protected.

In a press conference after the injunction was served, Third World Alliance spokesmen said they had decided not to "put the lives of our supporters" in jeopardy, and "will not risk" a repetition of the Jackson State or Kent State shootings, at which students were shot during campus disturbances.

They also said they supported Chancellor Bromery's decision to seek the injunction, saying Bromery had fulfilled his "administrative duty" in seeking it, and that it was Dean Allen who had forced the seeking of it by his refusal to meet the demands more.

The other three demands listed by the Alliance were:

A written decision from Dean Allen on the admission of Chandler, an official reply from Allen on the question of Chandler's admission to the program to the Alliance, and that Allen specify the precise criteria for graduate admission to the school.

The building was apparently left undamaged during the confrontation. Occupants of the building were seen during the occupation emptying trash baskets, sweeping floors, and rearranging chairs in rooms following meetings.

Yesterday, Dean Allen made public his opposition to the admission of Chandler, following a meeting of the education faculty which called for an injunction ordering the cleaning of the building, and which supported the current admissions process and, in effect, leaving the decision to Dean Allen.

Members of the Third World Alliance had said this decision, and also a copy of a letter from Allen to Mortimer H. Appley, dean of the UMass graduate school, sent to the Alliance did not meet the requirement of a written response from Allen on the Chandler question.

Dean Allen says he is opposed to Chandler's admission because of indications that Chandler was not committed to "non-violence and due process" within the school, and also that Chandler had said he was opposed to the basic premises of the School of Education.

Chandler's supporters said Allen opposed Chandler because of his political views, calling Chandler a "politically aware" black leader.

(Continued on P. 6)

On The Inside:

•3rd World Statement see page three

•Astros Take 2nd Walk see page four

Profs. Debate The Journalist's Role

By MARK VOGLER

A panel of five UMass journalism professors and one student newsman disagreed for more than two hours this week on the evening's question, "What Makes a Journalist?"

The discussion was sponsored by Alpha Phi Gamma, the national honors fraternity for collegiate journalists, and was attended to 50 people in the Student Senate Council Chambers room.

Journalism program director Howard Ziff led a strong case for a professional curriculum he hopes will be instituted at this university for aspiring newsmen while Professors Barney Emmart and Arthur Musgrave argued that the best route to attaining high quality journalists is the pursuit of a liberal education.

Professors Milton Mayer and Larry Pinkham described their positions as "being on the fence." Robert Medeiros, the student panelist, stressed that student ideas are not reflected in the current program or in past ones.

The discussion was moderated by Alvin Oickle, managing editor of the Greenfield Recorder.

Dr. Emmart, 49, a graduate of Harvard and the University of London, said the role of journalism in today's world should be the transformation of news and information which "has to inform and has to guide."

Emmart criticized the professional curriculum approach to journalism which he said was instituted at the University of Missouri in 1908 using the ideas of Robert E. Lee.

According to Emmart, "Like your grandfather's watch, it is so old that it has become fashionable."

He said that the only way to do an adequate job as a news reporter would be to become "better educated than the people you deal with." Emmart said that the problem of journalism schools is that they produced "only three-quarters educated men...Now if that isn't the ideal definition of a hack."

Professor Mayer, 64, who left the University of Chicago to become a newspaper man, offered a short explanation of what makes a good journalist. "Being born that way-and beyond that, being able to write and learning the tricks of the trade on the job."

Mayer, who wrote for the Associated Press, Chicago Evening Post and Chicago American and has written books and magazine articles, mentioned his misfortune in the latter form of publication.

I've had as many magazines shot out from under me as General Albert Sidney Johnson had horses shot out from under him at the Battle of Shiloh."

Prof. Musgrave, 62, a former Nieman Fellow at Harvard University, news editor for the Houston Post and feature editor for the Baltimore Sun, favored a liberal education.

"I recommend that future journalists treat journalism as a social science-critical research and scholarship about the problems of communication...

"What the student needs to major in is the subject which interests him the most. What a journalist needs is as completely liberal an education as possible."

Prof. Pinkham, 46, a University of Maine graduate with a M.S. from the Columbia Graduate School of Journalism, referred to the common ingredient in producing good journalists as the P and V factor-"persistence and vitality".

"I think that self-awareness, a critical attitude toward the world and a knowledge of history, all add up to the making of a good journalist. But, basically, the individual is the medium. A good journalist is a serious person whose job is always going to be difficult in pursuit of the craft."

Department Chairman Ziff, 42, is a former city editor for the Chicago Daily News who also worked on the Chicago News Bureau. He taught journalism at the University of Illinois 1968-71. He said journalism is "a noble and humane pursuit, pressing with the philosopher, the goal of truth."

"It is not merely a vocational study. It is not journalism and the liberal arts, but journalism among the liberal arts. As far as educating a journalist, there is no one single path, no definite single idea that can be considered the right approach."

Ziff said he believed it is better to receive an adequate education of the journalism techniques in school, since a newspaper can not always find time to teach its reporters on the job.

Medeiros, 20, a junior at the university, a news staffer for the Collegian and a correspondent for the Springfield Union, informed the audience of his decision to quit school. Medeiros will leave next week for Montpelier, Vermont, to begin his duties as a Statehouse reporter for the Associated Press.

"All I've heard this evening is what the professors feel is good for the students. Student input is minimum, even non-existent. My goal is to become the best newsman I know, and at this point, I feel being a member of the university restricts me from doing so.

"Just because I am leaving school, my education isn't going to stop. I don't think it's necessary in order for one to attain a broad education, to take a liberal arts course. I think that if an individual wants to become a newsman, his ambition will carry him there."

Loyalty Oath Issue Goes To Court Jan. 8

By MARK VOGLER

The loyalty oath issue has reached a lull in its month-long battle at the University of Massachusetts and will probably remain so until January 8--at which time a trial date has been scheduled in Middlesex County Superior Court for the case of Ford et al vs. Abrahms et al.

The court case involves the class action suit filed by three UMass-Boston faculty members who received a preliminary injunction December 1.

The injunction restrains the university personnel offices of all three campuses from dismissing anyone employed by the university between October 29, 1969 and September 21, 1972 who refused to sign the oath.

September 21 was the date that a letter was addressed from the employing agencies of the university campuses to all university employees (faculty and staff, and students employed by the university) informing them of the Nov. 15 deadline for signing the oath and the possible consequences for failing to do so.

The oath had been under a three-year period of ajudication until April of this year when the Supreme Court ruled that the law requiring any state employee to sign a loyalty oath was constitutional.

Att. Stephen Oleskey, legal counsel for the UMass-Boston plaintiffs, has said there was a strong indication by the state that the case would be consolidated with the cases of 33 Berkshire Community College, Pittsfield and 18 UMass-Amherst faculty and staff members. Both cases are represented by Att. William A. Norris of Cummington and are pending on injunctions.

Although there are a few people left unprotected by the court actions--those who were employed after September 21 and didn't sign the oath--university authorities have said that no mass firing or unjust dismissals will take place over the long intercession.

The movement to abolish the Massachusetts oath received a big lift last Wednesday when Representative-elect James Collins of the 2nd Hampshire District and State senator-elect John Olver of Amherst filed legislation to wipe the 1949 enactment of the books.

With the arrival of legislation to repeal the oath, Joan Tuttle, a spokeswoman for the American Civil Liberties Union, said a separate action on behalf of foreign nationals would not have to be brought forth.

Collins was fairly optimistic about the bill's being supported by Massachusetts legislators. "If it is presented in a reasonable way to the legislature to show that the oath is no longer effective, then I think it will be successful."

Despite the favorable court actions, Collins said "the courts are a slower process" and that "the quickest remedy to the situation is legislative action."

Collage Of Courses For Jan.

By AVIS YUNI

Courses in areas such as engineering, hispanic languages, physics, legal studies, education, officiating and coaching techniques of skiing, are being offered to students during the upcoming January period.

Most of the courses offered will be informal, a member of the Provost's office told the Collegian. Basically there will be very little happening since the needed mechanism for running a January program has not been developed yet.

This January the University will begin to identify programs for next year and establish a mechanism for communication, registration, co-ordinating programs for subsequent January terms.

No tuition or room fees are required of students who wish to participate in the January course offerings. Meals, however, will not be provided by the university.

In regard to housing, the Area Residence Hall Directors have sent out cards to the students living in dorms in their areas which ask them if they plan to stay on campus during the January break. These will enable them to know how many students in their area will need housing.

When these cards have all been returned and tallied, the directors will meet with Dr. Robert Gage, Vice Chancellor of Student Affairs, and other officials to decide what will happen regarding housing.

The Provost's office does not anticipate that a large number of students will participate in the courses this January. Thus an informal registration is being held with students signing-up at the department offering their desired course.

Students can also take Five College Courses during the month. Information regarding these can be obtained at the Provost's office, Whitmore.

No rigid credit policy will be enforced. Basically a student will either complete a grade card upon completion of the course or the faculty member teaching it will forward the names of the students. Next year a formal mechanism will be set up. To distribute credit the standard hour-credit relationship will be used.

University faculty will work with Graduate students during the month, research, supervise student work, and teach courses. A Faculty Senate Constitutional Convention, Faculty Workshop of long-range planning for the Department of Public Health, and Faculty Workshop for the School of Education will be held.

Through the Department of Continuing Education, outside conferences involving University departments will be held on Principles of Health Agency Administration: Planning and

(Continued on P. 6)

HADLEY VILLAGE
• 6 month lease
• 1 and 2 bedroom available
• 15 minutes from Amherst
• rent includes heat, air conditioning, electricity
538-8269

THIS IS THE STRAIGHT DOPE!
CLIMAX DRYGOODS (Down the alley) will put an end to all your Christmas shopping
Beautiful Clothes at nice prices.
Baggies, Cords, western shirts and jersies.
As well as the town's finest assortment of Birckhead hand-crafted leathers and silver rings & jewelry. CLIMAX your Christmas shopping in Amherst...
•DOWN THE ALLEY • ACROSS FROM SOUND IDEAS•
CLIMAX DRYGOODS

Phone Area 413-253-7615
FOWLER INC Jewelers
WATCH CLOCK and JEWELRY REPAIRING
66 NORTH PLEASANT STREET AMHERST, MASS. 01002
PEWTER & LEATHER MUGS
DIAMONDS WATCHES SILVERWARE CHINA

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

The office of the DAILY COLLEGIAN is on the second floor of the Student Union on the campus of the University of Massachusetts, zip code 01002. Telephones: 545-2550 (news); 545-0344 (sports); 545-0721 (business).

Second class postage is paid in Amherst. THE DAILY COLLEGIAN publishes Monday through Friday during the academic year, except during vacation, exam periods or holidays. Accepted for mailing under the authority of an act of March 8, 1879; as amended by an act of June 11, 1943. Subscription rates are $6.00 per semester or $10.00 per year.

Mr. Dov Gordon, a senior at UMass and who has been involved in many facets of Jewish life, spoke last night on "A FAREWELL TO AMERICAN JEWRY" in the Colonial lounge of the Student Union. (MDC photo by John Neister)

Ross Declares C.C. Fee 'Unfair To All Students'

By CINDY GONET

If an impending suit against the University is won in regard to UMass graduate students not paying the Campus Center fee, a precedent will be set for all undergraduates.

The move to release Grad students from paying the C.C. fee came Monday night at a meeting of the Graduate Student Senate.

Veda Ross, President of the Grad. Senate stated yesterday that the Campus Center fee is unfair to all the students. "Graduates don't use the building as much as the undergraduates. They only have one office in the RSO area; and set one meeting every two weeks," explained Ms. Ross.

"Why then should they be required to pay $62 or possibly $100 a year for a building they don't use?" Ms. Ross continued.

When the Campus Center was in its conceptual stage, the Board of Trustees voted in 1969 that graduate students should be required to pay only 1/2 the fee of the undergraduates.

In 1970 when the financing of the building became a burden the SUG Board, composed of only 4 graduate students, decreed that graduate students should equally share with the undergraduates the entire Campus Center fee.

The Graduate Student Senate, in response to this "unjust financial payment" sought the aid of Student Attorney Richard M. Howland. After dredging out Trustee documents which declared little that alleviated their situation, the Graduate Senate found the alternatives open to them.

These were: 1. Sue under the Fourteenth Amendment, which deals with due process of law. 2. Put the money in an escrow fund, with entailed withholding the fee by a large number of grads, or 3. Put the money in a symbolic escrow fund, which would make likely a class action suit against the University.

Due to the risks involved in suing the University, the Senate decided to harbor the money in an escrow fund and follow with a class action suit. By this plan of action, the grads will have paid their fee, be allowed to register, and may act as the plaintiff in a suit against the University in retrieving the fee.

Since there are at least 4,000 full-time grad students and 1,000 part-time graduate students, a considerable sum of money is involved.

Ladd Calls For Investment Guidelines

By SHELLEY LAUZON

A report released last month by Standish, Ayer, and Wood, Inc. of Boston, the university's investment counsel, reveals that over $1,700,000 is currently invested by the university in diversified stocks and bonds.

Figures as of October 6, 1972, list the value of the securities as $1,736,692, with an annual income of $67,651. In terms of distribution, 25% is invested in bonds, 7% in preferred stocks, and 68% in common stocks.

Public utility bonds account for nearly half of all bonds; for example, $25,000 is invested in Boston Edison Company, and $26,000 in Florida Light and Power.

Industry and miscellaneous account for 30%, including $25,000 in General Motors, $40,000 each in Dupont and Eastman Kodak, $34,000 in General Foods Corporation, and $41,000 in Holiday Inns, a subsidiary of ITT (International Telephone and Telegraph).

Common stocks are distributed to a variety of interests, the majority held in chemical and electrical equipment companies, banks, oil companies, office equipment firms, and mining and metal corporations.

Included in this group is American Cyanamid, with a $40,000 investment, $40,000 in RCA Corporation, $34,000 in Travelers Insurance Corporation, $18,000 in the Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing Company, $32,000 in Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, and $14,500 in J.C. Penney Company.

Larry Ladd, President of the Student Government Association, sent a letter to President Wood on October 30, 1972, asking for an investigation into the possibilities of establishing investment guidelines, which an increasing number of colleges and universities are adopting. To date, no mention has been made of any existing guidelines or plans for establishing such a policy.

University administration have been unavailable for comment for the past two weeks. When called, all were said to be out of town on business, and the date of return was not known at the time.

Welfare Mothers Strive To Better Themselves

By CAROLYN CALDWELL

Marilyn Beaucage has two children, receives aid from the Massachusetts Department of Welfare and is a University of Massachusetts freshman.

If she and others are successful, the combination will not be unusual on Bay State campuses. They believe that welfare mothers should be given the opportunities to educate themselves so they can get jobs that take them off welfare rolls.

"Welfare mothers don't want to be on welfare," Ms. Beaucage said in a MDC interview yesterday. "We don't want to be munching off the state for the rest of our lives."

Ms. Beaucage is one of the several people trying to open up possibilities for low-income and welfare recipient mothers to be able to attend a full-time degree program. This will give the women new opportunities for jobs.

"Mothers are restricted because of the kids," said Ms. Beaucage. We have to pay the babysitter about $40 a week. This runs into quite a lot of money."

Ms. Beaucage said, "For most welfare mothers there is no way to get an education, as of now. With the high rent and welfare checks that are below the poverty level, we can't save for tuition."

Another person devoted to helping welfare mothers is Elizabeth Dickey, a graduate student. According to her, the University "is not serving everybody."

Ms. Dickey suggests that a small way to "open the University up is to diversify the student body. One way to do that is to let poor people have the opportunity for education.

"I believe there has got to be a revolution in the area of education. It has got to start in the very guts of what education is."

Ms. Dickey hopes that the "University will become more responsible to poor women. When the population of students changes, other things will change. Women who are poor will bring reality into the classroom."

More information on the proposal is available at the Everywoman's Center and the Valley Woman's Club.

Third World Statement

(Ed. Note: The following is a statement by the Third World Alliance on the School of Ed. Takeover.)

A temporary restraining order was issued at 6:00 p.m. today, December 12, 1972, and the Third World Alliance and other supporters have been ordered to evacuate the School of Education building by 10:00 p.m. tonight. If we do not leave the premises which we presently occupy by 10:00 p.m., then a physical confrontation will be imminent. It is the Third World Alliance's firm belief that the principles of freedom and self-determination are synonomous to life. Accordingly, we are devoted to the preservation and perpetuation of life. This is to say that the Third World Alliance will not put the lives of its members and supporters in jeopardy. We do not desire a reoccurrence of the slaughter that took place at Southern University in Baton Rouge, Louisiana, and we condemn the murdering of unarmed students at Southern University, Jackson State College, Kent State University, South Carolina College, and the defenseless prisoners at Attica and other Atticas.

We are leaving the building as a result of having been served a temporary restraining order, and this reflects our political integrity, responsibility and maturity vis-a-vis the absence of the moral, intellectual and personal integrity of Dean Dwight Allen who assured us by telephone conversation at 5:55 p.m. on Monday, December 11, 1972, that the Third World Alliance would have a written reply from him by the morning of Tuesday, December 12, 1972.

In view of this fact, the Third World Alliance will no longer honor and respect any communication with Dean Dwight Allen on the matters that led to our occupation of the School of Education between Friday, December 8, and Tuesday, December 12, 1972. The coercion and manipulation of faculty, students and staff at all levels in the School of Education as it relates to authoritarian and paternalistic behavior on the part of Dean Dwight Allen will remain a constant source of examination, criticism and challenge by the Third World Alliance in the spirit of Paul Chandler. This conduct will be attacked constitutionally, philosophically and functionally by the commitment, vigilance and dedication of the membership of the Third World Alliance.

The issuance of the temporary restraining order by the Chancellor of the University of Massachusetts, Dr. Randolph Bromery, receives the firm support of the Third World Alliance as it reflects the execution of his administrative responsibilities. The Third World Alliance fully understands that the Chancellor's action was precipitated by the non-action of Dean Dwight Allen who failed to measure up to his responsibility of presenting us with a written reply, as he had guaranteed verbally. We applaud the integrity and patience of the Chancellor for providing all opportunities for a just settlement on the demands presented in writing to Dean Dwight Allen by the Third World Alliance.

The rejection of Paul Chandler's application for admission to the graduate program of the School of Education by Dean Dwight Allen is representative of what happens to countless members of Third World peoples and others who are willing to articulate and attempt to actualize their political and moral beliefs. Too, this denial of admission exemplifies the kind of conduct on the part of Dean Dwight Allen which the Third World Alliance has previously stated is detrimental to the creative and political education of Third World people. Moreover, the rejection of

(Continued on P. 6)

Food Service Thefts Controversy Statement

On Page 1 on Oct. 31, 1972, The Massachusetts Daily Collegian published a photograph of two women. The caption said: "One is carrying a plastic bag which is allegedly said to contain 'stolen' food." The photo was part of a series MDC published then and in subsequent issues in an effort to report on claims about alleged thefts at University Dining Commons.

A Campus Police investigation as well as checks by the Foods Service Department resulted in exoneration of the two persons unidentified in the photo. The MDC itself has no evidence to uphold any claim that on the night the photo was made the persons pictured were in fact involved in anything except walking from the Commons where they are employed to their automobiles. The Collegian regrets any embarrassment the incident has caused to the pictured women.

HOTEL
DEC. 17
7:00 & 9:30 p.m.
CCA
50¢

FREE DELIVERY
Weekdays 5:30 p.m. - 12:00 midnite
Weekends 4:00 p.m. - 2 a.m.
Kentucky Fried Chicken
256-8745
Student Special 99¢

TONITE
"All Quiet in the Western Front"
at 7 and 11:15 p.m.
also
"Red Dust"
with Clark Gable and Jean Harlow
at 9:45 p.m.
STUDENT UNION BALLROOM

In The Nation And The World

Astros Search For Moon's Oldest Rocks

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) - Apollo 17's explorers turned auto repairmen for seven minutes Tuesday night, fabricating a paper fender out of moon maps so they could drive their lunar taxi on a dust-free ride to an avalanche in search of ancient rocks.

Eugene A. Cornan and geologist Harrison H. Schmitt took off at seven miles an hour for the 4.4 mile drive to sift rubble at the base of a lunar mountain for some of the oldest rocks on the moon.

During their first excursion Monday night they collected the youngest lunar material yet found, perhaps less than 100 million years in age.

The astronauts' first job as they started the second expedition was to form the makeshift fender by taping four of their stiff-paper moon maps together to replace the right rear fender that was loosened Monday night after Cernan accidentally hit it with his geology hammer.

It acted like an automobile mud guard and when it fell off during a drive, the astronauts were showered with black dust from the volcanic valley of the Taurus-Littrow landing site, prompting Cernan to complain:

"I hate this black stuff. It's really irritating. It'll take us half a dozen Sunday's to dust off."

After the fender menders had attacked their creation with clamps, Cernan gave the rover a test ride and Schmitt reported: "I don't see any rooster tail cloud of dust coming over the top. Looks like the dust is going backwards. It's a good fix."

Then they loaded their geology tools aboard and pulled out across the boulder-strewn valley to the avalanche at the base of a 6,000-foot mountain.

While Cernan and Schmitt were taking their longest meter trip on the moon, their Apollo 17 crewmate, Ronald E. Evans, remained busy in lunar orbit, operating mapping cameras and scientific instruments.

The fender solution was worked out at Mission Control.

Astronaut John Young, the commander of last April's Apollo 16 flight, worked on the problem at Mission Control and radioed Cernan instructions Tuesday on how to tape together four no-longer-needed pages from a lunar map book. The pages are stiff paper.

"Clamp them on the Rover's guide rails with a clamp from your utility lamp, let it extend out about four or five inches and you'll save yourselves about 12 dustings," Young said.

Bone-tired from their first seven-hour lunar excursion after a perfect landing Monday, Cernan and Schmitt, first scientist in space, were allowed to sleep an extra hour Tuesday.

They were in good spirits when wakened at mid-afternoon, and Schmitt reported each slept about six hours.

Their driving target Tuesday is a 6,000-foot-high mountain which they call the South Massif 4.4 miles from the landing craft. Photographs indicate an avalanche had tumbled down the side of the mountain, depositing at the base materials from perhaps several lunar age periods.

Schmitt, a geologist who had a field day on the moon Monday, said before the flight that "this avalanche is our best potential for sampling very old material on the moon - perhaps dating back 4.6 billion years to the very origin."

Schmitt's trained geologist's eye should help pick out the elderly rocks. But determination of their exact age will have to wait until they are returned to earth for laboratory analysis.

If Cernan and Schmitt collect the old material, they will have fulfilled their goal on this last Apollo mission - to fill in missing chapters in lunar history, basically the very early and the very late.

Thieu To Release Prisoners In Gesture Of 'Goodwill'

SAIGON (AP)–The 1,015 North Vietnamese prisoners President Nguyen Van Thieu plans to release unconditionally as "a gesture of utmost good will" are nonpersons in Hanoi's eyes.

They never receive any letters or packages from the North. For Hanoi to accept their mail or send any down would mean accepting the fact that North Vietnamese armies are in the South, which the Communists have consistently refused to do.

So the prisoners spend the long, silent days on the Pho Quoc Island, nonpersons in faded maroon fatigues with the letters T.B. for tu binh-prisoner of war-stenciled on the backs.

In an emotional speech to the South Vietnamese National Assembly, Thieu proposed releasing all prisoners of war held by both sides before Christmas. In the first days of his proclaimed Christmas cease-fire, Thieu said, he would unconditionally release 1,105 North Vietnamese prisoners.

Sources close to the administration of the island prison, where 9,800 North Vietnamese and 21,000 Viet Cong prisoners are held, said the internees have been undergoing "sifting, selecting and grouping" preparatory to a mass release.

Phu Quoc Island, in the Gulf of Siam 40 miles off the coast holds all the North Vietnamese prisoners except for 800 sick and wounded kept in a hospital-prison at Bien Hoa and another 40 to 50 transferred to Con Son Island, the old French "Second Devil's Island," for committing crimes against fellow prisoners.

The Thieu government has given considerable thought to repatriating the prisoners from the North.

"This time," said a source, "if the government can help it, the prisoners will not be asked by the International Committee of the Red Cross whether they want to go back or not. The GVN government of Vietnam would look with grave suspicion on any North Vietnamese prisoners who wanted to stay down South at this late stage."

The most recent of numerous POW return efforts of the war was in June 1971 when Thieu offered to release 660 wounded prisoners to Hanoi. All but 13 refused to go home when interviewed by the Red Cross, and the scheme fell through when the North Vietnamese ignored an offshore rendezvous to pick them up.

The prison compound is visited several times a year by two Swiss doctors and three other Red Cross delegates.

In Brief...

Lunar Lab Working Well

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) - The lunar laboratory so laboriously installed by Apollo 17 astronauts on the moon's surface began sending data back to earth even before they had completed their first moon walk.

Erecting the sophisticated science station and taking underground lunar samples in an atmospher one-sixth of the earth's gravity caused Eugene A. Cernan and Harrison H. H. Schmitt some obvious fatigue.

Laird Wants POW's Exempted from Promotion Freeze

WASHINGTON (AP) - Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird said Tuesday he is asking that prisoners of war and the missing in action be exempted from a White House-ordered freeze on all promotions.

In all, Laird asked for four types of exemptions from the freeze, which President Nixon ordered as a money-saving move.

Boyle Leads In UMW Election

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Labor Department announced Tuesday that United Mine Workers President W. A. "Tony" Boyle was leading with nearly 60 per cent of the vote in first scattered returns from a court-ordered union election.

The report said Boyle was leading his opponent, Miners for Democracy candidate Arnold Miller of Ohley, W. Va., 2,180 votes to 1,587 in a count of 53 out of the union's 1,300 locals. No breakdown of the vote was given in the initial report.

It said Boyle's vice presidential running mate, Leonard J. Pnakovich, was leading Mike Trbovich on Miller's slate 2,136 to 1,434, for a margin of more than 70 per cent.

The report added that Boyle's choice for secretary-treasurer, Wilbert Killion, was leading Harry Patrick on Miller's slate 2,066 to 1,496, a margin of just under 57 per cent.

The first reports were regarded by both camps as inconclusive.

The next official report of partial returns is scheduled for 10 a.m. EST Wednesday.

The vote-counting is expected to take most of the rest of this week with final results to be posted by Dec. 20. Partial returns are to be made public on a twice-daily basis.

Three Labor Department officials are hand-counting the ballots, under heavy security, in a departmental office in suburban Silver Spring, Md.

Boyle's camp predicted a 55 to 60 per cent victory in the court-ordered election. But leaders of the Miners for Democracy professed confidence that they will end Boyle's 10-year domination of the 200,000-member union.

U.S. District Judge William B. Bryant ordered the special union election several months ago after a trial without a jury in which he found widespread voting fraud in Boyle's 1969 re-election over challenger Joseph A. "Jock" Yablonski.

Yablonski, his wife and daughter were found shot to death in their Clarksville, Pa., home several weeks after that election. Several union officials have confessed or been indicted in connection with the murders. Boyle repeatedly has denied any knowledge of the slayings.

Some 1,000 Labor Department agents have supervised all aspects of union affairs, including the election balloting which was conducted in 25 states Dec. 1-8. The unprecedented supervision will cost the government about $4 million.

The sealed ballot boxes were shipped to the Labor Department's Office of Labor-Management and Welfare-Pension Reports in suburban Silver Spring, Md., to be counted.

Joseph A. "Chip" Yablonski, lawyer son of the slain union official, predicted victory for Miller and his Minors for Democracy slate by 8,000 votes.

A Labor Department spokesman estimated some 60 to 70 per cent of the eligible Mine Workers had cast ballots. That would put the total of votes between 120,000 and 140,000.

Yablonski's 1969 campaign, the murders and the Miners for Democracy campaign of his former supporters cast a national glare of publicity on the union and its affairs.

SHOWCASE CINEMAS 12345
24 HR. TEL. 733-5131
ROUTE 5 RIVERDALE RD. WEST SPFLD.
SHOWCASE CINEMA'S
Christmas Gift To You
A free student discount card good for 50c off for you & a guest at Showcase Cinemas in W. Springfield, Lawrence, Worcester & Orange, Conn.
Get yours free at the Campus Center Concourse Level Monday - Thursday, Dec. 11-14 from 11 to 4 p.m.
also available evenings in Music Room

CELEBRATE
NEW YEAR'S EVE
CAMPUS CENTER STYLE
for reservations and information call 549-0418

SATURDAY NIGHT
TAKE — A — BREAK with the DYNAMIC DESSATATIONS
at
The English Pub
9:30 - close

Peace Talks Continue On Two Levels

Hanoi's Le Duc Tho, right, leads U.S. presidential adviser Henry Kissinger in the garden of the house used for peace talks, as the two negotiators continued their talks yesterday (AP).

PARIS (AP)–The United States and North Vietnam held intensified secret peace talks on two levels Tuesday and Henry A. Kissinger prepared to return to Washington after one more session with Hanoi negotiator Le Duc Tho.

Kissinger's personal plane arrived at Orly Airport on Tuesday night, generating rumors that a final cease-fire agreement was near. Airport authorities said the American Embassy first ordered the plane to stand by for departure Tuesday night, then changed the time to Wednesday after the scheduled meeting with Tho.

The White House confirmed in Washington that Kissinger would be on hand for the Wednesday round, but gave no details on progress of the talks. The U.S. presidential adviser held a 4 1/2-hour session with Tho on Tuesday, after separate meetings by two subcommittees. A subcommittee meeting also will precede the top-level talks Wednesday.

French press reports said a compromise was in the works on the withdrawal of North Vietnamese troops from South Vietnam, so far the major obstacle to agreement.

French Foreign Minister Maurice Schumann predicted the two sides would reach final agreement by the time the new U.S. Congress meets on Jan. 3.

But North Vietnam and the Viet Cong rejected the Christmas peace package suggested by President Nguyen Van Thieu in Saigon and denounced any attempt to seek a Communist commitment on the withdrawal of North Vietnamese forces.

In Washington, the White House and the State Department declined to comment on the South Vietnamese president's proposal. But a number of Washington authorities rated his speech as a bid for public support as the secret talks head toward a climax.

These sources suggested that Thieu must have known that his proposals, like others made in the past, would be rejected by the Communists.

Thieu suggested a cease-fire that would be extended beyond the Christmas season, and an exchange of all war prisoners. There would be direct negotiations among Hanoi, Saigon and the Viet Cong.

Nixon again conferred with Kissinger's top aide, Gen. Alexander M. Haig Jr., who flew to Washington from Paris on Saturday with a first-hand report on the protracted negotiations. Ziegler said Nixon remained in close contact with Kissinger on the day-to-day progress of the talks.

Kissinger and Tho met with the usual cordial handshakes at Gif sur Yvette, 15 miles southwest of Paris in a villa owned by the French Communist party.

The meeting brought to 52 hours the total time they have spent in the past three weeks trying to revise the agreement they drafted in October. Both sides maintained their total news blackout.

Haitians Rescued In Florida

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP) - Hungry but happy, 65 Haitian refugees drifted ashore Tuesday after sailing to Cuba and the Bahamas in a three-week journey aboard a leaking 56-foot sailboat.

The 42 men, 20 women and 3 children jumped ashore at dawn after beaching the craft in three-foot surf some 40 miles north of Miami. Yvon Bruno, the captain, said the refugees included 12 "political prisoners" and their families and friends.

Bruno, who said he was a barge operator in the Haitian capital of Port au Prince, said his father bribed the captain of the guard at a Haitian jail to free the prisoners Nov. 23.

The refugees boarded the ancient sloop and sailed first to Maise, Cuba, where they were forced to trade all their possessions, including their shoes, for food and water after refusing to embrace communism and ask for asylum, according to Bruno.

Bruno said the refugees sailed from Cuba Dec. 5 and landed Dec. 11 at Bimini, a tiny Bahamian island 50 miles east of Miami, where local residents gave them food, clothing and water.

The group included several elderly women suffering from malnutrition and a 22-year-old woman who is five months pregnant, Bruno said. One of the older women was admitted to a local hospital.

Bruno said Haitian jails under the administration of President Jean-Claude Duvalier "are full of political prisoners. I was in a cell holding eight men, and one night three of the others were taken out and were never seen again. We decided it was time to leave."

Duvalier, 21, was named president for life on the death of his father, Francois "Papa Doc" Duvalier in 1971.

Most of the Haitians were reluctant to talk about the flight from their homeland. One man, was asked why he left Haiti, answered, "Because they wanted to kill me."

Bruno, the only member of the French-speaking group who was fluent in English, said the vessel leaked during the trip and that the one hand pump was manned constantly while others aboard bailed.

Residents of a condominium spotted the craft, called police and then turned out to set up a beach-front kitchen for the arrivals.

"How they got here is by the wind and tide and the grace of God," said Mrs. James C. Stetlar, who turned out at dawn with a box of crackers. "That boat looks like a garbage scow."

While the condominium residents fed the refugees, U.S. Customs and Immigration officials arrived and interviewed the leaders before taking the rufugees for processing at the Cuban Refugee Center in Miami.

Truman's Condition Unstable

KANSAS CITY (AP) - Former President Harry S. Truman, hospitalized for a week with congestion of the lungs and related complications, showed improvement Tuesday, doctors said, but remained in serious condition.

A hospital spokesman said the 88-year-old Truman's vital signs of pulse, blood pressure and temperature-described as "somewhat unstable" during the night-had improved during the day.

Truman, taken to Research Hospital and Medical Center last Tuesday, has been listed as serious since Sunday. He had been on the critical list for three days after he failed to respond to antibiotic treatment for heart and kidney problems, in addition to the congested lungs.

Major Battle Building; North Viets On The Run

SAIGON (AP)-Another major battle appeared to be building up northwest of Saigon Tuesday as a mauled North Vietnamese battalion fled through the jungles toward the Cambodian border with South Vietnamese forces in hot pursuit.

South Vietnamese military sources said a North Vietnamese regiment was waiting just inside the Cambodian frontier to attack the pursuing government troops.

A South Vietnamese infantry regiment and an armored personnel carrier squadron headed toward the border to meet the threat of the new attack, the sources added.

During five hours of intense fighting Monday, the sources said, the North Vietnamese battalion lost more than 100 killed. Government casualties were reported as three wounded.

In the air war, U.S. B52s pounded troop concentrations and supply dumps on the coast just north of the demilitarized zone for the sixth straight day. Six missions of up to three planes each hit a target 41 miles southeast of Dong Hoi, a North Vietnamese port.

During the 24-hour period ended at noon Tuesday, the U.S. Command said 13 B52 missions were launched against North Vietnam and 19 in South Vietnam.

American fighter-bombers flew 80 tactical strikes against North Vietnam on Monday, destroying six supply trucks, three highway bridges and three river barges, the U.S. Command said.

In South Vietnam, the command said American crews flew 298 missions Monday, nearly half in the northern region.

Guaranteed Reduced Rents
For June, July, August 1973
OPEN FOR A LIMITED TIME ONLY
swimming pools
professional tennis courts
Now renting for January occupancy
OWNER MANAGED BY BRITTANY MGT.
Monday - Friday 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. p.m. to 5 p.m.
Saturday 9 a.m. to 12 noon
ACROSS FROM GRIST MILL ON EAST HADLEY RD.
Brittany Manor

ROCK THE CHOPPING BLOCK
...will go to your head.
"Chopping Block will be open Wed., Dec. 13 thru Wed., Dec. 20 till 11 p.m., and beyond. For appointments with Adam, Silvia and staff, call 253-9293."
Mon. — Fri. 9 - 7:30
Sat. 9 - 5
253-9293
36 Main St.

TONIGHT
FAT
at the
Rusty Nail Inn
next Wednesday
"Flight"
Rte. 47 Sunderland
665-4937

THE UNIVERSITY CHORALE, under the direction of Dr. Richard duBois, rehearses for their winter concert, to be held tonight at 8 P.M. in Bowker Auditorium. (MDC Photo by Kevin Erkkila)

State To Pay For UMass Offices

BOSTON (AP)--Top state officials have apparently thrown in the towel in their fight against paying the rent for Boston offices of the University of Massachusetts-even though the rent is nearly three times what the legislature had appropriated for it.

Supreme Court Justice Robert Braucher last week decided in favor of the university's trustees. And a spokesman for Administration Secretary William I. Cowin said Tuesday the decision will not be appealed to the full court.

Braucher's brief opinion settled the issue on narrow legal terms, and left untouched the major issue raised by opponents of the rent-how far the university's "fiscal autonomy" goes.

State Comptroller M. Joseph Stacey, who had refused to approve payment of the rent for UMass Boston offices, said Tuesday he had not decided whether to appeal. But Cowin's office said the payments will be approved.

Stacey, according to administration sources, is expected to be replaced shortly in the post he has held since 1965.

Braucher's decision ordering Stacey to process the payment vouchers resulted from a suit brought by UMass trustees.

The comptroller's refusal to pay had initially been backed by Cowin, who said in a letter Oct. 30 to UMass President Robert C. Wood that the $142,470 annual rent for his offices at one Washington Mall in Boston "is far in excess of the $50,250 available for the purpose from the University's appropriations."

He also pointed out that the proposed rate of $9 a square foot, plus electricity, "is much higher than other Commonwealth rents being paid in Boston, and higher than the rate asked by any other bidder the lowest bid being half that amount."

But Atty. Gen. Robert H. Quinn, who in July had ruled UMass "fiscal autonomy" allowed it to rent the property without going through the steps other state agencies must follow in renting space, refused to permit Stacey to have his own lawyer argue the case.

Instead Asst. Atty. Gen. Walter H. Mayo III signed a document "confessing error" in Stacey's position and Braucher's decision accepted that document.

Occupation Ends...

(Continued from P. 1)

Chandler himself had said part of Allen's reason for opposing his admission was to retaliate for Chandler's part in last spring's closing of the School of education "Marathon" a week-long educational open house.

Although Chandler's wife Rochelle was in the building for much of the "occupation", Chandler would only repeat his comment that he was "not involved" in the occupation when asked if he supported the takeover.

Complicating the situation were comments by some observers that the conflict was only a power struggle by different groups within the university, or merely a personality clash between Allen and Chandler.

Members of the Student Government Association have also said they were considering asking the American Association of University Professors (AAUP) to investigate the Chandler case, but members of the Alliance would only say "many channels are open to us" to pursue the case.

At the press conference last night, an Alliance spokesman said the issue went beyond Chandler's case because "students, faculty, and others" have been manipulated.

Another spokesman said "Every time a politically conscious person tries to actualize his beliefs, he is 'assassinated', one way or another."

Earlier, another spokesman had said the failure to admit black students with "critical" political beliefs to educational schools would result in the education of "zombies".

Allen, in an interview last night, said he put no limit on what the beliefs of persons within the school were, just as long as this did not result in unacceptable behavior.

He charged Chandler with kicking a professor at the school, Dr. Cleo Abraham, and said this was an example of behavior he considered unacceptable.

Allen also denied reports that he owned "holdings in South Africa." He said his parents came from and still live in neighboring Swaziland, which he said "has a black African ruling parliament."

He said his father owned a motel valued at from $100,000 to $150,000 in South Africa, which Allen said his father had "indicated" he would someday own a one-third interest in, along with his two brothers.

He said an issue was a reported statement by a member of the Third World Alliance that "a white man can't make a decision about a black man."

"If that's your perception, then the school is racist. But I believe some of us have to make decisions about others."

He said many minority persons, in their roles as department heads or administrators, made decisions about students who were not minorities.

"As long as these different perceptions persist, there will be conflict at the school," he predicted.

January Courses...

(Continued from P. 3)

Evaluation (Dept. of Public Health), Media Systems Conference (Audio-Visual Program), Personnel and Industrial Relations (S.B.A.), Winter Turf School (College of Food and Natural Resources), Saturday Drama Programs for Children (Theatre Program), and New England Society of Newspaper Editors (Journalism Program).

The School of Business Administration will have some 60 to 80 University student on an extensive law studies program in the Department of General Business and Finance, and approximately 50 students will be on campus involved in independent study under the direction of the School's faculty.

The School of Education is presenting a professional development workshop for faculty and students who belong to the Applied Behavioral Science Alliance and will explore ways and means of improving understanding and skills in a broad area of organizational development and change. There will be an Interpersonal Communications Workshop in connection with Special Problems in Education.

For School of Education students there will be a visitation program to the community colleges, teacher preparatory programs operating in aid of student teachers in the field, and two learning experiences with the new micro teaching facilities, including video-taping equipment are planned.

Under the College of Arts and Sciences, students can participate in Puerto Rico: January Term Project. Lasting from January 3rd to 22nd, students will first live in dormitories at the University of Puerto Rico for ten days. Then they will move to an old convent near Caguas. The last three days they will return to the University and be lodged at La casa de huespedes of the University.

The prerequisites for the course are knowledge of Spanish, previous course work done in methods of ESL, Bilingual-Bicultural Education and/or Caribbean Affairs, and an interview with the course leaders (Sy Pollock - Hampshire College, Pedro Algarin - UMass). Only 10 Hampshire College students, 15 UMass and other 5-college students can go on this trip costing somewhere between $225-$340 total.

The School of Nursing is offering a joint clerkshop with medical students from UMass/Worcester in community health facilities.

For approximately 40 students in Physical Education and Five Colleges, the School of Physical Education is offering a three week course in officiating and coaching techniques of skiing. This will include lectures and on-site instruction and accreditation will be given to participants on satisfactory completion of the course as minor ski racing officials in the U.S. Eastern Amateur Ski Association.

Faculty members from the College of Arts and Sciences are also assisting in many of the special programs being offered in the residential colleges. In the Central Area students can take an Art History course (Art Dept. direction), Laboratory in Personal Growth, the individual within the system, decision making and value clarification (School of Education direction), Cinematography Workshop (Comparative Literature credit), Still Photography Workshop.

For further information contact the Provost's office.

TONIGHT
Youthwell Spent
at
The Pub
50¢ cover 9:30 - 1:00

3rd World Statement...

(Continued from P. 3)

Paul Chandler is an affront to the integrity and intelligence of all students everywhere, and further, is a denial of constitutionally guaranteed rights, that is, freedom of speech, academic freedom, and the right to disagree. It is the position of the Third World Alliance that unrelenting support, energy and time on the part of all Third World people and other conscientious individuals is necessary to rectify this injustice and thereby, confirm our devotion to the realization of the Constitution of the United States of America and to the liberation of all peoples everywhere.

THE PRESENT IS THE TIME FOR STRUGGLE, THE FUTURE IS OURS!

NOTICE

For those students who will be staying on campus, or coming back early, during the January break, the following snack bars will be able to serve you their usual bill of fare, including hot meals, at the following days and times:

Whitmore Snack Bar: Normal hours and services.

Hampden and Worcester Snack Bars: Open on weekdays from Dec. 22 to Jan 1, from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. Open on a seven day basis from Jan. 1 to Jan. 22, from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Hampden, Worcester Munchys: Same day operations as the snack bars, from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Hampden Games Room: Same day operations as the snack bars, from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Dining Commons: The dining commons will re-open for board plans on Jan. 22.

It should be noted that all of the above facilities will be closed on Dec. 25 and Jan. 1.

We suggest that you clip this notice out and save it for reference during the semester break.

KA-LA
WHEN YOU SHIFT INTO REVERSE?
Two things you can do about it: (1) have it serviced immediately while a minor adjustment can correct it; or (2) put it off until it becomes a serious and expensive problem.
This is the way we've built our business on your confidence in us . . . by helping you avoid major troubles when we can.
United Transmission Exchange Inc.
309 King Street Northampton, Mass.
584-6790

George B. Scheurer has announced his candidacy for Selectman of Amherst. He will be vieing for a chance to run for the office against Eric Walgren and Mr. Muir.

UMass Grad Eyes Amherst Post

George B. Scheurer, 27, a UMass graduate student in Public Health has announced his intention to file for the office of Selectman for the Town of Amherst.

Scheurer and the two other candidates will be subject to a town wide caucus to be held on January 19, 1973. The two remaining candidates will then take part in the town election on January 20, 1973.

Scheurer who works for the Massachusetts Health Dept., is a former UMass. graduate ('71) and has been a resident of Amherst for the past 10 years. While an undergrad he was Chairman of Veterans for Peace, a member of VVAW, and President of Baker Dormitory.

He is married to Carol A. Scheurer who is a full time student at UMass majoring in Botony.

His involvement in civic activities includes membership in the Mass. Transit Committee of the Northampton Citizens Planning Council and Citizens for Participation in Political Action (CPPAX).

In the army Scheurer served as a Radar Mechanic and was discharged as a SP/5. During his tour of duty he was Chairman of G.I.s for Peace in El Paso, Texas and the Chairman of United Servicemen of Alaska. These groups were active in anti-war and G.I. Civil Liberties issues.

Scheurer is amember of the New Politics Coalition which is a group of students, townspeople and others who have agreed to run on a platform which they adopted on December 4, 1972. This platform has a number of planks which cover a wide range of concerns to both the UMass. Community and the Town of Amherst.

The platform includes calls for, "Truly representative town government to be responsive to the concerns of students, tenants, and lower-income homeowners."

The Coalition has called for the setting up of a home-town court, slowing town growth, control of pollution, safe ride stickers and hitch-hiking stations, low law enforcement priority for marijuana laws, and rent control.

Eric is Back!! Eric Walgren, running for the office of selectman in Amherst, contends that it is undemocratic for the selectmen to exclude students from the vote by holding it during semester break. The election is presently set for January 20. Walgren claims that by Article 55, selectmen cannot set the date for their own election. He went on to say, "If you have an illegal election, you'll get sued, 'cause I'll sue you." (Photo by Alan Chapman)

FDA Recalls VD, Pregnancy Test Kits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pregnancy test kits judged unreliable and gonorrhea test kits lacking proof of safety and effectivenss are being recalled nationwide, the Food and Drug Administration announced Tuesday.

The agency said any woman who has recently used an Ova II test kit should "see her physician immediately for accurate methods of detecting pregnancy."

The kits, sold without prescription and advertised in newspapers and women's magazines with the slogan "When you want to be the first to know" are considered inaccurate, unreliable and prone to give false results, the FDA said.

Hundreds of thousands of the pregnancy test kits are believed to have been distributed during the last two years, an FDA spokesman said, although the manufacturer claims to have marketed only 165,000.

Irving Rosen, manager of La Mar Laboratories at Oceanside, N.Y., said production and distribution information is confidential.

La Mar manufactures and distributes LPT Pregnancy test kits for professional use. The identical Ova II kits are manufactured by La Mar and distributed through drug stores by Faraday Laboratories of Hillside, N.J.

The FDA said that at its request, the U.S. attorney's office in New Jersey seized more than 8,000 Ova II kits last May. Faraday is contesting the seizure.

Nevertheless, Faraday President Arnold Suresky said the company would voluntarily withdraw the kit.

Xmas or New Year's at Disneyworld or Miami Beach
(or both if you prefer)
WONDER WORLD MOTEL VILLAS
$7.50 motel room each per-nite dbl. occup. color T.V.
Come with a group (3 or more) and we will give you a separate villa building with 2-3 bedrooms, kitchen, livingroom, etc.
(Special rates for Olins-rent-a-car)
For more information, call 545-0585, ask for Russ Sobelman.

'Papers' Jury Dismissed

LOS ANGELES (AP)--The Pentagon papers trial jury was sent home Tuesday and several jurors expressed disgust that they waited four months in vain to judge the case.

One member of the panel arose in court and, in an emotional speech, told the judge the jurors were unhappy because their lives had been upset for no reason. The judge said he understood, but would make no change in his decision to replace them, adding: "You no longer have anything to do with this case."

As the judge was dismissing them, juror William Abata, a rubber company maintenance man, stood and, in a trembling voice, asked to speak. He lauded his fellow jurors as "a fair and impartial group of people."

"They feel in the four months their freedom of speech, their freedom to read and see the news have been taken away from them," he said.

U.S. District Court Judge Matt Byrne decided to dismiss the panel after lengthy legal arguments in the trial of Daniel Ellsberg and Anthony Russo.

He acted out of concern that they had formed opinions about the case in advance.

The jurors had told the judge previously they were impartial about the trial and indicated they hadn't minded shielding themselves from all news of the case.

SAUNA
(It's Healthy)
$ 2/group
Jenny Lind Motor Lodge
247-5601 — Northampton

—MEXICAN FOOD—
TACO EAST
57 N. Pleasant
(at Quicksilver)
"Night Owl Breakfast Special"
12 to 2 a.m.

BLUE CHRISTMAS
Nonsuch Classical Catalog Sale $1.70 or 3/$5.00
HOVENBRAMSMOZARTSTRAVINSKYTELEMANN
The Best of the Budget Classical Labels
ALL Blue Note Jazz $3.59
ALL Blues Blue Grass & Country 40% off list
DIANA ROSS "Lady Sings The Blues" $7.98 List $4.99
TAJ MAHAL "Recycling The Blues" $5.98 List $3.49
DUANNE ALTMAN "Anthology" $9.98 List $5.99
JETHRO TULL "Living in the Past" $9.98 List $5.99
"New Tommy" $12.98 List $8.39
JONI MITCHELL For The Roses $3.49
JIMMI HENDRIX Heroes $3.49
JAMES TAYLOR One Man Dog $3.49
Joe Cocker $3.49
Music Seller 15 E. Pleasant St. Next to Pub 549-3729

Do Not Remove: Final Exam Answers Hidden In Text

COME IN TO SEE THE VALUES

LAFAYETTE
SEIDEN SOUND RADIO ELECTRONICS
Daily 10 a.m. — 9:00 p.m.
Sat. 10 a.m. — 5:30 p.m.

OUR FINAL SALE

Look what he bought for $149.95

You Can Do It With . . . .

Lafayette's Lay-away Policy

Heres Why:

(1) A small deposit and we will hold your merchandise until you have the money (for 60 days).

(2) We will insure that your system is available WHEN YOU WANT IT

(3) Your money (put on lay-away) is fully refundable if you decide to purchase elsewhere. (We are confident that we have the best prices and the best selection of merchandise in this part of the state.

★ Come in and see for yourself ★

A cold day, a light rain. The trees turn to glass. (MDC Photo by Karasu)

Termpaper Company Closes

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP)-Peter Poster, president of a company that sold professionally-written term papers to college students, agreed Tuesday to go out of business in the face of a court order.

Poster told Superior Court Judge George A. Saden that his firm, Papers, Inc., of Hartford, hasn't done any business for two weeks.

Saden issued a temporary injunction barring Papers, Inc., from continuing its operations in Connecticut. If the business were allowed to grow, it could undermine the higher education process, the judge said.

Saden acted on the request of Atty. Gen. Robert K. Killian, who filed suit against Papers, Inc., last week. Killian's suit said two lawyers from his office did business with Poster, one of them as recently as Nov. 30.

Commenting on the term paper business, Saden said: "This is just as bad as the case of a well-known Eastern politician who had someone take an examination for him at Harvard"-an apparent reference to Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts.

The business "represents a fraud on the taxpayers of Connecticut who support these schools," Saden said, adding that students who buy and submit professionally written papers should be expelled, and teachers who countenance the practice should be barred from college faculties.

EL TORO SAYS: "The time has come to learn of many things . . . order your tickets now!"

Carlos Montoya

The great Flamenco guitarist with the Springfield Symphony Orchestra in a special promenade concert.

Tuesday, January 30th - 8 p.m.

Curry Hicks Cage

Tickets $2 UM Undergrads/$4 others. Contact Fine Arts Council, 125 Herter.

TICKETS NOW ON SALE! ORDER NOW TO AVOID DISAPPOINTMENT LATER.

N'hamp Church Aims At Students

By SHELLEY LAUZON

"People on campuses are never exposed to Jesus Christ. They are exposed to churchianity, not Christianity," said Paul MacVittie, Pastor of College Church in Northampton.

A non-denominational church which holds it service in the gymnasium of the Northampton School for Girls, College Church evolved 8 months ago, mainly on the conviction that a number of students will be world leaders who should have a background in Christ.

"People come to find out about God-they come for the right reasons. They are just believers."

"Interaction and genuine love is one of the most exciting things about it. People of all ages and groups come and are seeing in one another the tremendous talents and gifts given to them by God. People realize that they are important; they really count. People have to have appreciation for their self-worth," he said.

MacVittie explained the difference between College Church and other churches as the sense of sincerity and love. People participate in the service and sing "enthusiastically". Attendance in April was estimated at 300; now it is 400 to 500.

"Diversity is our strength. The service is structured, but what is good we keep using. Life must have structure-that's reality," he said.

The set-up of the church is unique. Rows of folding chairs and bleachers replace traditional pews, the organ is a rented electric one, the pulpit is homemade, and a few rug remants cover the floor. The atmosphere is very informal; and MacVittie believes this helps attract "anyone who wants to worship God and learn more about Jesus Christ."

Services are held Sunday morning at 10:30, with a Vesper service at 7:30 p.m. A bus transports people to the morning service, and next semester one will be available for both services. The bus stop is published in the Collegian notice section on Friday, according to Paul.

Every Wednesday, he is on campus in either the Coffee Shop or the Hatch. People interested in speaking with him can make appointments or just drop by-he enjoys "rapping" with students, and visits all of the five colleges one day a week.

He sums up his church simply with: "It's a real live thing."

'Women In China' Today

Irene Johnson will offer a presentation on "Women in China Today." Sponsored by Everywoman's Center at the University of Massachusetts, this talk, illustrated by slides, will be in Herter 227 at 12 noon on Thursday, December 14th.

Ms. Johnson is a member of a team of four Quakers who recently returned from China.

The revolution has radically changed the condition of women in China. What are those changes? What further changes can we expect? What can we learn from the experiences of women in China? Come and hear Irene Johnson speak on these issues.

Glass Art Shown In Herter

An Art exhibition of free-hand, blown glass will be held in Herter Gallery from Wednesday, Dec. 13 through Thursday, Dec. 21. The works were created from re-cycled glass by Alan Day, Dan Brown, and Jim Logan, second year MFA graduate students, majoring in ceramics.

The exhibition is composed of work from a new course given by the Art Department during the past year.

The Gallery hours are: Wednesday through Friday from 10:00 AM to 4:00 PM, Friday night 7:00 PM to 9:00 PM, and Saturday and Sunday from 2:00 PM to 5:00 PM. Closed Mondays and Tuesdays.

MED SCHOOL ADMISSION PROBLEMS?

Euromed may offer RX via overseas training.

For the session starting Fall, 1973, the European Medical Students Placement Service, Inc. will assist qualified American students in gaining admission to recognized overseas medical schools.

And that's just the beginning.

Since the language barrier constitutes the preponderate difficulty in succeeding at a foreign school, the Euromed program also includes an intensive 8-12 week medical and conversational language course, mandatory for all students. Five hours daily, the course is given in the country where the student will attend medical school.

In addition, the European Medical Students Placement Service provides students with an 8-12 week intensive cultural orientation course, with American students now studying medicine in that particular country serving as counselors.

Senior or graduate students currently enrolled in an American university are eligible to participate in the Euromed program.

Perhaps most important, the Euromed Program helps the student attain his career goal in the medical profession.

*"I would like to thank you for providing me with the opportunity to fulfill my goal of becoming a doctor . . . I believe that your program holds a great deal of hope for the future . . . in opening doors for many young Americans . . . and in aiding the U.S. in its critical shortage of doctors."

from a letter from a Euromed participant*

We have helped place a number of qualified students in recognized medical schools overseas.

For application and further information phone toll free (800) 645-1234 or write . . .

EUROPEAN MEDICAL Students placement service, inc.
3 McKinley Avenue, Albertson, N.Y. 11507

NAME_____ MAILING ADDRESS_____ SCHOOL_____
GRADUATION DATE_____ CITY_____ STATE_____ ZIP_____

Kamikaze ("Divine Wind") has brought an end to classes for another semester. Brace yourself: finals are just around the corner. Dr. Kitagawa makes a point during a recent lecture. (MDC Photo by George Withers)

A Christmas Party For JOE

As Steve Huggik cued the last record for the night of his 15,000-45 rpm record collection JOE concluded its last major activity with its youth membership Monday Night. A Christmas party was held at the Horace Moses Lodge in Westfield for twenty kids and about ten JOE volunteers.

The party was one of many special events held for the JOE kids this semester. Other events included other parties but also special sport events and Las Vegas nights. Of the volunteers questioned at Monday night's gig it has been a semester of getting down to having fun with kids.

The volunteers who sponsored last Monday's diversion for kids bored with institutional life at the Westfield Detention Center it has been also a semester of making two trips a week to Westfield on a weekly basis. Staff people at the center believe that without these and many more volunteers who worked there it would have been a long four months.

The Westfield Detention Center is the only institution that serves the four western Massachusetts counties. Since September the pressure has been on the building to hold many more kids than it is supposed to. Dealing with the kids on a daily basis was a full time job so any extra activity provided by the volunteers was essential to the building stability.

Much of what went into the party last Monday was provided by JOE and its many contacts at the University. Several fraternities and sororities donated money and presents for the kids. Steve Huggik and an associate provided the music while the volunteers provided the rest from food to decorations.

The real concern now is for the many days ahead when the volunteer effort will be at a low. While the JOE organization wishes all those who help it directly or indirectly a happy holiday there is still a concern for those kids who will need help or a friend especially on Christmas Day. There is a chance that some kids will not be allowed to return home during these holidays. We hope this fact will hold your attention.

JOE therefore puts out a plea before all of you disappear to the slopes and the sunshine to think about someone whose world is now a five by seven foot room.

If you are going to be around Amherst during all or part of the semester break give JOE a call. JOE counts on your interest in kids to be effective. The phone number is 545-0438. The best time to call is in the afternoon. Please leave your name and number and when you'll be around. In any case-have a happy.

Infirmary (In An Emergency) (54) 5-2671

OH Announces Spring Courses

Orchard Hill is holding its pre-registration for Spring semester for students from the five college community this week starting today through Friday, December 15, in the Master's Office, 103 Eugene Field House. Those who do not pre-register with the Master's Office will be automatically cut from the roster. Students will be able to register for courses they will have pre-registered for with the Master's Office in January at the time of the Registrar's mailing.

Availability	Course Number	Title	Instructors	Time & Place	Credit
Open	202	Beyond corporate Capitalism	Robert Cole Gary Tarr	Tu 7:30-9 Th 9:30-11 am P-10	03
Open	267	Food Production and Population Problems	Herbert Marsh	Tu 2:30-4:10 Field 104	02
Open	268	Survival Systems Science	Jay Stryker	M 7-9:30 Emily 104	03
Closed	269	Human Sexuality	Howard Munson	by Arrgt.	03
Closed	270	Automobile Engines	Ernie Johnson	M 4-8 Tu 4-8 Field 104
Open	384A/ Psych 392G	Interpersonal & Social Perceptions	Steve Reisman	TuTh 11:15	03
Open	384B	Minimum Resource Teaching	Wilesse Comissiong	TuTh 11:15 Noah Rec. Room	03
Open	Ed. 384C Hist.	Race Relations in Latin Amer.	Lewis Hanke	Tues. 3-5:30 Gray 104	03
Open	384D Soc. 290	Sociology of sex Roles	Jan Rosenberg	TuTh 9:30 Tu 7:00 p.m.	03
Open	384E	Poetry of Liberation	Gayle LeTourneau	Tu 2:30-5	03
Open	384F	American Philosophy: A Feminist Perspective	Ann Brentlinger	MWF 12:20 Mach. W23	03
Open	384G	Women in the Political and Economic System	Esla Scipio Isabel Arnold	Tu 2:30-5	03
Open	384H	Social Conditioning of Women	Wilesse Comissiong Rosalind Shapiro	TuTh 1:30	03
Open	384I	O.H. Practicum in Mental Retardation	Greg Oley	1 2 hour class & hours at BSS By arrgt.	03
Open	384J	Problems in Contemp. Architecture (II)	Curtis Johnson William Forwood	M 7-9:30	03
Open	384K	Community Dispute Settlement	David Bloodsworth	W 7-9:30
Open	384M	Independent Study	Staff		1-6

For more available courses, contact Orchard Hill.

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

BOARD OF EDITORS

EDITOR IN CHIEF James E. Gold
MANAGING EDITOR Nathan Gorenstein
BUSINESS MANAGER William L. Manburg
EXECUTIVE EDITOR Stephen G. Tripoli
NEWS EDITOR Donald J. Bishop
SPORTS EDITOR William E. Ballou
PHOTO EDITOR Gib Fullerton
FINE ARTS EDITOR Robert Nesti

ASST. MANAGING EDITOR Steve Fine
ADVERTISING MANAGER Jeanne Bauge
ASST. PHOTO EDITOR Alan Chapman
ASST. SPORTS EDITOR Roy Lyons

TODAY'S STAFF

ISSUE EDITOR Steve Ferrara
NIGHT STAFF Peter Colasanti, Dick Fitzgerald
EDITORIAL LAYOUT Randy Shuldiner
SPORTS Frank Antoslewicz
DARKROOM Mark Majeski, John Neister, Kevin Mack
AD LAYOUT Shelley Sack

Undergraduate newspaper of the University of Massachusetts. The Staff is responsible for its content and no faculty members or administrators read it for accuracy or approval prior to publication.

Unsigned editorials represent the view of this paper. They do not necessarily reflect the views of the faculty, administration, or student body as a whole. Signed editorials, columns, reviews, cartoons, and letters represent the personal views of the authors.

The Collegian subscribes to the Associated Press and the Liberation News Service. Publication of their material does not constitute endorsement.

End Rhetoric

Early in January (important things always seem to happen when there are no students around) the seemingly endless battle over the rhetoric requirement will go to the Board of Trustees. A final decision on whether or not there will be a rhetoric requirement will hopefully be made there.

The rhetoric requirement should be abolished. The list of reasons why this should happen is long, some of the reasons being these: First, the requirement is not doing what it is supposed to do. Second, a number of groups on campus have studied the problem and come up with the same conclusion, these being the Academic Affairs Committee of the Student Senate (the Senate then voted unanimously to abolish rhetoric), and the Academic Matters Committee of the Faculty Senate, which voted 14-0 with two abstentions to abolish rhetoric. The only group to come up with a negative report on the abolition was the Faculty Senate itself, whose motives for voting against the abolition are considered by many to be suspect.

Third, the rhetoric issue is also the base of a much larger controversy, the controversy over whether students should take without question what the people "in the know" tell them is good for them. This argument no longer holds true. Students know what they want: the rhetoric study was a long, exhaustive, well thought out one, and the conclusion reached was the valid product of a legitimate study. Students don't need to be told what's good for them anymore (assuming that there ever was such a need). Students are now in a position to tell people what they want, and what they want is AN END TO RHETORIC NOW.

Police Control

Community control of police is surfacing as an issue again as a new proposal for a security council is submitted by the Student Affairs committee to the senate and administration for acceptance.

The proposal calls for the council to approve many Security Department actions. This clearly helps to put control of the police into the hands of those who seek the police services. The proposals says the council will "establish all major policy for the security department," and it shall "review and approve the operating budget of the Security Department."

The proposal goes far to see that all constituencies of the university are well represented. It also maintains a student majority on the council. The Chancellor, of course, maintains veto power over any council decisions.

All the ideas contained in the proposal will probably appear to be too strong to the administration. However, it is one more step in the natural process of students being able to control their own environment.

Community control of police is not a new idea, but it is still considered quite radical. We certainly hope that this proposal is given serious and favorable consideration. It would not be good if it was tossed aside as just another board.

Don Glickstein

Of Hitler And Macbeth

Although Paul Chandler reportedly advised his friends of the Third World Alliance not to take-over the School of Education, his continuing silence about the fascistic tactic condones it, and one can see why Dean Dwight Allen has doubts about admitting Chandler to the Graduate School.

Certainly, Allen's predicted veto of Chandler raises vital questions of "preventive non-admittance" and academic freedom. But the tactics of Chandler and his friends equal the heinousness of Allen's predicted actions.

To physically bar and verbally harrass the public trying to gain access to a public building can be compared to Louis XVI barring deputies from the Assembly, to Hitler burning down the Reichstag, to Lester Maddox's hatchet, and to Anthony Imperiale preventing construction of Imamu Amiri Baraka's Kawaida Towers in Newark.

It is a disgrace that Chancellor Bromery and others have played down the takeover and have emphasized Allen's predicted decision. Although police action in this situation is senseless, Bromery's silence sounds like backroom, liberal politics.

The implications of the Third World Alliance's actions are destructive.

---Conservative and stereotyping departments across campus will be reinforced in their belief that diversity means trouble. If the School of Ed., the coservatives will observe, which has the greatest number of minority faculty and students on campus and probably in New England, can't handle "Them", no one can.

---Polarization of the races will continue on campus flamed by this utterly non-racial issue. Third World Alliance writers have termed the Ed school "Allen's plantation", and cite the Chandler case as an example of racism.

What tempers don't see is that the issues are less racial and more personal and political. Both Allen and Chandler are extremely charismatic men. People from all races both love them and hate them. Three of Allen's Assisting Deans are minorities; one of them is reputed to have a long-standing personal feud with Chandler.

Underlying much of the controversy is school governance and administration. Since Allen came to UMass in 1968, students white and black have complained about mismanagement and chaos; students have also lauded the School for its programs.

A governance task force-commissioned by a Provost's study committee-recommended last week to give faculty greater power in hopes that they would assume greater responsibility for the School's programs. Allen had practiced a decentralized, share-the-power policy, although some students and faculty have complained that he usurped his authority at times.

---The Alliance has demanded that Allen list specific criteria for admission to the School. Such a list is antithetical to the type of school most progressive educators propound. Allen has himself admitted that his personal criteria are free-form, relying less on academic achievement as measured by tests, and more on overall potential as measured by intuition.

In a sense, the Alliance is hurting itself by demanding specific criteria. Many minority students, because of horrendous public schools, would not be admitted to college if a standardized list of criteria were followed, although they are qualified by less racist standards.

---Of all the departments on campus, the School of Ed has graduated the least racist and most action-oriented people. The involvements are endless--SASSI Prep, Malcolm X College, Tororo Girls' School, Brooklyn COP, etc. Certainly, the School's internal structure could be improved, but the dange of highlighting the School at this time is great.

The School is not beloved by many faculty on campus who prefer more traditional approaches. Whether it is the Modular Credit program, Pass-fail, or the Dean himself, the vultures greedily await the School's vulnerability, while they themselves go unharrassed by the Alliance.

***

These are the implications of the takeover: a small group of men and women, consciously and unconsciously being used by two men--Paul Chandler and Dwight Allen--in a political and personal feud, have created the opportunity of a lifetime...the destruction and self-destruction of a School that for one moment in history, allowed people to realize dreams.

Don Glickstein is an MDC Editorial Columnist.

Art Buchwald

On Searching Luggage

WASHINGTON--Most of the airlines are now searching carry-on luggage in order to thwart hijackings. This is a very commendable practice, but it leads to some embarrassing situations.

In the past you never had to give much thought to what you packed in your hand suitcase. But now that strangers can plow through your personal effects, you have to change your whole style of traveling.

Some people don't care what an airline employee or federal marshal thinks when he zips open your luggage. But I'm not one of them. I get nervous as soon as my flight is announced.

For one thing, I get terribly embarrassed about anyone seeing dirty laundry in my bag. I'll stay over at a hotel an extra day and have my laundry done just so I won't be humiliated at the check-in gate.

While this takes up a lot of extra time, several federal marshals have complimented me on the whiteness of my shirts and the neatness of my underwear.

I spent a lot of time thinking about what books to carry in my bags in the past. Before the new anti-hijacking rules went into effect, I would always buy a Mickey Spillane paperback with a sexy cover at the airport. And I was never without a copy of Playboy.

But now I have to think about what books and magazines the marshals would approve of.

I live in deathly fear that some federal marshal is going to find a copy of "Candy" in my personal effects and yell out, "Hey, Harry, we got a poyvert on this flight!"

So now I limit all the reading matter in my baggage to the Speech of George Romney and old copies of the Reader's Digest.

I am even nervous about my toilet articles, particularly if a woman is inspecting my baggage. I never know if I'm using the right deodorant or carrying the right after-shave lotion.

Recently I offered a lady marshal who looked like Arlene Francis an antacid tablet and she scornfully produced one of her own which was half as large but contained twice the number of ingredients.

It's amazing how innocent people feel guilty when someone goes through their luggage. This is particularly true of women who have to open up their handbags. It takes my wife two hours to get her handbag just right when she's going on an airplane trip. Then afterward she's never sure if it contained the right things.

If I have any objection to being searched at the airport, it is the impersonal way it's being done.

Usually the marshals search your bag and then wave you through. I think it would add much more zest and fun to it if they would each carry a piece of chalk and grade you on the outside of your bag on your packing. Those who got "A" would be given the first choice of seats. Those who received an "F" would have to repack and take the next plane.

It really galls me when I spend so much time on my hand luggage to get the same treatment as someone who just threw his dirty clothes into the bag as if he didn't give a damn.

Copyright 1972, Los Angeles Times

Challenging Half Truths

By DWIGHT ALLEN,
Dean, School of Education

I am saddened by the barrage of half-truths and outright lies which have appeared in the Collegian "guest columns" in the past few days, and for which the Collegian does not take responsibility.

I hereby challenge Mr. Michael Patterson to immediately and publicly document the accusation that I am "the owner of several plantations in racist South Africa." (Collegian, December 12, page 8)

I ask the University community and the general public to dismiss without hesitation this charge, and all similar charges, disseminated by the media unless they can be openly and clearly proven.

"Hah! The Administration must be sleeping -- usually by this time workmen should be erecting the inaugural stage on the Capitol steps!"

Letters To The Editor

Happy New Year

To The Editor:

Now, at the close of the semester, I feel that it is time to expose certain groups and persons for what they really are. Some people may feel that these charges are wild but I have plenty of reason to believe that they are true. Now, let someone "in the know" try and deny the following:

I accuse the people who have answered me back of being naive people who have been brainwashed by a method known as progressive education. As a result, they are about as enlightened as a worm's asshole.

I accuse Richard Nixon of being a ruthlessly ambitious individual who is conspiring with others like him (such as Nelson Rockefeller and Teddy Kennedy) to impose a one-world totalitarian state on the world.

I accuse the United Nations of being the means by which Nixon hopes to carry out his ambitions.

I accuse the Third World of being nothing more a Communist front that is exploiting minority groups, brainwashing those people so that in the end, they will just be transferred from the "old plantation" to the "new plantation".

I accuse socialists of working for, as Stephen Lord so beautifully put it, "a political and economic system which entails the denial of any means for seeking one's own values and happiness."

I accuse President Nixon of "fixing" the Democratic Party's nomination so that it would go to George McGovern.

I accuse the Women's Lib movement of being a fraud which is designed to break up the basic unit of living, the family. The "Equal Rights" Ammendment is nothing more than a law that would not only do that, but would set the dangerous precedence of enslaving women.

And finally, I accuse the Collegian Editorial Staff (Matt Tackeff excepted) of being just a bunch of naive goons who really don't know what they are talking about.

Now, try and swallow them apples!

Bob Estelle

Poor Greeks

To The Editor:

This letter is in reference to the one entitled "Dead Cats" which appeared in the Monday edition of the Collegian. Upon reading the letter one finds it easy to sympathise with Arlene Kangas' anger and frustration in finding a dead cat hanging from a tree. What I object to is her unjust reference to Fraternities in the letter.

Quite often I have witnessed the use of the word Fraternity or Greek in a derogatory manner. Perhaps I am being overly defensive of fraternities, yet time and time again I have heard them attacked. Why do "frat rats" have to be drunks, sex maniacs, or vandals? As is the case many times, a majority is being misrepresented by a vocal few. There have been, are, and will be instances in which people behave in a manner not considered acceptable in society. Some of these people may live in a fraternity but they are a minority. Why must the majority be castigated due to their actions? There are a comparable number of people living in dorms whose actions are just as irreprehensable, yet people in dorms are not forced to bear the blame or be criticized as a group because of them.

Fraternities and the Greek system as a whole actually do good things. There are the many service projects put on each year helping the community. Each house has a social program expanding the social sphere of its members. An alternative living style is an option to the student wanting to leave dorm life yet not able to move off campus. The fraternity house is always a place for alumni to return to during homecoming. Involvement and responsibility come about when controling your own living environment.

Why must hanging a cat be related to a "fraternity hell night" and not a dormitory floor party (drunk?). I must admit I am tired of being relegated to the lowly position of being a Greek on campus. Don't let five positive aspects or actions be negated by one negative aspect or action. Give us a fair chance. I hope for the day when this negative attitude will not be prevalent on campus, but until then a majority of us are working to help expedite that change.

Incidentally all but a few houses on campus have abolished hell nights and physical hazing. We are changing!

Steven Barbanel

Private Property

Dear Mr. Lord:

Let me begin by emphasizing that I too am in a charitable mood when I say that your article in yesterday's Collegian is a brilliant piece of negative waste.

You begin by remarking that socialism is a denial of "private property...which in practice means the denial of any means for seeking one's own values and happiness." Please answer two questions for those of us who are unlearned in economics. First, why is private property necessary for the realization of one's values and happiness? Secondly, is the government of the United States formed to present an atmosphere so that all may see their human potential? Any authority in economics will tell you that this government functions as the protector of private property. But what rights do those who have no property have. Now if you take one good hard look at society today I'm sure you will not be amazed to find that those with property have more rights than those without. You next state that in reality, "socialism is fighting for the right to oppress groups." Wake up, man! Who is oppressing whom in this system. Why capitalism's very essence implies oppression. I'm sure you learned somewhere that the definition of profit is surplus labor. So, in the name of profit the rest of us become wage slaves. We now come to another one of your brilliant contentions. You state, sarcastically, that you find, "that social activists are more often motivated by a desire to escape the valuelessness of their own lives." What value do we have of ourselves? When you look around at your fellow classmates do you see them as intellectual and creative beings, or DO YOU SEE THEM AS YOUR COMPETITION? Face it! The only value most Americans have is that of material objects. Money, my man, is our goal! Money, my man, is our happiness! And the amount of money we possess shows how creative we are. You also maintain that "messing around with others lives is no substitute for developing worthwhile lives of our own." Is this a socialist system your talking about? C'mon now! Look at what your saying. Are you trying to tell me that these black Americans, that these women, that any poor American is not politically, socially, or oppressed?

Let me conclude by saying that I agree with your self evaluation. You are narrowminded; but not intellectually so.

John Frazier

Editorial Points

Happy Intersession, Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year from the M.D.C. staff.

Expanded War

To The Editor:

Richard Nixon has been re-elected to another four years in the White House and now, more than ever, the air war in Vietnam goes on. Despite claims of winding down the war, the Nixon administration in the last four years has expanded the war to all of Indochina. As part of this expansion there has been a new and increased application of American military technology in the continuing attempt to crush the struggles of the people of S.E. Asia. So far, over one million Vietnamese and over fifty thousand Americans have died in the war in Vietnam. Since the war began, over a decade ago, the U.S. Air Force has dropped over 6,200,000 tons of bombs on Indochina-three times greater than the total tonnage dropped in all of World War II!.

Children are the primary victims of the war. The B-52s roar over their kindergartens, nurseries, hospitals, and schools dropping their deadly gifts to maim, cripple, and kill these helpless victims. The children are poisoned by the chemicals which the U.S. sprays over their fields, water reservoirs, and homes. Infant mortality is about 255 per 1000 births. Half of the children both in Vietnam die before reaching the age of five. Of those who survive many have sustained irreparable, painful damages to their bodies.

In light of these conditions the World Federation of Democratic Youth, representing over 200 million youth around the world, has initiated a campaign for the construction of a modern pediatrics hospital outside of Hanoi. World wide a goal of $500,000 has been set...The hospital is named after Nguyen Van Troi, a Vietnamese electrical worker and patriot who was shot down in the streets of Saigon in 1964. In the U.S. the hospital campaign is being sponsored by the Medical Committee for Human Rights, National Student Association, Peoples Coalition for Peace and Justice, Puerto Rican Socialist Party, Student Union for Peace and Justice, Vietnam Veterans Against the War, Young Workers Liberation League, to name just a few.

In Western Massachusetts we too are beginning the campaign. The hospital campaign provides an opportunity through which we can not only raise money to aid the victims of the Indochina war, but also, can make our communities aware of the horrible atrocities being perpetrated. The Interim Hospital Campaign Committee is having a regional meeting to set up a Western Mass. Hospital Campaign Committee. Your organization is cordially invited to send a representative to this meeting and to participate actively in the campaign. The regional meeting will be held at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst, in the Campus Center, Room 917, at 8:00 p.m., on Wednesday, December 6. For more information please call 546-6808 or Paul.

OUR GOVERNMENT DESTROYS, OUR PEOPLE MUST REBUILD!

The Nguyen Van Troi
Interim Hospital

It'll Happen Again

To The Editor:

It will happen again! Universities and Colleges will each take their turn at handling a very serious matter. What are the specific criteria for admission into the departments of institutions? This society and many other societies are reorganizing the systems in which they live their lives. There was a time I'm sure, every one remembers, that if you were Black, you need not apply to college; in fact, if you made it through high school you were considered lucky. Well, today Grad School is college and college is high school, so everything has transcended backwards a bit-if you make it through college you're considered lucky and you really ought not apply to Grad School and even if you get into one you'll still be worse off than your parents.

Education, a major instrument used by society for change and better living, is in a period of revolution. Where even the administration powers and procedures become upended by people figuratively, and in reality quite a distance away like governors and senators, who every once in a while handle the job in the due-process way and get awards and citations from Washington, D.C., for example, do you remember Governor Rockefeller and Attica? Like the students on campus who have a paranoia of rapists, pigs, criminal elements. Administrators and Presidents of Colleges have, over the last half decade, developed a similar type of paranoia about Washington, D.C. The whole system is undergoing a change, sort of called checks and balances in which one department sees that another department isn't stirring up things too much. Don't be too surprised if UMass loses a School of Education, with all the sensitivity stuff going and if a real Black man was admitted, he'd be making his people some kind of money! I think Dean Allen's basic mistake was expressing his B'Haiam, racist and sick attitude to a people who will run him more than out of town if he wants to get bold again! I don't care how much brain some of these whites have, if you are questioning someone's political and ideological philosophy, and this is one of the most important aspects for a judgment on admission, and this person is Black and didn't grow up in a hick town, out in the sticks, or was isolated on some island for twenty years, you might think pretty much the same as him, you might have similar interests. Instead of man handling a person on the football field or basketball court, he might realize conditions set up right in the white ivory tower classroom for a push or shove. Check it out! It was for about half a decade that racist remarks were pretty much swept under the rug in the North, but since Nixon got over, Wallace was a big smash hit, and the mood of most of the country is toward ultra-conservatism. Dean Allen, a mere punk, couldn't resist the temptation, and over the air waves and printing presses came the remark "his political and Ideological philosophy are very questionable". In reality, the School of Education accepts only Third World Students who are already tokens or who have the human potential to become a token. Check it out!

David Williams

More Letters To The Editor

Some Misconceptions

To The Editor:

In reply to S. Lord:

I wasn't going to bother answering your reply to my rebuttal of your original letter, since there have been already far too many rebuttal contests of this sort in the Collegian carried out ad nauseum. However, I feel I must clear up the misconceptions and outright lies that you have presented in regards to the YSA.

~~First,~~

If what you claim ("to speak of socialists of fighting for the rights of oppressed groups is worse than ridiculous, considering that socialism...entails the denial of the fundamental human rights of private property and free trade...") is true, then just how do you account for the fact that the YSA has played a major part in the international anti-war movement since 1965, a movement against the raining of death (9,000 tons worth daily) on the people of Indochina? How do you account for the fact that the YSA is active in the struggles of Blacks, Chicanos, Labor, Women, and Gays throughout the country? How do you explain the fact that we have consistently supported the struggles of the Eastern European, Russian, and Chinese peoples against the repressive Stalinist Bureaucracy now imposed on them? The fact that we support the revolutionary struggles in Latin America, Africa, and Asia against imperialism? The struggle of workers and peasants throughout the world for the fundamental human fight to live decently and freely? If you have ever bothered to examine any of these movements for social change, you would discover that they are against Capitalism and Stalinism; and not Socialism. Whether you like it or not, Mr. Lord, there are Black, Chicano, Asian, Women and Gay students on campus. And whether you care or not, they are the victims of racial and sexist repression.

One thing you said struck me as being particularly hypocritical was in your first letter: "Abolish the Student Activities fee. Abolish the Fine Arts fee. Abolish the Athletic fee..." In your second letter, you ignored your former stand and singled out the YSA as your pet hate RSO group.

Also in your second letter you state that "A University is an institution for the dissemination, accumulation, and preservation of knowledge." How do you think free ideas are exchanged? Certainly not to any great extent in the classrooms. Students with different ideas and common interests form RSO groups, and spread diverse concepts through this channel. For example, the YSA has obtained Radical speakers for students to hear, organized forums and educationals, operated tables in the Campus Center for the dissemination of literature, operates a Pathfinder book store, and is currently engaged in building a small library. Another example: none of our letters would have been read by the students if the Collegian did not exist. Abolishing the SA fee would make it impossible for virtually every funded RSO group, from the Collegian to the JOE program, to exist.

And the only result, Lord, if your little tirade against student interest and service groups were effective, would be to make an already grey, dying, and sterile campus a lot more grey, dead, and silent.

Mark Cerasuolo

Wake Up, Nancy

To The Editor:

Yes, Nancy, we students should all be outraged at the goings-on at the School of Ed. Why should we be made to miss classes because some minor character has had problems with the School of Ed? Why should we be made to miss classes because some minor group on campus feels that the problems of one of its members are sufficient to make a major issue? We do have the right to the privacy of continuing on our merry way, and we should be outraged at anyone who upsets the status quo. But if we do stand by and let this and other incidents be handled by those who, even if for the reasons of the lack of objective reasoning, cannot come to equitable and just solutions, then we must be prepared for interruptions, by these self-interest groups, of our classes and our way of life. It seems that those institutions that are supposed to protect us from these self-interest groups are not doing the job that they are supposed to do; therefore, maybe we should attack them and make them live up to the rules. If they don't, then we'll have to do it ourselves.

You see, when one representative body in this country is not performing its functions justly, then the citizens must take it into their own hands to affect some change, either in that body or in the rules that regulate that body. We can't even let the smallest injustice go unchallenged. When even the most uninfluential of our fellow citizens has been unjustly dealt with, we must be prepared to fight that injustice even to the death.

We must, also, act to get those people into important positions, who are not self-centered and who are responsible, so that there will be no next time. Of course, there are those who will oppose us, and also those who will not act to support us even if they agree that we have been wrongly oppressed, but we must press on, even in the face of all opposition. Then maybe those who sit back feeling personally for us, may better understand what we are doing and be willing to get involved in the struggle because they feel personally that it is their duty, even beyond the right to go to classes!

Herman L. Davenport

The Athletic Council would like to represent the varied opinions of both the women and the men here on campus. To get an idea of how the women feel about the existing spending of their Athletic Fee and what kinds of changes they would like to see in Women's Athletics, this questionnaire has been designed. We would appreciate the cooperation of University women in this survey. Please drop completed forms in Student Senate boxes in the Student Union or the Campus Center, or mail them as campus mail to the Women's Committee, Student Senate Office, Campus Center. Thank-you.

1. Do you want the Athletic Fee optional?
   ( ) Yes ( ) No ( ) Neutral
2. Do you resent paying 44% of the Athletic Fee and getting 2% back for Women's Activities?
   ( ) Yes ( ) No ( ) Neutral
3. Do you want less money spent on men's sports and more on women's sports?
   ( ) Yes ( ) No ( ) Neutral In what way?
4. Do you want to go big time and, thus, raise the Athletic Fee? That is, do you want the football team to get out of the Yankee Conference and play more audience drawing teams?
   ( ) Yes ( ) No ( ) Neutral
5. Are you aware of the existence of the women's intercollegiate varsity and junior varsity teams?
   ( ) Yes ( ) No
6. Would you like more information about these teams?
   ( ) Yes ( ) No ( ) Neutral
7. Would you like more write-ups in the Collegian of women's athletic activities?
   ( ) Yes ( ) No ( ) Neutral
8. Have you heard of any women's athletic activities which lacked or lack sufficient funds?
   ( ) Yes ( ) No Which?
9. Do you have any gripes about women's sport facilities here?
   ( ) Yes ( ) No What are they?
10. Do you have any suggestions concerning the expenditure of the Athletic Fee related to Women's Athletics?
    ( ) Yes ( ) No What are they?

Religion

To The Editor:

I have just been reading the results of the referenda which appeared on the Nov. 6 ballot, and I find myself greatly disturbed by the overwhelmingly support of voluntary prayer in public schools. To me, this is a step backward from the recent Supreme Court decision, barring prayer in public schools. I personally have nothing against voluntary prayer, but prayer in any form or style has no place in schools supported by government funds. If someone desires to pray, or communicate with God, or whatever his bag may be, let him do it in the privacy of his own home, or inside the holy doors of his particular church, not during school time. If you're the type that must be spiritually stimulated at the start of each day, or feel so insecure that you have to beg to some divine being for intellectual inspiration, by all means do it, but on your own time, not everyone else's. To allot a specific time of the school day for prayer may inhibit many of the non-religious students and is therefore unfair, and should never be allowed to take place.

Richard Gilberg

Student Special AT THE

JOLLY BULL

On MONDAY & TUESDAY: with each dinner you get a free Miller's mug filled with beer.

On WEDNESDAY:
with dinner for two, you receive a 1/2 carafe of wine on the house.

From 5:00 p.m. - 10:00 p.m. Rte. 9, Hadley, 584-2769

Please bring this ad with you

When West, Bruce & Laing played the Wuvulu Pop Festival, the audience ate them up.

Leslie West (of Mountain), Jack Bruce (of Cream), and Corky Laing (Mountain's thunder and lightning) are making positively savage rock and roll. "And the album," writes Mnolo, the Herdsman, in the Cargo Cult Free Press, "is as tasty as the group is live."

West, Bruce & Laing.
"Why Dontcha."
On Columbia / Windfall Records ® and Tapes

® "COLUMBIA" MARCAS REG. PRINTED IN U.S.A.

Television Tonight

5:00 JIM AND TAMMY (8)
MISTER ROGERS' NEIGHBORHOOD (24) (57)
SUPERMAN (27)
HOGAN'S HEROES (9)
ELECTRIC COMPANY (8) (57)
GOMER PYLE (3)
BEVERLY HILLBILLIES (30)
NEWS (40)
5:30 FLIGHT OF APOLLO 17 (22) (30)
5:55 WHAT'S HAPPENING (3)
6:00 NEWS, WEATHER, AND SPORTS (3) (8) (22)
12 O'CLOCK HIGH "Burden of Guilt" (18)
PETTICOAT JUNCTION (27)
HODGEPODGE LODGE (24) (57)
WILD WILD WEST "The Night of the Torture Chamber" (40)
TO TELL THE TRUTH (30)
6:30 EVENING NEWS WITH WALTER CRONKITE (3)
8 STEPS TOWARD EXCELLENCE (24)
THE EARLY SHOW "Gammera" (27)
CARRASCOLENAS (57)
7:00 WHAT IN THE WORLD "East Africa" (3)
DICK VAN DYKE (8)
THE JUST GENERATION (24)
NEWS EARLY REPORT (30)
EVENING NEWS (40)
NEWS AND COMMENT (57)
7:30 THE PRICE IS RIGHT (3)
PARENT GAME (8)
BRUINS HOCKEY (18)
BOOK BEAT (24)
CIRCUS "Circus Chipperfield of England" (30)
APOLLO 17 (40)
THE REPORTERS (57)
8:00 THE HARLEM GLOBETROTTERS POPCORN MACHINE (3)
PAUL LYNDE SHOW (8) (40)
"THE SNOW GOOSE" (22)
HOW DO WE GET FROM HERE TO THERE? (24)
ADAM 12 (30)
HOCKEY Bu vs. Cornell (57)
8:30 WEDNESDAY MOVIE OF THE WEEK "Every Man Needs One" (8) (40)
SNOW REVOLUTION (24)
THE COMEDY OF STAN LAUREL AND OLIVER HARDY (27)
9:00 MEDICAL CENTER (3)
STATE OF CONNECTICUT (24)
CANNON (3)
10:00 THE JULIE ANDREWS HOUR (8) (40)
THE 700 CLUB (18)
10 O'CLOCK NEWS (27)
10:30 MARTIN AGRONSKY EVENING EDITION (24)
THE GOOD SHOW (27)
11:00 NEWS, WEATHER, SPORTS (3)
NEWS (8) (40)
RELAIDADES (57)
11:30 FLIGHT OF APOLLO 17 (3)
FLIGHT OF APOLLO 17 (8) (40)
FLIGHT OF APOLLO 17 (22) (30)
12:00 THE DICK CAVETT SHOW (8) (40)
NEWS (18)

Women 'Rhodes' Candidates

The Rhodes Trustees invite applications from women for two-year post-doctoral fellowships beginning October 1, 1973 at Oxford University. Women applicants should be below the age of 35 years and would be required to undertake research and limited teaching. Travel expenses and board and lodging, in addition to a stipend of L1650 per annum, are part of the fellowship.

Applications should be addressed to (and arrive by January 31, 1973): The Principal, St. Hilda's College, Oxford OS4 1 DY, England.

Each candidate should enclose:

(a) Six copies of a statement of her qualifications;

(b) A brief outline of the research which she proposes to undertake;

(c) The names of not more than three persons prepared to act as academic referees.

Charming Leverett Home For Sale

(by Owner)

Elegant new Log Home on 2 1/2 acres, tucked behind a wooded knoll 400 feet off the road, and just 5 minutes from UM. Three large bright bedrooms, wide plank floors, beamed cathedral ceilings, and a massive brick center chimney with huge raised hearth in the living room and another hearth in the 32 foot master bedroom suite. Custom pine kitchen with all appliances. 2 full baths with colored fiberglass fixtures, large closets everywhere. Full cellar with huge garage, work-shop and laundry areas, and room for expansion. Many more custom features and details too numerous to list. This maintenance-free home must be seen to be appreciated. Priced at $48,500 and available NOW. Please call 549-6239 evenings.

SKI ENTHUSIASTS Wake Up!

COMPETITION USA HART

To all you UMies who are discouraged, disillusioned, and totally fed up with your present ski equipment dealer, this message is for you. The HOUSE OF WALSH SKI SHOP in Amherst has a complete line of ski equipment featuring such names as HART, K2, OLIN, in skis, NORDICA and LANGE in boots, and MEDICO TURTLENECKS in 30 colors ... With professionally qualified personnel at your service. Consult them before going elsewhere. They are able to right the wrongs. Ski equipment for all levels from beginner to expert.

* Boots
* Skis
* Poles
* Bindings

X-Country Special Package $65.00

* Skis
* Bindings
* Poles

Beginners Package $55.00

COMPETITION USA HART

House of Walsh, Inc.

32 Main St., Amherst 253-3361

Creative Play Course

Susan Pinsker, doctoral candidate in Education, will offer a course in creative dramatics this spring, under the auspices of the UMass Division of Continuing Education. The course is Education 386CE-13.

The course, according to Ms. Pinsker, is designed "for anyone interested in creative dramatics, either for themselves or as a source of creative play with children, both at home and in the classroom."

"We will be using dramatics to develop self-awareness, interpersonal communication, and our understanding of the creative process, both in ourselves and others."

Techniques to be utilized in the course include: mime, improvisation, movement, voice and mask work, characterization and theatre games.

Ms. Pinsker received her B.S. in Theater from Northwestern University, and studied at the Yale School of Drama. She has acted off-Broadway in ensemble and improvisational theater.

Inquiries concerning the course may be made by contacting the Division of Continuing Education, Room 314 Arnold House, 545-0480.

Handel's "Messiah" transformed. By a chorus of forty-five harmonizing voices. And an orchestra of sixty kicking instruments.

Electric bass and French horn. Fuzz guitar and oboe.

It's got all the majesty of the original. And all the toughness and energy of today's strongest music.

"New Messiah," by George Frideric Handel. With a little help from his friends.

On Columbia Records ® and Tapes

Ah yes, 'tis the season. Here we see a kindly waffle slave risking life and limb to rescue a stranded Christmas wreath. (MDC Photo by Karasu)

Your Head

A Not-So-Jolly Christmas List

By DRS. McCASHIN and KLEIN

'Tis the season to be jolly, yet the Christmas vacation period is not without the potential for emotional stresses and strains. Several factors conspire to make many people especially vulnerable to psychological problems this time of year.

The holiday season is meant to be an emotional period. It is a time of increased anticipation, raised expectations, festive spirit, generosity and warmth. Sometimes, however, certain realities can intervene to create a let-down. These might result for example from increased social pressures or prior individual difficulties.

There are also problems, especially affecting college students, associated with environmental change. It is often necessary to leave friends, and familiar routines to confront once again family situations with their inherent conflicts. Visiting relatives can also increase family pressures as often several generations have to reach an accommodation with one another. On the other hand the person who doesn't return home for the holidays can feel particularly depressed and left out.

Finally, Christmas evokes associations of childhood, for children are very much the center of attention this time of year. Consequently, even for adults Christmas can encourage regressive wishes, needs, concerns and behaviors. Memories good and bad, conflicts about giving and receiving, old rivalries, concerns about parental love and warmth can all be psychologically re-experienced and recreated.

Here is our Christmas list of symptoms that can occur.

1. Depression-The factors above can lead people to be particularly vulnerable to "seasonal" depression. This is by far the most common complaint. It is temporary and can be overcome by meaningful activity.

2. Over-consumption-Drinking and eating too much are common with increased holiday social activity and often are an attempt to "mask" depressive feelings.

3. Family arguments-Try to keep your perspective at home. Stand back from arguments and use the experience to learn more about yourself.

4. Boredom-This can be particularly a problem with the long vacation period. Use the time to pursue those projects and interests that you have put off during the semester.

5. Loneliness-If your friends aren't around try to meet new people. A temporary job might help.

Now that we have dampened your holiday outlook you will probably discover that your vacation will turn out to be better than you think.

Drs. McCashin and Klein will answer any questions or discuss any issue on your mind. Send or bring your inquiries to 303 Machmer Hall.

The UNIVERSITY STORE will be closed
the week of Dec. 24th
During the first three weeks in January the store will be open on the following Limited Basis
MON. - FRI., 10:00 a.m. - 2:00 p.m.
Normal schedule will resume on MON., JAN. 22nd.

HATCH
Exam Special
COFFEE
5¢
Dec. 15 — 21
Reg. 15¢

Audiovox Stereo 8 Track Car Player
Pilot Lamp
Channel Selector
Automatic Shut-Off
Capstan Drive
Transistors Circuit
Was $49.95 Now $24.95

PANASONIC® CX-811SU
8 Track Car Stereo
10 Watts RMS Per Channel
Fully Automatic Instant Operation
Excellent Tone Control
Was $99.95 Now $59.95

Tenna TG-82-T
"Ranger" 8 Track Stereo Tape Player
(Burglar Alarm Built-In)
Self Cleaning Tape Heads
Fast Forward
Automatic Eject
Moto On-Off Switch
Theft-Proof
Was $74.95 Now $39.95

PIONEER
MINI 8 Track Car Stereo
Solid State I.C.
2" High
7.3/4" Wide
7.6 Watts RMS
Fits Anywhere in your Car
Only $44.95

Scotch MAGNETIC TAPE 203
REG. 15.95 NOW $2.49 With COUPON Only

60 Minute Cassette Tapes
3 for 99¢ With COUPON Only

SHAMROCK 1800 ft.
Recording Tape
When you buy 6 you get 4 FREE
With COUPON Only

MEMOREX 90 Min. CASSETTES
YOU GET THREE For Price of Two
With COUPON Only

Pittsfield, Mass.
Colonie, NY
Albany, NY
Schenectady, NY
Glensfalls, NY

AMHERST STORE
15 E. PLEASANT ST.
549-1105

Owned & Operated by Seiden Sound

LAFAYETTE
RADIO
ELECTRONICS

Do Not Remove: Final Exam Answers Hidden In Text

New Library Hours

Schedule of Hours, December 1972-January 1973
Goodell Library

EXAMINATION PERIOD
December 14-20 (Thurs.-Wed.)	Continuous opening from 8:00 a.m., Dec. 14 through 1:00 a.m., Dec. 21
December 21 (Thursday)	8:00 a.m.-1:00 a.m.
December 22 (Friday)	8:00 a.m.-1:00 a.m.
December 23 (Saturday)	8:00 a.m.-5:00 p.m.
INTERSESSION AND REGISTRATION
December 24-January 24
Monday-Friday	8:00 a.m.-5:00 p.m.
Saturday & Sunday	CLOSED
Closed Christmas and New Years' Day
SECOND SEMESTER
Regular hours resume January 25.
Monday-Friday	8:00 a.m.-12:00 midnight
Saturday	8:00 a.m.-10:00 p.m.
Sunday	1:00 p.m.-12:00 midnight

During continuous opening, December 14-December 20, only the Reserve desk and level 4 study hall will be accessible from 1:00 a.m. to 8:00 a.m.

Courses Offered In Spring

Additional courses offered for Spring Semester:

Education 385/705-Dr. Oswald Tippo

Universities; origins, development, problems, new proposals

Aim: Introduction to the problems and to the role of the university for the generalist-for the undergraduate as well as the graduate student who may be considering a career in higher education.

ALSO:

Botany 385-Dr. Rudolph Schuster

Plants & Man

M-W-F at 2:30 in Mor. 212

A non-technical, man-oriented series of lectures on the interaction, past and present, of man and plants, with historical and anthropological emphasis.

AMHERST CINEMA
253-5126 24 hr. phone

Evenings at 8:00

WINNER OF 2 ACADEMY AWARDS!

David Lean's Film of

Ryan's Daughter

ROBERT MITCHUM · TREVOR HOWARD
CHRISTOPHER JONES
JOHN MILLS · EDMUND MCMURRAY and SARAH MILES

Wed. to Sun. 50c off with Student I.D. Mon. & Tues. Adults-1.00

National Exchanges Available

Applications are available from now through March 1, 1973, in the Admissions Office, Whitmore Hall, for Undergraduate Students interested in going on exchange either semester of next year. The participating institutions for 1973-74, are:

Illinois State University, Montana State University, Morgan State College, Ohio University, Oregon State University, Rutgers-the State University of New Jersey (at New Brunswick), University of Alabama. University of Hawaii, University of Idaho, University of Maine-Fort Kent, University of Massachusetts- Amherst, University of Montana, University of Nevada-Reno, University of Oregon, University of South Florida, University of Wisconsin-Green Bay.

The student applying for an exchange should be a sophomore. The exchange would be during his junior year. The student must have at least a 2.5 cumulative grade point average. Students who are interested ih participating in the program for next year must complete an application and return it to Mr. Loder, Office of the Registrar, no later than the deadline of March 1, 1973. Final selections, including a list of alternates, are expected to be completed by March 31, 1973."

English Professor Deceased

HOLYOKE, Mass. (AP)–Harvey Swados, professor of creative writing at University of Massachusetts and author of several books, died Monday at Holyoke Hospital. He was 52.

A hospital spokesman said Swados entered the hospital Wednesday after suffering a stroke.

In 1965, Swados was given the award for the novel from the National Institute of Arts and Letters, which also awarded him a grant. He also was awarded a Guggenheim Fellowship in 1960.

A native of Buffalo, he graduated from University of Michigan in 1940, and joined the UMass faculty at Amherst in 1970.

Engineering Action For High Schoolers

Secondary school students in Massachusetts can get a first-hand look at engineering at the first "Engineering in Action" program Jan. 15 and 16 at UMass.

The program is a discussion of some basic technological concepts through a series of modular courses patterned after those currently offered to UMass freshman engineering students. It is designed by the UMass School of Engineering for junior and senior level high school students.

VMS Presents
BUTCH CASSIDY AND THE SUNDANCE KID
Thurs., Dec. 14th & Fri., Dec. 15th
7 & 9:30 SUB 75¢

EXPRESS YOUR SOLIDARITY WITH SOVIET JEWS

Wednesday, December 13

Wright Hall Auditorium - Smith College

1:00 p.m. — Phone call to a Soviet Jewish Activist
8:00 p.m. — Prof. Roman Rutman, Moscow Jewish Activist, specialist in Cybernetics — permitted to leave November 1972

Smith-Amherst Hillel Foundations

DECEMBER 26TH AT 8:00 P.M.
JERRY LEE LEWIS
LLOYD PRICE
SKIRELLES • DRIFTERS • SKYLINERS • CLOVERS
SPECIAL GUEST STAR CHUBBY CHECKER
BOBBY COMSTOCK'S ROCK & ROLL BAND
SPRINGFIELD CIVIC CENTER
Tickets 3.50, 4.50, 5.50. Available at: Civic Center Box Office and All Ticketron Outlets. For info call: (413) 781-7082. Plus, Springfield — UFO, Main Music. Holyoke — Mad Hatter. Westfield — Music Man. Hartford — J J Newberry's.

MDC CLASSIFIED

AUTOS FOR SALE

1963 VW camper, bed, frig., stove, sun roof. 1967, 50 h.p. engine completely rebuilt in Aug. New front end, call Bob, 549-1730. tf12-13

1967 TR4A, runs excellent, 53,000 mi., new generator, clutch, brakes, exhaust system. Body needs some work. $800. Write Box 128, Amherst. tf12-13

1963 Chevy — good condition. $200. Large peoples car worth more. Call Rich, 256-8325. tf12-13

For sale, 66 Ford, 289, 4-speed, studded snows, good cond. $325. 665-3200. tf 12-13

Chevrolet, Camaro SS 67, very good condition. Winterized, new snow tires, air cond. Asking $900. Call 256-6253 after 4 p.m. tf 12-13

49 Chevy, 1 ton panel truck, 53' GMC truck, 6 cyl. engine solid truck. Also 1 yr old Gitane 10 spd. bike. Call Michael 253-7384. tf 12-13

1966 Dodge Dart, GT convertible. Good cond., $250 or best offer. Call 549-0070. tf12-13

1965 Corvair Monza. Good cond., 4 excellent tires & snows. Really "owned by a lady schoolteacher." $350. 586-3701, 7:30 - 8:30 p.m. tf12-13

1961 VW Bug, inspected, $125. Call 253-2658 after 4 p.m. tf12-13

'65 power wagon, 4 wd w/snowplow, 4 speed trans., new battery, $1,200. '67 VW w/70 engine, runs excellent, body good, $550. 625-9209. tf12-13

HELP! MUST SELL MY 65 CAPRICE THIS WEEK. NEW BALL JTS., EXHAUST & MORE. 396 ENG., A.T., P.S., P.B., R & H, EVERYTHING WORKS PERF., $250. BARRY — 549-3626. tf12-13

1963 VW Bus, just tuned, rblt. eng. New starter & gen. good tires. $200 or best offer. 616-2521. Also ex tendr sax $125, ex alto $80. 12-13

Mellow yellow 1970 VW Beetle. Excellent condition throughout. Must be seen. $1100. Call anyone at 367-9375. 12-13

WANTED

Room in house in Montague, N.Lev or North. Non-student responsible craftsman, age 24, country living prefrd. Call Suzy 584-7351.

Coins and stamps US and foreign bought, sold, traded. Estimates and appraisals. Call Bob 546-6716, 202 Chadbourne House. tf12-13

Term paper: In form of research grant application to Gov't. Agency on any topic relevant to ecology, remun. Call Rick at 546-5139. tf12-13

RIDE WANTED

Help! Ride for 2 needed to Albuquerque or gen. vic., Dec. 20-28, to arrive by Dec. 31 (?) Will share driving, expenses. Call Rod, 546-6191. tf12-13

To Chicago. Leave Dec. 15, 16. Will share driving & expenses. Leave message for Max, 549-6304 or 545-1377, or 665-4122. tf12-13

Ride needed to or from Florida area, or both. Leave Jan. 2nd, return approx. Jan. 20. 2 girls. Call Donna, 665-3077 after 5:30. tf12-13

Ride needed to Florida around Jan. 1. Will share driving and expenses. Call Bev in 321 at 545-2418, 9. 12-13

Need ride home to D.C. area after Dec. 21st. Share expenses. Please call Kathi 665-3129. 12-13

Easthampton to Amherst and return. Mon. thru Fri. 8-4 or 8:30 to 4:30. Will share expenses. Call 527-3634 after 6 p.m. 12-13

Ride wanted to Stockbridge or Great Barrington Friday after 10. Call Peter 6-5935. 12-13

Ride wanted to ski area Thursday for 1 or 2. Call 6-9920, Ilene. 12-13

To Florida after New Year's. Will share expenses - 3 girls. Call Mary 5-2412 CRM. 204. 12-13

ROOMMATES WANTED

F. roommate, own room in Cliffside Apartments. Call Barbara, 253-5571 evenings. tf12-13

Female — own room in new Puffton. Low rent in exchange for some babysitting eves. 549-0399 after 5:00. tf12-12

Room in house near Colonial Village. Approx. $80 per month, includes everything — even food. Female wanted. 253-8668. tf12-13

Two girls looking for two guys to share 3 bedroom apartment at Puffton. Rent $58. Call 549-0114 after 6. tf12-13

Fem. roommate wanted — own rm. in 3 bdrm. apt., with 2 other girls. Rent negotiable. Avail. Jan. 7. Pleasant atmosphere. Call Amy, 549-0688. tf12-13

1-2 fem. rmmate(s). to share apt., $58.50 ea. Avail. Dec. 15. Call 549-0042. tf12-13

Male roommate wanted in Presidential Apts., for spring semester. $46/mo. furn. & util. included. Call 549-1716 after 6 p.m. (for John). tf12-13

Male roommate for spring semester, $60/mo. University Park Apts. Call Perry, 253-5664. tf12-13

Female grad looking for female roommate. $85 mo. Own room and bath. Near campus. Call 549-3661 evenings. tf12-13

1 room Puffton Village, male or female, $70/month. Immediate occupancy or for Jan. Call John or Paul, 549-3626. tf12-13

Looking for your own room? Large with fireplace, oldest house in Amherst. $60/mo. Utilities included. Call 253-3274 after 5 p.m.

Roomates wanted M or F to rent single or master bedrm in Apt. 1 mile from Campus. For info call John or Janice 549-6611.

F seeking place to live in Worcester neat Sem. where I'm stu-teaching. Call 545-2308 or 545-2925. Ask for Kathy in 319. Leave mess.

Puffton Village, own room, $80 a month. 549-0079.

We are looking for quiet, easy going person over 21 to share our house in Amherst. Own room. $64.50 plus share util. Call 253-7538.

2 roommates wanted M or F to share 1 room in 3 bedroom apartment in Puffton. $55 apiece per month. Call Debbie at 549-6304 eve. 12-13

Room available 1/1/73: Rolling Gr. 4 bdrm., 1-1/2 bth., all utilities, parking. Only $68/mo. Call Alan at 253-5715. Please leave mess. 12-13

Fem. roommate wanted. App. $46, own rm. near campus. 253-2077.

Grad student to share 2-bedroom furnished apt. 665-4016 evening or contact Hal, 420 Tobin Hall. tf 12-13

2 female upperclass or grad. pref. Good eating habits, own room on first floor of house, close to campus, but not in country. $62.50 ea. 549-6409. tf12-13

Fem. roommate wanted. Approx. $46, own rm. nr. campus. 253-2077. tf12-13

M. or f. roommate wanted, own bedroom, $67 mo. Call 253-7941. Excellent location, good neighbors. tf12-13

1 male needed to share apt. in Puffton Vil. Own room, $80/month. Occupancy from January. Call Emmanuel, 549-0711 (evenings). tf12-13

PERSONAL

Aardvark, Sorry for the late response to your letter. I think it's about time we get together. If interested let me know. tf12-13

Have a nog at the concert, Dec. 13!! East Room, Worcester D.C., for fun. tf12-13

To the lady of my heart — Kiss me you fool! Love, your Towhead. tf12-13

Passport photos, fast, fast -service. Lang's Photo, 197 N. Pleasant St., Amherst. tf12-13

Photo lab for rent. Lang's Photo, near Wearhouse, 197 N. Pleasant St., Amherst. tf12-13

Jan — It's been a great semester. Without you life would be a bor,ver. Love, Bob. 12-13

By the way, Dave. Did you uh. . . Jean? 12-13

Thank you Candy & Francine whoever you are? Andy 214. 12-13

Susan, Pip and Squeak still live. Happy Birthday. 113 David. 12-13

PERSONAL

Brinkert — Could you envisage the viability of the Emasculation of your illusory pedastal? 12-13

B3 — So happy and thankful for our three years together — may the rest of our lives be as joyful! Happy Anniversary! Love, N.A.S. 12-13

Mr. Buddy — Happy Birthday the 20th. It will be great. We love you. Ms. Buddy and Everstar. P.S. Are you surprised? 12-13

Congratulations, Rat!! Good luck at the big Ohio Mouse Trap. tf 12-13

To the mustachioed stranger from the East, I love you Mucho and always will. 12-13

Second floor JQA. Merry Christmas and Happy Holidays. S. & E. 12-13

Bobby and Gary L. swines re-united. Look out Coolidge and everyone else. 12-13

Happy 18th birthday Max from the 5th floor Wheeler vegetables. 12-13

Kaye, Happy 21st, your finalty here. Best from Rich, Pat, Nelson, Paula and Bob. 12-13

Congratulations Everett, you made it thru the semester. So did I. Your faithful cat spook. Luv ya, Sweetie-pie. Merry interses'n! 12-13

Kisses to friends and lovers for whom there is no future in the Govt. Love you all but must be gone for days. D. Simeon, Secretario. 12-13

Barbs, Happy Birthday! For the 36th time, you're finally over the hill. I.SD. 12-13

Hey Jopoyopcope! Alas and Alak! Don't get too ruined over vacation. See ya upon my return, Dopanopa. 12-13

Hey Muck, Thanks for a great trip! Your ex-wife. P.S. Merry Xmas — it will be over before you know it. Just don't let the snow melt. 12-13

For my Emperor, Happy 21st. Love, Your Cinnamon Girl. 12-13

Notices

AMATEUR RADIO
UMass Amateur Radio Club will have a meeting tonight at 4:00 p.m. in Rm. 803 CC.

CAMPUS SHUTTLE ENDS
Today Dec. 13th is the last day of operation for the Three Campus Shuttle routes. No service will be provided during finals. Service will resume on the first class day in January.

CENTRAL AREA RESIDENTS
If you have questions concerning housing or programming in the area during the month of Jan., please direct them to the Head of Residence/Resident Director of the house in which you live.

CHESS CLUB
Chess club meeting tonight, 7:30 to midnight, CC 804-808.

CHRISTMAS PARTY
Brown House will present "Cuckoo's Nest" in concert tonight in Worcester D.C. Everyone is invited.

CRAFTS SOLD IN CC
If you wish to sell a craft on the Concourse, you must come to the Guild meeting tonight in the Dukes Rm., S.U. at 5:00.

FUNNY FARM DREAM FACTORY
There will be a special party after the Harvard Basketball game in the Funny Farm Suite.

GUN SAFETY CLUB
Rifle and pistol club meet tonight at 7:30 in 915 CC. Elections. Girls and new members welcome.

HATHA YOGA ORGANIZATION
Undergraduates wishing to continue in their practice of Yoga, weekly, contact Mary at 546-6298 about membership for Spring semester. Mitch Salnick will be instructing.

INNKEEPERS MEETING
Dec. 13, Wed., meeting 8-9 p.m., Rm. 803 CC.

KNOW YOURSELF
The Universal Institute of Applied Ontology will present a lecture on the importance of "being" in human being. CC911, 8:00 p.m. All welcome.

MACBETH
Open tryouts for U.T. production of Macbeth - Thurs., Dec. 14, in the Barn (near textbook advance) - sign up for audition appointment in advance at 410 Machmer.

NORTHAMPTON VOLUNTEERS
Christmas Party Thurs. night. Bus leaves at 6:30 p.m. from Hasbrouck and at 6:35 from Patterson. Will return by 9:30. Bring your Christmas spirit and smile.

NURSING
Want to talk about how things are going and where things are going with curriculum planning? Come to Mor. IV-413 (Conference Rm.) on Thurs., Dec. 14, either 1:30-2:30 or 2:30-3:30.

OUTING CLUB
Don't forget the Christmas Party is Sat. at 6:30 p.m., directions will be on the board. Check the board for intersession trips. Have a Merry Xmas. See you next year!

PROGRAM COUNCIL
There will be a Program Council meeting tonight at 6:30 in Rm. 176 CC.

RSO GROUPS NEEDING CC TABLES
Sign up today for your table next week. Call Bill at 5-0012 or 5-0014.

SCUBA CLUB
Meeting for all those going to Fla. at 5:00 in Hicks Rm. 14. Everyone must be there because this is the Last before we go.

TONITE
"A Raisin in the Sun" starring Sidney Poitier, 7:00 and 9:30 CCA.

CULTURNATIVES
Meeting 7:30 tonight in S.U. Council Chambers (2nd fl.). New members welcome.

LOST
Men's gold wire rim glasses w/black case reading: Chris Opticians. Lost sometime within last 2 wks. Call 6-4729 late eves.

If you gave two guys a ride from Amherst Sun. night, please check back seat. I lost my glasses there. Call Paul, 546-5982.

FOUND
Collie puppy, Thurs., in S.W., no collar. Call and identify 546 5381.

Male tiger cat w/stump tail and double paws, 717 JQA, 6-8355. Cat will go to pound if not claimed.

Small, female, red and white cat in crabtree. If it's yours, or you want it, come get it. 545-2302 Stephanie in 301.

CHRISTMAS PARTY TONITE
WEDS. DEC. 13th
at WORC. DINING COMMONS (EAST ROOM))
FREE 'NOGGS & RAFFLE
BEER
8:30-12 PM
ADM. 50¢

• TR 6
• TR 250
• TR 4-3
• SPITFIRE

TUNE UP!

Service Special
4 cyl. models $20.00
6 cyl. models 3.00 extra
INCLUDING PARTS

FREE Oil & Lube
(Reg. $26-$30 Value)

IMPORTS, LTD. by appointment only 584-5009
251 Russell St., Hadley
THIS SPECIAL GOOD THROUGH DECEMBER ONLY!

MDC CLASSIFIED

FOR SALE

Pre-owned Zenith portable stereo. Speakers with 7' cord. Excell. cond. Asking $50, will take best offer. 549-1210 evenings. tf12-72

Guitars — new and used at discount prices. Many fine instruments and acc. in stock. The Guitar Workshop, 98 Main St., North. 586-1766. tf-contin.

Waterbeds ahead of time. $30.95 complete. Safeway htrs., bedspreads, fur rugs. 367-2787, 367-2858. Inter., Rte 63 & 47, Montague. tf12-13

Handcrafted pine benches, tables, and boxes, all different and unique. 200 yds east inter. Lte. 63 & 47, 367-2787, Montague. tf12-13

BAUER MEN'S HOCKEY SKATES size 11 1/2 & 10. Very good cond. $30 when new. Asking $25. Call Kathy 545-0731. Also woman's size 7 1/2, $3. tf 12-13

*Stereo — Audio Electronics * The best buys on brand name stereo equipment. Call Greg at 546-6648. tf12-13

Guitar-Hagstrom II solid body and heathkit, 240w amp with 2 12" speakers $75 for all. Call Neal 516-0051 tf 12-13

Those bombs carry your name: let's shoot baskets instead. Vinly bumper stickers, 75¢ ea., Box 95, Cambridge, N.Y. 12816. 3/$1.50, 30/$9. tf12-13

If you want fine furniture you're reading the wrong ad. Used couches, easy chairs, lg. rug, lamps, etc. For sale. 253-5016. tf12-13

Movie posters, lobby cards, 8x10 stills, comic books, original art nostalgia items. We buy and sell. Rebel Peddler, 1587 Main St., Sprfld. tf12-13

For sale, 1 pair of Goodyear snowtires, whitewall with studs, used one winter. Mounted on Volvo rims. Call 584-6537. tf12-13

For sale, Hanover skis, in good condition. Selling for $30.00 or best offer. Call 549-3722. tf12-13

For sale, Martin 00-18 guitar w/case, $250. Call 253-2255 or come nites, 324 Northampton Rd., Amherst. tf12-13

Ski equipment, boots 7 1/2, 9 1/2, (Festa) pants, man's 30R, White Stag, woman's 12 Sun Valley Bollag. Call 545-2888 or 256-8206. tf12-13

Gibson super-medalist guitar. Amp. excellent condition, 2-12's. 584-4985. tf12-13

FOR SALE

2 fur coats — perfect condition — med. over knee length, grey & brown. Best offers, be warm! Call Peggy, 253-2881. tf12-13

Ski boots, men's 10 1/2, Lange Pros. Used 2 mos. Half price. Call 665-4096. tf12-13

Ski rack, trunk type. Holds 4 pr., plus poles, $15. Call 665-4096. tf12-13

Complete stereo sys. Delmonico amp AM/FM Panasonic turntable, speakers, 50 plus records. Must sell, $100. Rick, 797 Main St., Amherst. tf12-13

Ski boots — Henke Strato Pro. Used 1/2 season, ex. cond. New foam bladders available, very cheap. Size 9, asking $75. 6-6081, Ross. tf12-13

Realistic FM car radio converter - converts AM car radio to FM, excellent condition, $20. Call Chris at 549-1205 mornings. 12-13

Beaufl. warm, purple winter coat, size 16 (too big for me now). Excl. conditn. Will accept best offer. Call Judy 253-5935 12-13

IBM electric typewriter office machine. Ex. Cond. $200. Call 516-0056. 12-13

Holiday Sale! 5-year factory guarantee waterbeds $17.50. Heaters $27.50. Lowest prices in S.College area. Sale ends 12-21-72. 586-9126, Gary. 12-13

Xmas plant sale. Sat. Dec. 16 only. 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., 59 Pine St., No. Amherst. 12-13

Polaroid Camera #305, 1-1/2 yrs. Hardly used. w/flash $19.00. Also 2-12 v/t auto a.m. radios, w/built-in spkrs. $5. ea. Call Wayne 665-2387. 12-13

ROOM FOR RENT

Furnished room in private house. No cooking, close to campus, immediate occupancy, quiet location Call 549-0397. tf12-13

1 bedroom, everything included, $155. University Park Apts. Call Tom anytime, 253-2220. tf12-13

Person wanted for country house near Conway 62. $50/mo. Begin Jan. 1, 12 mi. out on 116. Write J. Hurley c/o Gen. Del., Conway, Mass. 12-13

TRAVEL

Want to get away for Christmas vacation? Try camping on the exotic island of Jamaica. For more info., call Jon Rubin, 549-0112, evg. tf12-13

Bienvenu everyone. Panam will take you to all your dream cities providing you with best comforts, call Lina 546-5310. tf12-13

See all the places you've dreamed of: London, Istanbul, Athens, Rome, an island in the sun, economically too. . .fly PanAm. Ellen 253-7661. tf12-13

Skiing in Europe is cheaper than you think, call and find out. Call Shelley, 546-8258. tf12-13

How about skiing in Europe over the holidays? Contact Kathy, 549-0658. tf12-13

Leaving about Jan. 7 in private plane. Anywhere in Florida or Bahamas for $100 round trip. Call Bob at 665-3006 after 6 p.m. 12-13

SERVICES

Wanted: native speaking Arab to tutor me in pronunciation. Am eager, willing to work, and serious. Call Rebecca, 253-7217. tf12-13

The Exec. Hair Salon, 151 Main St., Northampton, Mass. Hairstyling: We begin where others leave off. For appt. call 584-2548. tf12-13

You click the camera, I'll print the vision. Quality processing of 35mm B & W. Maglick Photo 253-2400. tf 12-13

APTS. WANTED

Female student needs to find a furnished room or apt. before second semester. Call 1-413-544-6743 after 5 p.m. tf 12-13

1-2 bedroom apt. wanted. Not a complex — prefer old house in country. Will pay up to $165 — not more than 15 min. away. Call 545-2550. tf12-13

1 bdrm. apt., fr. Jan to June, 150 to 165/month, util. incl. within 7 mi. radius of campus. Pref. furnished. Call Michele, 546-7317 after 6:00 p.m. tf12-13

FOR RENT

Apt. for rent, 2 bdr. townhouse, Squire Vil. $240 mo., includes utilities, avail. Jan. 1. 665-2907. tf 12-13

January 1st availability — large, newly remodeled apts. — 3/4 bedrooms — children & pets welcome — quiet country local. Call 256-8096 day, 253-7717 night. tf 12-13

1 room in 3 bd. Puffton apt. for spring. Female or male. Call Gene, 549-0065. tf12-13

Couple need a place? Lg. room in 5 room house, 2 miles from campus. Available 1-15-73, $100/month. See Rick, 797 Main St., Apt. 4. tf12-13

Grad student or faculty person to share large Victorian house in country. Quiet, great setting. $100 plus share utilities. 584-2808 12-13

1 bdrm. apt. furnished $100/mo. Util. included. Call 253-3798. 12-13

Apt. for rent 1 bedroom, 2-3 people. $105/mo. includes all but lites. Call 549-0165. Keep trying. Avail. Jan. 1 or sooner. Merry Xmas. 12-13

Large 3-4 rm. apt. - heat & hot water. Children welcome. Immediate availability. $150/mo. A real find. Call 256-8096 or 253-7717. 12-13

ENTERTAINMENT

New Year's Eve at the Campus Center — come and celebrate! Reservations & information. Call 549-0418. 12-13

HOUSE FOR RENT

Completely remodeled 6 bedroom colonial-type house, kids and pets welcome. Immediate availability - quiet country living. Call 256-8096 day, 253-7717 night. tf 12-13

MISCELLANEOUS

Invitation to openness display of the exotic art works, by Mehran Vajdi at S.U. art gallery from Dec. 15-22 at 1-4 p.m. tf12-13

TO SUBLET

To sublet - one bedroom apt. incl. utilities - $175 mo. - avail. Jan. 1 - call 549-0475.

Furn. eff. apt. in W. Hatfield, 15 min. from UMass, avail. Jan. 1, All util. inc., $110 per/mo. Call Doug, 217-9144, will pay Jan. $110 for you! tf12-13

Puffton Village 1 bedroom apt. in ideal location to sublet Jan 1 - Aug. 31. Call 549-3673 after 5:00. 12-13

Furnished 1 bedroom apt. Furniture yours to keep. $100/mo. Avail. Jan. 1. Puffton Village. Call Bob 549-0060. 12-13

Available Jan. 1, 2 bdrm. apt. 10 mi. from campus. $185/mo., incl. Call eves. 323-7811. 12-13

1 bdrm. furnished apt for 2 near campus. Convat. location, spacious, comfi., quiet. Air cond., pool, cable, utilities. $18 mo., avail Jan. 1. 253-7217 tf12-13

To sublet — furnished 1 bedroom apt., $155/mo., avail. Jan. 25. Bus service. 253-9088. tf12-13

Going skiing Dec. 13 to Feb. 28? Apt. to let, own bedroom, free rent for Dec. $80/mo for Jan., Feb., incl. utilities. Call 253-7295. 12-13

LOST

Cat wearing grn. collar w/bell. Fem., shrt. hrd., grey stripes, white stomach & throat. Thanks from Amherst Col., 549-6359, 542-5541. tf12-13

Lost: Wallet with identification, social security number, gas cards. Contact owner: Oriol P. Sonyer, 253-3001. Ten dollar reward.

Purse missing from Munchies — need glasses and other good shit in it — If found please take to Collegian pl. do office. Please. 12-13

A&M Records is honored to present a two-record album of Groucho Marx, recorded live-in-concert at Carnegie Hall. Only through the incredible re-emergence of the Marx Brothers' films, the devotion of certain people close to Groucho, and Groucho's own amazing ability to get up and do two and a half hours at 82 years old, is this album available at all. ¶ It is a monument to perhaps the greatest comedian America has ever produced...and it is priceless. The album is called: An Evening With Groucho.... the one, the only Groucho... on A&M Records.

Telephone Records The 'Cat's Meow'

BOSTON (AP)–Acquittal was the cat's meow for a former Northeastern University student charged with assault on a policeman.

Six witnesses for defendant Louis W. Ricketts, 20, had testified that Ricketts was with them outside his Hemenway Street apartment at the time the assault occurred on East Berkeley Street July 30.

Defense attorney Jerome Pelcari produced telephone company records showing Ricketts made a collect call at approximately the hour of the assault. The call was to a former Northeastern student, Eldred Richards, who was spending the night with his parents in New York.

Ricketts testified he called his friend to tell him he could hear the cat meowing in Richard's apartment and asked if he should have the superintendent let him in to feed it.

Both Richards and his mother testified it was Ricketts who called. The Suffolk Superior Court jury believed them.

James Brown Alleged 'Disorderly'

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - Singer James Brown and two aides were arrested on disorderly conduct charges early Monday after a concert in Knoxville's Civic Coliseum.

Brown's manager, Freddy James Holmes of New York City, and aide Oliver Dyer of Augusta, Ga., also were charged with assault.

Brown posted $250 bond and Holmes and Dyer bonds of $2,750 each and were released. A City Court hearing for the trio was set for Dec. 27.

The police version and Brown's disagree on what happened, but both sides agree there was an altercation on a parking lot outside the Coliseum. Two patrolmen involved, David McGoldrick and Phil Bowling, were treated at a hospital for minor injuries.

Police Chief Joe Fowler said Brown and his group were slow in heeding a police order to leave the Coliseum after the show. After the party got outside, a dispute arose and members of Brown's party began cursing police, Fowler said. He said McGoldrick and Bowling then were beaten.

Brown said he and his road show workers were loading music equipment on a truck when police approached and ordered them to move on.

When they did not immediately heed the order, Brown said, officers began beating him and his two companions.

Police denied Brown's accusation.

Sex Popular At Michigan State

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP)—A television class on human sexuality is proving the most popular course at Michigan State University.

Approximately 2,300 students signed up this fall for the class conducted by psychologist Andrew M. Barclay, who, like many of his students, usually sports work shirts and bell bottoms.

"To attract crowds like that, he must be doing something illegal," commented one professor at MSU, where agriculture once was considered the prime academic pursuit.

Barclay, however, insists his class provides students with badly needed information about their own sexuality.

"We're really not out to titillate anybody," Barclay, 31, said. "We're not conducting an illustrated sex manual. We don't want to show them how to do it but to get them to better understand their feelings while they're doing it.

"I really don't think students are much more knowledgable and sophisticated than their parents about sex...If they are, how do you explain the rising rates in venereal disease and unwanted pregnancies on most U.S. campuses?"

Barclay says his aim is to place sex in perspective and to help students adjust their sexual behavior so it fits naturally into their lives.

Included in the 140 topics during the 10-week course are masculine and feminine roles, homosexuality, self-awareness, and the social, psychological, racial and legal aspects of sex.

"While I stress that sex is good, healthy and perfectly normal, I also try to point out that you can engage in sex for the wrong reasons...for example, a male student who seeks sex only as an affirmation of his masculinity."

But since he feels that clinical discussions of sex can be boring, Barclay adopts the techniques of the educational TV shows "Sesame Street" and "The Electric Company" to keep his students alert.

He breaks his class into 10-minute blocks of information, getting the message across by using such multimedia effects as rock music, picture montages, bawdy songs and racy limericks. The class is divided into 38 sections that view presentations on a dozen large-screen monitors around the 30,000-student campus.

"What we're trying to do is get everything into the open," he explained, "so we can go on to discuss the reason people react to various sexual stimuli." The result is a "cultural shock" for some students, he said.

Some students greet the course with blushes, giggles and guffaws at first, but "peer group pressure restores the learning atmosphere," Barclay said.

This is the last

Collegian

of the fall semester.

Stones' Attorney Keeps Things Rolling

WARWICK, R.I. (AP)—An attorney representing the Rolling Stones rock group planned Wednesday to seek another continuance in the twice-postponed court appearance for two leaders of the group and three members of their entourage.

Joseph E. Gallucci said Wednesday would be inconvenient for his clients and he would seek reassignment of the trial date.

The case was scheduled to come before district court here Aug. 29 after being continued from the previous week. At that time, Gallucci said he had not had enough time to arrange an appearance by his clients.

The defendants, including lead singer Mick Jagger and guitarist Keith Richard, were arrested July 18 after a fracas at Green Airport with a newspaper photographer and Warwick police. The Stones' chartered plane was rerouted to Green after fog conditions were reported in Boston, where the group was scheduled to appear at a concert.

Authorities said the dispute broke out at the airport after Andy Dickerman, a photographer for the Providence Journal-Bulletin, tried to photograph the Stones.

After their arrest, the five defendants were hurriedly arraigned, released and sped to Boston where a crowd of 15,000 awaited them.

Jagger was charged with obstructing a police officer in the performance of his duty, while Richard was charged with simple assault. Marshall Chest, a record producer, was charged with obstructing a police officer, and Stanley Moore, a bodyguard, was charged with simple assault. All were released on $50 bail after pleading innocent to the charges.

Robert Frank, the Stones' official photographer, was charged with assaulting a police officer and was released on $100 bail.

Glass Exhibit

There will be an Exhibition of Free Hand-Blown Glass in Herter Gallery today through Thursday, December 21. Works are created from recycled glass by Alan Day, Dan Brown, and Jim Logan, second-year Master of Fine Arts Grad students majoring in Ceramics. Works are from a New York course given by the Art Department during the past year. Gallery hours: Wednesday through Friday 10:00 to 4:00, Friday night 7:00 to 9:00, Saturday and Sunday 2:00 to 5:00. Closed Mondays and Tuesdays.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

☆——By SYDNEY OMARR——☆

When it comes to late-night snacks, Cancer and Leo natives "take the cake." Aries creates Dagwood sandwiches and Taurus selects solid chunks of meat. Pisces prefers delicate fish dishes and Capricorn will settle for caviar and hard-boiled eggs as a midnight repast.

***

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Easy waits are blocked. Potential and long-range views dominate. Live your own life. Those who advise and expect you to consent must be awakened to facts. Self-interest now must be your key. You will comprehend.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Advice from friends could leave something to be desired. Your own views should be first, foremost. Strive for added independence. Be wary in connection with money, valuables. Do your own accounting for now.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Home affairs could dominate. Family member is trying to tell you something. Learn by teaching. Means share knowledge. Examine motives, hunches. Accept responsibility. If enthusiastic, you benefit.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Let others handle minor matters, details. View project as a whole. Perceive potential. Applies to personal as well as business affairs. Now you can look ahead to holiday visits, gift selections.

VIRGO (August 23-Sept. 22): Lie low. Obtain hint from Leo message. If patient, necessary changes will occur. Gemini individual could play key role. Accent is on public relations, your ability to perceive what is needed. Sum up-but don't commit yourself.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Journey may result in the unexpected. Postpone long-range project. You require additional material, information. Know it and respond accordingly. Taurus individual figures prominently. Be flexible.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Study Virgo message. See situations, persons as they really are-don't deceive yourself. Wishful thinking is your adversary. Emotion tends to take over from logic. Be prepared. Avoid basing actions on impulse.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Invest in your own talents, abilities. Older individual lends helping hand. Accept added responsibility. Bright spot occurs in area previously oppressed. You are due for unusual surprise-of pleasant variety.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You can complete assignment and receive recognition for efforts. Some ideas need revision and more time to develop. Tiptoe through welter of confusion. Steer clear of disputes among relatives.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): New approach is necessary if you are to realize financial gain. Key now is to strive for originality. Old methods will not suffice. Keep up with times. Stress showmanship, creativity.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You can overcome odds. Key is to follow through, knowing you will get backing after initial opposition. Aquarian may be surprise ally. Be receptive. Keep faith in yourself. You are on right path.

IF TODAY IS BIRTHDAY you recently survived test. You are due to reap some rewards. You are a frank, direct individual. You usually mean what you say and say what you mean. You abhor hypocrisy. In 1973, you will complete important project. August will be your most significant month of upcoming year.

Copyright 1972, Gen. Fea. Corp.

Crossword Puzzle

ACROSS

1 Recorded proceedings
5 Declare
9 Ocean
12 Temperate
13 Rant
14 Sum up
15 Printer's measure
16 Nobleman
18 Hindu cymbals
20 Prefix: with
22 Baseball term
24 Breathe with difficulty
27 Drinks slowly
29 Observes
31 Change color of 32 Entreaties
34 Bark
36 Compass point
37 Illegal participant (slang)
39 More indigent
41 Babylonian deity
42 Dye plant
44 Delineate
45 Indonesian tribesman
47 Frog
49 Pirate
50 Article of furniture
52 Journey
54 Note of scale
55 Brick-carrying device
57 Antlered animal
59 Symbol for cerium
61 Female sheep
63 Encourage
65 Gray
67 French plural article
68 Prohibits
69 Woody plant

DOWN

1 High card
2 Pacify
3 Preposition
4 Beverage
5 Tapestry
6 Depression between mountains
7 For example (abbr.)
8 Soak
9 Dinner course
10 Man's nickname
11 Paid notice
17 Hebrew month
19 Symbol for silver
21 Unlock
23 Retain
25 Figure of speech
26 Looked at intently
27 Scatter
28 Epic tale
30 Narrow opening
33 Dispatched
35 Cut of meat
38 Disturbance
40 Foray
43 Pantry
46 Residue
48 Food programs
51 Knockout (abbr.)
53 Hebrew letter
56 Bespatter
58 Rodent
60 Organ of sight
61 Spanish article
62 Pronoun
64 College degree (abbr.)
66 Senior (abbr.)

Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle

Distr. by United Feature Syndicate, Inc. 13

FLORIDA

Jan. 5 - 14

Only $130

includes:
Deluxe Continental Trailways Accommodations
Champagne Pool Party
Live Entertainment
400 foot Ocean Beach
Two Pools
Game and Billiard Room

Admission and Transportation to Disneyworld and Kennedy Space Center

Also Available

Daily Happy Hour with 1/2 price drinks and hors d'oeuvres

Tennis and Golf Courts — Charges

FOR MORE INFORMATION CALL 545-0585 or come to 818 CAMPUS CENTER, ask for Russ Sobelman.

UCLA Still No. 1, Friars Move Up

An act of Congress seems the only way to unseat incumbent UCLA, but the House and Senate are on holiday. So sure as Christmas....

The Bruins again were the unanimous No. 1 choice in the weekly Associated Press college basketball balloting by 41 sportswriters and broadcasters released Tuesday.

UCLA's 3-0 season record matches the other teams in the top five but Florida State, Maryland, Marquette and Minnesota don't have Bill Walton and a chance for 60 straight triumphs.

Florida State remained No. 2 with 648 points after whipping Eastern Kentucky and Biscayne last week and Maryland routed Canisius in its only game to hold on to No. 3 with 620 points. UCLA, meanwhile, collected 820 points from voters though idle all week.

Marquette moved up from fifth to fourth after beating two ranked teams-Tennessee and Memphis State. As a result of the crushing blows Tennessee, No. 14 a week ago, fell from the Top Twenty while Memphis State plummeted eight places to No. 19.

Minnesota slipped one place to fifth despite a convincing triumph over Wisconsin-Milwaukee.

Other teams in the Top Ten, all unbeaten, are North Carolina State, Long Beach State, Southwestern Louisiana, Pennsylvania and Oral Roberts. The latter is the only newcomer to the elite bracket, moving up from No. 12 with three triumphs during its first week of season competition.

North Carolina, 4-0, was ranked No. 11, followed by Missouri and Vanderbilt who at 5-0 have the longest winning streaks of the young season. No. 14 Providence and No. 15 Indiana are the only other unbeaten ranked teams.

Rounding out the poll are Houston, Brigham Young, Michigan, Memphis State and Kansas State.

1. UCLA 41	3-0	820
2. Florida St.	3-0	648
3. Maryland	3-0	620
4. Marquette	3-0	572
5. Minnesota	3-0	452
6. N.C. St	4-0	398
7. Long Beach St.	3-0	377
8. SW La.	4-0	273
9. Penn.	3-0	260
10. Oral Roberts	3-0	185
11. N. Carolina	4-0	176
12. Missouri	5-0	82
13. Vanderbilt	5-0	73
14. Providence	1-0	71
15. Indiana	3-0	64
16. Houston	5-1	62
17. Brig Young	3-1	56
18. Michigan	3-1	48
19. Memphis St.	2-2	45
20. Kansas St	3-1	31

Mean Joe Pities QB

NEW YORK (AP)-"I hate to see them mess up a great young quarterback like Dan Pastorini," Pittsburgh's Joe Greene said of the Houston Oilers. "They've just got to get him some protection."

It was Green who did most of the messing Sunday-and the Oilers needed a whip and a chair to protect Pastorini from the onslaught.

Greene, the Steelers' behemoth at defensive tackle, made six unassisted tackles and personally sacked Pastorini five times, a good example of why Pittsburgh leads the American Conference in quarterback dumpings. In addition, he blocked a field goal attempt to prevent the Oilers from taking a halftime lead.

And in the third quarter, he tackled Fred Willis with such ferocity that the running back fumbled-and Greene recovered it to set up Roy Gerela's third field goal as the Steelers scored a 9-3 victory and moved within a triumph of their first and only title in 40 years, the championship of the AFC's Central Division.

For his dominating performance, "Mean Joe Greene" was selected Tuesday as The Associated Press Defensive Player of the Week in the National Football League.

Also nominated were rookie Green Bay cornerback Willie Buchanon and Cleveland defensive tackle Walter Johnson. Buchanon made two interceptions, one setting up a touchdown, the other paving the way to a field goal, as the Packers beat Minnesota 23-7 to win the National Conference Central title. And Johnson had 10 unassisted tackles-one of them a quarterback-sack-and one assist as the Browns defeated Cincinnati 27-24.

The Steelers, clinging to a half-game lead over Cleveland as they went into their game, faced the prospect of going into the lockerroom on the short end of 6-3 halftime score as the Oilers drove to the Pittsburgh 18-yard line and, with 12 seconds to go, set up for a field goal.

But Greene crashed through the line and blocked Skip Butler's kick and the Steelers took over, preserving the halftime tie. It was at the Houston 13 that he belted Willis and pounced on the ball, giving Gerela the chance to kick his 13-yarder that finished off the Oilers.

Join us at

The Pub

on

New Year's Eve

for a

Party

with

D.J.

Open Buffet - Open Bar

$30 per couple

8 p.m. to 2 a.m.

Call 549-1200 for information — Call Early!

Just For The Record

Bobby Tolan - A Fatalist

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) —Soft-spoken Bobby Tolan, honored Tuesday for his courage in conquering two rips of his right Achilles tendon, remains a confirmed fatalist in the wake of continued recognition.

"I just try not to get too involved and let things worry me too much," the Cincinnati Reds' centerfielder said hours after being named winner of the 1972 Hutch Award for courage.

"I just take things as they come, and don't get too excited," Tolan said. "If things go good, okay. If they go bad, okay. I've always felt this way."

The Hutch Award is given annually by a sportswriters and broadcasters organization to the major league baseball player who best exemplifies the fighting spirit and courage of the late pitcher and manager, Fred Hutchinson, who died of cancer in November 1964.

Tolan, who missed the entire 1971 season after two operations to repair his injured leg but who returned to hit .283 and steal 42 bases for the Reds last season, earlier was honored as the National League comeback player of the year.

Tolan, 27, graciously accepts the honors, yet retains an outward coolness.

He often has admitted concern that another injury of the repaired tendon could end his career, and he maintains an unemotional attitude toward his job and the possibility it could end suddenly.

"Am I a fatalist?" he echoed a reporter's question Tuesday. "Yes, I think that's true," he replied.

"I don't worry too much," Tolan said. "My attitude...it's just automatic, just natural, and it's never really changed. It's just the way I am."

Tolan was a runaway winner in the Hutch Award balloting, followed, in order, by Billy Williams of the Chicago Cubs; Gaylord Perry of the Cleveland Indians; Ron Santo of the Cubs, and Carlos May of the Chicago White Sox.

Wanted:

BUS DRIVERS

U/Mass students with a Class II License who wish to work during Spring '73 Semester. Apply Room 434 S.U. Phone 5-0056 or 5-2086.

Student Senate Transit Service

An Equal Opportunity Employer

an unusual "BEFORE" XMAS SALE

starts Wed. 13th

SHOES for men & women

good selection of styles

SRO
SANDLER
STUDIO 26
BATES
VERDE
DONNATE MARRONE

10.95

the SHOE-BIN

187 NORTH PLEASANT ST.
AMHERST, MASS.

Hoopsters Lose 71-68

By EARLE BARROLL

Storrs, Conn.--The only good thing about it is that you only have to come here once a year. And for UMass basketball that is one more than they would like.

UConn came rushing back from an eight-point deficit (63-55), their second of the half (47-39), in the last six minutes to defeat the Minutemen 71-68 to spoil Jack Leaman's bid for his 100th career victory and send the Yankee Conference right back to where it was last year--a home court league.

Junior college transfer, Jim Foster, a bright newcomer to the league, and super-soph Earl Wilson, who was only averaging 8.7 points per game coming in, but who scored 22, brought UConn back before a frenzied house here at Storrs.

The Huskies ripped off 8 straight and led 65-63, but Peter Trow battied them point for point until UMass was up 67-65. Trow stole a Huskie pass, which led to one of two Rick Pitino foul shots, but Foster popped in one, and drove past Tom Austin and Al Skinner for the game-winner.

UMass tried for the last game-winning shot, but an up-for-grabs pass was batted by Cal Chapman. UConn got possession, and an ensuing lay-up accounted for the final margin.

The Minutemen had all they could ask for before they finally grabbed the lead (39-37) on Jimmy Burke's two free throws just before the half. In that first half the Minutemen were twice behind by five (26-21 and 30-25) and once by six (36-27), but on all three occasions they came back. The Minutemen then ripped off eight points to go ahead at the half.

The loss to the Huskies overshadowed a couple of other brilliant performances by UMass. Charlie Peters, who went practically the whole route, had 10 rebounds and 13 points, which is a pretty good job against the big, rugged, physical Huskie front line. Al Skinner had twelve points and Peter Trow had twenty points (9 of 14 from the field).

The Minutemen's record now drops to 2-2 (1-1 in the Yankee Conference).

BOXSCORE

UCONN	FG	FT	Pts	UMASS	FG	FT	Pts
Wilson	11	0	22	Trow	9	2	20
Foster	8	3	19	Peters	6	1	13
Custick	5	0	10	Skinner	4	4	12
Chapman	4	0	8	McLaughlin	3	2	8
Wright	2	0	4	Endicott	2	2	6
Cole	2	0	4	Pitino	1	1	3
Harrison	1	0	2	Murphy	1	0	2
Deon	1	0	2	Gillams	1	0	2
Vaughn	0	0	0	Burke	0	2	2
Totals	34	3	71	Totals	27	14	68

WITH THE LIGHTS GLITTERING-Al Skinner shows the form which led to Saturday's victory over Rhode Island. Skinner's 12 points went for naught last night as the Minutemen dropped another heart-breaker on the road-this time to UConn, 71-68. Charlie Peters, who put in another solid performance is shown awaiting any possible rebound. (MDC Photo by Al Chapman)

In the Cage Harvard, Saturday

By EARLE BARROLL

Unless U.C.L.A. makes an appearance at Curry Hicks Cage within your lifetime (yeh, dream on), this coming Saturday will feature the finest array of pure basketball talent to ever appear on the UMass campus. (Game time is 7:30)

It's not Marquette or Southwest Louisiana. It's not even from the Big Ten. It's from the other side of the state and comes in a mystery package entitled Harvard.

If you've done even the least possible studying of New England basketball you know that Harvard is a team that has been psychoanalyzed, rep-sychoanalyzed and as of yet writers and experts haven't been able to figure them out.

The Crimson brochure speaks of four high school All-Americans. Last year Sports Illustrated and the national polls took the bite and had them rated anywhere from top ten to at the very least top twenty material.

So James Brown ("Better than Julius Erving in high school" - Jack Leaman) and company start associating with North Carolina and Indiana and Maryland and then Penn in their own league and find themselves struggling for .500 ball.

And the mystery still continues. Many have said that one basketball isn't enough for four high school All-Americans. Others have said that contentment with their present talent has kept the Harvard coaches from going gung-ho for the take charge guard who could bring this multi-talented group together.

But whatever the reasons are, the Crimson will be at the Cage on Saturday and you'll be in for some of the best basketball you've ever seen.

Ask some of the 1500 UMass fans who witnessed the finest game in the region last season when UMass lost to Harvard 80-78 at Cambridge. They'll tell you that UMass was grossly out-talented. They'll tell you how the Redmen fought back from a ten point deficit in the last ten minutes and how three bombs by sophomore Tony Jenkins rescued the Crimson from the heroics of UMass' John Betancourt.

What you're in for is a super front line of James Brown, Tony Jenkins and Floys Lewis or Marshall Sanders. Jenkins and Lewis are superb, Sanders the same, but Brown is something else. He leaps reminiscent of Julius Erving. He can deal with the best. His offerings are smooth. He's a vacuum cleaner on the backboards. This writer feels that for pure talent he rates only behind Dr. J. and maybe P.C.'s Marvin Barnes over the past four years.

While UMass bases its offense on frontcourt play, Harvard's has to or should be in the backcourt. One guard is Jim Fitzsimmons, and his name has been seen more than once on pre-season all-American possibility lists. The other guard is from a selection of who can get things together.

And guaranteed, if they do, watch out.

Yesterday's Sportshead was UMass quarterback Pell Pennington (a member of the Boardwalk Bowl Champs).

The UMass wrestlers' defeated MIT 40-7 yesterday to end the semester 6-0.

Hockey Record Still Good

By BILL BALLOU

The roller-coaster that has been UMass hockey thus far this season of 1972-73 comes to a temporary halt for exams and Christmas this week and this seems like a pretty good time to step back from things and take a look at just what's transpired.

Record-wide, what's transpired is pretty good. The Minutemen sport a 3-1-1 log, all against Division II competition and have not been really outplayed in any game this season.

But the record hides the fact that thus far UMass, has, if anything, been less than consistent.

They did not play well against Boston State, but won 3-1. They played very well against Vermont, and lost 6-4. Williams; again not that great but a win thanks to the goaltending of Peter Erickson. The Middlebury game, their first at home, was a solid 6-3 win but Norwich the next day was a pretty sorry affair.

Supposedly, it's the sign of a good team when it can play poorly and win. And the Minutemen look like they're a good team. But with the tough road schedule they face they can't afford to let down too often.

One thing the five-game opening stretch has done is answer a few pre-season questions. The biggest of these was in goal and the answer, in the person of Peter Erickson, has been the right one. Erickson established himself right away against Boston State on opening night, and aside from a weak outing versus Norwich he's been excellent.

Another big pre-season worry was how young defensemen Brian Mulcahy and Mike Ellis would fare. Again the situation has been a pleasant surprise. Both have played well. Mulcahy in particular has been outstanding and has probably been the most effective UMass defenseman in the early going.

One guy who's been a bit of a surprise so far is Lonnie Avery. Avery had a terrible season last year but this year has been inserted on left wing on a line with Pat Keenan and freshman Billy Harris. So far the line has been the most potent UMass line, thanks mainly to the goal-scoring of Keenan. But Avery has been working his butt off and it's paid dividends for him so far.

Neither of the other two UMass lines had done much up until this weekend.

Don Riley, who centers Chico Shea and Kevin Connors, had been the only goal scorer among that trio until Connors hit for three against Middlebury and Norwich.

The third unit, Jim Lynch, Jim Coleman, and John Muse, had been about as useful as mittens in July until they too exploded over the weekend. Coleman had four goals and Lynch had two.

Still, the overall impression you get after watching five UMass games is inconsistency. The offense, while it's scored a pretty good number of goals, still looks sloppy. They have not been able to fully capitalize on the number of scoring chances they've had.

Defensively they've been on and off like a light bulb. Weak against Boston State, strong at Vermont, weak at Williams, etc. All the blame can't be laid upon the defense however, as the forwards have, on occasion, been guilty of not coming back as well as they should.

No one, though, can complain too loudly about the results of the five pre-Christmas games. No matter what the artistic criticisms may be, the Minutemen have a good record heading into the Williams Tournament. And this three-game set in Williamstown, featuring Williams, Lake Forest, and Ithaca, could propel UMass into the thick of the fight for the top of Div. II. The tourney is a three-day affair with games on Dec. 28, 29, and 30 at the Williams College Rink.

Wilson Retires

ST. LOUIS (AP) - Defensive back Larry Wilson, one of the first players to use the safety blitz, announced his retirement as a professional football player Tuesday, after 13 seasons with the Cardinals in Chicago and St. Louis.

Wilson, 34, who doubled as a player-coach this season, said he knew this year was the time to retire because "I was not able to do the things now that I did for the Cardinals four or five years ago."

"Younger players are needed who are quicker and faster to take my place. Larry Wilson just wasn't cutting it like he used to," Wilson told a news conference.

The Cardinals announced that they would retire Wilson's No. 8 jersey.

Women's Swim Team Place Three

By JANIS AHMADJIAN

The UMass Women's Swim Team opened their 1972-73 season last Wednesday placing a first and two fourth places in the Second Annual Masse Memorial Relay Meet at Wellesley College.

UMass swam in stiff competition against 16 schools: Smith, Mt. Holyoke, Radcliffe, Northeastern, B.C., B.U., Brandeis, Bridgewater State, Dean Junior, Jackson, Newton Sacred Heart, Pine Manor, Wellesley, Wheaton, and M.I.T.

The big first place win in the 200 yd. Individual Medley Relay was won by Melon Dash and Laurie Seluk.

A fourth place went to the 100 yard Ladder Butterfly Relay consisting of Mary Beth Stanne, Dash, and Seluk.

Another fourth was placed in the 200 yard Medley Relay by Seluk (Backstroke), Cathy Abramson (Breaststroke), Dash (Butterfly) and Ilene Handler (Freestyle).

The team under the direction of Coach Pat Griffin has been hard at practice since the beginning of October swimming grueling workouts in preparation for the season ahead. Returning from last year's squad are Claire Briana, Stanne, Roxanne Lacoste, Mimi Ward, Seluk, Denise Coll, Sue White and Karen Bornheim.

Strong incoming freshmen include Dash, Abramson and Handler. Competing in diving this season will be Carol Canterbury and Bonnie Arons.

The team is out to improve last year's 2-4 meet record. By their performance at Wellesley it looks as though they will succeed.

New England's Largest College Daily

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

Weather

We've waited eight years for ten minutes.

Recyclable

VOLUME C, ISSUE 67 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 24, 1973

Viet Cease-Fire Saturday

Kissinger And Tho Initial Pact In Paris

American Prisoners To Be Released Within 60 Days

WASHINGTON (AP) - Agreement has been reached to end the Vietnam war-the longest in America's history-with a cease-fire effective Saturday night and complete U.S. withdrawal coinciding with release of all war prisoners, President Nixon told the nation Tuesday night.

Nixon said it is a just-and fair peace-an honorable way to end a nightmarish, decade-long war that left nearly 350,000 Americans killed and wounded and caused an unprecedented upheaval at home.

Presidential adviser Henry Kissinger and Hanoi's Le Duc Tho initialed the agreement Tuesday in Paris and it will be formally signed on Saturday Nixon said.

Major points of the agreement he outlined:

—An internationally supervised cease-fire to go into effect at 7 p.m. EST on Saturday.

—The release of all Americans "held prisoners of war throughout Indochina" within 60 days.

—The withdrawal of the remaining 24,000 U.S. forces in South Vietnam within the same time frame.

—"The fullest possible accounting" for all those missing in action.

—A guarantee that the people of South Vietnam will have "the right to determine their own future without outside interference."

Nixon said he joined North Vietnam in an agreed upon announcement expressing hope the accord "will ensure stable peace in Vietnam and contribute to the preservation of lasting peace in Indochina and Southeast Asia."

The chief executive traced the broad terms of the settlement and said full text of the agreement and the protocols to implement it will be made public on Wednesday.

He said the settlement has the full backing of South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu, and pledged that the United States will recognize Thieu's government "as the sole legitimate government of South Vietnam"-continuing to supply it aid.

"We must recognize that ending the war is only the first step toward building the peace," Nixon said.

"All parties must now see to it that this is peace that lasts, a peace that heals-and a peace that not only ends the war in Southeast Asia but contributes to prospects of peace in the world," he said.

Nixon said the United States will strictly adhere to the agreement's terms and that he expects other parties to do the same-a phrase that appeared intended as a warning to the enemy that the United States will be watching for violations of the accord.

And, in words which seemed intended for the Soviet Union, Nixon declared: "We shall also expect other interested nations to help ensure the agreement is carried out and the peace maintained."

As Nixon was speaking from his Oval Office, President Thieu told the South Vietnamese people that Hanoi has been forced to recognize North and South Vietnam as two separate countries.

Thieu said the peace agreement to be signed Saturday recognizes the sovereignty of South Vietnam-a point made by Nixon when he said the United States recognizes Saigon "as the sole legitimate government of South Vietnam."

After reading the joint statement issued simultaneously in Hanoi, and outlining the bare bones of the peace agreement, Nixon addressed "a few special words to each of those who have been parties to the conflict."

He told the people and government of South Vietnam that their courage and sacrifice "have won the precious right to determine your own future."

He told North Vietnamese leaders that the United States is prepared to make a major effort to "build a peace of reconciliation."

"But just as reciprocity was needed to end the war," he told Hanoi, "so too will it be needed to build and strengthen the peace."

To the other major powers involved in Vietnam "even indirectly" - a reference to the Soviet Union and mainland China-Nixon said, "Now is the time for mutual restraint, so that the peace we have achieved can be kept."

The President saved his message "to the American people" until last, saying their steadfast support of "our insistence on peace with honor has made peace with honor possible."

He acknowledged that he had avoided for months any public statements about Vietnam negotiations, but said his silence was necessary. "The important thing was not to talk about peace, but to get peace-and to get the right kind of peace," he said. "This we have done."

President Nixon announces the cease-fire agreement.

"...Let us be proud," Nixon said, "that America did not settle for a peace that would have betrayed our allies, that would have abandoned our prisoners of war, or that would have ended the war for us but would have continued the war for the 50 million people of Indochina."

He said America should be proud too, for the 2-1/2 million young Americans who served in Vietnam "in one of the most selfless enterprises in the history of nations."

He singled out the wives, children and families of American POWs and men missing in action as "some of the bravest people I have ever met" and added, "Nothing means more to me than the fact that your long vigil is coming to an end.

The President concluded his 11-minute speech by referring to former President Lyndon B. Johnson, who died Monday.

American involvement in the war reached its greatest height during Johnson's White House years, and Nixon said he "endured the vilification of those who sought to portray him as a man of war."

But, Nixon said, "there was nothing he cared about more deeply than achieving a lasting peace in the world."

He recalled that the last time he talked with Johnson, on Jan. 2 he spoke of his concern for achieving the right kind of peace.

At the same time Nixon was addressing his national radio and television audience, Hanoi Radio broadcast the three-paragraph text of the agreed-upon statement.

And a short time later it was disclosed that Secretary of State William P. Rogers is planning to fly to Paris to sign the peace agreement Saturday with the other parties-North Vietnam, South Vietnam and the Viet Cong.

Minutes after Nixon completed his address-perhaps the most dramatic of his years in the White House-aides said the agreement and accompanying documents would be made public at 10 a.m. EST Wednesday.

On The Inside:

•Chandler Accepted see page three

•Food Thefts Probe Continues see page three

•Walgren Loses Caucus see page two

Reorganizing May End Existence Of UMass

By JAMES E. GOLD

Boston--The University of Massachusetts, along with all state colleges, may lose its identity as an institution under plans released Tuesday for a proposed reorganization of the state's educational departments.

Dividing Massachusetts into five regions and creating a three level administrative structure are the key factors involved in the plans announced by Secretary of Educational Affairs Joseph M. Cronin.

Cronin's proposal, part of Governor Francis Sargent's reorganization of the entire state's executive branch, is designed to achieve three goals:

—allow for statewide planning while developing regional education systems, —bridge "artificial gaps" such as private and public education and allow a lifelong educational process,

—allow a greater role for all segments of the population to take part in the decision-making process of education.

During opening remarks at a press conference held at the State House, Cronin said "Our (present) system is fragmented, confusing, wasteful and repetitive. Decisions are made far away from the students, faculty and communities that they affect."

Cronin proposed the establishment of a new Department of Educational and Cultural Affairs as the centralized agency to administer the new streamlined structure.

Also included in the proposal is the establishment of two statewide boards, five regional boards and advisory boards for each college and university campus.

Under the proposal, each region would have one university campus, two or three state college campuses, and two or three community college campuses. (See map, Page Seven)

Currently, UMass has three campuses, which would each be in a different region; Southeastern Massachusetts University falls in one region and Lowell State College and Lowell Technological Institute are considered as a university campus for one region.

The entire higher education structure would be known as the Massachusetts University and College System, and, according to Cronin, that is what would be printed on all diplomas.

Of the two statewide boards one will handle elementary and secondary education while the other handles post-secondary education. These two boards, under the proposal, will replace 21 boards and commissions now in existence, said Cronin. These 21 include the UMass board of Trustees, Board of Regional Community Colleges, Board of Trustees of Massachusetts State Colleges, Trustees at Lowell Tech, Trustees at Southeastern Massachusetts University, and the Board of Higher Education and others.

"The Board of Post-secondary Education members will serve as trustees of a united university and college system for Massachusetts" according to the proposal. Its duties and responsibilities include reviewing of regional budgets and the preparation of "comprehensive post-secondary budget" reflecting state plans and policies, being "principal custodian" of fiscal autonomy, engaging in master planning, directing all graduate level programs in public institutions, coordinating a Massachusetts Open University across the five regions, setting tuition and administering

(Continued on P. 7)

Eric Walgren, who failed to block the Amherst town caucus Friday, is shown with his rabbit. (MDC Photo by Alan Chapman)

Town Caucus Held, Walgren Loses Spot

BY BOB SCHEIER

An attempt in court by Amherst College graduate Eric Walgren to block the Amherst town caucus failed Wednesday, and in the caucus, held on schedule Friday, Walgren was eliminated from next month's selectmen election.

Walgren had claimed holding the caucus, a form of primary in which the two highest vote getters out of a field of five are selected, on Friday discouraged students from participating because it was held when area colleges and universities were not in full session.

U.S. District Court Judge Frank Freedman in Boston upheld the dates of January 19 for the caucus, February 20 for the Town Election, and March 12 for the annual town meeting set by the selectmen.

Amherst selectmen had chosen these dates November 27, and then later chosen tentative dates later in the spring for all three events after an appearance by Walgren at a selectmen meeting requesting the change.

But they then changed the dates back, citing legal problems and the fact a later election would delay the Town Meeting past its traditional date.

The two candidates scheduled to compete for the one selectmen's seat open are incumbent Merle L. Howes, and George B. Scheurer.

In court, Walgren and two other plaintiffs, Elliott Sherman and Lynn Glusco, contended that holding the caucus between the regular semester periods of area colleges and universities discouraged students from voting and running for office.

Freedman said the fact that Amherst College and Hampshire College had "winter study sessions when the caucus was held and that UMass was allowing students to stay in the dorms on request meant there was no "irreparable harm" to students done by holding the caucus last week.

He also cited the fact that absentee ballot procedures for the caucus had been publicized.

Last night, Sherman said he was not planning any further action in the matter. Walgren could not be reached for comment.

The judge also said a question raised by Walgren about whether the town should have publicized the caucus by paid political advertisement instead of press releases to local papers was a matter for state, not federal courts.

Sherman, who is a student senator and town meeting member, said that as of the hearing Wednesday, two days before the caucus, two students had voted by absentee ballot.

He said the procedure under which students could be admitted to the UMass dorms during intersession was "not a regular procedure." was "not a regular procedure."

He also said affidavits from Amherst and Hampshire citing their winter study programs did not specify how many of the school's students were present at the time of the caucus.

Sherman said part of the reason for the selectmen re-establishing the original dates for the caucus and elections was pressure from townspeople concerned over the student vote.

"Some townspeople told the selectmen it wasn't right to change the date for students," Sherman said. "Originally the selectmen might have been buckling to the students, and now maybe they're buckling to the town."

Town Clerk Estelle Matusko said about 1,600 registered voters in Amherst live in UMass dormitories out of a total of 11,500 registered voters in the town.

The tentative dates proposed and then rejected by the selectmen were January 29 for the caucus, March 1 for the election, and March 19 for the Town Meeting.

An attorney for the selectmen said under state law there had to be 31 days between the caucus and the election, and that under the tentative dates the election came on the 31st day, which may have violated the law.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

The office of the DAILY COLLEGIAN is on the second floor of the Student Union on the campus of the University of Massachusetts, zip code 01002. Telephones: 545-2550 (news); 545-0344 (sports); 545-0731 (business).

Second class postage is paid in Amherst. THE DAILY COLLEGIAN publishes Monday through Friday during the academic year, except during vacation, exam periods or holidays. Accepted for mailing under the authority of an act of March 8, 1879, as amended by an act of June 11, 1943. Subscription rates are $6.00 per semester or $10.00 per year.

Cop Involved In Alleged Theft

By MARK VOGLER

An alleged food theft incident at the University of Massachusetts may be going to the Hampshire County Grand Jury next month. During the intersession period, these developments relating to the incident came to light:

--Three prsons, including a University policeman and a Hadley patrolman, were asked to resign from their respective departments Dec. 15 in the wake of an investigation by UMass police into alleged food thefts at the Worcester Dining Commons. The third person was implicated as the head cook at the Commons.

--David L. Johnston, director of the UMass Public Safety Department, said Jan. 4 that no charges had been filed and that the option of whether to prosecute those involved would be left up to Chancellor Randolph W. Bromery.

--Hampshire County District Atty. John M. Callahan said Jan. 5 that if the alleged crime was committed by a UMass police officer and the officer was not prosecuted, whoever made the decision not to prosecute the officer should be fired.

--Daniel M. Melly, director of public affairs at the University issued a statement Jan. 7 saying the decision to prosecute those involved in the alleged food theft incident was not University policy and had been referred to state Attorney General Robert Quinn's office.

--Dist. Atty. Callahan said Jan. 10 that he planned to present evidence of the UMass police investigation of the incident to the Hampshire County Grand Jury when it reconvened Feb. 5.

The investigation by University police was conducted last month into reported losses by the UMass food service department. A food check on Dec. 9 indicated that there were food losses in the Worcester Commons.

Police said that over 20 pounds of meat and cheese had been stolen. Unofficial reports indicate the weight of the meat--said to be steaks--was as much as 200 pounds. A preliminary probe by UMass police determined one police officer had in his possession stolen food. This was later linked to the reported losses in the Worcester Dining Commons.

After consultation with the Attorney General's office and University officials, it was decided that the matter should be referred to the local District Attorney.

At a meeting of D.A. Callahan, UMass police officials, and representatives from the Chancellor's office, it was announced Jan. 9 that in turning over the official report to Callahan, Johnston recommended that those involved be prosecuted.

Callahan said he has reviewed the University's investigative report into the alleged food thefts and will present the matter to the grand jury when it convenes.

The district attorney did not discount the possibility that if further evidence is uncovered, he might seek warrants for arrests and have those arrested arraigned in District Court.

If the grand jury returns a true bill after hearing the evidence, those charged will be arraigned in Hampshire Superior Court.

Fac Sen Votes Loyalty Oath Repeal

By JIM DEMPSEY

The Faculty Senate cast a vote of 55-8 urging repeal of the Massachusetts loyalty oath last month at their final 1972 session. The vote came on a motion introduced by Senator James Matlack, one of the 18 UMass-Amherst campus employees engaged in a lawsuit at that time challenging the loyalty oath.

In presenting the motion, Matlack pointed out that the oath dates from a past era marked by fearfulness and insecurity. "It is an anachronism, a relic from the age of McCarthyism," said Matlack. He noted that similar oaths have been dropped by most other states and the federal government.

What disturbed Matlack most about the oath was that it is not uniformly enforced. "It should be wiped off the books for that reason alone," declared Matlack. He indicated that this inconsistent manner of administering the oath represents a failure of the guaranteed equal protection of the laws under the Fourteenth Amendment of the United States Constitution.

Historically, such oaths have always been associated with the least free countries and the least democratic processes, noted Matlack. In his arguments urging repeal, he quoted Judge Irving Kaufman, who once said, "Loyalty that is coerced is the antithesis of loyalty."

Matlack went on to say that continued application of the oath is an obstacle to the recruitment and retention of the best possible faculty and staff at UMass.

"Some of the present members would not have come if they knew there was a loyalty oath and some won't stay if it is not dropped," said Matlack.

A number of the faculty and staff who have chosen to challenge the oath are not U.S. citizens, Matlack pointed out. "This could result in the loss of their foreign citizenship," he added.

There was some sentiment against the adoption of the motion. Senator Merit White suggested that his objections to urging repeal of the oath were based on the emotionalism with which the matter was argued, and his own lack of personal objections to the use of the oath.

Senator Herbert Spindler, also speaking against the motion, felt that repeal of the oath "would only lead to a weaker government." He added that the elimination of the oath would make it easier for dishonest individuals to take advantage of the government.

Spindler felt that the loyalty oath would provide protection of our freedoms. He finished by saying, "Our chances for freedom are better with the loyalty oath."

Senator Walter Denney cited the ludicrous decision of the Supreme Court last year that the oath is constitutional. "The oath has never been enforced against anybody," said Denney. "It is innocuous and unenforceable and serves no useful purpose, and the Supreme Court ruled that it is therefore constitutional!"

The motion urging repeal of the loyalty oath in Massachusetts was finally enthusiastically adopted by a 55-8 roll call vote margin.

Wood On LBJ

"The American city's first friend was a prairie boy from Texas," stated UMass President Wood about the late President Lyndon Johnson.

Wood said that as time goes on, history will write the "first real effort made on the problem of the city and the ghetto" was by President Johnson. "He'll be remembered now for Indochina, though," said Wood.

Of the four presidents who had to deal with the Indochina conflicts, Wood said that President Johnson came in at the most difficult time. However, Wood pointed out that President Johnson backed programs for the cities which were highly "risky and intellectual ventures".

Wood, who worked in the Johnson administration, said, "He was kind to me."

CASIAC Counseling Available

The following services will be available from CASIAC to students the first two weeks of the semester:

1) Academic counseling and course information on January 22 and January 24 in Curry Hicks Cage and in Boyden Gymnasium (look for signs at the exits)

2) A phone line open until midnight with academic and course information (what courses are open or closed) from January 22 until January 25 and from January 29 until February 1; call 545-0974 or 545-2176.

3) Academic counseling in Machmer E-20, starting January 22 and continuing until the end of the semester.

MDC
NEWS HOTLINE
5-2550

PUTNEY SWOPE
plus
BETTY BOOP
and Earth from Space film
Sun., Jan. 28
7 - 9 - 11 Mahar

SENIOR PHOTOS
Come and get shot:
Jan. 29 - Feb. 9
Free Candy for Creative Sittings.

(This is not the portrait photographer)

Details —
Sign up for appointment now at Index Office,
2nd Floor, Student Union

Chandler Admitted In 'Compromise'

BY NATHAN GORENSTEIN

After a month of controversy ending in a five day occupation of the School of Education Paul Chandler has been granted acceptance, with "provisional status," to the school's master's degree program.

Chandler, though not happy with the terms of his acceptance, has agreed to them and will enter the graduate program this semester.

Chandler's acceptance, announced just before the new year, came after a special advisory committee, created by Graduate Dean Mortimer Appley and other high administrators, recommended Chandler's acceptance.

Chandler's application to the School of Education's graduate program was the main focus of the occupation of the school by the Third World Alliance and other aligned students in the closing days of the fall semester.

The occupation ended peacefully after an injunction was served on the occupiers, declaring them in contempt of court if they remained in the building.

"Provisional status" according to the graduate student bulletin, means that a student is admitted on "probationary status." After one or two semesters the student is either admitted or rejected from the program, by a recommendation from the school or the student's guidance committee.

According to Veda Ross, President of the Graduate Senate, a decision on a student on provisional status is "almost always according to academic work."

Associate Dean of the Graduate School Eugene Piedmont said yesterday Chandler's guidance committee will probably be Norma Jean Anderson, Assistant Dean of the School of Education, Dean of the University Graduate School Appley or his representative, and Chandler's advisor, to be chosen by Chandler and Anderson from the graduate school faculty.

Piedmont, also chairman of the advisory committee, said Chandler's final acceptance was negotiated by Appley and School of Education Dean Dwight Allen. Piedmont, who called the conditions of Chandler's acceptance a "compromise agreement," and university attorney Sidney Meyers were also present at the negotiations.

Piedmont said the particulars of Chandlers provisional acceptance were not extraordinary and said it included the following two conditions: that his program of study and any changes in it be approved by Anderson, and that on completion of the master's program Chandler apply in writing to the doctoral program, usually the next step in an academic career.

Chandler said last night that in his letter of acceptance from Appley he was accepted for a year under provisional status.

The letter goes on to say that he must see Anderson and arrange for an advisor, Chandler said, and that his program of study, and any changes in it, must be approved by Anderson, Appley and his advisor. According to Chandler the letter also said he was eligible to apply to the doctoral program upon completion of his master's program.

Chandler said he feels he is a scapegoat in a feud between the university and Allen, but has agreed to the terms of admission for the following reasons:

To further his education; because due to plans already made and the time factor he was not able to apply to another school; because he does not want to "go along" with what he considers Allen's plan to remove him from campus; because of what he terms a good relationship with the Third World Community in the Five-College area; and because his family is settled in Amherst. Chandler has a wife and children.

Registration Ends Today

By DON BISHOP

Registration for spring semester 1973 concludes today for the 17,500 UMass Amherst undergraduates who have returned to campus after a month of vacation.

Only those students who did not register on Monday and those who undertook course change proceedings on Monday are required to take part in today's registration proceedings. This number will be at least 11,000 students, however, judging from the fact that 6,000 undergrads picked up their registration packets on Monday.

The Registrar's and Scheduling Offices worked yesterday on the course change requests (adds or drops) made on Monday. The dropping of courses will present no problems for those who wish to make them, but some students who attempted to add courses on Monday will find they did not meet with success for one of several reasons, ranging from mistakes made in filling out the add-drop forms to course over-enrollment.

For these students and others, the substituting of courses will start again on Thursday when course changes will begin to be conducted through the various departments or individual instructors, depending on departmental policy. Course change forms can be picked up in the Registrar's Office in Whitmore beginning Thursday.

The consensus of opinion in Whitmore yesterday was that the computerized system of pre-registration and scheduling (called OSCAR) had performed better in its second semester of usage.

Mr. Robert Campbell of the Scheduling Office labeled this semester's operation as "vastly smoother" over that of last semester. Campbell attributed a substantial decrease in the amount of complaints about the system made by students on Monday, in comparison to those received on course change day last semester, as attributable to a combination of less "system" errors made by those who run the program in Whitmore and less student errors made in the filling out of pre-registration and course change forms this time around.

Another factor relating to the lessening of registration and course change problems experienced this semester was the fact that more students had paid their semester bills before the deadline of December 29 than had those for the August payment deadline of last semester. Thus there were fewer students who had to re-submit complete pre-registration schedules.

As was the case last August, a substantial number of students took advantage of the add-drop centers made available in Boston and Amherst between January 15th and the 18th. An estimated 2,500 students made changes during the four day period.

Although the Scheduling Office was unable yesterday to release figures for both the initial success ratio of students in registering for the courses they desired, and the success ratio of those students who tried to add courses on Monday, indications were that the ratios had improved this semester.

It was known that of the original 136,000 course requests made for this semester back in December, the figure as of yesterday was down to 104,000 course requests. This perhaps reflects the fact that a number of students are waiting to pick up courses after classes have started on Thursday, and thus the ultimate success of OSCAR for this semester may have to be de-valued, when the adding of courses is finally completed.

New Transport System Delayed

By CINDY GONET

A new transportation system designed to ease traffic congestion around UMass will go into operation two weeks late because of a delay in the delivery of ten buses.

The ten buses were ordered by the Student Senate Transit System in September, and were scheduled to be ready this month to go into operation to Sunderland, North Amherst, South Deerfield, and Belchertown.

According to Bob Godding, in charge of operations at the system, delivery of the buses from the Twin Coach Company in Kent, Ohio, is now slated for February 9. The delay apparently came from a communications failure between the company's sales and production managers, Godding said.

Service is also scheduled to begin February 12 toward other areas around the University, with buses running about every half hour.

The transportation system, which will cost over $660,000, is designed to ease the crush caused by an estimated 14,000 cars parking on campus daily, of which around 9,000 belong to commuting students. There are 8,000 parking spaces available on campus.

On campus residents own about one thousand cars, and staff are estimated to drive another four to five thousand cars.

The University Planning Office, the transit service, and the physical plant have planned for a 13 bus fleet--the ten scheduled for delivery February 9, and three currently operated by the transit service.

The proposal was funded with a Federal grant of $475,441, with UMass contributing $157,728 and the Student Senate contributing $30,000.

The buses will be equipped with two-way radios to allow routes to be changed due to illegal parking or unusual demand, and will also be equipped for conversion to liquid petroleum fuel, which is less polluting than gasoline.

Last year, Student Senate operated buses running to Southwest and Orchard Hill carried almost 900 persons a day.

Student Reaction To Announcement

By MDC STAFF

UMass students reacted to President Nixon's announcement of a cease-fire and the signing of a peace treaty in Vietnam with cautious approval--and a few expressions of skepticism and the belief the war could have been ended sooner.

"I'm glad if it's true," said one student who declined to be identified of the report. "It's great--but I'll believe it when I see it," said another, who also did not want to be identified.

"Nixon stressed peace with honor," said Jim Goldman. "He ignored all the people in Vietnam, all the women and children who were burned."

"The peace will be real good," said James Rodgers. "There will be no more draft. But don't believe it until you see it."

Students watching Nixon's announcement of the pact gathered quietly in front of TV sets in the Campus Center but showed little outward reaction to the speech.

During the speech, several students read newspapers or books or watched the announcement at a distance from the concourse level.

After the announcement was read, those watching quietly walked away or waited for regularly scheduled programs to resume.

Poor Richard's
Staff Meeting
Thursday, January 25
7:30
Collegian Office

STUDENT SENATE ELECTIONS

Nomination papers are now available outside the Student Activities area for the Feb. 15 Student Senate election. There are openings in the Senate for the following residential areas:

Commuters	Greek (Frat.)	Cashin
Emerson	Van Meter North	Van Meter South
Mackimmie	Lewis	Cance
New Africa House	Dickinson	Brooks
Grayson	Webster	Gorman

These papers must be returned to the Student Senate no later than 5 p.m., 9 Feb.

"Am I pregnant?"
Now a confidential pregnancy test is available—performed by a licensed laboratory directed by a physician.

Preg/Screen*Pregnancy Test-Unit is recognized by physicians, clinics and hospitals to be the most accurate test available. It is not a "do-it-yourself" kit. Simple, easy instructions enclosed with each Preg/Screen test. May be stored for future use. Results mailed promptly to you, and to your physician, if requested.

*Trademark

No need to visit physician
JUST MAIL SAMPLE

Personal Service Inc.
1505 Commonwealth Ave., Boston, Mass. 02135
Please forward me _____ Preg/Screen tests at $4.95 plus 25¢ handling charge each. Enclosed is my check or money order for $_____
Name
Address
City State Zip

AVAILABLE THROUGH PHARMACISTS

COMMUTER ASSEMBLY IS HAVING AN ELECTION ON FEB. 15, 1973
THREE VACANCIES ON EXEC. NEED TO BE FILLED.
Nomination Papers available in front of RSO 1st Floor C.C.

In The Nation And The World

POW Repatriation Plans Await White House Signal

WASHINGTON (AP) - A military task force of more than 6,000 doctors, psychiatrists, air crewmen and other personnel stood ready Tuesday, awaiting only a White House signal on where and when to pick up U.S. servicemen held captive in Indochina.

The Pentagon lists 587 Americans known captive. Another 1,355 are missing in action.

The procedure for the repatriation was completed months ago with only the mechanics of the actual release awaiting the terms of the cease-fire agreement expected this week.

The Pentagon had hoped to fly medical evacuation planes directly to Hanoi for the pickup but officials believe North Vietnam is unlikely to go along with this. Instead, it now appears the men will be flown from Hanoi aboard Communist aircraft to Vientiane in Laos.

They will be loaded aboard huge Air Force C141 transports now standing by in the Western Pacific and shuttled to Clark Field in the Philippines, the primary processing station. In the event of a mass release, some would be flown to U.S. bases on Okinawa and Guam.

New uniforms specially tailored to account for expected weight loss and stitched with decorations and rank insignia earned while in prison await each man at Clark Field.

Also awaiting the men at Clark are toilet kits and "personnel information brochures" with photographs and letters from their families and list of back pay allowances and leave time accrued while in captivity. To bring these modern Rip Van Winkles up to date on the events of the past seven years they will be given a 219-page synopsis of news stories.

Physicians and psychiatrists will examine them and intelligence officers question them on prison life and any knowledge they may have of their comrades still in captivity.

Operation Homecoming anticipates that some of the men, because of their long periods in captivity may face long periods of adjustment. Their wives have been warned by military psychiatrists that their husbands may have such problems as temporary impotence, depression and a tendency to have accidents.

Once cleared by the doctors at Clark, the returnees will be sent to Travis Air Force Base in California from which they fan out across the country to more than 30 military hospitals closest to their homes for further treatment and examination.

The family reunion will take place as soon as possible after the arrival at the local hospitals. For those unable to make the long trip home from Clark, families of these men will be flown at government expense to the Philippines and a reunion there.

S. Viet Air Raids Continue

SAIGON (AP) — American warplanes attacked throughout South Vietnam yesterday as South Vietnamese infantrymen mounted spoiling operations on the ground.

Military sources said the air raids--the heaviest in one day in five months--and the ground thrusts were designed to prevent an enemy land grab before a cease-fire.

President Nguyen Van Thieu, in a special Tet lunar new year letter read over government television Tuesday night, warned his nation not to trust the Communists during a cease-fire.

"If the Communists have to agree to sign a cease-fire agreement it is only because their war of invasion has been defeated," the president said. "We should not believe that the Communists will respect the agreement. We should not rely on their signature, and should not believe that they have renounced their intensification of efforts to take control of South Vietnam."

The U.S. Command reported that fighter-bombers carried out 374 strikes across the country in the 24-hour period ending at 8 a.m. Tuesday. At the same time U.S. B52 bombers logged an additional 80 strikes from the northernmost province of Quang Tri to the southern Mekong Delta.

The U.S. Command said the total number of the latest strikes was the highest in South Vietnam since Aug. 22, when 375 sorties were logged.

Thieu was said to have told his Cabinet that captured enemy documents contained orders to North Vietnamese and Viet Cong military units to grab as much land as possible before and after the cease-fire.

The documents reportedly also instructed the Communist forces to assassinate as many government officials and sympathizers as possible before the arrival of international cease-fire supervisors.

To support this land-grab theory, sources reported North Vietnamese and Viet Cong units were on the move south from the Cambodian border in the direction of Saigon, and from the Cambodian and Laotian borders eastward toward Kontum City and Pleiku in the central highlands, both hotly contested regions.

South Vietnamese marines and paratroopers met continued heavy resistance as they attempted to regain ground in Quang Tri Province--territory just under the demilitarized zone where enemy troops took over in their invasion of the south last spring.

The heavy fighting that has raged in the Michelin rubber plantation 40 miles northwest of Saigon appeared to have slackened, but field officers said they expected renewed attacks in the area.

Dems To Elect Chairmen By Ballot

WASHINGTON (AP) - House Democrats have adopted means for electing powerful committee chairmen by secret ballot, a move considered to be a major erosion of chairmen's power.

Rep. Benjamin S. Rosenthal, D—N.Y., meanwhile, has urged the Democrats to go further and unseat Rep. Chet Holifield, D—Calif., as chairman of the House Government Operations Committee. Rosenthal says Holifield has been unresponsive to calls for investigation of Nixon administration activities. Holifield, in turn, has charged Rosenthal with carrying on a vendetta against him.

Rosenthal's challenge was to be voted on by the Democratic caucus today unless the session was postponed because of former President Lyndon B. Johnson's death.

Electing chairman by secret ballot rather than appointing them solely on the basis of seniority was approved by about 3 to 1 at Monday's caucus.

The caucus approved the motion of House Democratic Leader Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. of Massachusetts to provide that a committee chairman must be re-elected by secret ballot any time a fifth of the Democrats - now 48 - call for one. O'Neill said he could not recall the vote but thought it was about 156 to 50.

"I just got up and proposed it," O'Neill said, "and it worked out." He said he made no concerted drive for reform.

The caucus also approved the recommendation of its reform committee chaired by Rep. Julia Butler Hanson, D—Wash., that each of the 21 major House chairmen be voted on separately by the Democrats, who are the majority party in the House.

Chairmen have been selected by House leaders, and until now had to be all accepted or all rejected by the Democrats unless 10 members demanded a separate vote on any one of them.

The caucus rejected a motion by Holifield to require that the votes be public if one-fifth of the members so requested. He contended challengers should "stand up and state their charges."

"I'm interested in preventing a procedure where a small group can get together and cut your heart out," Holifield said.

His motion was rejected by the caucus by a voice vote.

O'Neill's proposal was approved after the caucus rejected one by Rep. Frank Evans, D—Colo., to make the votes secret unless a majority of the Democrats wanted the vote public.

The Democrats immediately used O'Neill's procedure after approving it and re-elected Reps. W. R. Peage, D—Tex., and George H. Mahon, D—Tex., as chairmen of the House Agriculture and Appropriations committees by secret ballot.

In Brief...

Dong Says Fight Continues

PARIS (AP) - North Vietnam's premier, Pham Van Dong, said in a television interview screened Tuesday night that "the fight we have undertaken for years continues."

In an interview filmed in Hanoi last Saturday by French newsman Roger Pic, Dong said: "It is the same fight for peace, and at the same time for the independence, liberty and peaceful reunification, of the homeland."

Nixon Sending Air Force I For Johnson

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon is sending Air Force One, the same craft that brought the body of John F. Kennedy here from Dallas nine years ago, to Texas to bring the body of former President Lyndon B. Johnson here for funeral rites.

LOSE 20 POUNDS IN TWO WEEKS!

Famous U.S. Women Ski Team Diet

During the non-snow off season the U.S. Women's Alpine Ski Team members go on the "Ski Team" diet to lose 20 pounds in two weeks. That's right — 20 pounds in 14 days! The basis of the diet is chemical food action and was devised by a famous Colorado physician especially for the U.S. Ski Team. Normal energy is maintained (very important!) while reducing. You keep "full" — no starvation — because the diet is designed that way! It's a diet that is easy to follow whether you work, travel or stay at home.

This is, honestly, a fantastically successful diet. If it weren't, the U.S. Women's Ski Team wouldn't be permitted to use it! Right? So, give yourself the same break the U.S. Ski Team gets. Lose weight the scientific, proven way. Even if you've tried all the other diets, you owe it to yourself to try the U.S. Women's Ski Team Diet. That is, if you really do want to lose 20 pounds in two weeks. Order today. Tear this out as a reminder.

Send only $2.00 ($2.25 for Rush Service) — cash is O.K. — to Information Sources Co., P.O. Box 982, Dept. ST, Carpinteria, Calif. 93013. Don't order unless you expect to lose 20 pounds in two weeks! Because that's what the Ski Team Diet will do!

Now Open!

HADLEY IMPORTED CAR PARTS

Route 9 Hadley

(Next to Old Weird Harold's)

584-3988

- BOSCH
- LUCAS
- DUNLOP TIRES
- CASTROL - QUAKER STATE OIL
- MINTEX
- LOCKHEED
- GIRLING

QUAKER STATE SPECIAL

30 W VW OIL	45c qt.
SUPERBLEND	55c qt.
DELUXE	65c qt.

OPEN MON. - SAT. 9 A.M. - 5 P.M.

Parts For Volkswagens Our Specialty.

PETE'S PACKAGE STORE

144 Summer Street

North Amherst

Call 256-6828

OPEN

9:00 a.m. - 11:00 p.m.

Largest Selection of Wines, Beers, and Liquors in the area

Former President Lyndon B. Johnson appeared Nov. 4, 1972 at San Marcos, Tex., for dedication ceremony of a building at Southwest Texas State University. On Monday, his press secretary said Johnson has died. (AP)

Nation To Bid LBJ Farewell

WASHINGTON (AP) - To the clap of horses' hooves and the doleful roll of muffled drums, Lyndon Baines Johnson will be borne to the Capitol Wednesday to receive the farewells of the city he loved.

After a morning flight from Texas, the former president's body will be placed upon an Army caisson for a march up Constitution Avenue from a point within view of the White House to the Capitol Rotunda.

President Nixon and other dignitaries are expected to accompany the hour-long procession, scheduled to begin at 1:30 p.m.

At the Capitol, the thunder of 21 guns will herald the return of the 36th President, just as it sounded a few days ago upon the second inauguration of the 37th.

Then the casket will be placed upon the Lincoln catafalque, beneath the Capitol dome, where Johnson will lie in state throughout the night.

Following an hour-long service including hymns and eulogies for the official party, the rotunda will be opened to the public, at about 4 p.m.

The line of mourners will be closed at about 8 a.m. Thursday, when Johnson will be moved by hearse to the National Christian City Church for a 10 a.m. service. Then there is a flight back to Texas for the burial near the LBJ ranch.

The full military procession up Constitution Avenue is to be one of both pomp and poignance.

Trailing the sleek, black gun carriage bearing the President's flag-draped coffin will be the same caparisoned horse-Black Jack-whose riderless journey during John F. Kennedy's funeral march was etched into the memories of millions of Americans. Wednesday will be Black Jack's 26th birthday, and will mark the third time he has carried the reversed boots and silver saber for a fallen president.

The caisson will be trailed, in order, by limousines bearing the Johnson family, the presidential party, other chiefs of state, the vice president, congressional leaders, the Supreme Court, and then the diplomatic corps, Cabinet members and governors.

Ahead of the casket will be muffled bands and marching units representing each of the military services and academies, including one group comprised of the leaders of 32 veterans organizations.

Johnson will be the ninth former president to lie in state at the Capitol Rotunda, a practice begun upon Abraham Lincoln's death in 1865.

Conference Asks Congress To Create New Judgeships

WASHINGTON (AP) - Congress was asked today to create 51 new federal district judgeships to help cope with the increasing caseload in the courts.

"It is imperative in order to keep judicial business moving that additional district judgeships be authorized at this time," Rowland Kirks, director of the administrative office of the U.S. Courts, told a Senate Judiciary subcommittee.

The additional judgeships, recommended by the U.S. Judicial Conference, would be scattered among 21 states. Texas would get the largest number, 10, while California would get eight and Massachusetts four.

The total includes five new judgeships recommended on an emergency basis by the Judicial Conference in October, 1970, but on which Congress has taken no action.

These were one each for the western district of Missouri, the southern district of Florida, the northern district of Indiana, the southern district of Indiana, and the northern district of Texas.

Kirks said the Judicial Conference is "mindful of the national policy of holding down all governmental expenditure to a minimum" but said the total appropriation for the federal judiciary is only $189 million, or less than one-tenth of one per cent of the federal budget.

He said his office estimates the cost of creating a new district judgeship will be $145,000 in the first year and $130,000 on an annual basis thereafter.

Total criminal and civil case filings in the district courts, Kirks said, increased from 89,112 in 1960 to 145,227 in 1972. He said criminal cases alone increased by 65 per cent.

Kirks testified the rise in civil cases was attributable in part to heavy increases in class action suits and said legislative proposals in the consumer field suggest an overwhelming impact on the civil caseload.

Swiss Send Dollar Reeling

LONDON (AP) — A move by the Swiss sent the dollar reeling on most European money markets Tuesday.

The Swiss government freed the franc to float in foreign exchanges in a bid to halt a flood of unwanted dollars and this brought what one dealer described as an avalanche of dollars for sale.

But dealers said the mass selling of dollars appeared to be a brief panic caused by the Swiss action. There were signs the dollar was firming as exchanges closed.

The Swiss government acted after its national bank had been forced to buy up an estimated $260 million Monday to keep the American money from sinking below its floor level of 3.7535 Swiss francs set by the Smithsonian agreement of December 1971. A further barrage of dollars were offered at the market's opening Tuesday.

Milan, where the Italian lira is having troubles of its own, was the only market place to see a strong dollar.

The Swiss government floated the franc by announcing it would no longer buy dollars to support the exchange rate. This meant the Swiss franc was free to find its own level in the market without official interference.

Switzerland is in the grips of accelerating inflation and every new speculative dollar coming into the country tends to feed that inflation.

Many Swiss banks and exchanges were limiting currency operations but the American Express said it was exchanging "limited" amounts of its own travelers' checks. A spokesman said, however, the company was awaiting further instructions on the handling of bank notes.

The dollar fell nearly five Swiss centimes in Zurich to close at 3.7050 francs. This was the sharpest decline in Europe. The dollar closed Monday at 3.75325 francs. All other currencies were down sharply in relations to the Swiss franc.

C.U.M.Q.U.A.T.S.*

TICK'S GIG

Wednesday Nite

PENNY NITE

on Thursday with

Cuckoos Nest

all at the

Rusty Nail Inn

Rte. 47 Sunderland

665-1937

BLUEWALL

Jan. 24 - 27

Wednesday

"DEERFIELD"

Thursday

COFFEEHOUSE

Friday

"HAMBONE"

Saturday

J. ELLIOTT GROUP

Open weekdays 11:30 a.m. - 1:00 a.m.

Weekends 2:00 p.m. - 1:00 a.m.

Bluewall

CAMPUS CENTER

JAMES BOND 007

FROM RUSSIA WITH LOVE Wed., Jan. 23 at 5 - 7 - 9 - 11

THUNDERBALL

Thurs., Jan. 24 at 1 - 3 - 7 - 9 - 11

GOLDFINGER

Fri., Jan. 25 at 1 - 3 - 7 - 9 - 11

ALL SHOWS IN S.U.B.

ALL DAY

Another First From Butterfield Productions

New England Digest

'Moral' Cases Coming To Court

BOSTON (AP) — A man who spent 26 years "illegally" imprisoned, a 22-year-old woman permanently disabled while acting as a volunteer in a state program, and a salesman robbed of $1,078 in welfare checks turned to their court of last resort Tuesday.

They are among dozens of persons whose efforts to get what they feel is justice from the state government have resulted in so-called "moral obligation" bills.

The Joint Ways and Means Committee Tuesday held the first of a series of hearings on the bills, most of which say the payments should be made "for the purpose of discharging a moral obligation of the Commonwealth."

In the past, relatively few of the bills have passed, principally because legislators think passage would "open the floodgates" for hundreds of others who think the state owes them something.

Howard R. Lee of Worcester is asking $150,000 in "moral obligation" payments from the state.

His claim, documented by a court finding several years ago, is that Lee spent 25 years illegally held at Bridgewater State Hospital. Lee was 29 when arrested and convicted on a charge of stealing less than $6, his lawyer told the committee, but somehow spent 26 years at Bridgewater, long after his sentence expired.

He now lives in a nursing home, boarded, clothed and fed by the state and getting some pocket money, said his lawyer.

Ketherine Devine of Norwood was a volunteer in a Department of Youth Services program in Worcester sledding in a public park, she hit a rock with her sled, was thrown off, and broke her back.

The 22-year-old mother of a two-year-old son is permanently paralyzed, destined to spend the rest of her life in a wheelchair, her husband and others told the Ways and Means Committee. While insurance paid most of the medical bills, there is no provision for an unpaid volunteer in a state program to get extra compensation.

Norman Gold of Randolph is a door-to-door salesman. While collecting payments in Boston's Roxbury section, he frequently cashed welfare checks. One day last year, while on his rounds, he was attacked from behind, struck on the head, and robbed of $1,078.25 in welfare checks, his wife told the committee.

Efforts to have the welfare department stop payment on the checks and reimburse Gold dragged out over six months, said Mrs. Gold, and finally ended with the explanation, "We're sorry, there's nothing we can do."

There were other stories Tuesday–a young man who spent a year in Concord Reformatory before the Supreme Court reversed his conviction on a drug charge, a woman who was seriously injured when a chair collapsed in a state building, a clerk at a mental institution assaulted by a patient.

Many of the bills are "re-files"–duplicates of bills filed and killed last year. The legislature does not always, apparently, share its constituents' views of the state's "moral obligation."

$819,000 Case Overturned

BOSTON (AP) — An $819,000 jury award to a former Scituate fashion model who was injured in a 1962 automobile accident was overturned by the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court Monday.

The court also ordered a new trial for Governor's Councilor Patrick J. "Sonny" McDonough who was one of three defendants in the trial.

The plaintiff, Veronica A. Leone, who was 22 at the time, allegedly suffered severe brain damage when her car was in collision in Scituate with one driven by Richard H. Doran of Boston. At the time, Miss Leone was modelling and planning to marry. A relative said she has not worked since the accident and has been under the constant care of her family.

Johnson Letter Received in Providence

PROVIDENCE (AP) — In a letter dated last Friday, former President Lyndon B. Johnson told a 15-year-old Providence girl that "every age turns out to be a good age when you reach it."

The letter was delivered to the home of Heidi L. Brown Monday morning, the day of Johnson's death.

He was responding to a letter the girl had written him in which she thanked him for remembering the birthday of her uncle, Russell.

Russell Brown, a Washington attorney, had shared a $20-a-month one-room apartment with Johnson when the two were law students in Washington in the 1930s.

Johnson, who usually sent cards to Brown on his birthday, sent a letter instead to Mark Brown's 60th birthday. Brown sent the letter to Heidi, and she wrote the President in thanks.

The letter to Heidi, with a return address of "Lyndon B. Johnson, Austin, Texas, 78701", said:

"Dear Heidi:

"First let me tell you that every age turns out to be a good age when you reach it, and it is comforting to old folks like your uncle Russ and me to know this.

"But, if I were you, I would not even think now about the possibility that life may begin at 20 or 30 or that it still can be a great life even at 80.

"As you say, you have much to do and you want to get on with it. The sooner you commence, the better equipped you will be to find all the later ages as enriching as the young ones.

"Yes, it is really true that our rent was $20 a month. Our salary was such that we could not afford to have dinner very often at the Dodge Hotel dining room because the least expensive dinner was $1.

"However, we did not feel too hampered by lack of money. Life was an exciting challenge as we dreamed and talked, and bragged a little, and prepared ourselves to meet the future."

Quinn Hoping for Break

BOSTON (AP) — Atty. Gen. Robert H. Quinn said today he is hopeful of getting a break soon in the investigation of the slayings of up to nine young women in Eastern Massachusetts.

He said, after a meeting with police investigators from four counties and cities in the Boston area, that "with the number of officers working on this, we are hopeful that some break may come soon."

He said that the police at the meeting, including top investigators of the Boston and Cambridge police and the Metropolitan District Police, are satisfied that progress continues.

"We are intensifying our efforts in those cases in which the leads are strongest," he said.

"If we can crack one of these, the rest will come tumbling down."

He said the investigators are anxious to find some trace of Damaris Synge Gillispie, a Cambridge student who disappeared several months ago.

But, he said investigators are pessimistic that she would be found alive. He said her family conducted a memorial service for her last week.

Sailors Convicted of Drug Abuse

GROTON, Conn. (AP) — A number of men assigned to a Polaris submarine have been convicted of drug abuse and transferred to other duty, the Navy disclosed today.

A spokesman at the U.S. Naval Submarine Base declined to say how many crewmen from the U.S. S. Thomas Edison were involved but said only that "administrative or disciplinary action is being taken as appropriate."

The crewmen involved in the case were members of the so-called "blue crew", one of the submarine's two crews, and were at the base while the ship was at sea when the investigation began Dec. 7, according to Lt. Cmdr. Charles A. Lasch, Jr., public affairs officers for Submarine Flotilla 2.

"Replacements have been assigned for the blue-crew personnel who were transferred as a result of their involvement in the investigation," he said.

Lasch added that more details may be released when higher authorities review the case.

Boston School Funds Withheld

BOSTON (AP) — The state Board of Education voted Tuesday to withhold some $50 million in state education aid from Boston in its running fight with the city over the racial balance issue.

A spokesman for the state board said the decision to withhold the funds "confirms our commitment to racial balance throughout the Commonwealth."

The funds were intended for Boston schools during the current year.

In 1971, the state board first voted to withhold aid from the city under terms of the state's 1965 Racial Imbalance Law. The amount of money withheld grew to a total of $52 million by the time Suffolk County Superior Court Judge Robert Sullivan ordered the money released.

That was last September, and Sullivan ruled that the state board "acted arbitrarily, in abuse of its discretion and in a manner not consistent with the public interest" in withholding the money.

The issue of how Boston is to balance racial distribution in its public schools is now before the State Supreme Court.

Boston School Committee Chairman Paul R. Tierney said the action of the state board Tuesday was "premature and immature."

"There is nothing to be gained by this action," he said. "The school children of Boston will be hurt again and it does nothing but complicate an already complicated situation."

"We are looking for cooperation, not onesided operations," Tierney said.

Ms. Official in Mass. Senate

BOSTON (AP) — The term 'Ms.' is entering official journals of the Massachusetts Senate this year–apparently for the first time in state legislative history.

Sen. Anna Buckley, D-Brockton, requested that she be referred to in the Journals–the official record of Senate proceedings–as 'Ms. Buckley.'

Senate Clerk Norman L. Pidgeon has honored her request, and Senate Journals referring to Ms. Buckley have begun rolling off the press.

Skating briskly across the ice, stick in hand, eyes on puck, and then you shoot, pow!! Goal!! (Photo by Alan Chapman)

THE SALE IS ON

WEAR-HOUSE

Stuff it.

Rent your own refrigerator...

Semester Special $17.50*

- Compact (20 x 17 x 18")
- Spacious (2 cubic feet)
- Inexpensive
- University approved

*plus tax & $10 refundable deposit

CONTACT:

253-2494

mini kool

SUMMER JOBS FOR JUNIORS IN PHYSICS, CHEMISTRY AND ENGINEERING

The Department of Engineering and Applied Science of Yale University is offering a limited number of Special Grants to college juniors who would like to gain experience in advanced research this summer.

Available projects include work involving air pollution instrumentation, surface chemistry and catalysis, gaseous electrons, plasma physics, heat and mass transport, computer science and data processing, physics of fluids, mechanics of materials, chemical physics, high pressure chemical synthesis, solid state physics, atomic physics and electronics.

Stipends will be in the range $100-$120 a week and will be awarded for an 11-week period from June 11 through August 24, 1973.

For further details and application forms please contact your department office, Dean's office, or write to:

Summer Research Program
Department of Engineering and Applied Science
Yale University
New Haven, Connecticut 06520

or call 203: 436-1472

Massachusetts map (above) shows how the state plans to establish regions for education administration. The plan allows for one university campus, two-three state college campuses, and two-three community college campuses in each region.

Reorganization (Cont'd)

(Continued from P. 1)

scholarships, setting standard and guidelines of for growth, and administering federal funds.

The Board will also employ a Chancellor of Post-secondary education who shall serve as President of the University and College System and an administrative staff.

The Board of Elementary and Secondary Education will employ a commissioner and staff, set minimum standards, prepare a unified budget, administer federal funds, and plan and evaluate programs.

"The primary responsibility for educational planning and for the delivery of educational services–from kindergarten through college–in the Commonwealth will be the five Regional Boards of Education," according to the proposal.

Regional Education Boards will hire a Regional Education Administrator and staff, select presidents of public campuses, draw up a primary budget for public elementary, secondary and higher education in the region, identify needs and target resources, coordinate public and private higher education, review programs, degree offerings and expansion plans, implement statewide "personnel policies, including faculty tenure, collective bargaining for higher education, and the licensing of professional personnel."

The Board of Visitors for each college or University campus will "exercise a strong advisory role, evaluating and commenting on every aspect of education and life on the particular campus," says the proposal.

School Committees in cities and towns remain almost unchanged under the proposed reorganization. Besides working with their regional boards and the Regional Education Administrator instead of going to Boston for routing business, they will have the authority to take part in the selection of the Regional Boards.

Members of the two central boards will be chosen as follows:

—each regional board will select one member (who may serve on one or both central boards at the will of the regional board),

—the governor will select five persons with simultaneous membership to both boards (one of whom will be the Secretary of Educational and Cultural Affairs)

—the governor will appoint four members of each board who will serve on only one board,

—one member will be elected by students.

Regional boards will be selected as follows:

—Chairmen of campus Boards of Visitors will elect three members,

—School committee chairmen from each town or city will select three members,

—students will pick two members one from higher ed and one from elementary or secondary ed,

—the Secretary will send one,

—the governor will pick six, which will include local people in both public and private education.

Boards of Visitors will be appointed by the regional boards with advice from students, faculty, administrators, employees and local officials.

Cronin explained that the present educational system evolved from the state's need for rapid, diversified growth since 1960. Pointing to recent population trends he stated that enrollment in higher education programs will continue to increase for a few years but will then level off. Elementary schools are already feeling the effects of the declining birth rate, he indicated.

Before being implemented, the reorganization proposal must be passed by the state legislature. Cronin said that the legislation which would effect the change would be ready sometime in March.

UMass President Robert Wood, when asked to comment on the proposed reforms yesterday said that he had not yet looked deeply into the matter. "This is the first chance any of us (college and university administrators) have had to read the Secretary's proposal, he stated.

Wood indicated that he had only received an oral briefing by the Secretary before the release of the plan. He said "as educators, we did not participate" in the proposal.

Wood did call it radical and said that it would "turn education upside down." He indicated a willingness to study it openly, but stated "The burden of proof is on the secretary."

He added that his lack of criticism at the moment is not "acquiesence."

The Old ...

...And The New(?)

Department of Educational and Cultural Affairs (Reorganized)

The current educational structure is shown at top. The streamlined proposal is shown on bottom.

C.U.M.Q.U.A.T.S.*

SALE

SELECTED PANTS 50% OFF

Most All JERSEY'S & SWEATERS 30% OFF

WEAR-HOUSE

Montoya Returns!

Curry Hicks Cage

NEXT TUESDAY

Jan. 30 - 8 p.m.

Carlos Montoya, the great Flamenco guitarist joined by the Springfield Symphony Orchestra under Robert Gutter in an all-Spanish Program!

Special feature: "Carom" a recent work for magnetic tape and orchestra by Robert Stern, UMass composer.

TICKETS: $2.00 for UMass undergrads/$4 for others. Available now through Friday in Campus Center lobby. Tickets also available at Fine Arts Council, 125 Herter Hall. Remaining tickets at main entrance, Curry Hicks Cage from 6 p.m. on January 30th.

ORDER TICKETS EARLY AS SELL-OUT EXPECTED FOR THIS EVENT!

Pentagon Papers Prosecutor Complains About Ellsberg

LOS ANGELES (AP) - The prosecutor in the Pentagon Papers trial complained Tuesday that defendant Daniel Ellsberg was mouthing the words "you are lying" to a high Army staff official who was on the stand testifying for the government.

U.S. District Court Judge Matt Byrne said he didn't observe such action but warned all trial participants to make no verbal or physical expressions of opinion while jurors are in the courtroom.

Asst. U.S. Atty. David Nissen made the complaint. He also alleged that defendant Anthony Russo had been laughing in court. The judge said he didn't see that either.

The prosecutor's comments, outside the jury's presence, came as the defense concluded a cross-examination which attacked the validity of testimony by Army Lt. Gen. William DePuy.

The general, who was in his fourth day on the witness stand, originally had said, that the government report released by Ellsberg and Russo to news media could have helped North Vietnamese in their battle plans.

However, he conceded Tuesday that in forming that opinion he hadn't considered whether the same information was already available to the North Vietnamese through public sources.

Ellsberg and Russo are charged with espionage, conspiracy and theft.

Since it began cross-examination, the defense has introduced into evidence publicly available versions of the information which was labeled top secret in a report by Gen. Earle Wheeler, former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

The information they pointed to was published in newspapers, books and a report by Gen. William Westmoreland which was available to anyone from the Government Printing Office for $6.

DePuy, who insisted repeatedly that Wheeler's report was more important than the other sources, became angered during Tuesday's session when defense attorney Charles Nesson produced a commercially published book, "The Limits of Intervention" by Townsend Hoopes, a former undersecretary of the air Force.

Part of the book, read into the record by DePuy, included a section of Gen. Wheeler's report on the 1968 Tet offensive.

Nesson asked if DePuy had considered the book in forming his opinion about the information's value. "I did not," DePuy said. He said he didn't even know the section of the Wheeler report appeared in the book.

Bristling, he told Nesson: "The difference between a Townsend Hoopes book and a document by the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff is the difference between day and night."

Goldwater Calls McG 'Sorehead'

WASHINGTON (AP) - Offering advice on how to lose the presidency graciously, Sen. Barry Goldwater today called Sen. George McGovern a poor loser and "a sorehead."

In remarks to the Senate, Goldwater said McGovern's speech this week in Oxford, England, was a "major example of bad taste..."

In that speech and in later conversations with newsmen, McGovern said the United States is closer to one-man rule than at any point in its history. He appeared to blame his own defeat on what he called an "exhaustion" of the public spirit and such institutions as Congress and the media.

The Arizona Republican also objected to McGovern's characterization of the President as reported by the Sunday Times of London: "I won't go so far as to say he's insane. I will go so far as to say I find his behavior peculiar."

Both Goldwater and McGovern were defeated in their bids for the presidency by historic landslides. The late President Lyndon B. Johnson beat Goldwater by 61.1 per cent in 1964. Nixon beat McGovern by 60.7 per cent last year.

"I perhaps have a better idea than most of how a man feels following a resounding defeat for national office," Goldwater said, "so I feel qualified to offer Sen. McGovern a word of advice.

"The advice is that the American people have sympathy with a good loser but they have absolutely no sympathy with a sorehead."

Muskie Introduces Tax Plan

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, citing what he said is the large number of present tax loopholes for a relative few, today introduced a tax-reform package that would produce $18.6 billion a year in new revenue beginning in 1975.

Such legislation is needed, the Maine Democrat said, "to restore fundamental fairness to our tax system."

"Americans' sense of justice can no longer be mocked by a tax structure which extracts large sums from the average working men and women while permitting many of our very wealthiest citizens to shelter themselves, largely or entirely from tax," Muskie said in a prepared floor speech.

Muskie's proposal would concentrate on eliminating or modifying tax breaks for businesses and on tightening tax laws on estates and gifts.

Muskie said tax reform was a major issue in the 1972 presidential campaign, with both major parties pledged to it. But now, he said, it appears the administration wishes to forget it.

"President Nixon, last June 22, said he would send Congress his reform proposals before the end of 1972," the senator recalled. "We have not seen them yet.

"Instead, we repeatedly hear administration spokesmen tell us that reform will not produce much new revenue, that tax code needs little more than simplification, that the 1969 reforms cured the worst of our problems.

"Those statements are wrong, and the American people will not swallow them." Muskie said the various tax preferences and shelters now in the law benefit only about 430,000 high-income taxpayers out of the 74 million total taxpayers.

"The poor—even middle-income Americans whipsawed by rising prices and higher taxes . . . cannot depreciate real estate they do not possess. They cannot collect tax-free interest on bonds they are unable to buy," Muskie said.

These are among the major points in Muskie's proposals and the estimated amount each will raise in 1975.

—Repeal of the accelerated-depreciation privilege for business enacted in 1971. $4.2 billion.

Income taxation of the increase in value of inherited property. $2.4 billion by 1975, $4 billion a year eventually.

—Limiting the 7-per-cent investment-tax credit for business to net increases in investment. $2.5 billion.

—Taxation of 60 per cent of capital gains rather than half. $2.1 billion.

—Increases in estate and gift taxes with the top rate boosted to 80 per cent. $2.5 billion.

—Granting states and local government the right to issue taxable bonds and receive a federal subsidy of half of the interest. This would increase federal cost an estimated $300 million a year.

—An end to the privilege of writing off in one year all mineral-exploration costs. $800 million in new revenue.

—Tightening some of the special tax privileges for U.S. companies on foreign operations. $1.3 billion.

—Repeal of the right to deduct state and local gasoline taxes on individual tax returns. $700 million.

Muskie's $18.6-billion estimate from reform is far higher than those by chairmen of House and Senate tax-writing committees.

Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., Ways and Means chairman, and Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., Finance chairman, have estimated that realistically it might be possible to pick up $1 to $2 billion from a new reform effort.

Mills plans to begin hearings on legislation in the field early

Day Of Mourning For Johnson Tomorrow

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

State offices will be closed in many parts of the nation Thursday, as part of a national day of mourning for former President Lyndon B. Johnson. Stock exchanges in New York and the Board of Trade in Chicago will suspend operations.

Postal service will be suspended and the American flag, still at half staff for the death Dec. 26 of Harry S. Truman, will remain lowered another 30 days.

C.U.M.Q.U.A.T.S.*

PROGRAM COUNCIL
presents
"HENDRIX AT BERKELEY"
— a filmed live performance —
plus Flash Gordon
Thursday, January 25
Friday, January 26
C.C. Auditorium 7 and 9 p.m.
Only 50¢

The Big Y
LIQUOR SUPERMARKETS
SPRINGFIELD FAIRVIEW NORTHAMPTON

RED LION - 80 Proof VODKA 4/5 Quart $2.99
RED LION - 80 Proof SCOTCH WHISKEY 4/5 Quart $3.99
REGAL CLUB Flavored Coffee - Ginger - Apricot LIQUEURS 24 oz. Bottle 42 Proof $1.99
NORTH MOUNTAIN California Rose - White or Pink Chablis TABLE WINE Full Gal. $2.99
OLD BOHEMIAN BEER CASE OF 24 12 oz. N.R. BOTTLES $2.99
PIEL'S BEER 12 Oz. N.R. BOTTLES 6 PAK 89¢

Text Of Nixon Speech

WASHINGTON (AP)—Here is the prepared text of President Nixon's television-radio announcement last night of the agreement to end the Vietnam war.

I have asked for this radio and television time for the purpose of announcing that we have today concluded an agreement to end the war and bring peace with honor in Vietnam and Southeast Asia.

The following statement is being issued at this moment in Washington and Hanoi:

"At 12:30 p.m. Paris time today, Jan. 23, 1973, The Agreement on Ending the War and Restoring Peace in Vietnam was initialed by Dr. Henry Kissinger on behalf of the United States and special adviser Le Duc Tho on behalf of the Democratic Republic of Vietnam.

"The agreement will be formally signed by the parties participating in the Paris Conference on Vietnam on Jan. 27, 1973, at the International Conference Center in Paris. The cease-fire will take effect at 2400 Greenwich Mean Time Jan. 27, 1973.

The United States and the Democratic Republic of Vietnam express the hope that this Agreement will ensure stable peace in Vietnam and contribute to the preservation of lasting peace in Indochina and Southeast Asia."

Throughout the years of negotiations, we have insisted on peace with honor. In my addresses of Jan. 25 and May 1, I set forth the goals that we considered essential to peace with honor. In the settlement that has now been agreed to, the conditions that I laid down then have all been met:

—A cease-fire, internally supervised, will begin at 7 p.m. this Saturday, Jan. 27, Washington time.

—Within 60 days from this Saturday, all Americans held prisoner throughout Indochina will be released. There will be the fullest possible accounting for all those who are missing in action.

—During the same 60-day period, all American forces will be withdrawn from South Vietnam.

—The people of South Vietnam have been guaranteed the right to determine their own future without outside interference.

By joint agreement, the full text of the Agreement and of the protocols to carry it out will be released tomorrow.

Throughout the negotiations, we have been in the closest consultation with President Thieu and other representatives of the Republic of Vietnam.

This settlement meets the goals and has the full support of President Thieu and the Government of the Republic of Vietnam, as well as that of our other allies who are affected.

The United States will continue to recognize the Government of the Republic of Vietnam as the sole legitimate government of South Vietnam.

We shall recognize that ending the war is only the first step toward building the peace.

All parties must now see to it that this is a peace that lasts, a peace that heals—and a peace that not only ends the war in Southeast Asia, but contributes to the prospects of peace in the world.

This will mean that the terms of the Agreement must be scrupulously adhered to. We shall do everything the Agreement requires of us, and we shall expect the other parties to do everything it requires of them. We shall also expect other interested nations to help ensure that the Agreement is carried out and the peace maintained.

As this long and difficult war ends, I would like to address a few special words to each of those who have been parties to the conflict.

To the people and the Government of South Vietnam: By your courage, by your sacrifice, you have won the precious right to determine your own future. You have developed the strength to defend that right. We look forward to working with you in the future, friends in peace as we have been allies in war.

To the leaders of North Vietnam: As we have ended the war through negotiations, let us build a peace of reconciliation. For our part, we are prepared to make a major effort to help achieve that goal. But just as reciprocity was needed to end the war, so too will it be needed to build and strengthen the peace.

To the other major powers that have been involved, even indirectly:

Now is the time for mutual restraint, so that the peace we have achieved can be kept.

And finally, to the American people:

Your steadfastness in supporting our insistence on peace with honor possible. I know that you would not have wanted that peace jeopardized.

With our secret negotiations at the sensitive stage they were in during this recent period, for me to have discussed publicly our efforts to secure peace would not only have violated our understanding with North Vietnam; it would have seriously harmed and possibly destroyed the chances for peace. Therefore, I know that you now can understand why, during these past several weeks, I have not made any public statements about those efforts. The important thing was not to talk about peace, but to get peace—and to get the right kind of peace. This—we have done.

Now that we have achieved an honorable agreement, let us be proud that America did not settle for a peace that would have betrayed our allies, that would have abandoned our prisoners of war, or that would have continued the war for the 50 million people of Indochina.

Let us be proud of the two and a half million young Americans who served in Vietnam—who served with honor and distinction in one of the most selfless enterprises in the history of nations.

Let us be proud of those who sacrificed—who gave their lives—so that the people of South Vietnam might live in freedom and so that the world might live in peace.

In particular, I would like to say a word to some of the bravest people I have ever met: the wives, the children, the families, of our prisoners of war and of the missing in action.

When others called on us to settle on any terms, you had the courage to stand for the right kind of peace, so that those who died and those who suffered would not have died and suffered in vain, and so that where this generation knew war the next generation could know peace.

Nothing means more to me now than the fact that your long vigil is coming to an end.

Just yesterday, a great American died.

In his life, President Johnson endured the vilification of those who sought to portray him as a man of war. But there was nothing he cared about more deeply than achieving a lasting peace in the world.

I remember the last time I talked with him, just the day after New Year's. He spoke then of his concern with bringing peace, and with making it the right kind of peace, and I was grateful that he once again expressed his support for my efforts to gain such a peace.

No one would have welcomed this peace more than he. And I know he would join me in asking—for those who died, and for those who live—let us consecrate this moment by resolving together to make the peace we have achieved a peace that will last.

Looks of apathy, exhaustion and humor cross students' faces as they listen to the President announce a Vietnam cease-fire last night on TV. (MDC Photo by Pete Manera)

Mail Off To POWs

NEW YORK (AP) - Three members of a women's peace group flew from Kennedy Airport Tuesday night bound for Hanoi with 200 letters addressed to American prisoners of war.

They departed before President Nixon's national television message, but a spokeswoman for the group maintained that this would "not be the last delivery of mail to prisoners of war."

The spokeswoman was Dorothy Steffans, executive director of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom. She and Marii Hasegowa and Louise Lione left aboard a Trans World Airlines flight for Moscow, Paris, enroute to Hanoi.

C.U.M.Q.U.A.T.S.*

ISRAELI DANCING
7:30 – ??!
REFRESHMENTS
EVERYBODY WELCOME
Tonight - Cape Cod Lounge
(Student Union)

*C.U.M.Q.U.A.T.S. –
Centralized
University
Menu
Question
Answering
Telephone
System
Dial 545-2626

THE CONCERT COMMITTEE PRESENTS
THE JAMES MONTGOMERY BAND
Feb. 3 8:30 p.m.
S.U.B.
$1.50
Tickets at the Door

Additional Course Descriptions

(Editors Note: The Collegian will run new and incorrectly listed course descriptions for only one day. This service will continue through next week.)

ANTHROPOLOGY

Educational Anthropology: A study of anthropological materials both literature and film. Approaches to the utilization of social science concepts in education.
Mon. 3:35-6:05 Mods-300 E. Capelluzzo
Herter 224
Jan. 22, 24, 29, 31
Feb. 5, 7, 12, 14, 19, 21, 26, 28
March 3, 7, 12, 14

Questions concerning Education Learning Experiences on student transcripts for Fall 1972 should be referred directly to Room 121 of the School of Education after February 5. Due to a shortage of man-power and the attention demanded for Spring registration, we will be unable to answer any grading questions prior to February 5.

FRENCH

"French 390 listed in Schedule of Courses as Senior Seminar is a course on contemporary French Canadian Literature. It carries 3 units of credit and will be given in Herter 342-MWF 125 pm. Anyone with a knowledge of French can take this course including non-majors. Books will be read in French but papers and exams can be written in English."

GEOGRAPHY

"Megalopolis and Its Management" Geog. 391 (267512) (3 credits) Tu-Th 9:30-10:45 Rutherford H. Platt

The Department of Geography in cooperation with the Institute for Man and His Environment announces the offering of a new course for upper class undergraduates entitled "Megalopolis and Its Management." The course will be taught by Rutherford H. Platt, an attorney and geographer, who has just joined the University of Massachusetts faculty after three years experience as an environmental advocacy planner in Illinois.

The new course will consider a variety of problems concerning the physical habitat of metropolitan areas with particular reference to the East Coast Megalopolis.

Interested students should notify Dr. Platt (545-1525) or the Geography Office (545-2286) of their intention to register.

MUSIC COURSES

1. 290A: History of Jazz, course will meet Tuesday and Thursday from 2:30-3:35 pm. The Instructor is Andrew Haigh. There are no prerequisites.

2. 290B: Jazz Theory and Improvization, time to be announced. By permission of the instructor: Dr. Max Roach.

ORCHARD HILL

The following is the only accurate listing of Orchard Hill courses in circulation. Please disregard any previous information distributed by the Scheduling Office-it doesn't include changes, additions and deletions made by the Master's Office since the end of last semester.

Orchard Hill courses are now open to all members of the Five College community.

Complete course descriptions and other information are available at the Orchard Hill Master's Office, 101 Eugene Field House, Orchard Hill, where all students wishing to register for an Orchard Hill course must personally sign up. Registration will be held daily from 9:00 A.M. to 5:00 P.M., Monday to Friday, from now until Tuesday, February 6.

Listed below are those courses that are still open:

OHI 386S-Law, Manipulation and Politics 3 by arrgt*- Robert Robin

386U-Language and Communication 3 by arrgt Carol Miranda (especially recommended for CCEBS students)

386V-Mathematics and Consciousness 3 Th 2-4:30 Fi 104-Barry Kaufman (especially recommended for CCEBS students)

386W/ Social Foundations of Educ. 3 Th 9:30-12 Gray 329-Jerry Seelig & Jack Hruska Ed 251

386X Introduction to Global Survival Studies 3 Wed & Fri 8:30-10 a.m. Fi 104-David Schimmel & Staff

386Y/CAS 104 Freshman Seminar: Humanities 3 MW 7-9:30 p.m. Emily 229 Robert Dyer

 386Z The Nuclear Age 3 Th 7-9:30 p.m. Emily 104-Joseph Marcus & Allan Hoffman

385A Practicum in University Governance 3 by arrgt.-Larry Ladd

388-1 Photography & Aesthetics 3 M 7-9:30 Noah 434- James Slavas

388-2 CLOSED 3 MW 7-8:30 p.m. Noah 629-Mike Grillo

388-3 CLOSED 3 TuTh 12:20 Noah 104-Mike Grillo

389 Intro to Ceramics CLOSED 3 TuTh 1-4:30 p.m. Gray 112-Don Curtis, Jim Wozniak

390/AfroAm 250 Voices From Prison 3 TuTh 1-2:30 Gray 104-Acklyn Lynch

391 Form: Content: Confrontation-Language Art Towards Politics 3 by arrgt.-Elana Nachman

392 African American Music Appreciation 3 Tu 7-9:30 Noah 104-Reginald Workman

393 Sacred Plants and the Sacramental Process 3 Th 9:30-12 Noah 104-Teresina Havens & Richard Rainsford ,

394 Music at the Alternative School (Tentative) 3 by arrgt.-Charlie Vatalaro, Roland Wiggins

395 Third World Writers Workshop 3 by arrgt. Wilesse Comissiong

396 Consciousness and Social Reality 3 TuTh 10:10 Emily 334-Jurgen Born

397 Black Perspective on the Social & Political Systems of the University
sec. 1 (Third World Community only) 3 Th 7-9:30 Gray 534-Carl Thomas, Coordinator
sec. 2 (Open to all) 3 Tu 7-9:30 Noah 729-Carl Thomas, Coordinator

* (Robert Robins' class meets once a month on a Friday from 4-9 p.m. and Saturday from 11-4 p.m.)
 New Courses

OHI sec. 1
SCHEDULE NUMBERS***

202	417594	386H	419998
267	418126	386I	420168
268	418291	386J	420339
269	418462	386K	420500
270	418633	386L	420675
386A	418804	386M	420846
386B	418979	386N	421012
386C	419145	386O	421187
386D	419316	386P	421358
386E	419481	386Q	421529
386F	419652	386R	420548
386G	419823	386S	420586
		389	421909
386U	420719	390	422079
386V	420757	391	422240
386W	420795	392	422411
386X	420884	393	422586
386Y	420928	394	422757
386Z	420966	395	422928
385A	?	396	423098
388	421694	397	423269
Sec-2	421714	Sec-2	423283
Sec-3	421738

PE 100 COURSE
G44-ORIENTEERING-1 CREDIT

Sec. 1 TuTh 11:15 Begins February 6
Sec. 2 TuTh 1:00
The Course:
1) Introduction to Orienteering 2) Map reading 3) Compass work 4) Practical exercises in map and compass work 5) Course setting--organization and problems-decision making 6) Fitness training for Orienteering 7) Practical course setting and following Types of events 8) Find event between sections

G51 Figure Skating-1 Credit
By arrangement at student's convenience-3 hrs. a week between 10:00 a.m. and 1:00 p.m. MTWThF. Unlimited practice time-Orr Rink. Lab fee $33.00.
Sign up Boyden 209

SOUTHWEST RESIDENTIAL

Southwest Residential College will offer the following three credit courses during the Spring, 1973, semester. Further information and registration for these courses at the Office of Academic Affairs, John Adams Lobby (545-2803) from Monday, January 22 to Tuesday, February 6. Southwest courses generally fill quickly-register early.

Southwest Women's Center Courses:
SW/ENG 391 H Feminism and Lit* TuTh 2:30-3:45, SWWC-A. Diamond
SW 391 F Sex Roles in Contemporary Soc. Sec 1 Tu 7:30-10:00, SWWC-J. Leheny/E. Stewart
Sec. 2 Tu 7:00-9:30, Thor L-J. Somma/S. Bates
SW 391 K Feminist Action M 7:00-9:00, SWWC-J. Shortsleeves
SW 391 V Law and Feminism Tu 7:30-10:00, SWWC-J. Sternick
SW 391 S Russian Lit-Fem. Viewpoint W 7:30-10:00, SWWC-L. Peterson
SW 391 W Feminist Writing Seminar M 1:20-4:00, SWWC-G. LeTourneau & A. Townley
SW 391 X Sex Diff-Myth or Reality Th 7:30-10:00, SWWC S. Fiester
SW/GB 391 U Women and the Law* W 7:00-9:30, SWWC-C. Potter

Center of Racial Understanding Courses:
SW 391 C Dynamics of Racism* Sec 1 M 2:30-5:00, JAd L-E. Goldman
Sec 2 W 7:30-10:00, JAd L-E. Goldman
SW 391 T Institutional Racism* By arrangement

International Studies and Communications Courses:
SW 391 A Intro to Global Survival Th 2:30-5:00, Cool 12L-D. Schimmel
SW 391 B Film of Global Survival M 7:15-10:00, SWSC-S. Guild & Mosher
SW 391 I Latin Amer. Civ. (3-5 credits) Tu 7:00-9:00, JQA 19L-S. Thompson
SW 391 P Chinese Cult (3-5 credits) By arrangement W. Dann
SW 391 Z African Cult & Black Am (305 credits) By arrangement-M. Tjitendero

Non-Program Related Courses:
SW 391 D Racism & Popular Culture Sec 1 Tu 2:30-5:00, JAd L-J. Trubisz
Sec 2 Th 2:30-5:00, MacK 1-J. Trubisz
SW 391 E Anti-Negro Thought-20Cen Th 7:30-10:00, MacK 2-J. Rossbach
SW 391 G Environmental Concerns II Th 7:00-9:30, JAd 19L-R. Werbe
SW 391 J Univ. from Black Perspective Th 6:30-9:00, Melv L-J. Parrish
SW 391 L River Ecology M&F 10:10-11:00 a.m. and W 10:10-1:00 p.m., Flint-R. Coler
SW 391 M Military Establishment W 7:00-9:00, MacK 2-T. Dalton
SW 391 N Psychic Phenomena Sec 1 Tu & Th 10:30-12:00n, MacK 1 R. Whitney
Sec 2 Tu & Th 1:00-2:15, by arrgt
SW 391 R How Can I Learn at Univ. Tu 7:00-9:00, JQA 5 apt.-P. Chanin & A. Davis
SW 391 Y Black Ritual By arrangement-A. Lindsay
SW 392 A Politics of Soul Weds nights 7-9:39 MacK 2.-P. Chandler
SW 391 Q Black Women in Prisons Thurs. nights 7-9:30 MacK 1-S. Ramos

*By Permission of Instructor

Legislators Meet To Discuss Oil Import Quota

WASHINGTON (AP) - Most of the New England congressional delegation met with a top White House aide Tuesday to press for a total lifting of import quotas on home heating oils.

"It was a waste of time," said a disgruntled Sen. Edward W. Brooke, R—Mass., as he left the stormy meeting.

Despite widespread reports of heating oil shortages, Brooke said Peter M. Flanigan, an assistant to the President, would agree only to take the congressional demands under consideration.

NIGHT OF THE LIVING DEAD
plus
Groove Tube Delights
FRI., JAN. 26 T-104
7 - 9 - 11

CATCH BULL AT FOUR

CAT STEVENS
ode records inc.

Big Bambú
SOBRINOS DE
CHEECH & CHONG
ALCOV

THE NEW RECORD SHOP
233 North Pleasant St.
Amherst Carriage Shops
AMHERST
549-0736
Why Not Stop In
Hours: Monday - Thursday 11 a.m. - 7 p.m.
Friday 9:30 a.m. - 7 p.m.
Saturday 9:30 a.m. - 5:30 p.m.

— More New Buses Scheduled For Routes —

North Amherst — Stadium

1 "V" Lot	2 "F" Lot	3 Prince	4 Pttrsn	5 Fearing	6 Stsb.Rd.	7 Morrill	8 Arnold	9 SchEd	10 Crst.Vw.	11 No.Amh.	12 Townhse	13 No.Amh.	14 Puffton	15 No.Vil.	16 Frfld.St.	17 GRC	18 Hasb	19 FAC	20 Fearing	21 Pttrsn	22 Pierpont
7:38	7:39	7:41	7:42	7:44	7:47	7:48	7:49	7:52	7:54	7:57	7:39	7:41	7:43	7:47	7:48	7:50	7:51	7:52	7:55	7:57	7:58
8:00	8:03	8:05	8:06	8:08	8:11	8:12	8:13	8:16	8:18	8:21	7:58	8:03	8:05	8:09	8:10	8:12	8:13	8:14	8:17	8:19	8:20
8:22	8:25	8:27	8:28	8:30	8:33	8:34	8:35	8:38	8:40	8:43	8:22	8:24	8:26	8:30	8:31	8:33	8:34	8:35	8:38	8:40	8:41
8:43	8:44	8:46	8:47	8:49	8:52	8:53	8:54	8:57	8:59	9:02	8:44	8:47	8:49	8:53	8:54	8:56	8:57	8:58	9:01	9:03	9:04
9:06	9:07	9:09	9:10	9:12	9:15	9:16	9:17	9:20	9:22	9:25	9:04	9:06	9:08	9:12	9:13	9:15	9:16	9:17	9:20	9:22	9:23
9:25	9:28	9:30	9:31	9:33	9:36	9:37	9:38	9:41	9:43	9:46	9:26	9:29	9:31	9:35	9:36	9:38	9:39	9:40	9:43	9:45	9:46
9:48	9:49	9:51	9:50	9:54	9:57	9:58	9:59	10:02	10:04	10:07	9:49	9:51	9:53	9:57	9:58	10:00	10:01	10:02	10:05	10:07	10:08
10:10	10:13	10:15	10:16	10:18	10:21	10:22	10:23	10:26	10:28	10:31	10:08	10:13	10:15	10:19	10:20	10:22	10:23	10:24	10:27	10:29	10:30
10:32	10:34	10:36	10:37	10:39	10:42	10:43	10:44	10:47	10:49	10:52	10:32	10:34	10:36	10:40	10:41	10:43	10:44	10:45	10:48	10:50	10:51
10:53	10:54	10:56	10:57	10:59	11:02	11:03	11:04	11:07	11:09	11:12	10:53	11:14	10:58	11:02	11:03	11:05	11:06	11:07	11:10	11:12	11:13
11:15	11:16	11:18	11:19	11:21	11:24	11:25	11:26	11:29	11:31	11:34	11:14	11:38	11:18	11:22	11:23	11:25	11:26	11:27	11:30	11:32	11:33
11:35	11:38	11:40	11:41	11:43	11:46	11:47	11:48	11:51	11:53	11:56	11:35	12:01	11:40	11:44	11:45	11:47	11:48	11:49	11:52	11:54	11:55
11:57	11:59	12:01	12:02	12:04	12:07	12:08	12:09	12:12	12:14 to PM Schedule		11:59		12:03	12:07	12:08	12:10	12:11	12:12	12:15	12:17	12:18
12:20 AM	12:23	12:25	12:26	12:28	12:31	12:32	12:33	12:36	12:38

1 "V" Lot	2 "F" Lot	3 Prince	4 Pattrsn	5 Fearing	6 Stsb.Rd.	7 Morrill	8 Arnold	9 SchEd	10 Cresthview	11 Puffton	12 No.Amh.	13 Townhse	14 No. Amh.	15 No.Vil.	16 Frfld.St.	17 GRC	18 Hasb	19 FAC	20 Fearing	21 Pattrsn	22 Pierpont
12:42	12:44	12:46	12:47	12:49	12:52	12:53	12:54	12:57	12:59	12:15	12:20	1:05	12:22	12:29	12:30	1:13	12:33	12:34	12:37	1:22	12:40
1:03	1:04	1:06	1:07	1:09	1:12	1:13	1:14	1:17	1:19		1:25	1:27	1:29	1:32	1:33	1:35	1:36	1:37	1:40	1:42	1:43
1:25	1:27	1:29	1:30	1:32	1:35	1:36	1:37	1:40	1:42	1:00	1:48	1:50	1:52	1:55	1:56	1:58	1:59	2:00	2:03	2:05	2:06
1:45	1:48	1:50	1:51	1:53	1:56	1:57	1:58	2:01	2:03	1:20	1:48	1:50	1:52	1:54	1:57	2:18	2:19	2:22	2:25	2:27	2:28
2:08	2:09	2:11	2:12	2:14	2:17	2:18	2:19	2:22	2:24	1:43	2:09	2:12	2:14	2:17	2:18	2:20	2:21	2:22	2:25	2:27	2:28
2:30	2:33	2:35	2:34	2:38	2:41	2:42	2:43	2:46	2:48	2:04	2:30	2:32	2:34	2:37	2:38	2:40	2:41	2:42	2:42	2:47	2:48
2:50	2:52	2:54	2:55	2:57	3:00	3:01	3:02	3:05	3:07	2:25	2:54	2:55	2:57	3:00	3:01	3:03	3:04	3:05	3:08	3:10	3:11
3:13	3:14	3:16	3:17	3:19	3:22	3:23	3:24	3:27	3:29	3:08	3:13	3:15	3:19	3:22	3:23	3:25	3:26	3:27	3:30	3:32	3:33
3:35	3:37	3:39	3:40	3:42	3:45	3:46	3:47	3:50	3:52	3:30	3:35	3:37	3:39	3:42	3:43	3:45	3:46	3:47	3:50	3:52	3:53
3:55	3:58	4:00	4:01	4:03	4:06	4:07	4:08	4:11	4:13	3:53	3:58	4:00	4:02	4:05	4:06	4:08	4:09	4:10	4:13	4:15	4:16
4:18	4:19	4:21	4:22	4:24	4:27	4:28	4:29	4:32	4:34	4:14	4:19	4:22	4:24	4:27	4:28	4:30	4:31	4:32	4:35	4:37	4:38
4:40	4:43	4:45	4:46	4:48	5:51	4:52	4:53	4:56	4:58	4:35	4:40	4:42	4:44	4:47	4:48	4:50	4:51	5:52	4:55	4:57	4:58
5:00	5:02	5:04	5:05	5:07	5:10	5:11	5:12	5:15	5:17	4:59	5:04	5:05	5:07	5:10	5:11	5:13	5:14	5:15	5:18	5:20	5:21
5:23	5:24	5:26	5:27	5:29	5:32	5:33	5:34	5:37	5:39	5:18	5:23	5:25	5:27	5:30	5:31	5:33	5:34	5:35	5:38	5:40	5:41
5:43	5:45-to Campus Center									5:40	5:45	5:47	5:49	5:52	5:53-to Campus Center

Southwest

1 Prince	2 Patterson	3 Pierpont	4 "V" Lot	5 "F" Lot	6 Boyden	7 "G" Lot	8 GRC	9 SchEd	10 GRC	11 Hasb	12 FAC	13 SBA
* 7:35	* 7:36	* 7:37	* 7:39	* 7:40	* 7:42	7:44	7:45	7:48	7:51	7:52	7:53	7:55
7:57	7:58	7:59	8:01	8:02	8:04	8:06	8:07	8:10	8:13	8:14	8:15	8:17
8:18	8:19	8:20	8:22	8:23	8:25	8:27	8:28	8:31	8:34	8:35	8:36	8:38
* 8:40	* 8:41	* 8:42	* 8:44	* 8:45	* 8:47	8:49	8:50	8:53	8:56	8:57	8:58	9:00
9:02	9:03	9:04	9:06	9:07	9:09	9:11	9:12	9:15	9:18	9:19	9:20	9:22
9:23	9:24	9:25	9:27	9:28	9:30	9:32	9:33	9:36	9:39	9:40	9:41	9:43
* 9:45	* 9:46	* 9:47	* 9:49	* 9:50	* 9:52	9:54	9:55	9:58	10:01	10:02	10:03	10:05
10:07	10:08	10:09	10:11	10:12	10:14	10:16	10:17	10:20	10:23	10:24	10:25	10:27
10:28	10:29	10:30	10:32	10:33	10:35	10:37	10:38	10:41	10:44	10:45	10:46	10:48
*10:50	*10:51	*10:52	*10:54	*10:55	*10:57	10:59	11:00	11:03	11:06	11:07	11:08	11:10
11:12	11:13	11:14	11:16	11:17	11:19	10:21	11:22	11:25	11:28	11:29	11:30	11:32
11:33	11:34	11:35	11:37	11:38	11:40	11:42	11:43	11:46	11:49	11:50	11:51	11:53
11:55	11:56	11:57	11:59	12:00	12:02	12:04	12:05	*12:08	*12:11	*12:12	*12:13	*12:15
12:17	12:18	12:19	12:21	12:22	12:24	12:26	12:27	12:30	12:33	12:34	12:35	12:37
12:38 AM	12:39	12:40	12:42	12:43	12:45	12:47	12:48	12:51	12:54	12:55	12:56	12:58
PM 1:00	1:01	1:02	1:04	1:05	1:07	1:09	1:10	* 1:13	* 1:16	* 1:17	* 1:18	* 1:20
1:21	1:22	1:23	1:25	1:26	1:29	1:31	1:32	1:35	1:38	1:39	1:40	1:42
1:43	1:44	1:45	1:47	1:48	1:50	1:52	1:53	1:56	1:59	2:00	2:01	2:03
2:05	2:04	2:07	2:09	2:10	2:12	2:14	2:15	* 2:18	* 2:21	* 2:22	* 2:23	* 2:25
2:26	2:27	2:28	2:30	2:31	2:34	2:36	2:37	* 2:40	2:43	2:44	2:45	2:47
2:48	2:49	2:50	2:52	2:53	2:55	2:57	2:58	3:01	3:04	3:05	3:06	3:08
3:10	3:11	3:12	3:14	3:15	3:17	3:19	3:20	* 3:23	* 3:26	* 3:27	* 3:28	* 3:30
3:32	3:33	3:34	3:36	3:37	3:39	3:41	3:42	3:45	3:48	3:49	3:50	3:52
3:53	3:54	3:55	3:57	3:58	4:00	4:02	4:03	4:06	4:09	4:10	4:11	4:13
4:15	4:16	4:17	4:19	4:20	4:22	4:24	4:25	* 4:28	* 4:31	* 4:32	* 4:33	* 4:35
4:37	4:38	4:39	4:41	4:42	4:44	4:46	4:47	4:50	4:53	4:54	4:55	4:57
4:58	4:59	5:00	5:02	5:03	5:05	5:07	5:08	5:11	5:14	5:15	5:16	5:18
5:20	5:21	5:22	5:24	5:25	5:27	5:29	5:30	* 5:33	* 5:36	* 5:37	* 5:38	* 5:40
5:41	5:42	5:43	5:45	5:46 - To Campus Center

Orchard Hill

1 Chestnut St.	2 Chadbourne	3 Dickinson	4 Vill-Pk 1&2	5 Frat Pk	6 Sylvan	7 "M" Lot	8 SchEd	9 GRC	10 Hasb	11 FAC
* 7:35	* 7:37	* 7:38	* 7:41	* 7:44	* 7:46	* 7:47	7:48	7:51	7:52	7:53
7:57	7:59	8:00	8:03	8:06	8:08	8:09	8:10	8:13	8:14	8:15
8:18	8:20	8:21	8:24	8:27	8:29	8:30	8:31	8:34	8:35	8:36
* 8:40	* 8:42	* 8:43	* 8:46	* 8:49	* 8:51	* 8:52	8:53	8:56	8:57	8:58
9:02	9:04	9:05	9:08	9:11	9:13	9:14	9:15	9:18	9:19	9:20
9:23	9:25	9:26	9:29	9:32	*9:34	9:35	9:36	9:39	9:40	9:41
*9:47	*9:49	* 9:48	* 9:51	* 9:54	* 9:56	* 9:57	9:58	10:01	10:02	10:03
10:09	10:10	10:10	10:13	10:16	10:18	10:19	10:20	10:23	10:24	10:25
10:30	10:31	10:34	10:37	10:39	10:39	10:40	10:41	10:44	10:45	10:46
*10:52	*10:53	*10:56	*10:59	*11:01	*11:01	*11:02	11:03	11:06	11:07	11:08
11:14	11:15	11:18	11:21	11:23	11:24	11:25	11:28	11:29	11:30
11:35	11:36	11:39	11:42	11:44	11:45	11:46	11:49	11:50	11:51
*11:57	*11:58	*12:01	*12:04	*12:06	*12:07	12:08	12:11	12:12	12:13
12:19	12:20	12:23	12:26	12:28	12:29	12:30	12:33	12:34	12:35
12:38	12:40	12:41	12:44	12:47	12:49	12:50	12:51	12:54	12:55	12:56
1:00	1:02	1:03	1:06	1:09	1:11	1:12	* 1:13	* 1:16	* 1:17	* 1:18
1:21	1:24	1:25	1:28	1:31	1:33	1:34	1:35	1:38	1:39	1:40
1:43	1:45	1:46	1:49	1:52	1:54	1:55	1:56	1:59	2:00	2:01
2:05	2:07	2:08	2:11	2:14	2:16	2:17	* 2:18	* 2:21	* 2:22	* 2:23
2:26	2:29	2:30	2:33	2:36	2:38	2:39	2:40	2:43	2:44	2:45
2:48	2:50	2:51	2:54	2:57	2:59	3:00	3:01	3:04	3:05	3:06
3:12	3:13	3:16	3:19	3:21	3:21	3:22	* 3:23	* 3:26	* 3:27	* 3:28
3:34	3:35	3:38	3:41	3:43	3:44	3:45	3:48	3:49	3:50	3:52
3:55	3:56	3:59	4:02	4:04	4:05	4:06	4:09	4:10	4:11	4:13
4:17	4:18	4:21	4:24	4:26	4:27	4:28	* 4:31	* 4:32	* 4:33	* 4:35
4:39	4:40	4:43	4:46	4:48	4:49	4:50	4:53	4:54	4:55	4:57
5:00	5:01	5:04	5:07	5:09	5:10	5:11	* 5:14	* 5:15	* 5:16	* 5:18
5:22	5:23	5:26	5:29	5:31	5:32	* 5:33	* 5:36	* 5:37	* 5:38	* 5:40
5:44	5:45	5:48	5:51	5:53	5:54	5:55-To Campus Center

* 2 Buses at Stop

All routes subject to cancellation without notice. Cancellations due to inclement weather or mechanical failure will be announced on WMUA Radio 91.1 FM.

Free to Students, Staff, Faculty, Official Guests and Visitors of the University.

Operates from 6:00 AM to 6:00 PM on University class days only.

Schedule Distribution Points
Campus Center Information Desk
Student Union Lobby Counter
Parking Lot Booths
On Buses

For Bus Information:
Student Senate Transit Service
Student Activities Office
Murray D. Lincoln Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
PHONE—545-0056——545-2084

Sponsored by:
Urban Mass Transit Administration
Student Senate and Administration of University of Massachusetts

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

BOARD OF EDITORS

EDITOR IN CHIEF — James E. Gold
MANAGING EDITOR — Nathan Gorenstein
BUSINESS MANAGER — William L. Manburg
EXECUTIVE EDITOR — Stephen G. Tripoli
NEWS EDITOR — Donald J. Bishop
SPORTS EDITOR — William E. Ballou
PHOTO EDITOR — Gib Fullerton
FINE ARTS EDITOR — Robert Nesti

ASST. MANAGING EDITOR — Steve Fine
ADVERTISING MANAGER — Jeanne Bauge
ASST. PHOTO EDITOR — Alan Chapman
ASST. SPORTS EDITOR — Roy Lyons

TODAY'S STAFF

ISSUE EDITOR — Tom Borkowski
EDITORIAL — Steve Tripoli
SPORTS — Bill Ballou
DARKROOM — Alan Chapman, Pete Manera
AD LAYOUT — Bill Manburg

Undergraduate newspaper of the University of Massachusetts. The Staff is responsible for its content and no faculty members or administrators read it for accuracy or approval prior to publication.

Unsigned editorials represent the view of this paper. They do not necessarily reflect the views of the faculty, administration, or student body as a whole. Signed editorials, columns, reviews, cartoons, and letters represent the personal views of the authors.

The Collegian subscribes to the Associated Press and the Liberation News Service. Publication of their material does not constitute endorsement.

No Courses Left

According to a revised schedule of courses dated January 9th of this year somewhere in the vicinity of 90% of the courses being offered for the Spring semester are either filled, oversubscribed, or have been dropped completely.

This is an appalling state of affairs. Never have so many courses been unavailable to students this early in the semester. Many students were dropped from one or more of the courses that they signed up for and will have a very hard time picking up anything new the way things are now.

Why does this problem exist? Wasn't the University prepared for the amount of students that came to school? We should hope they'd be aware of how many students there are here. Were they hoping that three or four thousand of us wouldn't show up? And why were so many second semester seniors dropped from courses this, their last chance to take them?

Explanations are in order, but even more important for right now is some ACTION in Whitmore. Every day that goes by will foul things up even more for students in a mess now. This is the time when the complexion of the semester is shaped by each individual student to her or his wants and needs. The situation must be rectified without further delay.

'REMEMBER THE GOOD OL' DAYS WHEN YOU ONLY HAD TO KEEP SILENT IN LIBRARIES AND HOSPITAL ZONES?'

Don Glickstein

Improving The Media

They were all created or sustained by the media: Janis Joplin, Bobby and Jack Kennedy, Jimmy Hendrix, Martin Luther King, George Reeves. Their deaths wounded the unconscious of young people throughout the country.

They were all created or sustained by the media: Davy Crockett, Howdy Doody, Mickey Mouse, Ed Sullivan, That Was the Week That Was, Route 66, The Avengers, Perry Mason. Their cancellations also wounded the unconscious of American youth, perhaps even more than the physical deaths of real people.

Transience, to use Alvin Toffler's word, is an integral component of the broadcast industry.

We don't know how to measure the hurt a child has when his favorite television program is cancelled. We do know, from our own feelings and from reading letters to newspaper television critics, that adults are frustrated and feel the impotence of futility against a network's decision. For the television generation—those born after the late Forties—there is no model for growing old, except abandoned grandparents, assassinations, and cancellations; it is evident to them that they themselves will die young, and that Dylan and the Beatles will never turn grey.

We can only guess the effect of the media as messages, we're a little better at judging the media's contents.

The Civil Rights bills of the Sixties were largely results of Bull Connor's nationwide television appearances. "All in The Family" has created a running debate as to its merits. Kids are learning from "Sesame Street", so much so, that some 1st grade teachers have had difficulty in adjusting their curricula to the new generation.

In every medium, content is significant. Unfortunately, educators have neglected to teach the public about the nuances of professional communication.

Nat Hentoff, writing last year in the Village Voice, angrily observed that the New York Times used value-laden terms . . . "enemy" . . . "Communist" . . . when writing about the Vietnamese.

Aside from the legal implications—that we are not officially at war and thus, have no enemies—the Times, along with the major networks and news services, distort the events by dehumanizing "the other side" and/or "Hanoi", by confusing governments with citizens to create a simplistic polarization, and by using terms, namely "Communist", that have negative emotional connotations for many Americans. It was Lyndon Johnson who said that he was an American first and then a Democrat. Most likely, General Giap feels the same way about his country and political party.

Over a 20-year period, this type of repetitive conditioning shapes the news that is reported.

The news media's dependence on official sources, reporters' use of biased adjectives, lack of expertise in technical fields like education, the military, and Federal jargon, and time deadlines all contribute to the creation, rather than the reporting, of news.

Incredibly, the media most capable of in-depth analysis, books and scholarly magazines, seem to be losing influence. The days when Uncle Tom's Cabin caused the Civil War are over. The Pentagon Papers, the Kerner Commission Report, and Halberstam's The Best and the Brightest cannot compete with the instant media of newspapers, radio, television, and the news weeklies. Movies of "Hanoi Jane" evoke more emotion than Howard Zinn's Vietnam writings.

Only when the books receive instant media publicity do people take note. Jensen, writing about racial inferiority in the Harvard Educational Review, became a center of furor only when Time and Newsweek reported it. Community groups were mostly unaware of new trends in public housing until The Death and Life of Great American Cities and Defensible Space got their day in the instant media.

The trend which may counteract the subtle bias of commercial instant media is accessibility.

There is scarcely an area in the country which cannot support a radio talk show. Although many of the listener-talkers reflect the news created by commercial media, for the first time, opposing views have access to radio. This was illustrated most recently by Senator McGovern's tape recording of the veteran who called into Boston's "Jerry Williams Show".

In television, Cable-TV, editorial rebuttals and community-sponsored shows indicate a growing accessibility.

Even with harassment by law enforcement groups, the "unrecognized" press—college papers, the underground, and new community papers—are also burgeoning.

Despite efforts of the Nixon people to undermine the 1st Amendment, the fact that citizens are studying the media as media is healthy. It can lead to an awareness of professional communication's effect on events and ultimately, to the media's improvement.

Don Glickstein is an MDC Editorial Columnist

Art Buchwald

"Fire Thyself"

WASHINGTON—President Nixon has vowed to cut the bureaucracy in Washington. This is a noble endeavor which every other President in the history of this nation attempted—and failed.

Now comes a plan devised by a friend, John Rogers of Alexandria, Va. It is worth serious consideration and I don't think President Nixon's super-Cabinet should reject it out of hand.

The Rogers Plan is to make bureaucracy reduction an incentive for government employees rather than a punishment. Anyone who can figure out how to do away with his own job gets to retire at full pay for the rest of his life.

As administrator who can figure out a way to abolish his entire agency would not only receive his own salary for the rest of his life but would get a bonus of 10% of the agency's budget for the next five years.

"I don't understand where the financial saving would be," I said to Rogers in a bar where he laid out the idea.

"Salaries are only a small part of the cost of a bureaucracy," he said. "The big savings would come from shutting down offices, parking lots, electricity, heat and saving money on file cabinets, typewriters, Xerox machines and paper clips. Eliminate the job, pay the man his full salary and you'll still save 90% of the cost of running the government."

"It sounds good on paper, Rogers, but a lot of bureaucrats like their work. If you retire them at full salary, they'll go nuts."

"They will not be prohibited from working in the private sector. Private enterprise needs as many bureaucrats as the government.

"They could work for AT&T, American Express, Sears & Roebuck or the insurance company of their choice."

"That's true," I agreed. "As long as they can shuffle paper I guess they don't care whom they shuffle it for."

"The important thing," Rogers said, "is that we make it a challenge for bureaucrats to do away with their own jobs.

They have to come up with good, solid reasons why they're expendable. We would set up a review board to go over each case. If a man can't justify a reason for firing himself, he will be sent back to his department.

"In spite of what people think, bureaucrats like a challenge, and what could be more challenging than coming up with a reason why your job isn't necessary to the running of the government."

"But there are some bureaucrats who might never think of a good reason."

"That's why we offer bonuses to their administrators. If the administrator can conceive of a reason why his department should be abolished, then the bureaucrat will be automatically fired though he, too, will receive his full pay."

"That makes sense; it could be a team effort."

"Exactly," Rogers continued. "Agencies would be competing with each other to see how fast they could close themselves down. In six months, 80% of all government employees will be on retirement at no financial loss to themselves."

"But can we run the government with only 20% of the labor force?"

"No sweat," said Rogers. "Essential services can be maintained by a skeleton task force of government employees who couldn't come up with any good reasons why their jobs should be eliminated. If they're too dumb not to figure out how to take advantage of the reduction incentive plan, then they can keep working until they do."

"It's an idea whose time has come," I said.

"All we need is to get the President to fund a new agency to get the plan under way," Rogers said.

"But that means hiring more bureaucrats," I protested.

"That's the government's problem—not mine."

Copyright 1973, Los Angeles Times

'. . . SO, IF YOU WANT TO KEEP YOUR CHICKEN LICENSES, YOU'D BETTER KEEP YOUR CHICKEN MOUTHS SHUT!'

Letters To The Editor

Letter To President Nixon

Dear President Nixon:

Although the destructive bombing of North Vietnam with its widespread terrorizing of the civilian population has been curtailed somewhat, I feel compelled to express to you directly my personal reaction to this unprincipled act of vindictive savagery on your part. In doing so I intend to reflect appropriate respect for your Office, but I find this very difficult in the light of my very deep feelings of horror, disgust, and guilt for your action.

Our entire involvement in the internal affairs of this small poorly-developed nation has been a tragic mistake and a national disgrace, but some episodes stand out more boldly than others in the profile of violence. My-Lai can never be excused; it can only be understood as the reaction of frightened young men who have been taught that bullets are a means of resolving frustration and anger. The invasion of Cambodia can never be excused; it can only be understood as the reaction of men who have been taught that towns may have to be destroyed to be saved, that civilians who don't help may have to be eliminated as possible enemies. The mining of Haiphong and renewed bombing which accompanied talks of peace were acts of infuriating arrogance which dropped our nation to new depths of international disgrace and internal impotence. But these were not enough.

The most recent escalation of bombing has surpassed all other episodes of national folly and viciousness. At no time could it have been justified. Coming as it did, however, as an interlude in negotiations for a cease fire which allegedly was "close at hand", it was totally inappropriate—even in response to the alleged provocation of changing cease fire demands. It can be understood only as the irresponsibly vengeful reaction to frustration of a petulant madman.

The consequences for the Vietnamese people are tragic, but they have at least gained international sympathy and support. The consequences for us are even more tragic, since we have fallen to a new low in self-respect and gained a new measure of shame before the world. To make matters much worse, you are responsible for a restriction of news which is both ominous and disgraceful. In spite of this dim-out of news, however, we have enough information to realize that we stand charged before the civilized nations of the world as irresponsible vicious bullies. We frown righteously and pass judgment upon the international war crimes of others but are unable to see that we are responsible for equally grave acts of inhumanity. We dare not set ourselves up to judgment in turn by the tribunals of civilized nations.

Mr. President, I am confident that I speak with many others in calling upon you to put an immediate end to our mindless vindictive acts of violence in Vietnam. Every day of continued aggression is a day of added neglect of the real needs of our people. Every day postpones the months and years of national atonement and regeneration of spiritual integrity which lie between us and self-respect.

Furthermore, I join others in calling upon our Congress to shut off funds for this disgusting war immediately. Finally, if you still cannot be persuaded or restrained, Mr. President, I urge prompt measures to have you impeached, as you become the one who has done more than any other president to destroy the ideals and tarnish the image of this country both at home and abroad.

Robert W. Gage

For Out Of Staters

To The Editor:

Chapter 90, section 3 of the Massachusetts General Laws and Article VII section 7 of the University Motor Vehicle Regulations clearly require students who own or operate motor vehicles registered in other states to register for a special Massachusetts sticker at the Amherst or University police stations. This requirement is designed to assure that the car has the minimum insurance required of all out of state cars operated in Massachusetts. The fine for failure to register is up to $50. In mid- January about 20 students were cited for this offense.

There is no charge for this registration and it takes very little time. If you have a motor vehicle which is registered in a state other than Massachusetts, please be sure that you have the required student sticker. This requirement only applies to students (who have the right not to register in Massachusetts) and not to professors, staff or others.

Richard M. Howland
Attorney for Students

Action At Harvard

To The Editor:

A group of Third World faculty and students, primarily from the Administrative Careers Program (ACP) have seen the necessity of formally coming together periodically, in an organization which would address itself to common interests and problems that we share during our residency at the Ed. School. Our actions have culminated in the formation of the Third World "ACP" Organization.

The issues raised by the Third World Student Alliance in the School of Education at the University of Mass. (Amherst) have prompted us to publicly express our concern with HGSE policies and practices that may be similar to those protested by the Third World Alliance (e.g. student admissions, faculty recruitment and future program direction—all as they relate to Third World people). We support the actions of our U. Mass. brothers and sisters, are equally aroused and intend to engage ourselves in the struggle around these issues. We see the inclusion of four Third World people on the Dean's Task Force on Restructuring of Programs in Social Policy and Educational Planning and Administration as a beginning step in avoiding the type of confrontation which occurred at the U. Mass. campus and hope that this model will be employed for other future concerns that we share.

The Third World "ACP" Student Organization,
Harvard University

Letters To The Editor

As in previous years the MDC will continue to print letters to the editor. The only requirements are that they be typed at sixty spaces, double-spaced and no longer than two pages in length. All letters must be signed and the author's address and telephone number must be included. Letters will be accepted from organizations, but a name and a telephone number must be on them. Please note this change in policy. No letter will be published without this information. Also, no letters will be printed without a signature.

All letters are subject to editing either for content or space according to the judgement of the editors. Also, due to space limitations, we do not guarantee that all letters will be printed.

Editorial Points

Looking back at the Super Bowl it becomes obvious that Richard Nixon and Bob Griese have a lot in common. Both like to throw the bomb, and both have a War-field to throw it to.

***

Which leads us to believe that the Vietnamese probably consider the U.S. one of the most explosive teams they've ever seen.

***

With the amount of courses oversubscribed at this point it's almost certain that no one in Whitmore will be winning an OSCAR for their early semester performance.

***

One wonders what would have happened if Joe Frazier had allowed Muhammad Ali to be his opponent last night instead of George Foreman. It probably wouldn't have been too pretty.

***

And finally, a message to all you ski freaks out there. Nyah-nyah.

Thanks, Health Services

To the Editor:

Once again our student fees are misspent. YAHOO is an abomination. The latest issue is a glaring example of journalistic incompetence. It is humorless; it is pointless; it is tasteless; it is boring; it is useless. If we did not have to pay for it, we could ignore it. We recognize one useful suggestion on page 11: "Save this issue for valuable toilet paper." Students have limited financial resources. We cannot continue to pay for such embarassing and elaborate pap.

Jill Dardig
John LeBaron
Allison Rossett

Some Flak For YAHOO

To the Editor:

Students get ripped off by the University for so many things--the Athletic fee, the Campus Center, atrocious pieces in Munchies--that it is indeed a pleasure to come across a department which does not blow our money.

I would like to publicly thank the Infirmary and Dr. McBride for their kind and compassionate help with a recent problem I had.

If the Health Services were like most University departments, UMass would indeed be the reputed "city of alienation".

If all University departments were like the Health Services, UMass would be a community.

Don Glickstein

Think About It

To the Public:

As I sit here looking over what has taken place at the School of Education, I begin to wonder what does it all mean and where will it all end. From the beginning of my stay at the University, pressures have been applied from forces I could not see or understand. It is true that all students here are under pressure, but to be a Third World student places you in a position apart from others. To be different has always put us apart from the flow of America.

I would ask you, "Why should we as different from you, always have to struggle to acquire the rights that you take for granted?" It seems that from the beginning to the end is always a struggle. We have proven time and again that we, as a race and as a combined group, ARE! Our being resounds that WE ARE! We can no longer afford the luxury of waiting for any benevolent hand, save our own, to reach up and save us. WE ARE! from your ghettos we have come, from your slave ships we have come, from the beginning of time we have come to take for ourselves the freedom that all people hold dear.

I would ask at what point do you stop supporting directly or indirectly the racist oppressors, the murderers within your society? When Kent State went down a part of America died, you cried out in support of the murdered students, but what about JACKSON State where Third World students were shot in the back. What about that America? Now, Third World people are dying, Viet Nam is a password for cruelty, Southern University erupts and two more Blacks die, and you just sit there looking the other way feeling either sympathy or hate for a situation you don't want to deal with. What about that America? America, when are you going to get yourself together? What do people have to do to let you know that there is something very wrong here, something that is going to kill us all. What about that America? Are we going to kill ourselves off because we are afraid to recognize one another? Think about it people.

Jose Tolson

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

BOARD OF EDITORS

EDITOR IN CHIEF James E. Gold
MANAGING EDITOR Nathan Gorenstein
BUSINESS MANAGER William L. Manburg
EXECUTIVE EDITOR Stephen G. Tripoli
NEWS EDITOR Donald J. Bishop
SPORTS EDITOR William E. Ballou
PHOTO EDITOR Gib Fullerton
FINE ARTS EDITOR Robert Nesti

ASST. MANAGING EDITOR Steve Fine
ADVERTISING MANAGER Jeanne Bauge
ASST. PHOTO EDITOR Alan Chapman
ASST. SPORTS EDITOR Roy Lyons

TODAY'S STAFF

ISSUE EDITOR Tom Borkowski
EDITORIAL Steve Tripoli
SPORTS Bill Ballou
DARKROOM Alan Chapman, Pete Manera
AD LAYOUT Bill Manburg

Undergraduate newspaper of the University of Massachusetts. The Staff is responsible for its content and no faculty members or administrators read it for accuracy or approval prior to publication.

Unsigned editorials represent the view of this paper. They do not necessarily reflect the views of the faculty, administration, or student body as a whole. Signed editorials, columns, reviews, cartoons, and letters represent the personal views of the authors.

The Collegian subscribes to the Associated Press and the Liberation News Service. Publication of their material does not constitute endorsement.

No Courses Left

According to a revised schedule of courses dated January 9th of this year somewhere in the vicinity of 90% of the courses being offered for the Spring semester are either filled, oversubscribed, or have been dropped completely.

This is an appalling state of affairs. Never have so many courses been unavailable to students this early in the semester. Many students were dropped from one or more of the courses that they signed up for and will have a very hard time picking up anything new the way things are now.

Why does this problem exist? Wasn't the University prepared for the amount of students that came to school? We should hope they'd be aware of how many students there are here. Were they hoping that three or four thousand of us wouldn't show up? And why were so many second semester seniors dropped from courses this, their last chance to take them?

Explanations are in order, but even more important for right now is some ACTION in Whitmore. Every day that goes by will foul things up even more for students in a mess now. This is the time when the complexion of the semester is shaped by each individual student to her or his wants and needs. The situation must be rectified without further delay.

'REMEMBER THE GOOD OL' DAYS WHEN YOU ONLY HAD TO KEEP SILENT IN LIBRARIES AND HOSPITAL ZONES?'

Don Glickstein

Improving The Media

They were all created or sustained by the media: Janis Joplin, Bobby and Jack Kennedy, Jimmy Hendrix, Martin Luther King, George Reeves. Their deaths wounded the unconscious of young people throughout the country.

They were all created or sustained by the media: Davy Crockett, Howdy Doody, Mickey Mouse, Ed Sullivan, That Was the Week That Was, Route 66, The Avengers, Perry Mason. Their cancellations also wounded the unconscious of American youth, perhaps even more than the physical deaths of real people.

Transience, to use Alvin Toffler's word, is an integral component of the broadcast industry.

We don't know how to measure the hurt a child has when his favorite television program is cancelled. We do know, from our own feelings and from reading letters to newspaper television critics, that adults are frustrated and feel the impotence of futility against a network's decision. For the television generation—those born after the late Forties—there is no model for growing old, except abandoned grandparents, assassinations, and cancellations; it is evident to them that they themselves will die young, and that Dylan and the Beatles will never turn grey.

We can only guess the effect of the media as messages, we're a little better at judging the media's contents.

The Civil Rights bills of the Sixties were largely results of Bull Connor's nationwide television appearances. "All in The Family" has created a running debate as to its merits. Kids are learning from "Sesame Street", so much so, that some 1st grade teachers have had difficulty in adjusting their curricula to the new generation.

In every medium, content is significant. Unfortunately, educators have neglected to teach the public about the nuances of professional communication.

Nat Hentoff, writing last year in the Village Voice, angrily observed that the New York Times used value-laden terms . . . "enemy" . . . "Communist" . . . when writing about the Vietnamese.

Aside from the legal implications—that we are not officially at war and thus, have no enemies—the Times, along with the major networks and news services, distort the events by dehumanizing "the other side" and/or "Hanoi", by confusing governments with citizens to create a simplistic polarization, and by using terms, namely "Communist", that have negative emotional connotations for many Americans. It was Lyndon Johnson who said that he was an American first and then a Democrat. Most likely, General Giap feels the same way about his country and political party.

Over a 20-year period, this type of repetitive conditioning shapes the news that is reported.

The news media's dependence on official sources, reporters' use of biased adjectives, lack of expertise in technical fields like education, the military, and Federal jargon, and time deadlines all contribute to the creation, rather than the reporting, of news.

Incredibly, the media most capable of in-depth analysis, books and scholarly magazines, seem to be losing influence. The days when Uncle Tom's Cabin caused the Civil War are over. The Pentagon Papers, the Kerner Commission Report, and Halberstam's The Best and the Brightest cannot compete with the instant media of newspapers, radio, television, and the news weeklies. Movies of "Hanoi Jane" evoke more emotion than Howard Zinn's Vietnam writings.

Only when the books receive instant media publicity do people take note. Jensen, writing about racial inferiority in the Harvard Educational Review, became a center of furor only when Time and Newsweek reported it. Community groups were mostly unaware of new trends in public housing until The Death and Life of Great American Cities and Defensible Space got their day in the instant media.

The trend which may counteract the subtle bias of commercial instant media is accessibility.

There is scarcely an area in the country which cannot support a radio talk show. Although many of the listener-talkers reflect the news created by commercial media, for the first time, opposing views have access to radio. This was illustrated most recently by Senator McGovern's tape recording of the veteran who called into Boston's "Jerry Williams Show".

In television, Cable-TV, editorial rebuttals and community-sponsored shows indicate a growing accessibility.

Even with harassment by law enforcement groups, the "unrecognized" press—college papers, the under ground, and new community papers—are also burgeoning.

Despite efforts of the Nixon people to undermine the 1st Amendment, the fact that citizens are studying the media as media is healthy. It can lead to an awareness of professional communication's effect on events and ultimately, to the media's improvement.

Don Glickstein is an MDC Editorial Columnist

Art Buchwald

"Fire Thyself"

WASHINGTON—President Nixon has vowed to cut the bureaucracy in Washington. This is a noble endeavor which every other President in the history of this nation attempted—and failed.

Now comes a plan devised by a friend, John Rogers of Alexandria, Va. It is worth serious consideration and I don't think President Nixon's super-Cabinet should reject it out of hand.

The Rogers Plan is to make bureaucracy reduction an incentive for government employees rather than a punishment. Anyone who can figure out how to do away with his own job gets to retire at full pay for the rest of his life.

As administrator who can figure out a way to abolish his entire agency would not only receive his own salary for the rest of his life but would get a bonus of 10% of the agency's budget for the next five years.

"I don't understand where the financial saving would be," I said to Rogers in a bar where he laid out the idea.

"Salaries are only a small part of the cost of a bureaucracy," he said. "The big savings would come from shutting down offices, parking lots, electricity, heat and saving money on file cabinets, typewriters, Xerox machines and paper clips. Eliminate the job, pay the man his full salary and you'll still save 90% of the cost of running the government."

"It sounds good on paper, Rogers, but a lot of bureaucrats like their work. If you retire them at full salary, they'll go nuts."

"They will not be prohibited from working in the private sector. Private enterprise needs as many bureaucrats as the government.

"They could work for AT&T, American Express, Sears & Roebuck or the insurance company of their choice."

"That's true," I agreed. "As long as they can shuffle paper I guess they don't care whom they shuffle it for."

"The important thing," Rogers said, "is that we make it a challenge for bureaucrats to do away with their own jobs.

They have to come up with good, solid reasons why they're expendable. We would set up a review board to go over each case. If a man can't justify a reason for firing himself, he will be sent back to his department.

"In spite of what people think, bureaucrats like a challenge, and what could be more challenging than coming up with a reason why your job isn't necessary to the running of the government."

"But there are some bureaucrats who might never think of a good reason."

"That's why we offer bonuses to their administrators. If the administrator can conceive of a reason why his department should be abolished, then the bureaucrat will be automatically fired though he, too, will receive his full pay."

"That makes sense; it could be a team effort."

"Exactly," Rogers continued. "Agencies would be competing with each other to see how fast they could close themselves down. In six months, 80% of all government employees will be on retirement at no financial loss to themselves."

"But can we run the government with only 20% of the labor force?"

"No sweat," said Rogers. "Essential services can be maintained by a skeleton task force of government employees who couldn't come up with any good reasons why their jobs should be eliminated. If they're too dumb not to figure out how to take advantage of the reduction incentive plan, then they can keep working until they do."

"It's an idea whose time has come," I said.

"All we need is to get the President to fund a new agency to get the plan under way," Rogers said.

"But that means hiring more bureaucrats," I protested.

"That's the government's problem—not mine."

Copyright 1973, Los Angeles Times

'. . . SO, IF YOU WANT TO KEEP YOUR CHICKEN LICENSES, YOU'D BETTER KEEP YOUR CHICKEN MOUTHS SHUT!'

Letters To The Editor

Letter To President Nixon

Dear President Nixon:

Although the destructive bombing of North Vietnam with its widespread terrorizing of the civilian population has been curtailed somewhat, I feel compelled to express to you directly my personal reaction to this unprincipled act of vindictive savagery on your part. In doing so I intend to reflect appropriate respect for your Office, but I find this very difficult in the light of my very deep feelings of horror, disgust, and guilt for your action.

Our entire involvement in the internal affairs of this small poorly-developed nation has been a tragic mistake and a national disgrace, but some episodes stand out more boldly than others in the profile of violence. My-Lai can never be excused; it can only be understood as the reaction of frightened young men who have been taught that bullets are a means of resolving frustration and anger. The invasion of Cambodia can never be excused; it can only be understood as the reaction of men who have been taught that towns may have to be destroyed to be saved, that civilians who don't help may have to be eliminated as possible enemies. The mining of Haiphong and renewed bombing which accompanied talks of peace were acts of infuriating arrogance which dropped our nation to new depths of international disgrace and internal impotence. But these were not enough.

The most recent escalation of bombing has surpassed all other episodes of national folly and viciousness. At no time could it have been justified. Coming as it did, however, as an interlude in negotiations for a cease fire which allegedly was "close at hand", it was totally inappropriate—even in response to the alleged provocation of changing cease fire demands. It can be understood only as the irresponsibly vengeful reaction to frustration of a petulant madman.

The consequences for the Vietnamese people are tragic, but they have at least gained international sympathy and support. The consequences for us are even more tragic, since we have fallen to a new low in self-respect and gained a new measure of shame before the world. To make matters much worse, you are responsible for a restriction of news which is both ominous and disgraceful. In spite of this dim-out of news, however, we have enough information to realize that we stand charged before the civilized nations of the world as irresponsible vicious bullies. We frown righteously and pass judgment upon the international war crimes of others but are unable to see that we are responsible for equally grave acts of inhumanity. We dare not set ourselves up to judgment in turn by the tribunals of civilized nations.

Mr. President, I am confident that I speak with many others in calling upon you to put an immediate end to our mindless vindictive acts of violence in Vietnam. Every day of continued aggression is a day of added neglect of the real needs of our people. Every day postpones the months and years of national atonement and regeneration of spiritual integrity which lie between us and self-respect.

Furthermore, I join others in calling upon our Congress to shut off funds for this disgusting war immediately. Finally, if you still cannot be persuaded or restrained, Mr. President, I urge prompt measures to have you impeached, as you become the one who has done more than any other president to destroy the ideals and tarnish the image of this country both at home and abroad.

Robert W. Gage

For Out Of Staters

To The Editor:

Chapter 90, section 3 of the Massachusetts General Laws and Article VII section 7 of the University Motor Vehicle Regulations clearly require students who own or operate motor vehicles registered in other states to register for a special Massachusetts sticker at the Amherst or University police stations. This requirement is designed to assure that the car has the minimum insurance required of all out of state cars operated in Massachusetts. The fine for failure to register is up to $50. In mid- January about 20 students were cited for this offense.

There is no charge for this registration and it takes very little time. If you have a motor vehicle which is registered in a state other than Massachusetts, please be sure that you have the required student sticker. This requirement only applies to students (who have the right not to register in Massachusetts) and not to professors, staff or others.

Richard M. Howland
Attorney for Students

Action At Harvard

To The Editor:

A group of Third World faculty and students, primarily from the Administrative Careers Program (ACP) have seen the necessity of formally coming together periodically, in an organization which would address itself to common interests and problems that we share during our residency at the Ed. School. Our actions have culminated in the formation of the Third World "ACP" Organization.

The issues raised by the Third World Student Alliance in the School of Education at the University of Mass. (Amherst) have prompted us to publicly express our concern with HGSE policies and practices that may be similar to those protested by the Third World Alliance (e.g. student admissions, faculty recruitment and future program direction—all as they relate to Third World people). We support the actions of our U. Mass. brothers and sisters, are equally aroused and intend to engage ourselves in the struggle around these issues. We see the inclusion of four Third World people on the Dean's Task Force on Restructuring of Programs in Social Policy and Educational Planning and Administration as a beginning step in avoiding the type of confrontation which occurred at the U. Mass. campus and hope that this model will be employed for other future concerns that we share.

The Third World "ACP" Student Organization,
Harvard University

Letters To The Editor

As in previous years the MDC will continue to print letters to the editor. The only requirements are that they be typed at sixty spaces, double-spaced and no longer than two pages in length. All letters must be signed and the author's address and telephone number must be included. Letters will be accepted from organizations, but a name and a telephone number must be on them. Please note this change in policy. No letter will be published without this information. Also, no letters will be printed without a signature.

All letters are subject to editing either for content or space according to the judgement of the editors. Also, due to space limitations, we do not guarantee that all letters will be printed.

Editorial Points

Looking back at the Super Bowl it becomes obvious that Richard Nixon and Bob Griese have a lot in common. Both like to throw the bomb, and both have a War-field to throw it to.

•••

Which leads us to believe that the Vietnamese probably consider the U.S. one of the most explosive teams they've ever seen.

•••

With the amount of courses oversubscribed at this point it's almost certain that no one in Whitmore will be winning an OSCAR for their early semester performance.

•••

One wonders what would have happened if Joe Frazier had allowed Muhammad Ali to be his opponent last night instead of George Foreman. It probably wouldn't have been too pretty.

•••

And finally, a message to all you ski freaks out there. Nyah-nyah.

Thanks, Health Services

To the Editor:

Once again our student fees are misspent. YAHOO is an abomination. The latest issue is a glaring example of journalistic incompetence. It is humorless; it is pointless; it is tasteless; it is boring; it is useless. If we did not have to pay for it, we could ignore it. We recognize one useful suggestion on page 11: "Save this issue for valuable toilet paper." Students have limited financial resources. We cannot continue to pay for such embarassing and elaborate pap.

Jill Dardig
John LeBaron
Allison Rossett

Some Flak For YAHOO

To the Editor:

Students get ripped off by the University for so many things--the Athletic fee, the Campus Center, atrocious pieces in Munchies--that it is indeed a pleasure to come across a department which does not blow our money.

I would like to publicly thank the Infirmary and Dr. McBride for their kind and compassionate help with a recent problem I had.

If the Health Services were like most University departments, UMass would indeed be the reputed "city of alienation".

If all University departments were like the Health Services, UMass would be a community.

Don Glickstein

Think About It

To the Public:

As I sit here looking over what has taken place at the School of Education, I begin to wonder what does it all mean and where will it all end. From the beginning of my stay at the University, pressures have been applied from forces I could not see or understand. It is true that all students here are under pressure, but to be a Third World student places you in a position apart from others. To be different has always put us apart from the flow of America.

I would ask you, "Why should we as different from you, always have to struggle to acquire the rights that you take for granted?" It seems that from the beginning to the end is always a struggle. We have proven time and again that we, as a race and as a combined group, ARE! Our being resounds that WE ARE! We can no longer afford the luxury of waiting for any benevolent hand, save our own, to reach up and save us. WE ARE! from your ghettos we have come, from your slave ships we have come, from the beginning of time we have come to take for ourselves the freedom that all people hold dear.

I would ask at what point do you stop supporting directly or indirectly the racist oppressors, the murderers within your society? When Kent State went down a part of America died, you cried out in support of the murdered students, but what about JACKSON State where Third World students were shot in the back. What about that America? Now, Third World people are dying, Viet Nam is a password for cruelty, Southern University erupts and two more Blacks die, and you just sit there looking the other way feeling either sympathy or hate for a situation you don't want to deal with. What about that America? America, when are you going to get yourself together? What do people have to do to let you know that there is something very wrong here, something that is going to kill us all. What about that America? Are we going to kill ourselves off because we are afraid to recognize one another? Think about it people.

Jose Tolson

Pull Out And Save

Belchertown Center

1 Belch.Ctr.	2 Quabbin Apt.	3 Arcadia Apt.	4 Gulf Rd.	5 Mytlwr. Apt.	6 Rol. Gn. Apt.	7 Col.Vil. (2 stops)
7:18	7:21	7:26	7:30	7:33	7:35	7:38
8:23	8:26	8:31	8:35	8:38	8:40	8:43
9:28	9:31	9:36	9:40	9:43	9:45	9:48
8 No.East St.	9 No.Whit-ney St.	10 Amh.Ctr.	11 Stkb.Rd.	12 Morrill	13 Arnold	14 "6"Lot	15 Phys.Ptl.
7:42	7:43	7:46	7:49	7:50	7:51	7:54	7:55#
8:47	8:48	8:51	8:54	8:55	8:56	8:59	9:00#
9:52	9:53	9:56	9:59	10:00	10:01	10:04	10:05*

AM
PM

1 C.C.Circle	2 Cowles Lane	3 Town Hall	4 Univ.Park Dr.	5 No.East St.	6 Col.Vil. (2 stops)	7 Rol.Gn. Apt.	8 Mytlwr. Apt.
12:30	12:35	12:38	12:39	12:40	12:42	12:45	12:49
1:40---To Gar
4:05	4:10	4:13	4:14	4:15	4:17	4:20	4:24
5:05	5:10	5:13	5:14	5:15	5:17	5:20	5:24
9 Gulf Rd.	10 Arcadia Apt.	11 Quabbin Apt.	12 Belch.Ctr.	13 Quabbin Apt.	14 Arcadia Apt.	15 Gulf Rd	16 Mytlwr. Apt.
12:53	12:56	12:58	1:01	1:04	1:09	1:13	1:16*
4:28	4:31	4:33	4:36*
5:28	5:31	5:33	5:36*

* Express to Campus Center # Express (No Stops) to Belch. Ctr.

Belchertown Road

1 Rol.Gn. (2 Stops)	2 Ech.Hl.	3 Col.Vil. (2 Stops)	4 Univ.Pk.	5 Amh.Comns	6 Post Ofc.	7 Stkb.Rd.
7:27	7:29	7:31	7:33	7:35	7:40	7:42
8:10	8:13	8:17	8:19	8:21	8:26	8:28
8:29	8:32	8:36	8:38	8:40	8:45	8:47
9:15	9:18	9:22	9:24	9:26	9:31	9:33
9:34	9:37	9:41	9:43	9:45	9:50	9:52
10:20	10:23	10:27	10:29	10:31	10:36	10:38
10:39	10:42	10:46	10:48	10:50	10:55	10:57
11:25	11:28	11:32	11:34	11:36	11:41	11:43
11:37	11:40	11:44	11:46	11:48	11:53	11:55
8 Morrill	9 Arnold	10 SchEd	11 "6"Lot	12 Campus Cir	13 "6"Lot	14 SchEd
7:43	7:44	7:47	7:51	7:55	7:59	8:03
8:29	8:30*
8:48	8:49	8:52	8:56	9:00	9:04	9:08
9:34	9:35*
9:53	9:54	9:57	10:01	10:05	10:09	10:13
10:39	10:40*
10:58	10:59	11:02	11:06	11:10	11:14	11:18
11:44	11:45*
11:56	11:57	12:00	12:04	12:08	12:19	12:23
15 GRC	16 Hasb	17 FAC	18 Cowles La.	19 Amh.Comns.	20 Univ.Pk	21 Col. Vil. (2 Stops)
8:06	8:07	8:08	8:11	8:13	8:15	8:16
9:11	9:12	9:13	9:16	9:18	9:20	9:21
10:16	10:17	10:18	10:21	10:23	10:25	10:26
11:21	11:22	11:23	11:26	11:28	11:30	11:31
12:26	12:27	12:28	12:31	12:33	12:35	12:36
12:29	12:30	12:31	12:33	12:36	12:38	12:40--- To "PM" Scheule

* Express to Campus Center Circle

AM
PM

1 Rol.Gn. (2 Stops)	2 Ech.Hl.	3 Col.Vil. (2 Stops)	4 Univ.Pk.	5 Amh.Comns	6 PostOfc.	7 Stkb.Rd.
12:42	12:43	12:44	12:51	12:53	12:58	1:00
12:45#
1:47	1:50	1:54	1:56	1:58	2:03	2:05
1:50#
2:52	2:55	2:59	3:01	3:03	3:08	3:10
2:55#
3:57	4:00	4:04	4:06	4:08	4:13	4:15
4:00#
5:02	5:05	5:09	5:11	5:13	5:18	5:20
5:05#
6:07*
6:10*
8 Morrill	9 Arnold	10 SchEd	11 "6"Lot	12 CampusCir	13 "6"Lot	14 SchEd
1:01	1:02	1:05	1:09	1:13	1:24	1:28
2:06	2:07	2:10---	2:14	2:18	2:29	2:33
3:11	3:12	3:15	3:19	3:23	3:34	3:38
4:16	4:17	4:20	4:24	4:28	4:39	4:43
5:21	5:22	5:25	5:29	5:33	5:44	5:48
15 GRC	16 Hasb	17 FAC	18 CowlesLa.	19 Amh.Comns	20 Univ.Pk	21 Col.Vil. (2 Stops)
1:31	1:32	1:33	1:36	1:38	1:40	1:41
1:34	1:35	1:36	1:39	1:41	1:43	1:45
2:36	2:37	2:38	2:41	2:43	2:45	2:46
2:39	2:40	2:41	2:44	2:46	2:48	2:49
3:41	3:42	3:43	3:46	3:48	3:50	3:51
3:44	3:45	3:46	3:49	3:51	3:53	3:54
4:46	4:47	4:48	4:51	4:53	4:55	4:56
4:49	4:50	4:51	4:54	4:46	4:58	4:59
5:51	5:52	5:53	5:56	5:58	6:00	6:01
5:54	5:55	5:56	5:59	6:01	6:03	6:04

* Express to Campus Center Circle
# Express to School of Ed.

So. Deerfield

1 So.Drfld.	2 Sgrlea&St.	3 Sunderland Center	4 Lantern Ct.Apts.	5 Squire Vill.	6 Plumtree Rd.	7 Twnhse. Apts.	8 No.Amh.	9 Puffton
7:21	7:23	7:25	7:27	7:28	7:31	7:35	7:37	7:39
8:21	8:28	8:30	8:32	8:33	8:36	8:40	8:42	8:44
9:26	9:33	9:35	9:37	9:38	9:41	9:45	9:47	9:49
12:41--- Express to Garage
4:31	4:35	4:37	4:39	4:40	4:43	4:47	4:49	4:51
5:31	5:35	5:37	5:39	5:40	5:43	5:47	5:49	5:51
6:31--- Express to Garage
10 No.Vil	11 GRC	12 Hasb.	13 FAC	14 SBA	15 Boyden	16 Campus Circle	17 Ctr.	18 Boyden	19 SBA	19 Stkb.Rd.
7:41	7:44	7:45	7:46	7:48	7:50	7:52		7:57	7:59	8:01
8:46	8:49	8:50	8:51	8:53	8:55	8:57		9:02	9:04	9:06
9:51	9:54	9:55	9:56	9:58	10:00	10:02		10:07	10:09	10:11
						12:12		12:17	12:19	12:21
						4:05		4:07	4:09	4:11
4:53	4:56	4:57	4:58	5:00	5:02	5:05		5:07	5:09	4:11
5:53	5:56	5:57	5:58	6:00	6:02	6:05		6:07	6:09
20 Merrill	21 Arnold	22 Crest View Apts.	23 No. Amh.	24 Twnhse. Apts.	25 Plumtree Rd.	26 Cliff Apts.	27 Sund. Ctr.	28 Sgrlea& St.
8:02	8:03	8:06	8:08	8:09	8:12	8:15	8:17	8:19
9:07	9:08	9:11	9:13---	9:14	9:17	9:20	9:22	9:24
10:12	10:13	10:16	10:18	10:19	10:22	10:25	10:27	10:29*
12:22	12:23	12:26	12:28	12:29	12:32	12:35	12:37	12:39
4:12	4:13	4:16	4:18	4:19	4:22	4:25	4:27	4:29
5:12	5:13	5:16	5:18	5:19	5:22	5:25	5:37	5:29
6:12	6:13	6:16	6:18	6:19	6:22	6:25	6:27	6:29

* Express to Garage

Sunderland

1 King Phil-lip Apts.	2 Pioneer Apts.	3 Lantern CT.Apts.	4 Squire Vill.	5 Plumtree Rd.	6 Townhse Apts.	7 No.Amh.	8 Puffton	9 No.Vill.	10 GRC	11 Hasb.	12 FAC	13 SBA
7:22	7:23	7:25	7:26	7:29	7:33
8:11	8:12	8:14	8:15	8:18	8:22	8:24	8:26	8:30	8:33	8:34	8:35
8:22	8:28	8:30	8:31	8:34	8:38	8:40	8:42	8:44	8:47	8:48	8:49	8:51
9:15	9:16	9:18	9:19	9:22	9:26	9:28	9:30	9:34	9:37	9:38	9:39
9:27	9:33	9:35	9:36	9:39	9:43	9:45	9:47	9:49	9:52	9:53	9:54	9:56
10:21	10:22	10:24	10:25	10:28	10:32	10:34	10:36	10:40	10:43	10:44	10:45
10:32	10:38	10:40	10:41	10:44	10:48	10:50	10:52	10:54	10:57	10:58	10:59	11:01
11:26	11:27	11:29	11:30	11:33	11:37	11:39	11:41	11:45	11:48	11:49	11:50
11:37	11:43	11:45	11:46	11:49	11:53	11:55	11:57	11:59	12:02	12:03	12:04	12:06
14 Boyden	15 Campus Ctr. Circle	16 Boyden	17 SBA	18 StkbRd	19 Merrill	20 Arnold	21 Crest View Apts.	22 No.Amh.	23 Townhse Apts.	24 Plumtree Rd.	25 Cliffside Apts.	26 Sunderland Ctr.
7:48	7:50	8:00	8:02	8:04	8:05	8:06	8:09	8:11	8:12	8:15	8:18	8:20
8:53	8:55	9:05	9:07	9:09	9:10	9:11	9:14	9:16	9:17	9:20	9:23	9:25
9:58	10:00	10:10	10:12	10:14	10:15	10:16	10:19	10:21	10:22	10:25	10:28	10:30
11:03	11:05	11:15	11:17	11:19	11:20	11:21	11:24	11:26	11:27	11:30	11:33	11:35
12:08	12:10	12:20	12:22	12:24	12:25	12:26	12:29	12:31	12:32	12:35	12:38	12:40

AM
PM

1 King Phil-lip Apts.	2 Pioneer Apts.	3 Lantern Ct.Apts	4 Squire Vill.	5 Plumtree Rd.	6 Townhse Apts.	7 No.Amh.	8 Puffton Vill.	9 No. Vill.	10 GRC	11 Hasb	12 FAC	13 SBA
12:42	12:48	12:50	12:51	12:54	12:58	1:00	1:02	1:04	1:07	1:08	1:09	1:11
12:59	1:00*
1:47	1:53	1:55	1:56	1:59	2:03	2:05	2:07	2:09	2:12	2:13	2:14	2:16
2:04	2:05*
2:52	2:58	3:00	3:01	3:04	3:08	3:10	3:12	3:14	3:17	3:18	3:19	3:21
3:09	3:10*
3:57	4:03	4:05	4:06	4:09	4:13	4:15	4:17	4:19	4:22	4:23	4:24	4:26
4:14	4:15*
5:02	5:08	5:10	5:11	5:14	5:18	5:20	5:22	5:24	5:27	5:28	5:29	5:31
5:19	5:20*
6:07	6:10---Express to Campus Center Circle
14 Boyden	15 Campus Ctr. Circle	16 Boyden	17 SBA	18 StkbRd	19 Merrill	20 Arnold	21 Crest View Apts.	22 No.Amh.	23 Townhse Apts.	24 Plumtree Rd.	25 Cliffside Apts.	26 Sunderland Ctr.
	12:35	12:37	12:39	12:41	12:42	12:43	12:45	12:48	12:49	12:52	12:55	12:57
1:13	1:15	1:25	1:27	1:29	1:30	1:31	1:34	1:36	1:37	1:40	1:43	1:45
	1:40	1:42	1:44	1:46	1:47	1:48	1:50	1:53	1:54	1:57	2:00	2:02
2:18	2:20	2:30	2:32	2:34	2:35	2:36	2:39	2:41	2:42	2:45	2:48	2:50
	2:45	2:47	2:49	2:51	2:52	2:53	2:55	2:58	2:59	3:02	3:05	3:07
3:23	3:25	3:35	3:37	3:39	3:40	3:41	3:44	3:46	3:47	3:50	3:53	3:55
	3:50	3:52	3:54	3:56	3:07	3:58	4:00	4:03	4:04	4:07	4:10	4:12
4:28	4:30	4:40	4:42	4:44	4:45	4:46	4:49	4:51	4:52	4:55	4:58	5:00
	4:55	4:57	4:59	5:01	5:02	5:03	5:05	5:08	5:09	5:12	5:15	5:17
5:33	5:35	5:45	5:47	5:49	5:50	5:51	5:54	5:56	5:57	6:00	6:03	6:05

* Express to School of Ed.

Construction of "The Big Ditch" continues, with traffic being rerouted near parking lots 14 and 6 L, as indicated on the map. This phase of construction for the new power plant at Tillson Farm is expected to last through the month.

Non-Visual Art Exhibit To Open

"Wanted: A Pair of Loving Hands"; a tactile art exhibit, will open tomorrow at 1 p.m., at the UMass Student Union Art Gallery.

The exhibit is subtitled "An Exploration of Non-Visual Perception", and is the first show of its kind in the area. It is a tactile gallery meant to be "seen" with the hands and not with the eyes. Its creator, D. Abbott Chrisman of Northampton, says, "The purpose of a tactile gallery is to rob the participants of their vision to make them realize that they rely on their eyes too much, and have become partially blind with their hands. From childhood, we are taught not to touch things. In museums, it is against the rules to touch. I want to make people break that rule; I want to make them reach out and feel things. I have created a place where everything can be touched, and where everything is interesting to touch."

Chrisman spent a month selecting and gathering objects for the exhibit. The participants will enter the gallery blindfolded and come into contact with the objects by exploring the area. "The gallery demands an active role on the part of the participant," says Chrisman. "In this way it is unsimilar to such shows as the Liquid Theater of New York, where the participant was really a subject: he was steered into contact with the objects by the show's staff. My gallery demands participation. Someone who does not move around and reach for things will only stay, blindfolded, in one place. He will become an object to the other people in the gallery."

D. Abbott Chrisman was born in Northampton. He has spent the last two years as a directing major at Boston University's Division of Theater, and as stage-manager of the Ravencroft Summer Theater, Rindge, N. H. He is on student leave from Boston University, and is a special student at UMass.

The project is supported by a grant from the University of Massachusetts Fine Arts Council.

The exhibit is at the UMass Student Union Art Gallery, Jan. 25-Feb. 9. Weekdays 1-5 and 7-10 p.m.; Saturdays 1-5 p.m. Closed Sundays. Admission is free to the public. This exhibit is recommended for children.

Civil Service Job Applications Out

Now that the second semester has gotten underway, and the entire University has settled down for the annual winter hibernation, many people will have hours to daydream about their summer vacations and summer jobs. This could be the summer for an interesting position with the civil service.

Many of these jobs include work with the postal service as clerks and carriers, a chance to be outside during the day as well as receiving an attractive salary. There are career-related sub-professional positions which correlate with educational background. There are clerical positions where your abilities as a typist, stenographer or office machine operator is tested. The Civil Service has a limited number of jobs and the demand for them is great. To become eligible for these positions, most employees will have to take the Summer Employment Examination scheduled for March 10. Before anyone can take this examination, they must pick up an application from OUTREACH or the Career Planning Office at Whitmore and have it postmarked by January 26.

There are however, two other ways in which you might become eligible for consideration. If you had taken the examination for 1972 eligibility, you only have to update your eligibility for 1973. The second way to meet the requirements is to have completed two years of college and maintained a cumulative grade-point average of 3.5 or above at the time of application. Even though this makes you exempt from the examination, formal application must be made to the Civil Service and sent to them by March 3, 1973. These application forms may also be obtained at OUTREACH or Career Planning.

There are also jobs in other Civil Service classifications which do not require the examination. These positions include those of forest ranger, park technician recreational aid, surveying aid, public works positions, as well as work in many Veteran's Administration hospitals. These jobs relate directly to your education or previous work experience. If you are interested in any of these jobs you should apply directly to the office concerned.

If you have any further questions about applications, the examination or other job possibilities with the Civil Service, please feel free to drop in to the OUTREACH Office or call 545-2021.

Textbook Annex Store Hours

Spring Semester

Wednesday	January 24	9:00 5:00
Thursday	January 25	9:00 9:00
Friday	January 26	9:00 9:00
Saturday	January 27	9:00 5:00
Monday	January 29	9:00 9:00
Tuesday	January 30	9:00 9:00
Wednesday, January 31 to Tuesday, February 6		9:00 5:30
Remainder of the semester, weekdays		8:30 4:30
Saturdays (Feb. 3, 10, 17)		10:00 2:00

DuBois Center Offering 'Cultural Series'

The W.E.B. DuBois Center in Springfield, the community contingent of the W.E.B. DuBois Department of Afro-American Studies at UMass, is offering its "Cultural Series", open to the general public. The series will be held Tuesday and Thursday evening at 7:00 p.m. at the W.E.B. DuBois Center, located at 80 Hancock Street in Springfield. For further information, please call 413-737-3515 or 413-538-2507.

Listed below are the programs for January:

THE BLACK WOMAN

JANUARY
16, Tuesday	"Revolution in the Kitchen"	ROCHELLE CHANDLER, ANN SAUNDERS
18, Thursday	"The Woman in the Nation of Islam"	SPEAKER FROM MUHAMMAD'S MOSQUE #13, SPRINGFIELD
23, Tuesday	"Caldonia and Sexism"	WILESSE COMISSIONG
	"The African Woman in Tanzania and South Africa"	NANA MBELLE
25, Thursday	"The Black Woman in the Caribbean"	ESLA LYNCH
	"La Chicana! The Mexican Woman"	SYLVIA GONZALEZ
30, Tuesday	"The Revolutionary Cuban Woman"	JOHNETTA COLE, ESTHER SOTOLONGO

phases restaurant
bernardston, massachusetts
tel. (413) 648-9161

"When you are sincerely pleased, you are nourished."
(Ralph Waldo Emerson)

dinner-cocktails
from 5:30 p.m. weekdays, from 4:00 p.m. on Sundays, closed Mondays

reached from interstate 91, exit 28, and route 10, via bald mountain road, and huckle hill road

Infirmary (In An Emergency) [54] 5-2571

An Alternative Learning Experience

The modular credit course — Public Alternative Schools — is continued this spring. Over thirty separate experiences to choose from plus a number of optional credit-earning opportunities. Open to graduates and undergraduates. Negotiate 30-1200 credits. See Phil DeTurk, Roy Nichols, Newt Clark, Berkshire House, Room 219, or call 545-0941 for information. Most classes Thurs., 7:30 p.m., 204 SBA.

THE UNION NEWS & SWEET SHOP

PRESENTS

ED "CANDY MAN" VADAS

SINGING AND PLAYING YOUR REQUEST

From 10 am to 2 pm — Thursday & Friday
January 25 & 26

Seminars On Bargaining Offered To Corporate Heads

"If you have non-unionized operations...can you maintain them? The drive towards unionization and organization is becoming stronger as the expectations of American workers increases. The policies and actions of your management may be helping to foster employee responsiveness to union inducements...."

--From an Executive Enterprises, Inc. promotional pamphlet

NEW YORK (LNS) — Executives in several cities throughout the country were treated to a series of informative conferences on "How to Maintain Non-Union Status" and "How to Win at the Bargaining Table." Sponsored by Executive Enterprises, Inc. of New York City, the conferences were held in New York, Dallas, Chicago, Atlanta and Los Angeles throughout the fall of 1972.

Each meeting--there were two per seminar--cost $250 including lunches and all meeting materials, so there were no dilletantes in the crowd. And the accomodations were nothing to sneeze at--New York City's Sheraton Hotel, the Fairmont Hotel in Dallas, and the Marriott Motor Hotel in Atlanta, for instance.

Personnel directors and company negotiators learned the fine art of "understanding and taking full advantage of your legal rights and obligations," and "Recognizing 'early warning' signs of employee unrest."

And "if you must bargain with unions...," Executive Enterprises says, "your ability to draft clauses with consistency and clarity as well as to understand the use of ambiguities can be the difference between a contract you can live with or one you'll live to regret."

Seminar leaders include a "labor lawyer and an industrial relations executive, each of whom," Executive assures, "have had many years of experience in collective bargaining and have presented hundreds of cases in arbitration."

Soap Substances Dangerous

NEW YORK (LNS)–The Consumer's Institute for Food Research has revealed that many soap companies that were using hexachlorophene prior to a recent Food and Drug Administration (FDA) ban on the chemical are planning to replace it with other potentially dangerous "anti-bacterial agents". (Hexachlorophene was banned after experiments with rats raised the fear that long term exposure to the chemical would cause brain damage and retardation in babies.)

The Institute reports that a number of soap companies are considering the use of a chemical called "TBS". According to Consumer's Institute, numerous studies have found that "TBS" is a possible–if not probable–cause of skin rashes and increased sensitivity to light in fair skinned people (Fair skin is more sensitive to light to begin with.) "TBS" has already been banned in Denmark because of these suspected damages.

Lifebouy, Zest, and Phase III, are three soap companies considering using "TBS".

Another chemical called "TCC" is also being considered by some soap companies--particularly Dial and Safeguard--as a replacement for hexachlorophene. Tests have shown that under certain conditions, "TCC" appears to have caused outbreaks of a fatal blood disease among infants in hospitals.

The Institute suggests that people check their soap wrappers for "TBS" and "TCC" and urges that people buy soaps that do not carry potentially dangerous "anti-bacterial" agents.

FTC Orders Claims Justified

WASHINGTON, D.C. (LNS) — "When a cold with a fever knocks you out" do you know which of the more than 100,000 patent medicines to turn to for the fastest relief? Retail sales of "over the counter" non-prescription drugs has surpassed $1 billion yearly, the the effectiveness of many of them has never been adequately established.

In one of its periodic efforts to show that it is on its toes, the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) recently ordered 16 makers of popular cold remedies to reveal what in their products justifies their assertions.

The companies' substantiations, submitted in mid-January, filled sixteen volumes. The Bristol-Meyers Company, challenged to explain how its Silence Is Golden cough syrup works, replied at length on the soothing properties of honey, one of its major ingredients, but had to admit that lemon only provided a better flavor.

The same company also makes Congesprin, a children's cold remedy. On this drug, Bristol-Meyers was forced to concede that "it's not the drug in question that makes it a children's aspirin, but the size of the dose."

Smith, Kline and French Laboratories, manufacturer of Contac cold capsules, asserts in its advertising that "the summer cold is a different kind of animal." But when the basis for this claim was questioned, the company revealed that the statement was based on its own study which led them to conclude that "two thirds of the population perceive a difference between summer and winter colds—the summer cold appeared to be less serious but more enervating and longer in duration than a winter cold."

Dristan tablets are advertised as superior to other cold capsules because they have a "fever reducer" that other pills lack. The Dristan manufacturer revealed in its report that this mysterious ingredient: so strongly recommended for the "cold with a fever" is nothing more exotic than plain aspirin.

Most of the companies offered medical tests and surveys of scores of drug users as proof of their claims, but Hoffman-LaRoche, Inc., manufacturer of Romilar III, a cough medicine, stuck to more practical considerations in justifying its statement that its product was the "latest thing."

The company declared that their assertion was correct because when the advertisement first appeared in 1971, Romilar "was the most current entry into the national market for the relief of chest cold symptoms."

If the FTC finds that the data submitted by the Companies fails to support their advertising, the agency may decide to force changes in the advertising. But the results of past FTC campaigns against false drug advertising is not encouraging.

In the late 1950s, for instance, the FTC launched an investigation of complaints against the advertising of pain relievers like aspirin and aspirin substitutes. Finally in 1961 the Commission filed specific complaints against the ads for several products including Excedrin. But about a year later that method was evaluated as too piecemeal and the FTC returned to a general investigation of pain relievers. In 1965 the agency withdrew the complaint against Excedrin altogether. In 1967, the FTC opened new proceedings to establish rules governing the advertising of all pain relievers.

These rules have never been issued. Instead, the FTC has returned to its pre-1961 policy of submitting specific complaints, and a recent Consumer Reports article took three pages to summarize these new results.

That same kind of procrastination may result in claims, in 1984, that Romilar III, is still the "latest thing."

ERIC'S
GIANT SUBS
(formerly Gourmet Shop)
featuring
"Meal Size Subs"
Rte. 9, Amherst
253-9521

DISTRIBUTOR OF KAPPY'S PRODUCTS

KING STREET LIQUORS KING STREET LIQUORS KING STREET LIQUORS

Kappy's Blended Scotch Whiskey
100% IMPORTED FROM SCOTLAND 86 PROOF
$4.49 FIFTH $10.99 1/2 GAL.

Mr. Boston Flavored Brandy
COFFEE - BLACK BERRY 70 PROOF
$4.49 FIFTH $5.39 QUART

KING STREET LIQUORS KING STREET LIQUORS KING STREET LIQUORS

Corby's Blended Whiskey
31.6% STRAIGHT WHISKEY 68.4% G.N.S.
80 Proof
$4.79 QUART $8.99 1/2 GAL.

Schenley O.F.C. 86.8 Proof
100% IMPORTED CANADIAN WHISKEY
$5.99 FIFTH $13.99 1/2 GAL.

KING STREET LIQUORS KING STREET LIQUORS KING STREET LIQUORS

Marquisat Red-White Burgundy
BEAUJOLAIS VILLAGES — BEAUJOLAIS BLANC
IMPORTED FROM FRANCE 13% ALC. BY VOL.
$3.25 FIFTH $35.00 CASE

Kreisler German Wines
ZELLER SCHWARTZKATZ - MAY WINE
MOSELBLUM CHEN - NIERSTIEINER
10% ALC. BY VOL.
$1.35 FIFTH $15.75 CASE

KING STREET LIQUORS KING STREET LIQUORS KING STREET LIQUORS

BEER
Ruppert
Narragansett
Ballantine
Rheingold
16 Oz. Ret. Bottles
$3.99 CONTENTS

Millers 12 oz. cans $4.99 Case
Pabst 12 oz. cans $4.49 Case
Ruppert 12 oz. N.R. $4.49 Case
Narragansett 12 oz. cans $4.39 Case

KING STREET LIQUORS
338 King Street Northampton, Mass.

Study Reveals $2.3 Million In Ads By Weapons Mfg.

WASHINGTON, D.C. (LNS)–In case they get too fed up with the extent of cost over-runs on their weapons contracts, Defense Department officials can start leafing through the pages of their favorite military trade journals to study the latest offerings.

A recent report by the Council on Economic Priorities reveals that the top 25 weapons advertisers spent $2.3 million on ads in seven trade magazines in 1971 and 1972.

Although this is a small sum compared to consumer product and campaigns, the report points out that the ads are directed at a small, influential audience. "By advertising in journals which are read by Pentagon officials and members of Congress, major contractors do attempt, using Madison Ave. methods, to influence military funding decisions and contractors choice selections."

Weapons manufacturers use the same techniques that have been so successful in getting Americans to buy all sorts of new consumer products: catchy slogans, economy claims, the free giveaway (fondly reminiscent of the cereal boxtop offer), and "they have it, so you should have it too" argument.

The Norden Company trumpeted the features of its Rapier anti-aircraft system across a full page: "Cost effective hardware...The low altitude air defense that's right on for the modern army.."

A Xerox subsidiary, which manufactures nighttime illumination devices, quoted Mao Tse-tung in its ad; it also offered readers a free copy of "Mao Tse-tung on Guerrilla Warfare" on written request.

The British firm, Hawker-Siddeley insisted that prospective customers "ought to take a closer look" at its "Harrier" jet fighter because the Royal Air Force and the U.S. Marine Corps had.

And, Bell Helicopter claimed that its King Cobra (used in Vietnam) is "the most maneuverable, most powerful, most surviveable tank killer flying! All that and the lowest price tag too."

But then the "lowest price tag" isn't a particularly novel claim.

Thieu Plans Mass Arrests

NEW YORK (LNS) — Recent reports coming out of Saigon have documented a detailed plan to "neutralize" the political opposition to the government of Nguyen Van Thieu. The plan, detailed in a dispatch by George McArthur to the New York Post at the beginning of January, includes arrangements for "channeling population movements, literally barricading some hamlets and villages" as well as plans for mass arrests and outright executions.

It is reported that South Vietnamese police have been under great pressure to gather names of Thieu's possible political opponents so that they can be rounded up within 24 hours of a cease fire.

OLD WEIRD HAROLD'S
ROUTE 9 HADLEY
(NEXT TO WALTER'S)
OPEN: MON. - SAT. 10 a.m. - 8 p.m.
Tel. 586-3727

Largest Retail Distributor for "Male" Jeans in Massachusetts
$18.00 values NOW $5.00
also New West. Denim Shirts $5.50

★ New West Style Boots 10.00 ★
★ Parkas & Snowmobile Suits 25.00 ★

Our Specialty Used Clothing
SNOWMOBILE SUITS ON SALE
Were $28.00 NOW $20.00
JEANS $2.50 FURS $15 - $25
FLANNEL SHIRTS $1.50
SWEATERS $4.00
LEATHERS $15.00
SUEDES $10.00
OVERALLS $4.50
P-COATS $12.00
DENIM JACKETS $4.50
NAVY 13-BUTTON PANTS $6.00
CORDUROY JACKETS $5.00

SOUTHWEST
GAMES ROOM NOW IN | SNACK BAR OPEN
LOBBY: OPEN DAILY | MON-THUR 7am-1:30am
9am-MIDNITE | FRI-SUN 7am-2am
THE HUB
MUNCHYS: WATCH FOR
MOVED UPSTAIRS | NEW FACILITES
OPEN DAILY 9am-10pm | GOOD THINGS!
GOOD VIBRATIONS

LAFAYETTE RADIO ELECTRONICS

We Welcome JANUARY

HURRY!
QUANTITIES LIMITED
All items subject to prior sale

Hours: Mon. — Sat. 9:30 — 5:30
Fri. Nite till 10:00

Sale Ends Sat. 1/27/73

JANUARY IS THE TIME OF THE YEAR FOR CLEARANCES AND WE'RE LOOKING TO MAKE ROOM FOR NEW SHIPMENTS OF STEREO EQUIPMENT AND THOUSANDS OF OTHER ITEMS. THE SHELVES MUST BE CLEARED OF DEMONSTRATORS, TRADE INS, DISCONTINUED MODELS. MANY ARE ONE OF A KIND, BUT ALL EXCEPT USED ARE FULLY GUARANTEED. SO IF YOU'RE LOOKING FOR A GREAT BUY IN STEREO COMPONENTS, TAPE RECORDERS, HEADPHONES, RECORD PLAYERS, ETC.

SPEAKER SYSTEMS

	REGULAR	SALE
Pioneer CS44 8" 2 Way System	$ 74.95	$ 59.00
Pioneer CSA-500 10" 3 Way System	159.95	109.00
A.R. 2Ax3 Way System	128.00	106.00
A.R.-3A 3 Way Deluxe System	250.00	207.00
Inter Audio-4000 "By Bose" 100 Watt 3 Way System	198.00	139.00
Inter Audio-Model 3000 "By Bose" 75 Watt 3 Way System	104.95	79.00
Fisher XP65 3 Way System	109.95	69.00
KLH Model 6 3 Way System	144.00	95.00
Lafayette Criterion 88 3 Way System	89.95	64.00
Lafayette ES-85 5 Way Electro-static System	69.95	49.00
Pioneer Model 100 2 Way System	99.95	86.00

STEREO RECEIVERS, TUNERS, AMPLIFIERS

	REGULAR	SALE
Fisher 601 4 Channel 200 Watt Receiver — 2 Only	$599.95	$299.00
Lafayette LR1500 150 Watt AM-FM Receiver	329.95	269.00
Fisher 202 100 Watt AM-FM Receiver	299.95	185.00
Fisher 301 140 Watt AM-FM Receiver	349.95	229.00
Lafayette LR100 50 Watt AM-FM Receiver	149.95	119.00
Fisher 401 150 Watt AM-FM Receiver, Remote Control	449.95	249.00
Kenwood 2120 50 Watt AM-FM Receiver	189.95	139.00
Sanyo DCK 3000K 4 Channel Receiver	249.95	199.00
Panasonic SA 5500 70 Watt AM-FM Receiver	249.95	219.00
Sanyo DCX 3300 K 4 Channel Receiver	349.95	275.00

TAPE RECORDERS AND DECKS

	REGULAR	SALE
Sony TC127 Cassette Tape Deck	$159.95	$129.00
Lloyds 8 Track Record Deck	114.95	89.00
AKAI-280DSS 4 Channel, 2 Channel Reverse Deck	649.95	499.00
AKAI-GX-365 Solenoid, 3 Head, 3 Motor, Reel to Reel Deck	649.95	549.00
Sony 650 Deluxe Reel to Reel Solenoid Deck	499.95	349.00
AKAI CR80DSS 4 Channel 8 Track, Record-Play Deck	249.95	219.00
AKAI-CS35D Cassette Deck	159.95	119.00
Sony TC160 Cassette Deck	219.95	159.00
Sony TC165 Reversing Cassette Deck	269.95	189.00
TEAC-A24 Cassette Deck	179.95	119.00
Lafayette RK520 Cassette Deck With 20 Watt Stereo Amplifier	159.95	119.00
Lafayette RK760A Cassette Deck	124.60	89.00
Sony CF610 Cassette Recorder With AM-FM Radio and Speakers	299.95	239.00
Sony 252D Reel to Reel Deck	159.95	129.00
Deluxe Cassette Deck	239.95	189.00
Fisher RC-80B Cassette-Dolby Deck	269.95	129.00
Craig 2621 Portable-Battery and Electric Cassette Recorder	41.95	31.00
Panasonic RF7490 AM-FM Cassette Recorder Stereo	149.95	109.00
Toyo CSH502 Cassette Stereo Recorder Player	99.95	49.50

RECORDING TAPE

	REGULAR	SALE
ACS Scotch—150-1800 Reels	$4.11	$1.99
ACS Memorex—C-60 Cassettes	1.99	1.59
ACS Memorex—C-90 Cassettes	2.99	1.99
ACS Memorex—C-120 Cassettes	3.99	2.99
ACS Sony—C-60 Cassettes	1.49	.99
ACS Sony—C-90 Cassettes	2.79	1.49

RADIO-PHONO-TAPE COMBINATIONS

	REGULAR	SALE
Panasonic RS257 AM-FM Phono System with Cassette Recorder	$329.95	$239.00
Panasonic RE7800 8 Track Player With AM-FM Radio	179.95	149.00
Panasonic SE990 AM-FM Phono With Cassette Recorder	199.95	175.00
Panasonic SE-1077 Pop Up Phono With AM-FM Radio	219.95	149.00
Panasonic SE840 AM-FM Phono	139.95	99.00
Lafayette LRK-855 8 Track Recorder/Player AM-FM, Orig. $228.00 #99-0251W	199.95	175.00
Panasonic RE-7430 3 Piece AM-FM Stereo Radio	99.95	69.00
BSR RTS30 AM-FM Stereo Receiver With Speakers and 310X Changer	179.95	139.00

RECORD CHANGERS AND TURNTABLES

	REGULAR	SALE
Fisher 402	$169.95	$85.00
Dual CS16/1214	124.50	89.00
Fisher 302	129.95	69.00
AR-XA 2 Speed Turntable	92.00	79.00
Pioneer 12AC Turntable	99.95	85.00

HEADPHONES

	REGULAR	SALE
Super Ex - St. Prob.	$49.95	$24.95
KLH-Model 80	49.95	29.95

This is only a sample listing of sale items!!
Many more in every category — come in and see.

LAFAYETTE
RADIO ELECTRONICS

master charge THE INTERBANK CARD

Your BANKAMERICARD welcome here

All Students Back With A CLEARANCE SALE

PIONEER SALE

SA500/TX500 50 WATT STEREO AMPLIFIER TUNER COMBINATION
Was $239.90
Now $178.00

SA 600/TX 600 100 WATT STEREO AMPLIFIER TUNER
Was $379.95
Sale Price $265.00

PIONEER® T-3300
Stereo Cassette Tape Deck

Regular $150
Now $98.00

PIONEER® SE-30
Was $34.95
STEREO HEADPHONES

Now $19.50

PIONEER® SE-50
Now $29.95

PIONEER® SE-50
2-way Stereo Headset

PIONEER® SA-800
Integrated Stereo Amplifier

PIONEER® TX-800
AM-FM Stereo Tuner

160 WATTS STEREO AMPLIFIER AND TUNER
1972 Fair Trade Price $489.00
Save $151.00
Now $338.00

240 WATT STEREO AMPLIFIER AND TUNER
Was $659.95
You Save $224.00
Now $435.00

PIONEER SA-1000
Integrated Stereo Amplifier

PIONEER TX-1000
AM-FM Stereo Tuner

Sieden Sound Inc.
15 E. Pleasant St.
Amherst, Mass.
549-1105

Stores In
Pittsfield, Mass.
Albany, N.Y.
Schenectady, N.Y.
Colonie, N.Y.
Glens Falls, N.Y.

OPEN
Mon. - Sat. 9:30 - 5:30
Fri. evens. till 10:00

Deborah Peck, 21, sets out today for a peace march to Washington, D.C. A college junior, she is carrying a contribution for the bombed Bach Mai hospital in North Vietnam. Deborah, who plans to walk 12 miles a day, is accompanied on the first leg of the trip by Steve Shirey of Amherst. (AP)

FTC Moves On Small Cigars

WASHINGTON (AP)-The Federal Trade Commission recommended to Congress yesterday that the term "cigarette" be redefined under the law pertaining to advertising and labeling to include "small cigars".

If enacted, the change would ban advertising for small cigars from radio and televisin, the same way that cigarette advertising is now banned.

The FTC also recommended that the health warning now required on cigarette packages and in cigarette advertising include mention of diseases associated with smoking.

Under the agency's proposal, the following statement would appear on all packages and in all advertising, "Warning: Cigarette Smoking is Dangerous to Health and May Cause Death From Cancer, Coronary Heart Disease, Chronic Bronchitis, Pulmonary Emphysema and Other Diseases."

The present required statement is: "Warning: The Surgeon General has Determined that Cigarette Smoking is Dangerous to Your Health."

The commission also suggested that the Public Health Cigarette Smoking Act be amended to require a declaration of the tar and nicotine content of each cigarette to appear on all packages and advertising.

The FTC recommended increased appropriations for the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to purchase time and space in the media for messages designed to discourage cigarette smoking.

Finally the administration of funds for National Institutes for Health research to develop a cigarette not hazardous to health.

At the present time, the law which prohibits broadcast cigarette advertising defines a cigarette as "any roll of tobacco wrapped in paper or in any substance not containing tobacco and any roll of tobacco wrapped in any substance containing tobacco which, because of its appearance, the type of tobacco used in the filler, or its packaging and labeling, is likely to be offered to, or puchased by, consumers as a cigarette..."

The commission recommended the law be changed to include as cigarettes "all rolls of tobacco weighing not more than three pounds per thousand, without regard to the kind of tobacco used in the inner roll or the substance in which the roll is wrapped."

The FTC said it tested 25 varieties of the small cigars and found that 22 varieties had a tar and nicotine content within the range of domestic cigarettes, 1 to 35 milligrams of tar per cigarette and 0.1 to 2.4 milligrams of nicotine.

The agency said also it had received information from HEW which "indicates that small cigars may well present the same public health problem as cigarettes if small cigars are smoked in the same quantities as cigarettes and if the smoke from small cigars is inhaled."

Flicker 'n' Flame Flower Shop

Plants, Arrangements
Novelties, Gift Items
Houseplants from .69

come in and say "hi"
In the Amherst Carriage Shops
Free local delivery daily 10-6

Fri. 'til 9
549-1493

Housing For Poor Too Expensive

NEWPORT, Vt. (AP) — Sometimes you can't win for losing.

There's a project in northern Vermont that calls for 30 unemployed construction trainees to build 36 homes for poor people, just like themselves.

But here's the catch. They won't be able to afford to buy the homes.

The federal government isn't paying them enough. And, a variety of circumstances–from the Vermont winter to federal construction requirements–make the homes too expensive.

"They can't get the financing," explained Michael H. Griffin, an antipoverty worker with the Orleans County Council of Social Agencies and director of the building project.

"There is no way to get them the credit to buy a house."

The plight of the 30 trainees is symptomatic of the problems facing the project, called Homes for People, which is jointly financed by the federal Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO) and the Labor Department.

The homes to be built are intended for poor families, defined by the OEO as members of a family of four living on $4,200 a year or less.

But, in order to qualify for a mortgage to buy one of the houses, once they are constructed, such a family would need an annual income of at least $4,500.

The construction trainees will be paid $3,328, at the minimum federal wage of $1.60 an hour they are to receive, so they won't qualify.

As a matter of fact, said Griffin, "there would be problems" finding any person falling within the OEO definition of poverty who could afford to buy one of the houses.

And that's in spite of the fact that the homes will be offered to the poor under interest-subsidized mortgages from the Farmers Home Administration.

The problem primarily is the cost of constructing a house in Vermont where building materials are scarce and winter makes extra insulation and heating gear necessary.

Another problem is a federal requirement that such homes have at least 1,000 square feet of living space.

Such a house could be built and sold to the poor for $8,500 in mild climates, like those in Alabama or New Mexico, Griffin said. In Vermont, the house would have to be sold for about $12,500.

"You can get to the people in New Mexico," Griffin said, "but not in Vermont."

YOUR MONEY'S WELL SPENT AT Archer Kent

Archer Kent

191 North Pleasant St. AMHERST

OPEN SUNDAYS

PRICES EFFECTIVE THRU JAN. 28, 1973

DISCOUNT HEALTH & BEAUTY AIDS

Mfr. $1.09 GILLETTE Foamy Face Saver 59c 7 oz.

Mfr. $1.49 Alberto Balsam Conditioner • Regular • Extra Hold • Super 69c 8 oz.

Mfr. $1.39 Listerine Antiseptic Mouthwash 77c 14 oz.

Mfr. $1.09 GILLETTE Right Guard Deodorant 59c 4 oz.

Mfr. $1.37 9 oz. Super Size Colgate MFP 77c

Mfr. $1.59 STRI-DEX Medicated Pads 79c 75 Pads

Mfr. 90c Excedrin THE EXTRA STRENGTH PAIN RELIEVER 59c 36 Tablets

98¢ Note Book 3 Subject 56¢
89¢ Filler Paper 300 Count 49¢
29¢ Index Cards 3 x 5 19¢
19¢ Bic Pen Black Blue Red 11¢

Mfr. $1.89 Johnson's Baby Shampoo 99c 12.5 oz.

Mfr. $1.08 Q-TIPS Cotton Swabs 56c 170 Swabs

WE DISCOUNT OVER 3000 ITEMS EVERY DAY

Carlos Montoya

Flamenco Guitarist To Perform Here

Carlos Montoya, the noted flamenco guitar virtuoso, will be featured as soloist in a promenade concert at UMass, Tuesday, Jan. 30, at 8 p.m.

Joining Mr. Montoya in an all-Spanish program in Curry Hicks Cage will be The Springfield Symphony Orchestra, under Robert Gutter's direction. This concert is offered by the University's Fine Arts Council as a special event marking the opening of the spring semester.

The promenade concert will be an informal evening of light classical music falling between a regular symphony concert and a pops concert.

Carlos Montoya has been described as "a legend in his own time" by critics throughout the world and guitar aficionados, particularly on college campuses. He has appeared at the University several times previously, always to sell-out crowds. This year's appearance will feature him as both soloist and composer, since the January 30 program includes his own "Suite Flamenca" for guitar and full symphony orchestra.

The balance of the program will include excerpts from Manuel de Falla "El amor brujo", the ballet suite "Estancia" by Alberto Ginastera, Chabrier's "Espana", music from "Man of La Mancha" as well as a group of solos by Mr. Montoya. A special feature of the promenade concert will be a new work by Robert Stern, a member of the faculty of the University's music department. "Carom' was commissioned by The Springfield Symphony Orchestra last season.

Since the concert takes place just five days after classes at the University resume following intersession, the Fine Arts Council announces that tickets are available now at $2 for UMass undergraduates and $4 for others and may be obtained through the Fine Arts Council, 125 Herter Hall, telephone 545-0202. The Council urges early reservations for this event, which is expected to draw a large audience. The program will be repeated, with the exception of the Stern work, at Springfield Municipal Auditorium on Sunday, Feb. 11, under the auspices of the Springfield Symphony Orchestra.

Counseling Center In Gorman

Beginning this semester, Central Area will have it's own counseling center situated in B-2 of Gorman House. Because of its location on the north side of the basement next to the door, it's name "The Edge of Gorman" seems poetic and appropriate.

The Center is being set up for the residents of Central and will deal with all areas of counseling concerns. Parny Hagerman, Head of Residence of Brooks, conceived the idea last Spring during her interviews. In speaking with Margie Lenn and Larry Marcus, Area Director and Assistant Area Director of Central, they found that there would be a real need for a counseling center right in Central.

For completion of her work on her Master's, Parny worked out the details and the rationale for the Center. Upon further discussion with other Heads of Residence in Central during last semester, there seemed to be a great number of students reluctant to go to administrational services for counseling.

The informality and accessibility of this Center should pick up upon the least bit leary student of administrational services. The Center is run on a drop-in basis and is open from 1-9 p.m. but will remain flexible to oblige students and the residents of Gorman House.

Parny will be supervising the staff and counseling as part of her work toward her doctorate. The rest of the staff is composed of practicum graduate students in human relations, clinical psychology and heads of residence from Central who have expertise and background in counseling.

The aim of this is to utilize already accomplished counselors who have a considerable amount of training, to supervise their counseling and to reach the students of Central who would just like to talk to someone.

The advisory staff to the Center is composed of personnel from Whitmore Counseling Center, Mental Health, Clinical Psychology and Human Relations. If there are any inquiries as to the remaining staff positions available at the Center, please call Parny Hagerman at 6-4544.

Another important emphasis of the Center is the confidentiality of the client-sounselor relationship. Students should feel absolutely comfortable with the understanding that what is said in the relationship with a counselor is totally between those two (client-counselor) people involved.

So, after the 29th of January, if any Central Area people are seeking direction, ways to cope with hassles, or just some friendly talk, drop in to the Central Area Counseling Center, "The Edge of Gorman," or if you're busy call for a time to drop in when it is convenient for you. The number at the Center will be 5-2947.

Peace Corps Opportunities Offered

The Peace Corps or Action, as it is called now, offers many opportunities for you after graduation. The State of Ivory Coast has 18 teaching positions in Economics, Plant Science, Animal Science and General Agriculture. More Volunteers will be needed when our cooperation with Peace Corps, Ivory Coast, has been developed. Further opportunities are available in other African countries in Agriculture, Rural Development, Business and Public Management, Physical Education, Health, Urban Development and Public Works.

Since, for obvious reasons, the majority of jobs are in French-speaking countries, some previous knowledge of the language is most desirable. The Department of French and Italian has offered to cooperate by making available French 110, a 3 credit introductory course; and French 126, a 6 credit extensive course in conversation, reading and writing (two semesters in one). Audition of the course is possible with the permission of the instructor and your identification to the department as a prospective Peace Corps candidate.

Your service in the Peace Corps means sharing your knowledge with some of the world's less fortunate in Africa. Your stay in this continent with its wildlife, beautiful scenery and fascinating cultures, will likely become the best and most useful two years of your life.

For more information and an application form, contact The Center for International Agricultural Studies, located in Stockbridge Hall, second floor, Room 211.

the SHOE-BIN

50% off Men & Women Winter Boots

Starts Thurs. N. Pleasant St.

Your First Wheels

Your first car. It should be something you remember fondly for a long time. Don't spoil it by putting yourself through an insurance hassle.

There is an insurance agent in town who really wants to help you get all the insurance you need—and at the lowest possible rates.

Alpha Insurance Agency, Inc. 29 South Pleasant Street Amherst, 256-8505

MDC CLASSIFIED

HELP WANTED

Overseas jobs for students — Australia, Europe, S. America, Africa. Most professions, summer or full time, expenses paid, sightseeing. Free information, write, TWR Co., Dept. Q2-7550 Telegraph Ave., Berkeley, Ca. 94704. tf2-6

Program Director for Jewish Community Day Camp, summer position. Will be interviewing in Boston Feb. 9, 1973. Send in resume: Howard Sherman, 5111 Abercorn St., Savannah, Georgia 31405. (BA or BS minimum). For info call in Boston (617) 734-5245. 1-24

Counselors for co-ed campus in Berkshires. Vacancies: Head Waterfront, Special Events, Athletic Director, Group Leaders, Tennis, Golf, Waterskiing, Dance, Guitars & folk singing, Radio station Director, Rocketry, wrestling, Arts & Crafts, General Bunk Counselors. Contact Paul Krouner, 44 Sagamore Rd., Worcester, Mass. 01609. tf1-30

EMPLOYMENT

1973 Student Job Opportunity Booklet for Cape Cod and Islands. Complete list of businesses requiring summer employees. Send $2.00 to: Student Job Opportunity Booklet, R. R. 1, Box 11-C, Orleans, Mass. 02653. tf1-26

Earn top money! Part time promoting student travel. Call or write: American Student Travel Center, 330 East 91st, N.Y., N.Y. 10028. tf1-26

ENTERTAINMENT

LAUGH YOUR ASS OFF! SEE PUTNEY SWOPE ON SUN., JAN. 28 AT 7 - 9 - 11 IN MADAR — WELL, MAYBE NOT YOUR ASS! ALSO, BETTY BOOP & EARTH FILM. tf1-26

"Night of the Living Dead" is the ultimate horror film! See it — Plus Groove Tube, Nixon Satire. Friday evening at 7 - 9 - 11, Thompson 101. 1-24

AUTOS FOR SALE

64 Ford Custom, new snow tires, auto. trans. Must sell by 2 Feb. So only $200. Call 253-5461 eve. tf1-31

1966 MERCEDES. Gas, automatic, AM-FM-SW, Michelin radials, power steering, power disc brakes, air. 665-3212 or 5-6055. tf1-26

1971 VW Super Bug, exc. condition thru out, new snows. $1600. Call 253-5556. tf1-25

1970 Firebird, trans - AM. Excellent condition, air cond., power windows, tape deck, auto. trans., best offer. Call Roger 549-6554. tf2-2

DATING SERVICE

MATCH IS THE FIVE COLLEGE DATING SERVICE — A NEW CONCEPT IN MEETING NEW FRIENDS. SEND FOR FREE QUESTIONNAIRE: MATCH, BOX 759, AMHERST. tf1-30

PERSONAL

Rural Gay (Read Honest) Commune needs few more beautiful freak people to get on with it. P. O. Box 723, Amherst, Mass. tf1-29

BI-SEXUAL HOMOSEXUAL. Anyone with questions, or wanting general information, call 586-2811. Ask for Paul, Eve. 1-24 & 2-2

FOR SALE

Furniture for sale, must go immediately, maple dining set, new double bed, sleeper couch. Other misc. items. Call 253-5556. tf1-25

Harman Kardon, Citation 11, pre-amp, perfect condition, 5 mos. old. $200 firm. 253-9611 eves. tf1-30

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female, own room in luxury apt., grad student preferred. 1 mile from Campus. Call 253-7874 days, 549-6556 evenings. tf1-30

Share room in 2 bdr. apt. $61.25/mo., all modern; utilities incl. In Amherst 253-2034. tf1-30

Share apt., Amherst Motel, furnished, all util., phone, pool, no lease, $90 month. Phone 253-9321, male. tf1-25

TRADE

Flute Wtd. Will pay $ or trade 3 cu. ft. refrig., or will take $ for frig. Call Andree at WMUA 545-2876. Leave Mesge in box, if not there. tf1-26

RIDE WANTED

For child — daily ride, Ashfield Rd., Williamsburg to Amherst, 7:30 - 8:30 a.m. or return at 2 - 3:30 p.m. Will pay. Call 1-268-3382. tf1-26

FOR RENT

Room for rent, $80 month, util. included, center of Belchertown. Call Randy, evening, 323-7404. tf1-26

TRAVEL

N. Y. — Frankfurt $150 rnd. trip. Open return - weekly flts. Info & schedule, write German Overseas Tour, 56-1/2 Western A, Brattleboro, Vt. 05301. tf1-26

INSTRUCTION

Kung Fu Club Chinese self-defense, first general meeting on Mon., Jan. 29 at 7:30 p.m., Campus Center, Rm. 904-8. All Are Welcome. tf1-26

APARTMENT WANTED

Student into meditation wants to share apt. with people of similar interests. 549-1379. tf1-26

REFRIGERATORS

Brand new — Made by Delmonico - 5 year guarantee - free delivery - 3 cubic foot $75 - 5 cubic foot $79. Call Gary - 1615. JFK 546-7839. tf2-29

WANTED

Photographer wants open minded liberal female models part-time, good pay. Write giving details to P. O. Box 122, Granby, Mass. 01033. tf2-1

Notices

BOLTWOOD COFFEEHOUSE
The Boltwood-Belchertown Coffeehouse will begin again this Sat. Bus will leave from Haigis Mall at 6:00 p.m. Questions: call Ed, 256-6179.

BRIDGE PLAYERS
Duplicate Bridge played in the Commuter Lounge (S.U. 216) at 7. Please come to learn and to play.

BUS DRIVERS MEETING
Jan. 24 at 6:30 p.m. in Rm. 174-176 CC. If you plan to drive this semester it is mandatory that you attend. For more info visit our new office, CC 167 or call 545-0056 or 545-2086.

CHESS PLAYERS
The Chess Club will meet tonight at 7:30 in the CC - check Daily Schedule for room. New members welcome.

COMMUTERS
Tonite! Rm. 178 CC at 5 p.m. Commuter Assembly Ex. Council meets. Anyone interested is welcome.

CRAFTS SOLD IN CC
If you wish to sell a craft in the Concourse, you must come to the Guild meeting tonight in the Dukes Rm., S.U. at 5:00.

HILLEL
Israeli Dancing starts again, 7:30 tonight in Cape Cod Lounge. Instructions, refreshments, and info on upcoming events.

HOUSING COMMITTEE
Anyone interested in working with the Commuter Assembly Housing Committee please contact Alex Mackey, Comm. Assem. Office 112 CC or call 545-2145.

GOODELL LIBRARY HOURS
Mon.-Fri., 8:00 a.m.-12:00 midnight, Sat., 8:00 a.m.-10:00 p.m., Sun., 1:00 p.m.-12:00 midnight. Holiday hours will be published at a later date.

METEP EXTERNS
METEP Externs registered for Ed 5115 meet with Mason and Annette on Wed., Jan. 24 at 2:00 p.m. in Educ. 226-228 to complete contracts.

FREE PUPPY
German Shepherd puppy, 8 wks. old, male, to give away--looking for good home. Contact Mrs. Markwell in Registrar's Office or call 5-0555.

Board Of Ed. Scholarships At Bursar's

"The Board of Higher Education General Scholarships for the Fall semester have been received by the Bursar's Office.

Students who have received these awards and did not deduct them from the Fall semester bill may pick up the money due them at the Bursar's Office starting December 19th, between the hours of 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

The Board's Honor Scholarships have not yet been received."

Meeting To Form Support Group

Everywoman's Center at UMass and the Valley Women's Center, Northampton, have invited all women interested in joining a support group to an introductory meeting Monday, Jan. 29 at 7:30 p.m. in the Everywoman's Center at Munson Hall.

The meeting is being held in response to inquiries by many women in the community about joining a support group. Support groups offer women the opportunity to share common experiences. Some of these are marriage, divorce, separation, going back to school, academic projects (such as comprehensive examinations and dissertations), management of family and career, being a single woman, being a single parent, parent of adopted children, deciding not to have children and alternative life styles.

The purpose of the meeting will be to explain how support groups work and the ways in which they can effect the lives of women, to give interested women an opportunity to form support groups around common interests and schedules.

Everywoman's Center at UMass is offering area women an opportunity to discuss careers in the field of business at a workshop in the Gallery Room at Jones Library Tuesday, Jan. 30 at 7:30 p.m.

Talks by a panel of women representatives from the local business community will be followed by an informal discussion. The program is being planned by Mary Lou O'Neil and Mary Bohn, counselors associated with Everywoman's Center and the College of Arts and Sciences at the University.

Women on the panel will be: Kathryn Bartol, professor in the UMass School of Business; Linda Benton, manager of Howard Johnson's in Chicopee; Betsey Egan, realtor with Jones Real Estate in Amherst; Mina Lussier, owner and manager of The Shoe Bin in Amherst; and Eleanor Meier, state employment counselor at the Northampton Employment Security Division office.

Coffee will be served and all interested women are welcome.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

☆—by SYDNEY OMARR—☆

Gemini may be the most animated sign but Taurus takes honors for being the most quietly expressive. Leo is showy but Capricorn is most apt to make steady progress. Pisces comes up from nowhere and usually is the underdog that surprises with key plays.

***

ARIES (March 21-April 19): New approach is necessary. Talk things over with mate, partner. Be willing to listen. Important to make intelligent concessions. Take some steps backward so that eventually you can go forward. Leo is in picture.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Slacken pace. Keep medical, dental appointments. Get facts about current situation. Discard rumors. Trust your own hunches. Now you can collect data. Later you can evaluate. Position should be that you are willing to learn.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Stress versatility. Expand. Status quo will not suffice. Sagittarian would like to aid. Display sense of humor. Social contact could lead to romantic situation. Give full play to creative resources. If single, you could take step toward affair.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Make special effort to build on solid base. Be thorough in personal and business affairs. Home and family matters tend to dominate. You feel restricted. But this is temporary. Realize that apparent minor points could be major if neglected.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Emotional burden could be lifted. You have more freedom. Key is to avoid wasting time, energy. Relatives, neighbors may seem to converge. Display sense of humor. Take one step at a time. Ideas need more time to develop.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You can feel more secure if you collect what you need. Gather information. Do some research. Genuine bargain is available. You save by spending on quality. Ignore one who talks of get rich-quick schema.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Perfect techniques. Obtain valid hint from Virgo message. Reject secondhand products, methods. Strive for quality and originality. Cycle is high and your time has arrived. Means go after what you need.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Accent is on gain through special organization. You could be honored through unusual request or assignment. Accept. This can be a time of power play with you emerging on top. Know it and go to it. Reward could be greater than anticipated.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Old friend brings back bittersweet memories. Live in present. Anticipate future. Don't brood about what might have been. Stop punishing yourself with sledgehammer thoughts. Get rid of burden not rightly your own.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Study Sagittarius message. Strive for greater independence of thought, action. Leo is in picture. Spotlight is on ambition, achievement. Professional superior is willing to share trade secrets. Show that you are capable of more responsibility.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Good lunar aspect now coincides with writing, travel, study and ability to perceive public needs. Follow through on inner feelings. One who teaches puts trust in you. Your opportunity is now, not some abstract future time.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Recognize your own gifts. Stop taking back seat to those who may actually be inferior. Look around and make move which brings pleasure, greater recognition. Health improves through change of scenery.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, you have unusual voice, possess sense of drama and appreciation of music. You will be travelling, maturing, reaching more persons in upcoming months. In August, you could make financial coup.

Copyright 1973, Gen. Fea. Corp.

Crossword Puzzle

ACROSS
1 Painful spots
6 Pertaining to the cheek
11 Negation
12 Egg dish
14 Indefinite article
15 Flock
17 Delude
18 Rodent
20 Famed
22 Insane
23 Short jacket
25 Heaps
27 Cyprinoid fish
28 Drain
30 100 years
32 Bad
34 Food program
35 Altar screen
38 Partners
41 Paid notice
42 Happen again
44 Unaspirated
45 Baby's napkin
47 Transactions
49 Regret
50 Roman road
52 Capital of Tunisia
54 Road (abbr.)
55 Senility
57 Figures of speech
59 Swift
60 Clans

DOWN
1 Lawmaking body
2 Preposition
3 Bone of body
4 Merit
5 Sailing vessel
6 Patterned
7 Part of "to be"
8 Conducted
9 Aluminum sulfate
10 Mend
11 Challenges
13 Man's nickname
16 Pertaining to the ear
19 Structure
21 Twilled cotton
24 At no time
26 Take unlawfully
29 Is borne
31 Declare
33 Situated
35 Enthusiastic
36 Newspaper executive
37 South Sea islander
39 Habituates
40 Sows
43 Leases
46 Greek letter
48 Father
51 Knock
53 Soak up
56 Enlisted man (colloq.)
58 Liquid measure (abbr.)

RAP CARP DIET
AGO ALEE ETNA
FIR DEPRESSED
TOTES EIRE
AA PAL RHEA
ALL CAT AVERT
NO LAY TIE IL
TRAIN SAT REI
EELS ANT PE
TINT SAVED
PERENNIAL ERA
ATON URSA RIM
DAIS LEST TAP

Distr. by United Feature Syndicate, Inc. 2-4

LOWEST YOUTH FARES TO EUROPE

of any scheduled airline

Icelandic Airlines offers you lower fares than any other scheduled airline from the United States to the heart of western Europe.

You fly daily scheduled jets from New York to Luxembourg for convenient connections to most everywhere on the continent.

You save money any time of the year when you fly Icelandic.

GET DETAILS ON OUR FARES NOW. See your travel agent. Mail coupon.

To: Icelandic Airlines CN
630 Fifth Ave., N.Y., N.Y. 10020
(212) PL 7-8585
Send folder CN on Lowest Youth Fares to Europe ☐
Name
Street
City
State Zip
My travel agent is

ICELANDIC

Penn Stunned by Massachusetts, 62-58

See Story On Page 10

The Philadelphia Inquirer
Oldest Daily Newspaper in the United States—Founded 1771
Vol. 265, No. 11 THURSDAY, JANUARY 11, 1973 FINAL NORTH & WEST EDITION

By MARTY KELLEY

Philadelphia, Pa.--In this traditional Quaker city they talk of love, independence, and the Liberty Bell. They speak highly of Uncle Ben who founded her and General Howe who futily blockaded her. And in conversation "Big Five" basketball holds its own, almost as accepted as the history that preceded. But it took a bleak week night at the Palestra to silence the spokesmen of the city and give "Big Five" and the Franklins a shock neither thought they deserved.

For there's an ethic, an almost irrepressible that pervades the history and aura of "Big Five" basketball, college style, in this city. Homespun Philly teams rarely lose at home to visiting tests. And at the Palestra, located in the belly of the UPenn campus, the likes of St. Joseph's, Temple, Villanova, LaSalle, and the king Quaker, UPenn, build their fearful marks.

Curry Kirkpatrick, Sports Illustrated's nomadic typewriter, who makes a living following college basketball coast to coast, calls the Palestra "the noisiest place to play in the country". Jutting out from the south side of Franklin Field, the Palestra stands as a hallmark for ageless Roman Arenas where Christians got what the Palestra gives visiting teams.

And it's the UPenn quintet that of all the tenants, hold strong the myth of the Palestra. For the Quakers started the New Year with a four year Palestra win skein against non-Franklin teams. National ranking and near Eastern supremacy with the likes of the Friars were plaudits for the young Quakers. And a visit from a Commonwealth team seemingly would strengthen all previous plaudits.

But the visitor that night was Massachusetts, a young team dealt an embarrassing stumble in Boston the outing before. To what event would the myth of the Palestra depreciate its guest? Will the Hankinsons, the Haiglers, and the Beecrofts continue to toy the opposition into its own submission? Or could the ethic of the Palestra be challenged by the guest of the Yankee Conference? Nearly 3,000 paid to find out but heaviest price was tacked on the Quakers and hence hours later the city of Philadelphia was stunned. The pompous Quaker fell.

For the first time in four years, the halls of Ivy was treated to a rare wake in its own backyard. A shooting performance by John Murphy (10-12) not soon to be forgotten, a defensive gem by Austin and McLaughlin on Haigler (held 12 points below his 18-point average) and Jimmy Burke all but enticing the Palesterites into fits of rage with 8 thefts from their darkings.

And with leading scorer Peter Trow on the bench with a neck injury the feat became more real and well deserved.

If you thought from the past that Jack Leaman wasn't a :30 coach, forget. Jack, by shuffling his talent, calling for the right combinations (alternating Murphy, Austin, Peters in the front court and Burke and Endicott wide with Pitino) all but outcoached Penn's Chuck Daley.

And it seemed that the forty minute affair was a fight for respectability for the Minutemen. After running the first 16 of the 18 points at BU, the youngsters wilted and let the Terriers have a 2 point win. There was no excuse for that one except the fact that BU is as predictable as a snowstorm in August. And to pick a spot for Redemption, well, there's no finer than the Palestra.

So the Minutemen took no for an answer. Down 8 at the half and by as many as 10 early in latter stage, Al Skinner began dealing. Working off low switches and Murphy from 15 feet off reverse action, the Quakers felt the wrath of the visitor.

Defense win games and to hold the Quakers to but 2 field goals in the last 12 minutes of play...Wow...Whether on the court or off Tommy Mac (McLaughlin) grimaced all the way. Tom Austin, well it was like he started a new career, he was that impressive. And call Pitino and Burke youngsters if you will. Burke was as cagey as a veteran and Pitino, say no more.

It's taken Jack Leaman two years and a phony suspension to turn Rick into "his type of player". Rick took a piece of the Palestra back home with him. He was that steady and under the imposing eye of the many ghosts of the Palestra who fell to the ethic in the closing seconds (or is choke the word) Pitino wouldn't let the Minutemen die as a 6 point lead went to 2 just over the one minute mark...Burke steal, Murph for two...Goodnight...

"Under the circumstances (4-4 record and they needed it), I would say that this was the best win I have had here at Massachusetts", said an exonerated Jack Leaman after the Minutemen stormed the gates of the Palestra.

And you should have seen the poker Philly faces at that Mariott Hotel that night. The sons of the Revolution just could not believe that their Quakers had taken one on the chin...God forbid it hasn't happened in four years at the Palestra and with at that time seasonal losses to San Francisco and Cincinnati, where does a team like Massachusetts fit in? Probably right where Dr. J left off. You see, good Quakers, Massachusetts has a winning tradition of its own and I doubt that Chuck Daley will forget that.

Beating Penn can make your season but with Leaman's schedule there's no break--no time to savor it. When you think ahead you think tonight with the Friars and who did they last play?

So the Palestra fell and like the feats of Franklin and Howe, this too will stand this city's test of time.

"Under the circumstances I would say that this was the best win I have had here at Massachusetts."
— Jack Leaman

Hoop Tally at 7-4:

Penn Signals Surge

By FRANK ANTOSIEWICZ

Marco Polo is no longer around, but if he were he sure would have liked the 12 game opening stretch, which read like Homer's Odyssey with games in such places as Morgantown, West Virginia; Detroit, Michigan; Philadelphia, Pa.; and Burlington, Vermont.

The record bleakly flashes--7 wins--4 losses, as Marvelous Marvin and Ernie D, alias number nine in the country, alias Providence College, entertain the Minutemen in the Friars' brand new Civic Center seating about 11,000 screaming fans in Providence tonight.

7-4 does not have connotations of greatness, but the record is deceiving in that it involves only a matter of six points (a one point loss to West Virginia, a two point loss to Boston University and a three point loss to UConn). Coach Jack Leaman looks back wishfully saying, "We could have been 10-1 with a little luck."

Looking ahead Leaman said, "Providence will be a big test...to see if we can play on the national level." He went on to say that the Friars "are probably the highest ranking team UMass has ever played."

Getting back to the record, it still does not seem that impressive, but it must be noted that five of the wins were on the road. This equals the total number of road victories all of last season. More significant though was the stunning upset of the University of Pennsylvania in the Palestra (The den of the Big Five of Philadelphia, where Penn had not been beaten by other than one of its fellow co-inhabitants since 1969).

When banquet time rolls around again in the spring, Master Tactician Leaman, Superscout Ray Wilson and J-V mentor Fan Gaudette, who were all there at the Palestra, may be reminiscing about the game that kept UMass from sinking under .500 and the beginning of what is already a three game road win streak.

The tale that emerged from the "City of brotherly love," was one of Penn's inability, rather than UMass's ability. There was a reason for the outcome and it might have been partly the Quakers fault, but also some credit must be given to the Minutemen defense.

Coach Leaman interchanged nine who did not fastbreak, but rather used a controlled offense and a very tough defense which shut off the inside, giving Penn usually only one shot at the basket. The determined cagers kept plugging away with the game plan, trailing by eight until seven minutes into the second half. Then, the game plan began working. Patience on offense, i.e., looking for the good shot, and an intiminating defense kept the Quaker production to only two field goals and nine points in the final 13 minutes. The offense hit 73.7% in the final stanza.

6'8 Soph John Murphy sunk 10 of 12 from the floor and was named to the ECAC weekly team. Another soph, 6'3 guard Jim Burke received honorable mention on the ECAC rookie list (It was not for the five points he scored, rather for his defensive play and five assists.). Al Skinner popped 17 in the contest, along with playing a key role defensively. Lanky 6'9 Tom Austin shocked Ron Haigler by cleanly blocking what was going to be a layup to tie the score at 53 enroute to his best game of the year (8 pts., 8 rebs and 3 blocked shots).

Penn epitimizes what has happened to UMass lately. That is, a selective offense combined with a stingy, grudging defense.

The season started slowly with losses at West Virginia and UConn, and wins against St. Anselm's and Rhode Island. The tall and talented Crimson of Harvard came to the Cage and were vanquished 74-70 before a home crowd of 3500 and Coach Jack Leaman had his 100th career coaching victory.

The December win one, lose one blues ended with a split in the Motor City Classic at Detroit. Eastern Michigan fell 68-61, but Detroit turned a seven point halftime deposit into a 75-59 romp.

January began with another heartbreaker, as an 18-2 UMass lead in the first five minutes dwindled away and a second Yankee Conference loss was recorded, 72-70.

Next, came Penn, 62-58 and then twice more the team bus came home happy as Vermont fell, 77-55 and Springfield 87-46.

During the last two games, Al Skinner has been surprising the tall ones by grabbing 29 rebounds and is expected by Coach Leaman to see most of his action at forward. John Murphy in the last three games has hit 24 of 32 shots from the floor or an amazing 75%. Along with Burke, guard Rick Pitino has also improved defensively and shares the quarterbacking duties with his cohort.

Win number 8 for the cagers, 105 for Coach Leaman and #1 New England ranking for the Minutemen who are currently #2, are the next obstacles for the hoopsters.

LOSE 20 POUNDS IN TWO WEEKS!

Famous U.S. Women Ski Team Diet

During the non-snow off season the U.S. Women's Alpine Ski Team members go on the "Ski Team" diet to lose 20 pounds in two weeks. That's right — 20 pounds in 14 days! The basis of the diet is chemical food action and was devised by a famous Colorado physician especially for the U.S. Ski Team. Normal energy is maintained (very important!) while reducing. You keep "full" — no starvation — because the diet is designed that way! It's a diet that is easy to follow whether you work, travel or stay at home.

This is, honestly, a fantastically successful diet. If it weren't, the U.S. Women's Ski Team wouldn't be permitted to use it! Right? So, give yourself the same break the U.S. Ski Team gets. Lose weight the scientific, proven way. Even if you've tried all the other diets, you owe it to yourself to try the U.S. Women's Ski Team Diet. That is, if you really do want to lose 20 pounds in two weeks. Order today. Tear this out as a reminder.

Send only $2.00 ($2.25 for Rush Service) — cash is O.K. — to Information Sources Co., P.O. Box 982, Dept. ST, Carpinteria, Calif. 93013. Don't order unless you expect to lose 20 pounds in two weeks! Because that's what the Ski Team Diet will do!

FULL-TIME PART-TIME

Hearst Corp. expanding into Amherst-Springfield area. A neat appearance and the ability to communicate with people net high earnings! Sales experience helpful but not necessary. Full training program! Car necessary! Call Al, 546-6750 between 6 - 8 p.m.

Learn to read the signs with Schaefer Ski Shirts.

Marks trail for beginners and novices. Quantity___Size___
Marks trail for intermediates. Quantity___Size___
Marks trail for experts. Quantity___Size___

Indicate the quantity ($2.50 ea.) and size (S, M, L, XL) in the proper place under the Schaefer Ski Shirt you want. Make your check or money order payable to: MINERVA ADVERTISING PROMOTION G.P.O. Box 1204 New York, N.Y. 10001

Name
Address
City State Zip

Offer void where prohibited.
Offer expires April 30, 1973. Add local sales taxes where applicable.

Let the new Schaefer Ski Shirts add some style to your schuss. The brightly colored signs on the front of these shirts are reproductions of actual ski-trail markers, and on the back there's a bright red Schaefer medallion. You can get one of these 100% cotton T-shirts with red trim by sending $2.50 and this coupon. And while you're learning to read the signs, be sure to follow the Schaefer sign to the one beer to have when you're having more than one.

Schaefer

WHEN YOU'RE HAVING MORE THAN ONE

Schaefer Breweries, New York and Albany, N.Y., Baltimore, Md., Lehigh Valley, Pa.

Hoopsters Face (Gulp!) PC

By EARLE BARROLL

Somehow the perspectives of UMass and Providence College in a game of round-ball get lost in the numbers game. You look at what the polls and the analysts have to offer and ask yourself how this apparent mismatch rates the attention it will undoubtably receive.

Where does a team that plays Springfield get off matching five on five with a quintet that held U.C.L.A. close until the final eight minutes? In a recent edition of BASKETBALL WEEKLY Harry Devold ranks P.C. 6th and UMass 97th. Does it seem feasible that UMass can play with San Francisco or Houston or Louisville? Maybe at home, but will they come to the Cage? Their rankings are 9th, 12th, and 13th.

In this week's AP national poll Providence is ranked 14th but it seems rather trite for the pollsters to penalize the previously 9th-ranked Friars for a pretty good showing against a team that shouldn't be allowed in the ratings, period. And just for an added encouragement the editors of BASKETBALL WEEKLY have P.C. favored over the Minutemen anywheres from eight to 20 points.

To all of this UMass' Jack Leaman shakes his head and nixes the numbers. He understands what they have to say, but he also demands, "We'll be more than ready for them." And this is why the new Providence Civic Center will be jammed tonight (besides the fact that Providence is the best basketball city in the east) when New England's number one (or infinity) team P.C. hosts the number two squad (that was supposed to be no better than seventh) UMass. Tap-off is 8 p.m.

"If you're going to be number one in New England," explains Leaman, "you've got to beat P.C. Right now the basketball capital of New England is Providence. And with their beautiful new Civic Center (that's incidentally averaging 10,122 per Friar game) P.C. will be moving away from New England basketball."

Exactly. Already they've made measurable inroads into the above mentioned territory. They've hosted Oregon, Western Kentucky and Duquesne to date with Jacksonville and St. Joseph's latter in the season. It's no secret that the home court and to be more poignant, one with the capacity of P.C.'s lends itself to a sure winner. The Friars have 17 of their 26 games at the Civic Center. As Leaman says to this, "If I had that many games at the Cage, it would make me a great coach.

Last year at this time Providence was coming off a major win at Southern California and an expected letdown that almost rallied UMass at the Cage, before holding on, 64-55. "On a night when P.C. could have been had," remembers Leaman, "Peter Trow and Al Skinner shot a super 13 of 24 from the field, but the rest of the team was 7 for 40."

It is this same (to an extent) atmosphere that prompts visions of victory tonight for Leaman and company. It is also the very fact that UMass has been an outstanding team since its January 6th loss to Boston University. During this period the Minutemen have routed Springfield and Vermont and upset then 19th-ranked Penn a non-vintage Penn team) at the Palestra of all places.

Providence held its own with U.C.L.A. Saturday night at Paulley Pavilion. But, then again, any team that comes within 25 of the "Walton Gang" can attest to that. "If P.C. had defeated the Bruins", Leaman noted, "they'd undoubtably be in a much different frame of mind then they will be for this game."

What does Leaman have in store for the Friars? "To win," he says, "we have to rebound the ball, keeping Marvin Barnes off the boards (which is no easy feat). We have to play good defense and we can't let them fast break."

If you remember Providence of last year, just add the name Kevin Stacom in place of Don Lewis and envision a club that is far superior and in some cases compared to the Friar teams of Jimmy Walker, Dexter Westbrook (remember this 6'7 center?) and Mike Riordan. Stacom is the main reason, having transferred his 6'4 frame from Holy Cross last year "because they stabbed me in the back by joining the Yankee Conference."

Stacom is considered by many to be the number three pro prospect in New England (he's only a junior) behind teammates Marvin Barnes and Ernie DeGregorio. Stacom and Ernie D combine to form perhaps the best backcourt in the country. Barnes, of course, is their big man up front having led the Olympic tryouts in rebounding only to be left off the team "due to politics" according to the 6'8 junior.

As for what Leaman will be countering with, right now it will come from a smorgasbord of some impressive individuals who have played as a tight unit in recent games. Before the tap-off Leaman will pick from Rick Pitino, Jim Burke and Peter Trow for his two guard slots, Al Skinner, captain Tom McLaughlin and John Murphy for the forward duo and either Charlie Peters or Murphy at center.

CHARLIE PETERS (54) drives in for a layup versus Springfield. Al Skinner (30) trails. (MDC photo by Gib Fullerton.)

Pucksters Win Some, Lose Some During Break

By BILL BALLOU

While the rather limited corps of writers who cover Division II hockey have been conceding the Divisional championship to Vermont and warning everyone else to watch out for St. Anselm's, the UMass Minutemen have been plodding along, unloved by the media, winning a few and losing a couple, but all the time staying within ranges of the top spot and in almost sure position for a playoff berth.

Daily Collegian

SPORTS

But if you live in the Boston area, I'm sure the last thing you see on the sports page is news concerning UMass hockey fortunes, so here's what's been happening since the Norwich game on December 8:

The Minutemen failed to win their second consecutive Williams tournament, finishing second to host team Williams. UMass won the first two games in easy fashion, beating Lake Forest 7-3 and Ithaca 10-3. But the championship game against Williams, a team they had beaten 5-3 earlier this season, turned out to be a heartbreaker as the Ephmen scored with only a few seconds left in the game to pull out a 4-3 win and the tourney crown.

UMass was then off until last Wednesday when they took a two-day trip to beautiful Utica, New York to play Hamilton and Colgate. The Hamilton one was the key game on this trip as they are a Division II team and had been playing some good hockey in previous games. The Minutemen were still rusty from the layoff.

Surprisingly enough, the Minutemen came out of ancient Sage Rink with a 9-4 victory, playing one of their best games of the season.

On Thursday night, Division I's Colgate hosted the UMass team and came away with a 5-3 victory, scoring the last goal into an empty net. The Minutemen could have taken that one too, save for an, at times, unbelievable inability to cash in on good scoring chances. All three UMass goals were scored by Pat Keenan, and all three UMass goalies played a period.

The Minutemen, 3-1-2 before the break, are 6-3-1 at this point with a 5-2-1 record in Division II. Thus, they've got two games to make up on division-leading Vermont, who is undefeated. UMass only plays UVM once more this season (not counting playoffs), so someone else is going to have to help out in the battle for the top playoff seed.

Statistically speaking, there isn't much new. Pat Keenan leads the team in scoring with 30 points, which includes an incredible 21 goals. Keenan has scored a goal in every UMass game this year and has three hat tricks and a four-goal game to his credit. His linemates, Billy Harris and Lonnie Avery, are second and fourth, respectively. Harris has a 5-13-18 mark while Avery is 3-7-10. Rounding out the top five are Jim Coleman with 5-6-11 and Kevin Conners with 5-4-9.

There was one change, personnel-wise, and that involved some switching around on the third line. Jim Coleman was moved from right wing back to his old position at center, with Scott Stuart moving up from the JV's to take his place. John Muse, who had been centering the line, was moved off it. Left wing Jim Lynch stayed put.

The three-man goaltending corps of Peter Erickson, John Kiah, and Chick Rheault was reduced to two, at least temporarily, when Erickson was hurt during practice Friday. Erickson, who stayed out of hockey last year because of bad knees, reinjured them and it's not known when he'll be back. That leaves junior Rheault and senior Kiah to handle the chores as the Minutemen face a heavy schedule from the end of January right through until playoff time in March. Both goalies have played two periods this season.

The Minutemen play again on Thursday night, at Providence, and then make a cameo appearance at home on Saturday night against a tough St. Anselm's team.

Smith, Hodge, All-Stars

NEW YORK (AP)—Pittsburgh center Syl Apps Jr., son of a former National Hockey League star, was among 16 additional players named Tuesday to play in the NHL All-Star game.

Billy Reay of Chicago, coach of the West Division All-Stars, also chose defensemen Randy Manery of Atlanta and Barclay Plager of St. Louis, centers Pit Martin of Chicago and Gary Unger of St. Louis and wingers Greg Polis of Pittsburgh, Bob Berry of Los Angeles and Joey Johnston of California.

Tom Johnson of the Boston Bruins, coach of the East in next Tuesday night's game at New York's Madison Square Garden, picked defensemen Dallas Smith of Boston and Gary Bergman of Detroit, centers Jean Ratelle of the New York Rangers and Dave Keon of Toronto and wingmen Paul Henderson of Toronto, Ed Westfall of the New York Islanders, Ken Hodge of Boston and Bobby Schmautz of Vancouver.

Dean Tucker

Ali Real Loser Monday

Now that the flames of Smokin' Joe Frazier are nothing more than smoldering cinders, and everyone who went wild with joy to see the man sitting down six times in two rounds has screamed themselves hoarse, the big question of who's who in heavyweight boxing is here again.

Joe Frazier was not the same man Monday night that he was when he freight-trained his way through Muhammad Ali in 1971. In fact he looked like an old fashioned hand car instead.

But back to who's who. In the last two years Frazier has fought two men whose notability in boxing history will be that they were the two candidates for brutality from the hands of a champion who knew he was through before anyone else. Ron Stander and Terry Daniels. Where are they now? (trying out for parts in a remake of Requiem for a Heavyweight?)

Ali on the other hand has worked hard and fought several times with boxers of repute and has not lost. Ali's big battle is with the calender and what the ticking of time does to a human machine.

Who then really won the Ali-Frazier fight in '71? Frazier got the points, and also a three week vacation in the hospital. The reason claimed was a kidney ailment. Could very well be, but since his release from the hospital he has only played "Waltz Me Around Again Willie" with two nobody's who never will be.

The question again. Although Frazier won in March 1971 why is it that the first time his title was put on the line against someone with similar credentials (Olympic Heavyweight Champ, and double figure tally of pro KO's) did he fall so quickly and look so thoroughly incapable of "smokin" like his sincere but inarticulate mouth advertised?

Could it be that Muhammad Ali gave him the beating of his life that night in March 1971? Could it be that Frazier had the immeasurable advantage of Ali's three year layoff working for him as well as a few years of precious youth and the will to be the great son of Rubin Frazier. Could it be luck, that licked the Great One?

It may never be known, but because boxing is a game for the young to do and the old to watch, Ali is not getting any younger, it may never be known who is really the best man.

Frazier will want a rematch. Foreman will want to fight Chuvalo and others to build his holdings and image as a Heavyweight Champ. Frazier will have to fight some more to make himself credible after Monday's embarassment. And while all this goes on Ali will fight too. Anyone who will brave the canvas with him and also time. And time just may beat him again like it did with the Draft Induction Hiatus, and we will never know who of the three is really number one. But who knows? Joe Louis might be able to take them all.

Notices

FOOTBALL–For all those interested in trying out for the varsity football team, there will be an important organizational meeting Thursday, January 25 at 3:45 p.m. in Room 249 Boyden.

INTRAMURALS–All students interested in officiating intramural basketball this winter should report on Thursday, January 25, at 7:30 p.m. in Room 251 Boyden for an organizational rules refresher meeting. Only those who attend will be eligible to work, regardless of whether or not they have worked or signed up previously.

WMUA--Tonight's PC-UMass basketball game will be broadcast on WMUA starting at 8:00 p.m. Kent Best and Don Gorski will be at the game to bring you all the action. That's WMUA, 91.1 on your FM dial.

New England's Largest College Daily

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

Weather

It's impossible to say anything at this time. Time. Ah, yes. It solves all problems.

Recyclable

VOLUME C, ISSUE 68 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS THURSDAY, JANUARY 25, 1973

U.S. presidential adviser Henry Kissinger joins North Vietnamese negotiators in waving to onlookers Tuesday in Paris after their meeting at the International Conference Center. With him are Hanoi's Le Duc Tho, center, and Xuan Thuy. Both Kissinger and Tho had simultaneous news conferences yesterday to elaborate on the details of the agreement. "Whether this agreement brings a lasting peace or not," Kissinger said, "depends not only upon its provisions but also on the spirit in which it is implemented." (AP)

Kissinger Cautious On Cease-Fire Terms

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States and Hanoi yesterday outlined a fragile settlement that bring "a peace that heals," first to Vietnam, then to all Indochina.

In simultaneous news conferences, presidential aide Kissinger in Washington and North Vietnamese special adviser Le Duc Tho in Paris, both sides disclosed details of the agreement first announced Tuesday night.

Kissinger provided no surprises, although he did say the return of American prisoners from North Vietnam would begin by mid-February, and his hour and a half presentation was full of caution.

"Whether this agreement brings a lasting peace or not," he said, "depends not only upon its provisions but also on the spirit in which it is implemented."

The administration determination to keep its emotions from soaring into euphoria was also evident in President Nixon's first statement since he announced the agreement.

"We've got our prisoners coming back," he told congressional leaders, and "a peace, however fragile, which we have hopes will endure."

According to the full 12-page agreement and the four accompanying explanatory and technical documents, the settlement will be signed in three different ceremonies this Saturday in Paris.

Within 15 days of the signing the first American POW will be picked up in Hanoi by American personnel in American planes, with the entire contingent of 587 U.S. captives–473 in North Vietnam, 108 in the South and 6 in Laos--to be released at about two-week intervals for two months.

The withdrawal of the last 24,000 American troops remaining in South Vietnam will begin and continue at a similar rate.

The cease-fire initially will be limited to Vietnam, because of the complexities in the other two Indochina nations.

But Kissinger added that "It is our firm expectation that within a short period of time there will be a formal cease-fire in Laos.

As to Cambodia, the presidential adviser said "it is our expectation that a de facto cease-fire will come into being over a period of time relevant to the execution of this agreement."

Kissinger told a national broadcast and television audience that "no one side got all it wanted", but he claimed the United States obtained most of its essential demands, particularly concerning the right of political self-determination for the South.

Le Duc Tho saw great gains for his side, as well, even to the point of claiming the agreement was a "great victory for the Vietnamese people."

In addition, the settlement contained these basic provisions:

—A cease-fire takes effect in Vietnam at 7 p.m. EST Saturday.

—All infiltration of troops and war supplies into South Vietnam is prohibited without qualification.

—South Vietnam retains the right to unlimited military aid on a strict replacement basis.

—Both sides are banned from violating the demilitarized zone at the 17th Parallel.

—While no provision is made directly for the withdrawal of the estimated 145,000 North Vietnamese troops now in the South, these units are prohibited from any military activity and all parties agreed to reduction and demobilization of all forces.

—There can be no use of Cambodia and Laos to encroach on South Vietnam and all foreign troops in those two states must be withdrawn.

—The political future of South Vietnam will be determined only by the South Vietnamese and the current Saigon government remains in existence, at least until an election is held.

—Any move toward reunification of the two Vietnams must be peaceful and come by negotiation.

—A National Council of National Reconciliation and Concord will organize elections for South Vietnam but will not in any way be a coalition government although containing Communist and neutralist representatives as well as members of the current Saigon regime.

—Poland, Indonesia, Canada and Hungary will provide 1,160 men to supervise the cease-fire and elections, while other commissions representing the various parties will operate as well.

—An international conference including the Vietnamese elements, the United States, Soviet Union and mainland China will be held before the end of February to guarantee the agreement.

On The Inside:

•Health Services see page three

•Details On POWs see page four

Commentary

Campus Center History Cited

By CINDY GONET

For many students on campus the question of the relative worth of the Campus Center is seen in light of the $62.50 fee that is paid by each student for the use of that building for this academic year.

The history of the Campus Center is probably obscure to many students, from the building's inception to the present day. Richard Nelson, who as Chairperson of the Campus Center-Student Union Board of Governors is probably the student most aware of the past and present operations of the two buildings, offered a brief history and some personal observations of the complex yesterday.

In 1957 the Student Union Building was born. It was financed by the students with a fee of $35. The building presented no problems; it wasn't spectacularly beautiful, but it filled a need.

By the mid 60's however, voices were heard asking for expansion of facilities due to a doubling then a tripling of enrollment. "Like a kid in a candystore", Nelson stated, "we wanted one of those neat continuing education/conference centers too".

Plans arrived in 1965, calling for a conference center set atop the student area. This architectural brainstorm seemed most practical as the conferences usually take place on a weekday and the students get most use out of the Center on the weekends.

"Buildings similiar to the Campus Center have been successful with large alumni endowments, but unfortunately Amherst wasn't blessed with such a set-up", Nelson added. Funds for this complex would come from student fees, as before, and from State monies.

In the summer of '67 the Building Authority of the University decided it was not financially feasible to have multiple financing. The students were left holding the bag, although they were not allowed to speak of their opinions in the construction of the Center. Because it became a student center, students had to meet the remainder of the bill not paid by any funds generated by the income generating areas.

"As it stands presently, students will be paying for the building and the deed will go to the state," stated Nelson.

Gerald Scanlon, acting as coordinator of student activities, Warren Grinnan, acting as manager of the Campus Center, and Dan Fitzpatrick, Associate Dean of Students were administrators of the complex by 1970.

That year was spent mainly in organizing operations which were very unsuccessful. Most income operations lost money.

By the Summer of 1971, Dan Fitzpatrick was replaced by Gerald Scanlon. Reporting budgets and mistakes at this time became quite confusing. To clarify this hazy picture, Scanlon, although acting Director of the Center was made responsible only for the Student Activities staff. Scanlon would report to the Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs. Warren Grinnan, manager of the Center, did not report to Scanlon, but to the Vice Chancellor for Administrative Services.

By the Fall of 1971, the Student Union Governing Board (SUG Board) realized this separate reporting arrangement didn't coincide with their goal of integration of all of the functions.

Another unsuccessful fiscal year arrived in 1972. Revenues were down 60%. The Campus Center store, slated to make $250,000 turned a profit of only $150,000. The Food Services were supposed to earn $10,000, but instead made $3,000. The hotel was budgeted to $150,000 but again was short with a profit of $50,000. "The only good income-producing area was the pinball machines," said Nelson.

In the Fall of this academic year, because of meanderings through politics, the SUG Board was replaced by the Campus Center Board of Governors. The new body reorganized management and budgeting. Reports and budgets were open to investigation once a month.

In December, 1972, the Arthur D. Little, Inc. of Cambridge, a firm of consultants, was hired for $35,000 to study the revenue producing areas. By March 5 the study should be completed dealing with 1) viewing how well or poorly the Center is financially established, 2) deciding how much more revenue can be produced in the near future, 3) projecting new income areas.

Loyalty Oath Delayed

By MARK VOGLER

The Massachusetts State Loyalty Oath issue involving the cases of two UMass groups and another from Berkshire Community College, Pittsfield, remained stagnant during the intersession period because of the unavailability of judges.

A trial date, which called for the consolidation of the three cases, had originally been scheduled for Jan. 8. But the forced retirement of older judges slowed down the court process considerably, resulting in a delay which could go on for two more weeks.

The strongest court action taken so far in the case involves the class action suit filed by three UMass - Boston faculty members who received a preliminary injunction Dec. 1.

The injunction restrains the university personnel office of all three campuses from dismissing anyone employed by the university between October 29, 1969 and September 21, 1972 who refused to sign the oath.

September 21 was the date that a letter was addressed from the employing agencies of the university campuses to all university employees (faculty, staff, and students employed by the university) informing them of the Nov. 15 deadline for signing the oath and the possible consequences for failing to do so.

The oath had been under a three-year period of adjudication until April of last year when the Supreme Court ruled that the law requiring any state employee to sign a loyalty oath was constitutional.

Atty Stephen Oleskey, legal counsel for the UMass-Boston plaintiffs, was forced by the courts to join his case with the cases of 33 BCC and 18 UMass-Amherst faculty and staff members. Both cases are represented by Atty. William A. Norris of Cummington and were pending on injunctions.

Atty. Norris disfavored consolidation of the court cases, but his objection was overridden by the court. Norris said that the three cases should have been kept separate to insure equal representation for the three groups.

As it stands now, whenever an official trial is established, the case will be tried as Abrams et al vs. Ford et al with Attys. Olesky and Ford teaming up as the legal counsel for the oath opponents.

The movements to abolish the Massachusetts oath received a big lift early last month when Representative James Collins of the snd Hampshire District and State senator John Olver of Amherst filed legislation to wipe out the 1949 enactment off the books.

Rep. Collins was fairly optimistic about the bill being supported by Massachusetts legislators and maintained "the courts are a slower process" and that "the quickest remedy to the situation is legislative action."

Management Difficulties In People's Market Co-op

Management difficulties have forced the postponement of the originally scheduled opening of "Peoples Market", a student operated food co-operative to be located in the Student Union.

Robert Chiller, chairman of the committee which formed the co-operative, said yesterday that the original January 25 opening was being pushed back at least three weeks to allow for resolution of staffing and other problems.

The co-operative has been established under the auspices of the Student Senate and the Commuter Assembly; the latter supplied the sum of $4000 to start the co-operative.

Merchandise to be handled by the market will include food produce, as well as health foods and canned goods. The store will be entirely student staffed and will be open from noon to 2:00 a.m. daily.

The market will be located on the main level (third floor) of the student union in one of the rooms adjacent to the ballroom.

All monies collected by the store will be directed toward the paying of employees, the purchase of equipment, the replenishment of stock, and the paying back of the Commuter Assembly loan.

Photo Staff To Meet

There will be a mandatory meeting for all Collegian photo staffers Sunday night at 7:00 p.m. Please attend.

Health Plan (cont.)

(Continued from P. 3)

"First off a student must 'shop around' for a hospital that is under the auspices of the plan. Hospital Room and Board will then be paid in full for the first 3 days and thereafter only up to 80% for the 177 days," he said.

Other limitations he cited were, 1) limited specialist consultation 2) eyeglass prescriptions or eye examinations 3) limited dental care.

Averill believes that many of these deficiencies would be eliminated by the institution of the faculty/student health insurance plan.

Financially speaking, Averill says it should be emphasized that the faculty, staff, and dependent plan would be organized separately from the student health plan. "This means," he said, "that although both plans may share centralized facilities and the same staff, they will maintain, their own separate integrity in fee structure."

Below is a listed comparison table of how much it costs faculty and students now and how much it might cost under the proposed new plan.

Project 10 Revived

By DON GLICKSTEIN

Previously chaotic, feckless, and down, Project 10 is continuing its revival begun last semester under the aegis of a Faculty Senate mandate for experimentation.

Located in Southwest's Pierpont House, the 5-year old Project is the University's "experimental" college.

President of the University, Robert C. Wood, will teach one of the 50 Project 10 courses, sections, and seminars. His seminar is entitled "Mode of Inquiry: Political Institutions" and will include a study of institutional change. Wood is a former Secretary of Housing and Urban Development.

Other Project 10 courses cover topics from bookkeeping and Egyptian hieroglyphics (taught by an Astronomy professor) to law (taught by Student Senate lawyer Dick Howland) and "James Joyce and Psychoanalytical Consciousness".

Three hundred undergraduate and graduate students, living both in Pierpont and off-campus, are members of Project 10. Of these, 55 freshmen and sophomores, participants in the Project's "Inquiry" program, are exempted from core requirements. With a faculty advisor, the Inquiry students develop individual programs of study which do not necessarily include formal classes. There has been student agitation recently within the Project about the maximum quota for Inquiry program admissions.

Project 10, in addition to its counselors and its head of residence, has two full-time faculty–Walter Gern in English and Joan Chandler in history. The Director, Charles Adams, is located in Pierpont House, 5-0871. Project courses are open to residents of Pierpont and Cance House, and to other students with the permission of the instructor.

Poor Richard's

Staff Meeting

Tonight, 7:30

Collegian Office

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

The office of the DAILY COLLEGIAN is on the second floor of the Student Union on the campus of the University of Massachusetts, zip code 01002. Telephones: 545-2550 (news); 545-0344 (sports); 545-0731 (business).

Second-class postage is paid in Amherst. THE DAILY COLLEGIAN publishes Monday through Friday during the academic year, except during vacation, exam periods or holidays. Accepted for mailing under the authority of an act of March 8, 1879, as amended by an act of June 11, 1943. Subscription rates are $6.00 per semester or $10.00 per year.

FULL-TIME PART-TIME

Hearst Corp. expanding into Amherst-Springfield area. A neat appearance and the ability to communicate with people net high earnings! Sales experience helpful but not necessary. Full training program! Car necessary! Call Al, 546-6750 between 6 - 8 p.m.

C.U.M.Q.U.A.T.S. –

Centralized

University

Menu

Question

Answering

Telephone

System

Dial 545-2626

Students listen attentively to VITA volunteer on tax assistance program. Photo by Karasu.

Vita Aids Tax Problems

By AVIS YUNI

The Volunteer Income Tax Assistance Program (VITA) will offer any student on campus-undergraduate or graduate-free assistance in filling out his/her federal or state tax forms. The time and place for this assistance is yet to be announced, Bill Burke, one of the Outreach coordinators informed the MDC.

VITA, a program sponsored by the Center for Outreach Programs in conjunction with the Accounting department, is presently training 190 students to fill out the basic federal 10-40 and 10-40A long and short forms, the Massachusetts state tax forms, and their supporting schedules.

Twelve representatives of the IRS are instructing the students who must attend four three hour night sessions, January 22nd-24th and 29th to learn about the federal forms, and one afternoon session on either January 23rd, 24th, or 25th to learn the state form.

From January 30th through April 16th the students will offer tax assistance five days a week, Monday through Friday, 3-5 PM and 7-9 PM, through three community agencies - the North End Community Center, the South End Community Center and the Urban League of Springfield. They will work out of these agencies to assist the low-income families, those in bursing homes, the elderly, and others in the Northhampton, Holyoke, and Amherst area.

VITA representatives will be at the three agencies and help those who come to them, Burke, stated. Advertising by the agencies and VITA has been done in the areas to make people aware of the service. Adds and articles will be placed in newspapers, and appearances made on five minute talk shows on TV and free radio spots. VITA will also inform the Springfield Housing Authority of the service, which will then ask those people in their residential areas if they want help.

The nursing homes in the areas will be contacted and if desired, specific times will be arranged when VITA representatives shall come to them. Shut-ins will be able to contact the agencies or VITA itself for assistance.

At the end of the training session, Burke stated, the students will have learned how to fill out the basic federal 10-40 and 10-40A and state forms and their supporting schedules. The supporting schedules encompass any variations from the basic forms, such as child-care expenses, retirement income credit, etc. The students will have learned how to record depreciations, medical expenses, refunds from FICA tax, and other basic things but will not know how to handle deeper things such as stocks and bonds.

They will have been exposed to the different types of problems they will probably come up against, one instructor stated. A graduate or experienced tax form man will be on call each night at one of the three community agencies to give advice to students who encounter problems they are unsure of.

At the end of the sessions, the individual instructors will determine the proficiency of their students through tests, sample problems, overall impressions, etc. Burke stated the students will be matched up with the agencies and any who have found the forms too difficult will probably withdraw on their own. Those who find it enjoyable will probably do extra work.

One, two, or three credits will be given according to the amount of time the student puts in. For two hours a week for an eleven week period and a short journal of his experience the student will receive one credit. Students receiving two credits will work three hours and keep a journal and students receiving three credits will work four hours a week and write a report of case studies. All grades will be Pass-Fail.

Programs such as this are also being sponsored in other colleges and universities, such as San Francisco and Fresno State Colleges in California, the University of Michigan, and Community colleges in Florida. UMass, however, has the largest number of students participating, Burke stated. Since the training sessions have already begun there can also be no further enrollment.

Burke stated the students will get three things from the program - they will help people, learn something practical, and get credits. He said the Outreach, which is sponsoring VITA with the Accounting Department, tries to satisfy student desires for experience with relation to their major and meet the needs of the community.

Students questioned in regard to VITA felt it was worthwhile, interesting, and would help in the future. Some students and IRS instructors felt too much was covered at once and too fast. Instructors felt there wasn't enough time allotted the course, and that it was being given in less time than it was designed for.

One classified it as an "awareness course", making the students aware of where to get the answers for the problems. The students questioned are looking forward to working with the people.

New Health Plans Proposed

By STEPHEN FINE

The University Health Services has proposed a new prepaid health plan that would fill in many of the gaps that now exist in both student and faculty health insurance plans.

Presently, faculty and students are enrolled in separate plans. Most faculty are in the state-funded Aetna plan, while students are mandatorily in the University Health Service's program, with an option to join a supplemental health insurance plan with limited coverage.

In a two year study conducted by a Faculty Senate committee on the "Reorganization of the University Health Program", it was found there were many deficiencies in the Faculty's Aetna plan.

Specifically, the committee found the Aetna plan didn't place any emphasis on preventive care. The committee pointed out that the Aetna plan is only a "payment mechanism" and does not make provisions to insure the availability of health care when needed.

The committee also pointed out that there is presently a problem of unavailability of primary health care through the Aetna plan in the general vicinity of the university. It was found that physician services are limited in areas, such as Sunderland, Deerfield, Conway, and in some areas, physicians are not taking in new patients. Mental health services were also found limited and unavailable to persons who were unable to pay the necessary fees.

The committee concluded that a prepaid health plan such as the one proposed would emphasize preventive care in the treatment of subscribers. They said that members would receive more services than people ordinarily would when paying a physician separately because preventive care makes early treatment possible before the problem necessitates hospitalization, which would cause lower hospitalization rates.

Other reasons given for lower hospitalization rates include the fact that in a prepaid group practice the subscriber is covered for most medical expenses (like a physician's visit, x-rays, and laboratory services) on an out-patient basis as well as for hospitalization. This would mean that a subscriber would not have an incentive to be treated in a hospital, since the same services would be available outside at the same cost.

At the present time students pay a mandatory health service fee of $77 an academic year to receive a comprehensive primary health care from the infirmary. These vary from Emergency Treatment available 24 hours a day to mental health consulation. Services not offered include intensive hospital care and specialty surgery. These are partially covered under a supplemental health care plan.

Students also have an option to join this health insurance plan which costs $37.50 a year. It is designed to take care of hospitalization, surgery and emergency cases away from the University.

Barry Averill, Director of Health Services, said, however, that there are deficiencies in this plan. Specifically, he pointed to the hospital care a single or married student would receive under the plan.

(Continued on P. 2)

Comparison Chart

Editor's Note:
This chart represents a comparison of health fees now in existence, and when the new health plan is instituted.

	SINGLE STUDENT	MARRIED STUDENT
NOW	$ 77.00 Mandatory health fee for two semesters 24.00 Optional summer fee 37.50 Optional health insurance $138.50 Limited, comprehensive primary care	$167.00 For limited dependent health insurance coverage - no regular out-patient care - - - - - - - - - - - - $138.50 Student (primary care and insurance coverage) 167.00 Dependents $305.50 Total cost for limited care for one year for student and dependents
THEN	$ 77.00 Mandatory health fee for two semesters 73.00 (Approximate) optional prepaid plan $150.00 (Approximate) total health care	$150-$225 For dependent total medical care - - - - - - - - - - - - $150.00 Student (primary and maj. med. $150-$225 Dependents (optional prepaid plan) $300-$375 Total cost for total care for student and dependents
	SINGLE FACULTY/STAFF	MARRIED FACULTY/STAFF
NOW	Fac/Staff Pays: $ 61 Health insurance State Pays: $183 Health insurance $244 Total cost of hea. health insur.* Limited outpatient preventive care	Fac/Staff Pays: $143.28 Health insur. $29.86 Health insur. State Pays: $573.98 Total cost of health insur. for fac/staff and dependents *Limited outpatient preventive care
THEN	Fac/Staff Pays: $ 70.00 Prepaid Health Plan 210.00 Approximate cost for total medical care	Fac/Staff Pays: $150.00 Prepaid Health Plan State Pays: 450.00 Approximate cost of total care for fac/staff and dependents

Note: All figures are approximate and based on 1972 dollars.

SALE

PANTS $6

2 styles offered

1/3 rd. OFF and more

tops from 1.95

OFF

SWEATERS 6.95

HATS $50

JACKETS 5.95 → up

limited supply

available in

The University Store — Campus Center

An Alternative Learning Experience

The modular credit course — Public Alternative Schools — is continued this spring. Over thirty separate experiences to choose from plus a number of optional credit-earning opportunities. Open to graduates and undergraduates. Negotiate 30-1200 credits. See Phil DeTurk, Roy Nichols, Newt Clark, Berkshire House, Room 219, or call 545-0941 for information. Most classes Thurs., 7:30 p.m., 204 SBA.

MDC NEWS HOTLINE 5-2550

C.U.M.Q.U.A.T.S.*

ENGIN-EER-ING IS the professional art of applying science to the optimum conversion of natural resources to the benefit of man."

Stanford School of Engineering's wide-ranging graduate programs offer qualified men and women exciting avenues to rewarding, satisfying, professional careers.

The Stanford School of Engineering is searching for graduate students from among qualified majors in engineering, mathematics, and the sciences.

A representative from the school will be on campus to discuss Stanford's ten engineering departments and interdisciplinary programs, research opportunities, the financial assistance available, and other aspects of engineering at Stanford.

- February 1, 1973

Make arrangements to meet him through

- Career Planning & Placement Service

SCHOOL OF ENGINEERING
Stanford University

In The Nation And The World

Reaction Hopeful For Peace Agreement

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Loudspeakers that a month ago warned of air raids blared out news of peace in Hanoi on Wednesday and the city was reported preparing for its first peaceful lunar new year celebration in years.

The South Vietnamese in Saigon seemed restrained in contrast after hearing word from President Nguyen Van Thieu that their struggle to achieve lasting peace may be more dangerous and difficult than war.

But for American GIs, President Nixon's announcement Tuesday night that agreement on a cease-fire in the Vietnam war had been reached marked a time for parties. There was a run on liquor, beer and soft drinks in U.S. canteens in South Vietnam.

Leaders around the world hailed the cease-fire agreement but said more effort and good will is necessary to make peace lasting.

A Tass dispatch from Hanoi said the street loudspeakers, which had been used to warn of U.S. air raids, were continually broadcasting word of the Vietnam peace agreement and that reconstruction work has begun in North Vietnamese capital.

Markets were filled with goods and decorations were going up for the first Tet-lunar new year celebrations in peace for many years, Tass correspondent Alexander Mineyev said.

In Saigon, some South Vietnamese said they would hold off on any celebrations until they see whether the Viet Cong adhere to the cease-fire that is to begin Saturday. But others said they were ready to celebrate Tet on Feb. 3 and some were wondering if the South Vietnamese regime would lift its ban on the use of fireworks, a traditional way of ushering in the new year in Vietnam.

In Moscow Politburo member Andrei Kirilenko saw the agreement as a "great victory" for the Vietnamese Communists. The government newspaper Izvestia reported the pact met most of the Communist demands and "the task is now to insure that the agreement is observed and carried out exactly."

A government spokesman in Poland, one of the four countries which will police the cease-fire, sounded a similar note when he called the agreement "a victory for healthy common sense."

Foreign correspondents in Peking reported that China welcomed the agreement not only in the interest of the Vietnames and American people, but also as a step toward easing tension in the Far East and Asia in general.

The Chinese expect the war in Cambodia to continue, despite the cease-fire in Vietnam, and also foresee further political struggle between President Nguyen Van Thieu and the Viet Cong, Japan's Kyodo news service reported.

Elsewhere in Asia leaders welcomed the agreement as an important first step toward peace.

Reconstruction was also a foremost consideration in other countries. "We are certainly looking forward to playing our role as Canadians in the reconstruction of that part of Southeast Asia," Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau of Canada declared.

The United States is expected to provide the major contribution toward reconstruction. No figure is set in the cease-fire agreement, but the United States promised aid to both parts of the country and officials earlier estimated the figure at $7-1/2 billion over a five-year period.

Pope Paul VI spoke of the need to aid Vietnam, at a meeting with newsmen. He said he shares the world's happiness over the cease-fire agreement and called for renewed efforts to rebuild the country.

The government of France, host to the peace negotiators, expressed "profound satisfaction" with the agreement and reaffirmed its determination to aid in reconstruction.

British Foreign Secretary Sir Alex Douglas-Home hailed the Vietnam pact but warned: "The history of Indochina gives little scope for easy optimism."

In the Middle East, the world's other key trouble spot, the Vietnam agreement brought expressions of hope for peace there, too.

Jordanian Prime Minister Ahmed Louzi said the Vietnam pact "could serve as a takeoff point to resolve the Arab-Israeli conflict in the Middle East."

And in Israel, Foreign Minister Abba Eban commented: "Once again the power of negotiation in every international dispute has been demonstrated. This crucial turning point takes place once the parties overcome their complexes and hostility and talk to each other."

Installments Planned For Prisoner Release

WASHINGTON (AP) — Presidential adviser Henry Kissinger announced Wednesday that North Vietnam would begin releasing American prisoners of war in Hanoi within 15 days of signing of a peace agreement Saturday.

No firm date was disclosed but Pentagon sources said they were hopeful the initial release would come within 24 hours, possibly Sunday.

Speaking at a White House news conference, Kissinger said the 479 U.S. POWs held in North Vietnam and Laos would be turned over to American military personnel in Hanoi "at intervals of two weeks or about 15 days in roughly equal installments."

The 108 POWs held captive in South Vietnam will be released to American authorities "at designated points in the South," he said.

Under terms of the agreement, "the return of all captured persons...shall be completed within 60 days of the signing of the agreement at a rate no lower than the rate of withdrawal from South Vietnam of United States forces and those of other countries."

Kissinger said U.S. Air Force planes staffed with medical personnel would fly directly to Hanoi to pick up the prisoners at mutually agreed on dates. Some of the men have been in enemy hands more than eight years, longer than Americans have been held captive in any war.

The C141 jet transports standing by in the Western Pacific awaiting flight orders apparently will be permitted to land at Gia Lam Airport across the Red River from downtown Hanoi, the same field bombed by U.S. planes last month.

The document spelling out the agreement on handling POWs covers civilian as well as military prisoners on both sides and provides that the seriously ill, wounded or maimed, and old persons and women shall be returned first.

Under the protocol, the United States, North Vietnam and the other warring parties are obligated to exchange complete lists of captured military personnel and civilians on Saturday, the same day the agreement is signed.

According to the Pentagon, there are captured--473 in North Vietnam, 108 held in South Vietnam, and 6 in Laos. Another 1,335 are listed as missing--515 in the North, 505 in the South and 315 in Laos.

The North Vietnamese, however, currently acknowledge holding only 380 American GIs. They have never given any indication that they know the whereabouts of the missing.

From Hanoi, the first stop outside Indochina for the American prisoners, will be Clark Field in the Phillipines.

Philippine Stop Likely For POWs

CLARK AIR FORCE BASE, Philippines (AP) — "We're all ready if the prisoners come here," said S. Sgt. Jim McDermid.

The Indianapolis, Ind., airman reflected the general anticipation and excitement at this sprawling U.S. installation that will soon play a key role in getting U.S. POWs home to their families.

Spokesmen said Wednesday they still have no official word that Clark will be a part of Operation Homecoming. But they also said "Clark is ready" if the prisoners pass through on their way back to the United States.

Henry A. Kissinger said in Washington that the prisoners will be turned over to American medical personnel in Hanoi at intervals of about two weeks in "roughly equal installments," with all due out within 60 days from Saturday.

He said the first batch will come out about Feb. 11, but did not describe their itinerary between Hanoi and the United States. Clark Air Force Base, however, has long been considered the logical checking-in point because of its location and medical airlift experience during the Vietnam conflict.

Kissinger said 479 Americans were known to be held in North Vietnam and Laos, with an additional 108 in South Vietnam. The latter, he added, will be released to American officials in the areas where they are held.

Col. Homer A. Davis, director of information for the 13th Air Force, said Clark will do all it can to make the returning prisoners feel welcome.

In Brief...

Justice Dept. Files Suit Vs. Boston

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Justice Department filed suit Wednesday to end what it termed discrimination by the Boston Fire Department in the hiring of blacks and Spanish surnamed persons.

The suit, filed in U.S. District Court in Boston, charged that there are only 16 black and 3 Puerto Rican or Mexican-American members of the nearly 2,100-man fire fighting force in Boston.

R.I. To Try To Prevent Teacher Strikes

PROVIDENCE (AP)—A legislative attempt to head off a recurrence of teacher strikes which shut some 50,000 students out of Rhode Island classrooms last fall has been launched in the State Senate.

Sen. Pat Nero, D-Cranston, sponsored a bill Tuesday to establish binding arbitration on teacher salaries and other money matters in contract disputes. Currently, state statute prescribes binding arbitration on everything but monetary issues in stalled contract talks.

Police Car Kills Suspect

BOSTON (AP)—Ardie Clifton, 22, of Boston's Mattapan section was killed Tuesday when run over by a police car as he allegedly was trying to escape police after an assault and robbery, police said.

C.U.M.Q.U.A.T.S.*

Infirmary (In An Emergency) [54] 5-2671

KALIKI KAI is coming

BIG NEW YEAR'S SALE on antique coats & furs

January Black Sale on Antique Clothing

MINK — SEALSKIN
RABBIT — RACCOON PERSIAN LAMB

creation antiques

235 N. Pleasant St., Amherst Carriage Shops
Daily 10-6, Fri. 'till 9 549-1334

That's what the Paulists are all about.

For more information write: Father Donald C. Campbell, Room 103.

Paulist Fathers.
415 West 59th Street
New York, N.Y. 10019.

THE JOY OF LIVING IS IN THE JOY OF Giving Praying
Working

Sharing the joys the laughter
the problems the success and failures

knowing that where there is human need
in the cities,
the suburbs,
in parishes,
on campus

the Paulist is there helping counseling rejoicing in the presence of the good and in the signs of hope
around us

Daniel Ellsberg doubts that the current cease fire will have any effect on his trial with Anthony Russo. He is being tried for espionage, conspiracy, and theft after his release of the Pentagon Papers.

Ellsberg Questions Justified Secrecy

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Daniel Ellsberg said Wednesday he feels his release of the secret Pentagon Papers helped speed a Vietnam peace, but at his trial the government continued efforts to prove him guilty of espionage, conspiracy and theft.

Ellsberg told reporters he doubts that the Vietnam cease-fire will have any effect on the case in which he and Anthony Russo are on trial. And he expressed skepticism of how long the peace would last.

He said the government would seek to prove through the trial that secrecy -- including classification of the Pentagon Papers and, by implication, President Nixon's silence during peace negotiations -- is justified.

"A major effort will be made by the administration again to glamorize and legitimatize secrecy," Ellsberg said, "by associating it with an event about which we're all very happy, the announcement of peace in Vietnam. I think that's a fraud."

Russo told reporters, "I just hope that Americans have learned one thing from this entire messy involvement--that there is a need to renew the American Revolution. The First Amendment is the essence of the American Revolution, and we have to get back to that."

In the trial courtroom, the government prosecutor showed jurors numerous slides of pages from the top secret Pentagon study of U.S. involvement in the Vietnam war. For the first time, jurors saw details of the U.S. role in the overthrow and death of South Vietnam's President Ngo Dinh Diem in 1963.

As the slides rolled by, government witness Brig. Gen. Paul F. Gorman, the top military supervisor of the Pentagon Papers project, told jurors why he believed release of the papers would have helped a foreign power.

"No single effort by anyone to bring this war to an end has been wasted," he said. "No effort was too great."

But Ellsberg added, "The war has lasted four years longer than it had to to achieve this kind of settlement."

Of his own part in releasing the Pentagon Papers, Ellsberg said, "If the Pentagon Papers brought President Nixon to the decision to end this war a day earlier or a week earlier...and I think they did, then obviously everything Tony and I did was more than worthwhile."

Ellsberg and Russo have admitted their roles in leaking the Pentagon Papers to news media in 1971. But they contend they broke no laws because the history of Vietnam involvement rightfully belonged to the American public.

During Gorman's testimony, jurors read of the United States' involvement in plans for a coup to overthrow Diem, of CIA undercover agents meeting with Vietnamese planners of the coup and of then Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge's dealing with the "coup committee."

Johnson Honored At Capital

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lyndon B. Johnson returned in death yesterday to a capital preparing for the peace he sought so long.

And, as his beloved Lady Bird stood composed beside his successor in the White House, the 36th President of the United States was eulogized as a man whose "ambition for himself was nothing compared to his ambition for America."

Johnson's flag-draped coffin was borne in stately military splendor from near the White House to the Capitol--the twin edifices of his power for more than 30 years--to lie in state in the great Rotunda as eight other Presidents had before him.

Thousands lined the procession route down Constitution Avenue and thousands waited to file past the black-draped catafalque of Lincoln's time. The former President will be buried in Texas Thursday after funeral services in Washington.

"He gave me one guiding principle," said J. J. Pickle, the congressman now representing Johnson's old district in Texas. "He said 'congressman, when you vote, vote for the people.' This was the same principle that guided Lyndon Johnson."

And Dean Rusk, his secretary of state, said Johnson cannot be portrayed in a few strokes of a brush.

"As for me, I would begin with his deep compassion for his fellow man."

But the most moving tributes came from the silent attention given the funeral cortege by the crowds lining the route to the Capitol.

President Nixon, who only hours earlier had announced the initialing of a peace agreement with North Vietnam, rode in the motorcade behind the horse-drawn caisson. At the Capitol, he took Mrs. Johnson's arm and escorted her to the solemn rite.

The Johnson daughters, Lynda Bird and Luci; their husbands and two of the four Johnson grandchildren, followed. They smiled as they acknowledged the condolences of the great and near great.

Soviet China Link Broken

MOSCOW (AP)—The Paris peace agreement provides for the end of a sort of Soviet-American war by proxy. It also implies the collapse of Russia's most visible enterprise of collaboration with China.

Diplomats here Wednesday were already forecasting that with the Vietnam war behind them, the Soviets and Americans would be moving together at an accelerated pace to build on the framework established at last year's Moscow summit.

They also foresaw that the Soviets, no longer linked to the Chinese in Vietnam, would harden their stance toward Peking.

As recently as Dec. 21, General-Secretary Leonid I. Brezhnev of the Soviet Communist party, said the future of Soviet-American relations depended in large part on "the turn in the question of ending the war in Vietnam."

Speaking at the height of the U.S. bombing of Hanoi and Haiphong, Brezhnev gave voice to the Soviet discomfort at the breakdown in the peace talks in which Moscow had a large stake.

A measure of this stake was indicated by what diplomats close to Moscow's position describe as an "active behind-the-scenes role" played by the Soviets to get the negotiations going again.

The Russians were said to have urged North Vietnam to make the concessions necessary to produce a draft agreement acceptable to the White House.

The Soviets need American capital and technology for their domestic economy, and Washington's cooperation in promoting some kind of lasting settlement in Europe, as symbolized by the Helsinki security talks and the proposed negotiations on force reduction in Central Europe.

The next step in the Soviet-American reconciliation was to be a visit to the United States by Brezhnev. The visit, in return for Nixon's Moscow trip last May, was reported endangered by the renewed bombing last month. Diplomats here think the visit has been "unblocked" by the Paris agreement.

Sarge Unveils New Budget

BOSTON (AP) — A $2.465 billion state budget, touted as the end of "the unhappy recent of the budget spiral," was delivered to the Massachusetts legislature Wednesday by Gov. Francis W. Sargent.

The fiscal year 1974 budget, promised on a sweeping reorganization plan which must also be approved by the lawmakers, would limit the overall increase over the previous year to 1.9 per cent, the governor said in his message.

In the period since fiscal year 1969, when the state took over welfare from the cities and towns, annual budget increases have averaged 14.8 per cent.

Secretary of Administration and Finance William I. Cowin outlined the budget proposal in a series of briefings Wednesday morning for members of the legislature and the press.

He said the budget calls for a net reduction of 2,306 state government jobs over the first year of the reorganization plan.

Sargent, in his message, promised that there would be no supplementary budget to cover expenditures not provided for in the fiscal year budget.

The budget, he said, "is a scrupulously accurate one. I have included in these recommendations amounts which completely reflect all of the costs of the programs and policies which the Commonwealth ought to purse during the fiscal year."

The administration made similar assurances last year, but last week the legislature received a $199 million deficiency to cover unpaid back Medicaid bills and other items. Total estimated appropriations for fiscal 1973 are $2.42 billion.

"Absent the occurrence of some major unanticipated state obligation," the governor said Wednesday, "there will be no later appropriation requests in fiscal 1974."

Cowin said the reorganization plans submitted by the state cabinet secretaries over the last two weeks made possible a "savings" of $88 million, representing money the state would otherwise have to spend or revenue it would otherwise not receive.

Two-thirds of the total budget, $1.612 billion, will be funded through state taxes, Cowin said.

Revenue to pay for the remainder of the state's appropriations comes from the federal government, state fees or other sources.

Fire 5-2111

C.U.M.Q.U.A.T.S.*

Sale
NOW!! All
Winter Boots
50% off
(1/2 price)
Group of Shoes
♀ & ♂ →
$6-$7-$8-$9-$10
the SHOE-BIN

CULTURE CORNER

Hi there, Culture People...

Q: Where did Oedipus go for Hot Meals as good as Mother's?

A: The Catalyst, where else

Get a meal that's more than Oedible....All Rhodes end at the Catalyst.

TODAY YOU MAY SIGN UP — NEXT WEEK

Senior Portraits

This is not the part of your body which will appear in your portrait - probably.

Your Picture Will Be Taken

Details — Sign up for appointment at Index office 2nd floor Student Union.

Ann Mool Kawi Thayer, a page in the Vermont House of Representatives, and an eighth grade student at Richard Junior-Senior High School, receives instructions on delivery of a message from clerk Robert Picher. Ann, as a foundling, lived for a year in a Kowloon, China, orphanage. Now a resident of Vermont for less than two years, she was chosen to be one of the corps of 18 pages who carry messages amd mail, and generally do the legwork for the members of the 1973 Vermont legislature. (AP).

N.E. POW's Wives Rejoice

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

"It's so wonderful, so unbelievable, so long in coming," said Mrs. Donald Cook of Burlington, Vt., typifying the reaction of New England wives of prisoners of war on learning of the Vietnam peace accord.

But the women didn't want to get their hopes too high.

"I guess I'm a little doubtful," Mrs. Cook said after the Tuesday announcement, "I want to wait until I see him get off the plane. I guess I'm really not so much doubtful-it's just unbelievable."

Her husband, a Marine major, was captured in 1965 in South Vietnam. Mrs. Cook received word of him only twice-once in 1967 when a released prisoner of war carried out a letter from him and again in 1970 when a Viet Cong defector told of seeing Cook.

"He said he was alive and well," Mrs. Cook said.

Doubts were expressed more strongly by Maureen Dunn of Randolph, Mass., whose husband, a Navy flier, has been missing in action since 1968.

"I won't believe it until I see the whites of their eyes," Mrs. Dunn said. "I don't want to get on that roller coaster again. I'm just keeping my fingers crossed. When they're on U.S. territory, then I'll believe it."

Mrs. Dunn believes her husband, Navy Lt. Joseph Dunn, is a prisoner in China. He has been listed as missing in action after he was shot down over China in 1968.

"My self and most of the people who are in the same boat have become very, very cautious," said Carol North of Wellfleet, Mass., former board chairman of the National League of Families of American Prisoners Missing in Southeast Asia.

Mrs. North, wife of captured Air Force Maj. Kenneth W. North, said she has supported President Nixon's peace plans since 1968 and thinks he has "done an outstanding job."

"It's been a very difficult position," Mrs. North said. "It's much more complicated than it looks.

"If there had been an immediate withdrawal, there would have been little hope for the prisoners of war being returned."

"I feel so good," said Anne Sullivan of Springfield, Mass. Her son, Navy Lt. Timothy Sullivan, was shot down in Vietnam five years ago.

"It's been a longer ordeal for him than it has for us. It all seems very definite now."

"I guess I sort of expected Mr. Nixon's message to be of a cease-fire. But it was still a shock to hear him say it," said Carolyn Carpenter of Sanford, Maine, whose husband, Navy Lt. Comdr. Allan R. Carpenter was shot down in 1966 over Haiphong Harbor in North Vietnam.

Mrs. Charles Greene of Needham, Mass., said she didn't care whether her POW son, Air Force Col. Charles E. Greene Jr., was the last one out "as long as they do it right and thoroughly."

Walter Fitts of Abington, Mass., father of Army Staff Sgt. Richard Fitts, missing in action since November, 1968, said, "I'm so happy I'm ready to die. It's been a long wait, my friend."

Of President Nixon, Fitts said, "I think he did a damned good job."

No. Viet Forces To Decline

WASHINGTON (AP)-The United States expects some 145,000 North Vietnamese troops now in South Vietnam to gradually dwindle in number after the cease-fire takes effect, Dr. Henry Kissinger said Wednesday.

Kissinger, chief U.S. architect of the war-ending agreement that is to be signed in Paris Saturday, made his comment when asked about the lack of a requirement that North Vietnam withdraw its troops from South Vietnam, as the United States must do within 60 days.

"That problem will be taken care of by the evolution of events in South Vietnam," Kissinger told a news conference.

He said the number of North Vietnamese forces in South Vietnam would decline because of a "flat prohibition" on the infiltration of new men, on military movements across the demilitarized zone, and on "foreign forces" in Laos and Cambodia-the traditional springboards for infiltration of South Vietnam.

The agreement to be signed Saturday specifies that the 23,700 U.S. troops now in South Vietnam be withdrawn in four phases of about 15 days each. This would coincide approximately with the indicated pace of the return of American war prisoners from North Vietnam.

Kissinger said the pact severely limits the resupply of North Vietnamese forces in the South. It permits-under international supervision-the replacement of worn out and damaged weapons and equipment only on a one-for-one basis.

The United States obviously is anxious to get the international supervisory machinery in place quickly to prevent either side from gaining advantages which might upset the cease-fire balance.

Kissinger predicted the armies of both North and South Vietnam eventually would be scaled down. The Saigon government has an army of about 1.1 million men.

Presumably any North Vietnamese soldiers discharged from military service would return to North Vietnam.

Kissinger said members of the international supervisory force, and members of a temporary Joint Military Commission representing all of the warring parties, will meet within 24 hours after the cease-fire agreement is formally signed Saturday.

The agreement requires the United States, the South Vietnamese, the South Koreans and Communist forces to remain in place as soon as the cease-fire goes into effect.

In a separate document, the United States agreed to "clear all the mines it has placed in the territorial waters, ports, harbors, and waterways" of North Vietnam.

The mine-clearing is to begin at the time the cease-fire agreement is signed, the documents indicated.

North Vietnam's seven biggest ports, including Haiphong, have been sealed by U.S. minefields since last May, cutting off seaborne supplies from Russia and other allies.

Cheese Gift Shop
103 No. Pleasant St.
Your shop of fine
Wine and Cheese

THE SALE IS ON WEAR-HOUSE

BOOTS
MOCASSINS
BOOTS
COATS
BOOTS
HANDBAGS
BOOTS PRIMO QUALITY
and . . .
Largest selection in Western Mass.
HEARTFELT
LEATHER
(At Faces of Earth)
159 N. Pleasant St.
Amherst.
FRYE

Montoya Returns!

Curry Hicks Cage
NEXT TUESDAY
Jan. 30 - 8 p.m.

Carlos Montoya, the great Flamenco guitarist joined by the Springfield Symphony Orchestra under Robert Gutter in an all-Spanish Program!

Special feature: "Carom" a recent work for magnetic tape and orchestra by Robert Stern, UMass composer.

TICKETS: $2.00 for UMass undergrads/$4 for others. Available now through Friday in Campus Center lobby. Tickets also available at Fine Arts Council, 125 Herter Hall. Remaining tickets at main entrance, Curry Hicks Cage from 6 p.m. on January 30th.

ORDER TICKETS EARLY AS SELL-OUT EXPECTED FOR THIS EVENT!

Officials Wait And See On Abortion

(AP) — New England states officials are maintaining a wait-and-see attitude on how their abortion laws will be affected by the U.S. Supreme Court ruling that leaves the matter for the first three months of pregnancy up to the mother and her physician.

Most hospitals in the region are taking a cautious approach to abortions and say they will wait for legal rulings from their states' attorneys general before changing existing policy.

The Boston Hospital for Women said Tuesday that it would perform abortions in compliance with the Supreme Court ruling. Dr. Kenneth J. Ryan, hospital chief of staff, said the ruling "relieves us of confusion with respect to legal requirements for abortion, at least up to 12 weeks of pregnancy."

James H. Staton, executive director of the hospital, said he also welcomed the court ruling because "this decision goes far in helping us deal with the ambiguities associated with counseling women and families in their concern for family planning."

The spokesman for Boston Hospital for Women said the hospital would expand its resources for more abortions and hopes that other hospitals also would "move in the spirit of the ruling."

Other hospitals, including Massachusetts General, Boston City Hospital and Maine's largest hospital, the Maine Medical Center in Portland, said they would wait for a ruling from state authorities on how the Supreme Court decision affects their state laws.

At that time, the hospitals said, their administrative committees would make recommendations to their trustees about any change of policy concerning abortions at these institutions.

All six New England states have laws similar to the Texas law struck down Monday which forbade abortions within the first six months of pregnancy unless the life of the mother is threatened.

In two states, Maine and Rhode Island, the abortion laws have been appealed and the judges involved were waiting for the high court's decision for guidance.

A panel of federal judges had already ruled Connecticut's strict abortion laws unconstitutional and the case remains before the Supreme Court in a separate appeal.

Connecticut's assistant Atty. Gen. Daniel Schaefer said Tuesday that a special stay from the high court keeping an old law in effect until the appeal is heard rules out a change of abortion policy for the time being.

Massachusetts Atty. Gen. Robert H. Quinn said Tuesday that "the state can no longer proscribe abortions and this is in recognition of the right of privacy of the woman."

Dance Meeting Held

The University of Massachusetts Concert Dance Group will hold its first meeting on Wednesday, January 31st at 7:00 p.m. in the Lower Dance Studio of the North Physical Education Building (WPE). Students who are members must attend and persons who are interested in auditioning for the group should come ready to participate. The Concert Dance Group will present their annual spring concert April 25, 26, 27 and 28th in Bowker Auditorium.

The Place That Made Amherst Famous
DRAKE RESTAURANT 'TIL, 2 a.m.
VILLAGE INN
Rathskeller
NEW FIRST FLOOR LOUNGE
40 International Beers
ART ANDREWS, PIANO
DAILY 5-7 p.m.
85 Amity St., Amherst
Tel. 253-2548

Well, folks, welcome back to our little haven nestled here among the walls of brick, expanses of asphalt, and the seas of mud. And is it true that if one stands by the library tower at 3 a.m., one can hear it sinking slowly . . . further and further from sight? (MDC Photo by Alan Chapman).

THE Rusty Scupper
Welcomes you all back with 7 fantastic nights of entertainment!!
Thursday, Jan. 25th through Saturday, Jan. 27th
ENDLESS KNIGHTS
Sunday, Jan. 28th - PAUL McKINLEY
Monday, Jan. 29th - AUDITIONS
Tuesday, Jan. 30th - LYNN HOLOWAY
Wednesday, Jan. 31st - PAUL McKINLEY

EUROPE '72
GRATEFUL DEAD
THREE RECORD SET
RECORDED IN CONCERT
on Warner Bros.
Records & Tapes

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

BOARD OF EDITORS

EDITOR IN CHIEF James E. Gold
MANAGING EDITOR Nathan Gorenstein
BUSINESS MANAGER William L. Manburg
EXECUTIVE EDITOR Stephen G. Tripoli
NEWS EDITOR Donald J. Bishop
SPORTS EDITOR William E. Ballou
PHOTO EDITOR Gib Fullerton
FINE ARTS EDITOR Robert Nesti

ASST. MANAGING EDITOR Steve Fine
ADVERTISING MANAGER Jeanne Bauge
ASST. PHOTO EDITOR Alan Chapman
ASST. SPORTS EDITOR Roy Lyons

TODAY'S STAFF

ISSUE EDITOR Mary Vorderer
NIGHT STAFF Tom Borkowski
EDITORIAL Steve Tripoli
SPORTS Bill Ballou, Steve Crowe
DARKROOM Karasu, Al Chapman
AD LAYOUT Bill Manburg

Undergraduate newspaper of the University of Massachusetts. The Staff is responsible for its content and no faculty members or administrators read it for accuracy or approval prior to publication.

Unsigned editorials represent the view of this paper. They do not necessarily reflect the views of the faculty, administration, or student body as a whole. Signed editorials, columns, reviews, cartoons, and letters represent the personal views of the authors.

The Collegian subscribes to the Associated Press and the Liberation News Service. Publication of their material does not constitute endorsement.

A Fragile Settlement

The fragile peace settlement to go into effect 7 PM EST Saturday in Vietnam should not cause anyone here to bow down and worship President Nixon or his advisor Henry Kissinger.

Actually after so many previous premature peace predictions, many people have met the president's statement of Tuesday night with simple disbelief—and with good reason. However, it appears true this time.

Under terms of the settlement released Wednesday, American prisoners of war will be returning home, as well as the rest of our military forces.

Citizens should now beware of efforts to oversell the cease-fire agreements by federal administrators. We should be careful that we do not make a god of our president. We should be glad that we are out of the war and may be entering a peaceful era at last.

How can anyone feel more than just relieved that the war is ending? How can we forget all the Vietnamese, American and other lives lost in the struggle? How can we forget the destruction wrought in this little country?

Surely none of us can really feel good that we have wasted so much time and energy killing innocent people, being killed by guerilla forces, and almost wiping a country from the face of the earth.

Peace is almost here. Everyone has his or her own favorite scapegoat for the causes of initial involvement and continuation of the war. But now that war is amost over. Let us turn our efforts towards creating harmony among all peoples of the world.

"THE WAR WE WISH TO REMEMBER HIM BY"

School Of Ed. Incident: Some Pertinent Facts

BY WAYNE E. BELL, JR.

The Chandler Incident in Retrospect:
In the final analysis Paul is not the issue.

Firstly, because I find the particulars surrounding the occupation of the School of Education never came clear to many, let me outline some pertinent facts.

At the beginning of November, it became evident through his remarks that Dean Allen would take direct action to block Paul Chandler's admission to the Graduate Program.

In response to this, Marsha and Jeffrey Forest (directors of the undergraduate program "Explorations", of which Paul is a member) solicited fourteen letters from School faculty supporting Paul's admission.

At a faculty meeting on December 4, a motion was passed: "That the faculty consider the case of Paul Chandler prior to the admission decision and that all parties be invited to participate and that criteria for accepting or rejecting Chandler be stated!"

The hearing was held on December 6, Dean Allen presenting criteria for refusing admission and Marsha and Jeff presenting data concerning Paul's qualifications.

At this meeting, the Third World Alliance made a statement requesting that a written decision be made public by 9:30 a.m. on Friday, December 8.

Examining some of the more covert aspects of these actions, we find that Paul has been accepted by Graduate Admissions as well as the Non-center of the School of Education. His application has been pulled from the office of the Dean of Admissions of the School by the Dean of the School of Education, Dwight Allen. The dean had chosen to intervene in this case and make the decision himself.

Paul Chandler and Dwight Allen have been acquainted for sometime. Dean Allen asked Paul Chandler to come to the University. He even suggested at a dinner with Paul and President of the University of Massachusetts Robert Wood, that a provisional BA could be arranged for Paul and students like him, so that he could begin his doctoral work. Paul decided to forego the baccalaureate privilege of being "the Dean's nigger," and instead continued his undergraduate work at the School of Education.

A couple of things happened involving Paul and the Administration. One was the Career Opportunities Program involving Paul and many other Third World students was cut out allegedly because Federal funding had been withdrawn. Paul checked into this and found no shortage in Federal monies. The program was continued.

Another was the bi-annual Marathon last spring, the theme of which was combatting Institutional Racism. Out of nearly a thousand offerings approximately thirteen dealt with racism, some of which were challenged as racist. Paul and members of the Third World Caucas questioned the validity of the Marathon's commitment and stopped Dwight Allen's brainchild.

The Dean, without a leg to stand on, smiled gritting his teeth and summed it up as a "learning experience." Several graduate students lost their assistantships, and certain faculty promotions were delayed as the Dean began housecleaning.

The Dean told Paul that under no circumstances would he allow him in the Graduate School, but turned around and offered him a full assistantship at Malcolm X College.

At the faculty hearing, the issue was made public, something the Dean vowed he would not allow. The Dean found himself tongue-tied as he was in a position of stating criteria in such a way that he could reject Paul and yet not fall prey to a suit for infringement of academic freedom, or the accusation that he was attempting to silence political dissidence, or that he was trying to prevent, as Paul worded it, "a critical evaluation of the School of Education." The reading of Paul's resume brought a standing ovation.

By Friday morning, December 8, there had been no response to the Third World Alliance memo. There had been no decision concerning Paul. The Dean left word that he was out of town, (although in fact he was not). His strategy was clear, if he could manage to continue delaying the decision until after the following Wednesday, any support group for Paul would have gone home for the holidays, and he knew that because Paul has a wife and five children he'd have to be making plans. (Witness the analogy to the Presidential pocket veto when he tables a bill until Congress recesses.) The Dean was delaying a decision after stating that no new information could change his disposition on the case. In denying to state the decision he had already made, he was denying Paul the right to appeal the imminent rejection through legal channels.

Exhausting legitimate channels of communication and bureaucratic procedure, the Third World Alliance came down on the Dean by closing the School. The occupation was peaceful and most people were cooperative about leaving.

The Alliance published their "demands," the first of which was: that the Dean respond to the memo sent to him by the Third World Alliance. I do not see this as too unreasonable a demand in that this is at least the Dean's obligation according to administrative procedure if not common etiquette.

Secondly, that he make a decision concerning the Chandler case. The demand was not for an affirmative decision, but merely a decision so that legitimate channels of appeal could be pursued. This would also seem to be an obligation of administrative procedure, that is, that an administrator do his job.

Thirdly, that the graduate admission criteria be specified. Anticipating the rejection, it would be curious to see if the Dean could come up with a legitimate rationale for it. This demand was criticized by some who read it as an attempt to particularize loosely defined requirements. It was intended to focus on necessarily illegitimate particulars which could be the Dean's only rationale for rejecting Paul.

Furtherly, that all involved in the occupation be given legal and academic amnesty. Note here that in the aftermath the Dean recommended suspension for students involved in the demonstration, while in contradiction he affirmed that right to demonstrate by sitting in at Westover Air Base last spring. So much for political expediency.

Looking over the demands, I find nothing more radical than a request that a man do his job. Had he done that, the School would never have been closed. Even if due to misunderstandings the School had been closed, it should have been opened an hour later, not held for five days as the Dean adamantly refused to fulfill what were practically stipulations in the job description for a Dean.

Some people bitched and moaned that their rights were being infringed upon by those who closed the School. Check it out a little closer. The School of Education brings a lot of outside money to the University. One of the reasons for much of the School's funding, especially from the Federal government is that Dwight Allen stated that the School's primary commitment was to combatting Institutional Racism. Complementing the commitment it has a large minority population. It is in fact these students who are attracting probably two thirds of the School's funding. So whose rights are being infringed when the design and covert philosophy of the School prevent their own leadership from emerging. Paul happens to be a leader who emerged out of conflicts between the School and Third World students, the issue however is not Chandler, but rather the man as a symbol of a type of black leadership that is needed.

Those who felt they were being denied their right of access to a public building ought to consider the institutions housed in those buildings which systematically and efficiently deny a people their right to the kind of leadership they need to gain their freedom, to regain their heritage, and their pride. The School of Education was closed for five days because it was operating under a lie, a banner of diversity and social commitment which did not and does not exist.

Sometime Tuesday, December 12, Dean Dwight Allen made his decision to reject Paul on paper. The Chancellor agreed to set up a committee to consider Paul's appeal and he was guaranteed a decision by January 16. A court injunction was issued. The Third World Alliance and other supporters cleaned the building and left in an orderly fashion Tuesday evening, noting that Dwight Allen had never communicated with them and that this was but a skirmish in a continuing battle between the Third World Alliance and the School of Education, as well as part of the larger struggle of oppressed peoples around the world.

Last week, Paul was offered acceptance as a "provisional" Masters Candidate. I am wondering if "provisional" means that he will be axed the next time he questions or attempts to "critically analyze" the University institutions.

The seats of power recognize the potency of the charismatic leader especially when he seeks unity. An observation was made at one of the Occupation workshops and was intimated by Malcolm X in his autobiography, that when he was a screaming wide-eyed separatist, he was invited to Harvard and Yale to speak; but when he started talking unity, when he was ready to work with Dr. King to unite Black Americans, he became dangerous and was killed. The potential unity of Third World peoples and all oppressed human beings could emerge as one of the most powerful political and economic forces in history.

Wayne E. Bell, Jr., is a Guest Columnist.

'I JUST WANTED TO THANK THEM.'

Letters To The Editor

Get Your Montoya Tickets Now

To the Editor:

Carlos Montoya, the noted flamenco guitarist, will be on campus shortly after intersession (January 30) for a concert with the Springfield Symphony Orchestra.

The purpose of writing this information is to urge students, particularly, and others who may have interest in attending this concert to obtain their tickets at the earliest possible moment. Over the years, I have found that students in general are loathe to commit themselves as to a concert such as this in advance and stand the risk of not receiving the best tickets due to their unwillingness to make the decision at an early time.

As most of your readers know, Carlos Montoya is one of the most popular artists to visit the campus, and we expect a sell-out crowd in the Cage for this performance. Therefore, may I urge all students who are going to wish to attend Mr. Montoya's concert to consider ordering their tickets at this time in order to avoid disappointment later on. Let me underline that the concert takes place on January 30, which is just five days after classes resume; therefore, there will be little opportunity to order tickets with all the confusion inherent in beginning a new semester.

May I also take this opportunity to remind the University community that the Fine Arts Council is always open to suggestions as to future programs. At the present time we are involved with a Celebrity Series, Chamber Music Series, Third World Series, Theater Series and Dance Series, and anyone having ideas as to programs within these series, as well as innovative thoughts for the Council to consider should kindly address them to us at the earliest time.

Terry C. Schwarz

Too Much Cheering

To The Editor:

We went to the UMass-Harvard basketball game expecting an enjoyable evening of basketball. However, it was marred by the UMass cheerleaders who continually stood up to do cheers while the game was in progress. We admit that cheerleaders are necessary to organize vocal fan support for the team when they play at the cage. But we can't understand why they must stand up during the game to do it.

Clifford Starr
Harry Somers
Dick Hassett
Jim Yamartino
Peter Johnson

The Hawaiian Way

To The Editor:

With the interest in the problems created by cara as means of transportation, I thought you might enjoy reading about the U of Hawaii:

The University of Hawaii is offering a course which requires students to use a means of transportation other than an automobile in commuting to and from school. School officials believe it is a "first" in attempting to clear college campuses of cars.

The University of Hawaii, like many other campuses, is faced with a growing problem—too many cars and not enough places to put them.

One easy solution would be to build more parking lots, but Hawaii decided this semester to try something else, a two-credit, no-car course. During its two-day enrollment period, 150 students signed up for the course, which is listed as a "survival-plus program" in the college of arts and sciences.

"This course is going to create a withdrawal effect and is going to be harder than giving up dope," said instructor Tony Hodges of the new offering. "I even heard one student say that he would burn his draft card but not his parking sticker."

Hodges explained that the course is not just a means of getting cars off campus, but also an attempt to show people that they don't need cars. He said the students will be asked to keep a journal of their experiences in getting around without a car. That data will be compiled into a manual to convince others that they don't need automobiles.

Carol Meeks

Tenants Meeting

To The Editor:

There will be a meeting of Northampton Area Tenants Feb. 5, at the Peoples Institute on the HOUSING CRISIS: This meeting is URGENTLY needed to help us, the TENANTS, fight for our rights for decent housing. It will be held Monday, February 5, at the Peoples Institute, 38 Gothic St., Northampton, at 7:30 p.m.

Do you know your rights as a tenant? Do you know that you may be able to force the landlords to fix up your apartment; that you may be able to withhold your rent or to use your rent money to pay for your home? But we need unity to do this. The housing situation in the Northampton area is critical. There exists a severe shortage of apartments and rentals continue to rise to outrageous heights. Present housing is often in very poor condition with rats, cockroaches, poor heating, unsafe electrical outlets, insufficient hot water, crafts, holes in the walls and ceilings, low water pressure and much, much more. And when we dare complain, the landlord threatens to throw us out! Landlords are big and loud. They often don't respect the privacy of their tenants. They put property before people, and the laws are in their favor . . . BUT"! TENANTS HAVE POWER IF THEY KNOW THEIR RIGHTS AND UNITE TOWARD A COMMON GOAL: DECENT HOUSING FOR A FAIR PRICE.

Russell Finer

A Real Purpose

To The Editor:

I wish to comment on certain posters that have been placed around the campus. They proclaim: "For God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whoever believes in Him should not perish, but have eternal life." (Jn. 3:16) & "We see real love, not in the fact that we loved God, but that He loved us, and sent His Son to make personal atonement for our sins." (I Jn. 4:10)

They mention love, but what is love? "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." (Jn. 15:13) Love is giving and in giving his most valued possession (life) man proves his love. God gave "His only begotten Son" that we might have life. "For one will hardly die for a righteous man; though perhaps for the good man someone would dare even to die. But God demonstrates His own love toward us, in that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us." (Rom. 5:7,8) It is hard to find someone who will die for a righteous man, yet the Bible says "for all have sinned and fall short of the glory of God," (Rom. 3:23) and Christ (Greek for Savior) 'died for us" "while we were yet sinners'. Why this act this demonstration of love? "For Christ also died for sins once for all, the just for the unjust, in order that He might bring us to God, having been put to death in the flesh, but made alive by the Spirit;" (I Pet. 3:18) Because man has sinned Christ died to make atonement for that sin and He rose from the dead as a sign of His victory over death and sin.

In Christ we have found real purpose for living and a real hope for the future. If you wish to question our faith I invite you to our fellowship meetings Monday nights at 7:30 p.m. in Room 803 of the Campus Center.

"He who has believed and has been baptized shall be saved; but he who has disbelieved shall be condemned." (Mark 16:16)

David W. Barszewski
President, Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship

Editorial Points

For those of you who are new here and living on campus we'd like to clear you up on something that might be bothering you. Yes, folks, the Dining Commons are always that bad.

•••

But it's not true that the Director of Food Services derives his name from the kind of ham served in the Commons.

•••

The Parking Office is in its usual early semester turmoil, but once it issues all the parking stickers it's your problem to find a space.

•••

It looks like Nixon's plan all along was to kill enough people so there'd be honor enough to go around for those left.

•••

We can't understand why the President is coming down so hard on the media, he's always jealously guarded the freedom to depress. In fact he's quite good at it.

•••

Rumor has it that an unfortunate skater on the campus pond had his foot dissolved when it broke through the ice and touched the water. We knew the pond wasn't too clean, but this is ridiculous.

•••

The Collegian's ace wrestling writer has informed us that the team's coach is going into the restaurant business. His establishment is to be called Homer's Barr and Grille.

•••

The JV Hockey coach was to be a partner in the restaurant but was rejected because, according to Coach Barr, "He's only a Kidd."

Help The Volunteers

To The Editor:

Instead of studying, sleeping, or shopping on Saturday afternoons, do something beneficial by coming to the Belchertown State School where you will have the opportunity to meet, talk to, and help retarded people of all ages. No experience is required–only desire to assist individuals less fortunate than yourself.

The bus to Belchertown leaves this Saturday, January 27, 12:45 P.M. from Haigis Mall in front of Whitmore Administration Building.....Bus to return to Campus by 3:45 P.M. Tours will be conducted for new members. Bus runs every Saturday this semester...same place, same time.....

Any questions??????? Call Ken at 6-7044 or Mary-Jo at 6-6951.

Belchertown Volunteers
"People Helping People"

we need your help — they need your help

Ken Spiegleman
President, Belchertown Volunteers

Ricci's Letter To Quinn

Dear Mr. Quinn:

We have noted carefully your role in the class suit, Ricci et al. v Greenblatt et al., CA# 72-469F, Federal District Court, Boston. It is patently apparent that you have forgotten, or perhaps conveniently overlooked, your consumer protection role. The mentally retarded residents of Belchertown State School are citizens and are consumers. They are consumers of cruel and inhumane treatment.

At an evening speech you delivered at the Amherst campus of the University of Massachusetts last March, you denied that your assistans, Messrs. O'Malley and Mayo, had argued earlier that very day that a "constitutional right to treatment cannot be predicated upon a system of voluntary admissions". In fact, you charged the graduate student who raised the question relative to your defense with engaging in hearsay. The Federal Court record proves the student correct. Your assistants, Messrs. O'Malley and Mayo, have resorted to massive use of the phrase "defendants deny each and every allegation". Although each of you has vigorously defended the defendants, none of you has ever toured Belchertown State School.

The mentally retarded represent a minority group against whom wholesale discrimination is being practiced. You have failed to protect this group. As an example, one third of the Belchertown residents are being denied a right to education.

Copies of my November 22, 1972 letters to Governor Sargent and Commissioner Keogh relating to four recent deaths -- which reflect irresponsibility and confusion -- have failed to move you to action. You too have remained strangely silent.

Benjamin Ricci
President, Belchertown Friends Assn.

History Will Be The Final Judge

Registration may have gone smoother than usual this semester, but the first glimpse at the score sheet was still a gasser. (MDC Photo by Alan Chapman)

'Night Music' Wows Audience

BOSTON (AP)—Sparkling and original, cheerful, at times hilarious, "A Little Night Music" is a wow of a musical.

It's altogether here—cast, book, music, lyrics, costumes and scenery—and it's together in a different way. There are the boy-girl angles as of old, but there's a large amount of parody, and if some of the sex is on the half shell, much of it also is with tongue in cheek.

It does not stay serious for very long until midway in the second act, and there's more fun later.

The new musical comedy opened a three-week pre-Broadway engagement at the Colonial Theatre Tuesday night. It's the brightest musical to hit town since "Godspell" and should go on to a roaring success.

The musical was suggested by Ingmar Bergman's film, "Smiles of a Summer Night." The book is by Hugh Wheeler, and the music and lyrics are by Stephen Sondheim, who did the same for "Follis" and "Company." The show is directed by Harold Prince.

The cast is superb. Glynis Johns and Len Cariou stand out as two of the stars, and Hermione Gingold, the third star, just has to appear on stage to get applause. Cariou has a fine singing voice as do Garn Stephens and Genrge Lee Andrews in lesser roles.

Credit also should go to others in the cast, including the five who form a kind of chorus, that marvelously satirizes opera from the grand to the light.

Judy Kahan, a former Boston University student who played for a long time in "The Proposition" in Cambridge, has a large role, which she plays too cutely and with too much smile. But, she is fine otherwise and the flaws easily can be corrected.

The plot is one of love affairs, some remembered, some renewed, some not yet fulfilled. They swirl around an actress, played by Glynis Johns, who is the daughter of a woman, Hermione Gingold, who has had many a past affair, and the mother of a girl, Judy Kahan, too young to have had any.

Involved are a lawyer and his second wife, 18-year-old and a virgin despite 11 months of marriage; the lawyer's son, a military minded count and his wife, and a maid and butler.

The costumes are rich and glorious and were done by Florence Klotz. The scenes, designed by Boris Aronson, and the lighting by Tharon Musser are marvelous. In part, the set consists of a birch woods painted on sliding clear plastic panels. But, there also is a painted backdrop of a summer house and an exquisite dinner setting.

All told, the show is a delight, although the sex angles, though generally breezy, get a little strong for bringing the younger set.

It should be noted that the show ran past 10 o'clock, and so the audience could not hear the President's address. Len Cariou interrupted the applause after the final curtain to announce there was a cease fire in Vietnam. "It's over," he said, "It's over." And, that, too, drew applause.

Anti-War Movement Pleased

BOSTON (AP) — National representatives of the antiwar movement said Wednesday they regard the Vietnam cease-fire agreement as a major victory for the movement.

Actress Jane Fonda, here for four days to raise money for the Indochina Peace Campaign, outlined three objectives for the antiwar movement:

—"To pressure Congress to cut off funds to the Thieu regime in South Vietnam. It's unconscionable that the American people through their taxes should be forced to support the corrupt Thieu regime.

—"To expose the situation in the prisons of South Vietnam, where great numbers of people who are not sympathetic to the Thieu regime have been jailed or executed.

—"To work out a long-range program of medical aid to Indochina."

Tom Hayden, a founder of Students for a Democratic Society whom she recently married, said the cease-fire agreement is "a defeat for the entire American strategy throughout the war.

"The Nixon administration was forced to sign the best agreement it could get," he said.

"In the new agreement," Hayden said, "the critical factor is the recognition of the Provisional Revolutionary Government (PRG) as a force in South Vietnam. The U.S. has always regarded them as bandits before.

"The existence of the PRG is a concrete guarantee of self-determination in South Vietnam. As long as they are there, there is no chance that South Vietnam can become a separate state, financed and supported by the U.S.

"While the agreement is a major step forward, we should have no illusions that it represents peace for Vietnam.

"Nixon is supporting the Saigon regime, which is a completely militaristic police state. They have no program or plans to participate in a peaceful Vietnam.

"Thieu intends to continue arresting and killing those people who oppose him," Hayden said.

Dr. Sidney Peck, national coordinator of the People's Coalition for Peace and Justice, said, "we believe that peace forces throughout the world have forced the Nixon administration to sign the agreement."

Peck, a professor on leave from Case Western Reserve, said, "The antiwar movement is prepared to respond immediately to any new military action by President Nixon in Vietnam."

Grant To Be Offered

Stipends up to $1,000 per year are available under grants provided by the Connecticut State Scholarship Program. Applicants must be U.S. citizens, legal residents of Connecticut at least 12 months prior to application date, and be enrolled in a full-time graduate program in an institution holding regional or national accreditation, such as University of Massachusetts. The applicant should secure application materials from the Connecticut Graduate Award Program, Educational Testing Service, Box 176, Princeton, N.J. 08540. The completed application, transcripts, letters of recommendation and GRE scores must be submitted to ETS by March 10, 1973.

Looking for a course?

Look what the Physics Department is offering!

Two Courses Designed for Non-Science Majors (no pre-requisites)

Physics of Music - 115

Physics 115 deals with the nature of musical sound — its production and perception. Music appeal has no set formula, but a better understanding of the basic mechanisms can be both fun and useful.

Instructor: F. Pichanick
Course Time:
Office: Hasbrouck 239
Phone: 545-0616

Nuclear Energy - 117

Physics 117 deals with the present day energy crisis. The course covers material on the nuclear arms race. Speakers and films will be integral parts of the course.

Instructor: A.R. Hoffman
Course Time: MWF 9:05
Office: Hasbrouck 102B
Phone 545-0933

Over The Rainbow

Amherst Carriage Shops
233 N. Pleasant St.

Handmade - Pottery,
Silver Jewelry
Belts
Photographs
Copper Ethings

Custom Embroidery
on Workshirts, Jeans

Anything - bring your own or we supply.

THE UNION NEWS & SWEET SHOP

PRESENTS

ED "CANDY MAN" VADAS

SINGING AND PLAYING YOUR REQUEST

From 10 am to 2 pm — Thursday & Friday
January 25 & 26

Course Descriptions For Orchard Hill

The following is the only accurate listing of Orchard Hill courses in circulation. Pleast disregard any previous information distributed by the Scheduling Office—it doesn't include changes, additions and deletions made by the Master's Office since the end of last semester.

Orchard Hill courses are now open to all members of the Five College community. Complete course descriptions and other information are available at the Orchard Hill Master's Office, 101 Eugene Field House, Orchard Hill, where all students wishing to register for an Orchard Hill course must personally sign up. Registration will be held daily from 9:00 A.M. to 5:00 P.M., Monday to Friday, from now until Tuesday, February 6.

Listed below are those courses omitted from yesterday's MDC that are still open:

OHI

202 Beyond Corporate Capitalism-3-Tu 7:30-9 p.m., Th 9:30-11 a.m.-P10 lounge-Profs. Robert Cole, Gary Tarr.

267 Food Prod. & Pop Problems-2-Tu. 2:30-4:00 p.m.-Fi 104-Herbert Marsh.

268 Survival Systems Science-3-M 7-9:30 p.m.-Emily 104-Jay Stryker, Howard Munson.

269 Human Sexuality —3 by arrgt. CLOSED.

270 Automotive Engines-3-M 6-8 p.m., Tu 6-8 p.m.-Fi 104-Ernest Johnson-CLOSED.

386A/Psych 393G Interpersonal & Social Perceptions-3-TuTh 11:15-Emily 104-Stephen Reisman.

386B Minimum Resource Teaching-3-TuTh 11:15-Noah Rec. Room-Wilesse Comissiong-CLOSED.

386C/Hist 394C Race Relations in Latin America-3-Tu 3-5:30-Gray 104-Lewis Hanke.

386D/Soc 290 Sociology of Sex Roles-3-TuTh 9:30, Th 7 p.m.-Gray 104-Machmer (for films)-Jan Rosenberg.

386E The Poetry of Liberation-3-Tu 2:30-5 p.m.-Noah 529-Gayle LeTourneau.

386F/Phil 218-518 American Philosophy-A Feminist Perspective-3-MWF 12:20-Gray 104 (1st meeting in Mach W23)-Ann Brentlinger.

386G Women in the Polit & Econ Sys-3-Tu 2:30-5 p.m.-Fi 434-Isabelle Arnold and Esla Lynch.

386H Social Condit of Women-3-TuTh 1:30-Emily 104-Wilesse Comissiong and Roz Shapiro.

386I Practicum in Mental Retard-3-by arrgt.

386J Probs in Contemp Architecture-3-M 7-9:30-Emily 104-Wm. Forwood and Curtis Johnson.

386K Community Dispute Settlement-3-W 7-9:30-Fi 229-David Bloodsworth.

386L FILM in Radical Perspective-3-Sun Th 7:30-10-Noah 104-John Morrison.

386M Independent Study-1-6-by arrgt-Staff.

386N American Political Economy-3-M 7:30-10-Gray 104-Robt. Winston.

386O Reading and the Creation of the Self-3-Tu 7:30-10-Noah 229-David Leonard.

386P Holyoke Tutorial-3-by arrgt-Robt. Winston, Steve Kurtz.

386Q Social Action Seminar (Tentative)-by arrgt.-Staff.

386R Student-Labor Relations-3-TuTh 2:30-Noah 229-Bruce Laurie.

OHI sec. 1 SCHEDULE NUMBERS

202	417594	386B	418979	386H	419998	386N	421012
267	418126	386C	419145	386I	420168	386O	421187
268	418291	386D	419316	386J	420339	386P	421358
269	418462	386E	419481	386K	420500	386Q	421529
270	418633	386F	419652	386L	420675	386R	420548
386A	418804	386G	419823	386M	420846	386S	420586

Contraceptive Clinic To Train

Available—Training experience for a female graduate student (or qualified undergraduate) with counseling experience, as a counselor in the UMass. Contraceptive Clinic. Training offered in short-term interviewing and consultation. Supervision by professional mental health staff. Clinic operates in the evening from 5:00 to 8:00. If interested call either Susan Hill M.S.W. or Tom Wolff Ph.D. at 545-2337.

FOOD INSURANCE

Back in December the Food Service Department launched a campaign to familiarize commuters and other non-meal ticket holders with the merits of purchasing a five meal lunch or dinner plan. At that time, we emphasized that these plans were quite similar to insurance policies because of their ability to protect the bearer from loss — in this case, the loss of valuable time during the noon and evening meal hours. The two five meal strip tickets were created to give students greater flexibility around meal times, and to eliminate the necessity of traveling home to prepare meals or slogging cross-campus for the typical snack bar bill of fare. In short, our five meal insurance policies help to put back the time that is invariably squeezed out of every day.

In addition to this time element, there is another good reason to purchase a five meal ticket plan: It is simply a wise investment. Two factors make this so. First, the cost of a lunch five meal ticket strip is $6.75, while the dinner strip is $9.25. Therefore, you save substantially over the purchase of five individual meals. Second, you are acquiring excellent reserve protection against an uncertain future. All insurance policies are alike in one regard; namely, that they are purchased now, when you are able to make the investment, in order to protect you against future critical situations, when investment may be more difficult. Our policies are much the same. If you purchase a five meal lunch or dinner strip now, while your fiscal situation is probably as good as it's going to get, you will assure yourself of meals in the weeks to come, when your pockets may be empty, or you need the money for something else. Either plan is redeemable at any time during the semester at any one of the dining commons around campus. Both are available at the main office of the University Food Services Department located in Worcester Dining Commons. Investing in a little rainy-day food is not a bad idea. Whether you place greater emphasis on saving time or money, you stand to come out ahead by investing your cash in this way.

Sargent's Ed. Plan Emerges

BOSTON (AP)-The next to last of Gov. Francis W. Sargent's 10 state government reorganization schemes-this one for education-emerged Tuesday as a complex pattern of interlocking boards to channel control over Massachusetts' schools, colleges and universities.

The plan presented by Secretary of Educational Affairs Joseph M. Cronin would establish five regional Education Boards that would take over decision making on many day-to-day problems now referred to central offices in Boston. Two state-wide boards would oversee them.

The plan would leave intact the authority of local school committees over elementary and secondary education, but it would redraw considerably the lines of authority in higher education.

Among other changes, the reorganization plan eliminates the job of University of Massachusetts President Robert C. Wood, replacing it with a "chancellor of post-secondary education" who would oversee the state's "university and college system."

Each of the campuses of the University of Massachusetts, at Amherst, Boston and Worcester, would have its own president under the chancellor, as would Lowell Technological Institute, Southeastern Massachusetts University and the various state and community colleges.

Cronin said the plan would replace seven existing boards and commissions with two state-wide boards, one for grade schools and high schools and another for colleges and universities.

Both of the 15-member boards, which would have five to 10 of their members serving on both, would be charged with setting policies and minimum standards for all institutions under their control.

The regional boards, each with 15 members, would set priorities for schools in each geographical area, develop budgets and provide assistance to school districts and colleges, under the plan.

Individual campuses and local school systems would initiate their budget requests and hire personnel as they do presently.

Cronin said the plan sought to redesign an educational system that had become "fragmented, confusing, wasteful and repetitive.

"Decisions are made far away from the students, faculty and communities that they affect. The quality of our education varies from poor to outstanding.

"Our institutions compete when they should cooperate."

Cronin said the title of his own job would be enlarged to become "secretary of educational and cultural affairs," and he would serve as a member of all boards and councils under his jurisdiction.

In addition he would have power of approval over the selection of a chancellor of post-secondary education and a commissioner of elementary and secondary education, each the immediate appointee of the respective state-wide boards.

CALDOR CAMPUS SPECIAL!

FAMOUS BASS TACKS®
Below Original Wholesale Prices!

Bass Tacks® Oxfords For Men
Specially Priced! 11.88
Waxy leather uppers, natural crepe soles, rawhide laces.
Color: Brandy; sizes 7 to 11 in group.

Bass Tacks® For Ladies
Only 8.44
Waxy leather uppers on a comfortable crepe or leather sole.
Color: Brandy; sizes 5 to 9 in group.

Another Famous Brand At Caldor Introductory Special!

Pro Keds Basketball Sneakers
Our Reg. 10.95 8.47
Loose lined; heavy duck upper, natural crepe sole. High in white, low in black, white or navy. Sizes 6-1/2 to 12.

Converse All - Star Basketball Sneakers
Heavy duck uppers, loose lined. Cushioned innersole and arch support. High: white, low: black, white, red, navy. 6-1/2 to 12. 10.95

3 WAYS TO CHARGE master charge BANKAMERICARD
180 North King St. Northampton
SALE: THURS. thru SAT.
Mon. thru Fri. 9:30 a.m. to 9:30 p.m.
Sat. 9:00 a.m. to 9:30 p.m.

Joy Returns To Wives

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP)-After years of suppressed emotion, joy gradually is coming back into the lives of Navy wives whose husbands soon will be released from Vietnam prison camps.

"I felt numb at first,", said Jane Denton, whose husband, Capt. Jeremiah Denton of Mobile, Ala., was the first East Coast pilot to be taken prisoner in North Vietnam.

Denton, a Naval Academy graduate, was shot down in July 1965, about 80 miles from Hanoi.

"It didn't take long for excitement to start creeping in," said Mrs. Denton, a handsome woman with salt-and-pepper gray hair.

With her six children, she had watched President Nixon's television announcement Tuesday night that peace was almost here.

"We just looked at one another after the President said the prisoners would be home in 60 days," Mrs. Denton said. "There was no real emotion,"

Then her 9-year-old, Mary Beth-who was 2 when her father was shot down-started screaming: "Daddy's coming home! Daddy's coming home!"

And suddenly, said Mrs. Denton, the truth dawned on them.

Drained by years of frustration and false hopes, many of the wives of the 21 men of this Navy base town who are either prisoners of war or missing in Vietnam shed tears at the news.

First, they felt mingled reactions of relief, numbness, disbelief.

But the next day," said Louise Brady-whose husband, Capt. A.C. Brady, was shot down six years ago this month-"I felt elation."

"After sleeping on the news and waking up to a beautiful, sunny day, I felt joy for the first time."

The Bradys—Louise and her son, Richard, 16, and daughter Lisa, 13-had watched the President's speech with friends. They, too, first took the news calmly.

"Well, Richard, I guess it's really over," said the mother.

"Yeah," said the 16-year-old.

Then he grabbed a cowbell and a horn and started ringing and honking, Mrs. Brady said. "He went outside screaming and celebrating."

Jane Tschudy, whose husband, Lt. Cmdr. William Tschudy, was the bombardier-navigator on Denton's plane, said:

"A lot of the crust is coming off now. I've felt such bitterness.

"Already today, I'm not feeling as much hatred at our government...You have to grind your teeth not to."

Mrs. Tschudy, whose 7-year-old son, Michael, was only 5 months old when his father became a prisoner, said:

"At first, I felt like something was gone. The war for so long has been a part of our life, and in one instant, there's something on television...It's just not erased that easily.

"The saddest day of my life was when I couldn't believe in it any more-the U.S. involvement in Vietnam. I felt in my heart that my husband had to endure something I couldn't believe in."

Radio Station Heads Protest

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP)-Four busloads of demonstrators under the direction of radio station WAAB were scheduled to go to the State House Wednesday morning to protest a $31,290 legislative position created for former Sen. Joseph D. Ward of Fitchburg, a station spokesman said Tuesday.

The group, expected to number from 150 to 200, will be led by George Gray, WAAB's president and owner, the spokesman said.

The station has conducted an editorial campaign to eliminate the Senate counselor's job, calling it a patronage office created by the legislature to "take care of its own and the taxpayer be damned."

Ward, 48, was defeated in the last election by Robert A. Hall. Ward, who served in the Senate 10 years, asked for a recount, which he also lost, and then petitioned the Senate to seat him instead of Hall. The state constitution allows for such petitions.

NOW..YOUR CHOICE OF 5!
Showcase
Rt. 5-W. Spfld.
733-5131
1-2-3-4-5
AVANTI R
The Poseidon Adventure PG
Sounder G
The Getaway PG
Deliverance R

Moral Obligation a Question

BOSTON (AP)—A man who spent 26 years "illegally" imprisoned, a 22-year-old woman permanently disabled while acting as a volunteer in a state program, and a salesman robbed of $1,078 in welfare checks turned to their court of last resort Tuesday.

They are among dozens of persons whose efforts to get what they feel is justice from the state government have resulted in so-called "moral obligation" bills.

The Joint Ways and Means Committee Tuesday held the first of a series of hearings on the bills, most of which say the payments should be made "for the purpose of discharging a moral obligation of the Commonwealth."

In the past, relatively few of the bills have passed, principally because legislators think passage would "open the floodgates" for hundreds of others who think the state owes them something.

Howard R. Lee of Worcester is asking $150,000 in "moral obligation" payments from the state.

His claim, documented by a court finding several years ago, is that Lee spent 26 years illegally held at Bridgewater State Hospital. Lee was 29 when arrested and convicted on a charge of stealing less than $6, his lawyer told the committee, but somehow spent 26 years at Bridgewater, long after his sentence expired.

He now lives in a nursing home, boarded, clothed and fed by the state and getting some pocket money, said his lawyer.

Katherine Devine of Norwood was a volunteer in a Department of Youth Services program, "faithful, coming every week, and also very, very good," according to a program supervisor.

While taking some young boys from a Youth Service program in Worcester sledding in a public park, she hit a rock with her sled, was thrown off, and broke her back.

The 22-year-old mother of a two-year-old son is permanently paralyzed, destined to spend the rest of her life in a wheelchair, her husband and others told the Ways and Means Committee. While insurance paid most of the medical bills, there is no provision for an unpaid volunteer in a state program to get extra compensation.

Norman Gold of Randolph is a door-to-door salesman. While collecting payments in Boston's Roxbury section, he frequently cashed welfare checks. One day last year, while on his rounds, he was attacked from behind, struck on the head, and robbed of $1,078.35 in welfare checks, his wife told the committee.

Efforts to have the welfare department stop payment on the checks and reimburse Gold dragged out over six months, said Mrs. Gold, and finally ended with the explanation, "We're sorry, there's nothing we can do."

There were other stories Tuesday—a young man who spent a year in Concord Reformatory before the Supreme Court reversed his conviction on a drug charge, a woman who was seriously injured when a chair collapsed in a state building, a clerk at a mental institution assaulted by a patient.

Many of the bills are "refiles"—duplicates of bills filed and killed last year. The legislature does not always, apparently, share its constituents' views of the state's "moral obligation."

It goes to your head.
Have The New York Times delivered on campus
Send Coupon to
P.O. Box 788,
AMHERST, MASSACHUSETTS 01002.
The rate for weekday delivery (Mon.-Fri.) for second semester is $6.80
☐ Reserve my copy for pick up at the Newsstand Counter on the main level of the Student Union. (Make checks payable to Student Union Lobby Center, "Z-26"
☐ Deliver my copy to my campus address. (Make checks payable to Campus News Agency.) Delivery will begin January 29th.
Name _____ Phone _____
School Address _____

MDC CLASSIFIED

HELP WANTED

Overseas Jobs for students — Australia, Europe, S. America, Africa. Most professions, summer or full time, expenses paid, sightseeing. Free information, write, TWR Co., Dept. Q3, 2550 Telegraph Ave., Berkeley, Ca. 94704. tf2-6

Counselors for co-ed campus in Berkshires. Vacancies: Head Waterfront, Special Events, Athletic Director, Group Leaders, Tennis, Golf, Waterskiing, Dance, Guitars & folk singing, Radio station Director, Rocketry, wrestling, Arts & Crafts, General Bunk Counselors. Contact Paul Krouner, 44 Sagamore Rd., Worcester, Mass. 01609. tf1-30

EMPLOYMENT

1973 Student Job Opportunity Booklet for Cape Cod and Islands. Complete list of businesses requiring summer employees. Send $2.00 to: Student Job Opportunity Booklet, R. R. 1, Box 11-C, Orleans, Mass. 02653. tf1-26

Earn top money! Part time promoting student travel. Call or write: American Student Travel Center, 230 East 51st, N.Y., N.Y. 10028. tf1-26

FOR RENT

Room for rent, $80 month, util. included, center of Belchertown. Call Randy, evening, 323-7401. tf1-26

ENTERTAINMENT

LAUGH YOUR ASS OFF! SEE PUTNEY SWOPE ON SUN., JAN. 28 AT 7 - 9 - 11 IN MAHAR — WELL, MAYBE NOT YOUR ASS! ALSO, BETTY BOOP & EARTH FILM. tf1-26

AUTOS FOR SALE

64 Ford Custom, new snow tires, auto. trans. Must sell by 2 Feb. So only $200. Call 253-5461 eve. tf1-31

1966 MERCEDES. Gas, automatic, AM-FM-SW, Michelin radials, power steering, power disc brakes, air, 665-3212 or 5-0055. tf1-26

1971 VW Super Bug, exc. condition thru out, new snows, $1000. Call 253-5556. tf1-25

1970 Firebird, trans - AM, Excellent condition, air cond., power windows, tape deck, auto. trans., best offer. Call Roger 549-6554. tf2-2

1969 Triumph Spitfire, 2 tops, AM-FM, Mich. Spfld. 781-0005, 567-3256. tf1/30

66 Ford std., 8 cyl., studded tires, $325. 665-3200. tf2/1

1969 Dodge Dart, a.t., radio, heater, good condition, $150 or best offer. Must sell by Fri., 26, 549-1868 anytime. tf1/26

DATING SERVICE

MATCH IS THE FIVE COLLEGE DATING SERVICE — A NEW CONCEPT IN MEETING NEW FRIENDS. SEND FOR FREE QUESTIONNAIRE: MATCH, BOX 759, AMHERST. tf1-30

PERSONAL

Rural Gay (Read Honest) Commune needs few more beautiful freak people to get on with it. P. O. Box 723, Amherst, Mass. tf1-29

Number 40 in my heart: Happy belated 21st — even though it's nothing special — your Fan & Friend sometimes! tf1/25

WANTED

Photographer wants open minded liberal female models part-time, good pay. Write giving details to P. O. Box 122, Granby, Mass. 01033. tf2-1

Apt. or house to rent for wk.-end, Feb. 9-11, Fri. eve. to Sun. eve. Will pay, and take responsibility for damages. Call 546-5199, Joe. tf1/29

APARTMENT WANTED

Student into meditation wants to share apt. with people of similar interests. 549-1379. tf1-26

FOR SALE

We buy and sell used Gibson, Fender, Martin guitars, banjos and amps. Also new guitars at low prices. The Guitar Workshop, North. 586-1704. tf5/11

Att. ski rack for trunk of a car, complete with locks and keys. 1 yr. old in exc. cond., $30. No phone, come to #66 Colonial Village. tf1/29

Furniture for sale, must go immediately, maple dining set, new double bed, sleeper couch. Other misc. items. Call 253-5556. tf1-25

Harman Kardon, Citation 11, pre-amp, perfect condition, 5 mos. old, $200 firm. 253-9611 eves. tf1-30

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female, own room in luxury apt., grad student preferred. 1 mile from Campus. Call 253-7871 days, 549-6556 evenings. tf1-30

Share room in 2 bdr. apt. $61.25/mo., all modern; utilities incl. In Amherst 253-2034. tf1-30

Share apt., Amherst Motel, furnished, all util., phone, pool, no lease, $90 month. Phone 253-9324, male. tf1-25

REFRIGERATORS

Brand new — Made by Delmonico - 5 year guarantee - free delivery - 3 cubic foot $75 - 5 cubic foot $79. Call Gary - 1615. JFK 546-7839.

TRADE

Flute Wtd. Will pay $ or trade 5 cu. ft. refrig., or will take $ for frig. Call Andree at WMUA 545-2878, Leave Mesge in box, if not there. tf1-26

RIDE WANTED

For child — daily ride, Ashfield Rd., Williamsburg to Amherst, 7:30 - 8:30 a.m. or return at 3 - 3:30 p.m. Will pay. Call 1-268-3382. tf1-26

Attn. cars from Rt. 9, Pelham Rd., Main St. — need a ride for 8 o'clock class — I'm on Main by Southeast. Please respond! Call 256-6203, Susan. tf1/29

TRAVEL

N. Y. — Frankfurt $150 rnd. trip. Open return - weekly flts. Info & schedule, write German Overseas Tour, 56-1/2 Western A, Brattleboro, Vt. 05301. tf1-26

INSTRUCTION

Kung Fu Club Chinese self-defense, first general meeting on Mon., Jan. 29 at 7:30 p.m., Campus Center, Rm. 904-8. All Are Welcome. tf1-26

MISCELLANEOUS

Commuters! A limited number of lockers are available for personal use this semester. First come, first served basis. Jan. 25, 26, 29 and 30, Rm. 112 C.C. 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., $3.00 key deposit required. 1/30

Christians Celebrate Life

As you may or may not have seen on posters around the campus, the United Christian Foundation is offering a series of courses this semester collectively titled "The Celebration of Life". There are a total of ten courses, and you may receive one credit for every fourteen hour course through the sponsorship of the Southwest Colloquium program.

The courses offered are: "Where Buddhism, Christianity and Shintoism Meet," by Chisato Kitagawa, assistant professor in Asian Studies, UMass; "The Underground Church Part II", taught by Renny Scott, Episcopal chaplin, UMass; "Life of Jesus-A Man For All Seasons", by Paul MacVittie, pastor at College Church in Northampton; "Four Metaphysical Models For A New Testament Perception Of Reality: Paul, Luke, Mark, John", taught by Peter Schneider, pastor of the Wesley Methodist Church of Amherst; "Two Minds", offered by Phillip Hall, pastor of North Church in North Amherst; "Search For Reality And The Discovery Of God", by Calvin Fox, pastor of the Florence Congregational Church, and manager of "Thinker's Loft" (a Christian bookstore and study center); "Setting Men Free', taught by John Paris, minister and councelor; "Good News To The Poor", offered by Charles Farrell, pastor of First Congregational Church in Amherst; "Ends and Means-Scrupling", by Jay Severeid, Ombudsman at UMass, and conscientious objector in World War II; and "Experimenting In Christian Community Today", taught by Tom Lindeman, campus minister, United Christian Foundation.

Registration brochures may be found in the envelopes accompanying "Celebration of Life" posters in most buildings on campus. A more detailed course description may be found on these registration sheets. Registration forms are also available at the UCF office in 319 Hampshire House. Official registration, and an opportunity to chat with participating instructors, will be held at 7:30 p.m., on Wednesday, January 31, in the Colonial Lounge of the Student Union. If you have any questions, please call the UCF office at 545-2661.

Natural Foods Promote Myths

The myriad of cranks, quacks, and faddists who are promoting the idea that the nation's nutritional past was a glory of "natural" healthful eating to which people must return for food salvation are propagating a myth, Dr. Fergus M. Clydesdale, associate professor of food science and technology at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst, said yesterday.

Keynoting a three-day food management seminar of the Massachusetts Food Service Educational Council at Wakefield, Dr. Clydesdale pointed out that just before World War I, for example, rickets, beriberi, pellagra, and goiter, all extremely serious nutrition-deficiency diseases, were common in the U.S., according to the American Medical Association.

In contrast, these nutritional deficiency diseases today are no longer even tabulated as causes of death in this country, according to the UMass professor.

The three-day seminar at the Colonial Hilton Inn in Wakefield focuses on "Choices, Challenges, and Changes Facing the Food Service Industry", and is the 20th annual such seminar sponsored by the Massachusetts Food Service Educational Council. Member organizations of the Council include the Massachusetts Restaurant Association, Massachusetts Dietetic Association, Massachusetts Hotel-Motel Association, New England Club Managers Association, Epicurean Club of Boston, Massachusetts Food Service Association, and the Boston and Western Massachusetts branches of the Food Service Executives Association.

The American people have the potential for being the best-fed people in history, he added, but tend towards snack foods, non-nutritious beverages, eating too much, and eating too many kinds of foods which are not healthful. This state of affairs, he said, is due to people, not to the food industry, food service industry, or the advances of food technology, as some commentators proclaim.

Those who live the organic way, Dr. Clydesdale continued, are deluding themselves. In reality, the organic way can never feed the world as it is today, since the population increase has been too great and too rapid. Technology must be accepted and depended upon to feed the current population, according to the speaker.

Applications Available For Student Exchange

Applications are available from December 1, 1972 to March 1, 1973, in the Admissions Office, Whitmore Hall, for Undergraduate Students interested in going on exchange either semester of next year. The participating institutions for 1973-74, are:

Illinois State University, Montana State University, Morgan State College, Ohio University, Oregon State University, Rutgers-the State University of New Jersey (at New Brunswick), University of Alabama, University of Hawaii, University of Idaho, University of Maine-Fort Kent, University of Massachusetts - Amherst, University of Montana, University of Nevada-Reno, University of Oregon, University of South Florida, Univerity of Wisconsin-Green Bay.

The student applying for an exchange should be a sophomore. The exchange would be during his junior year. The student must have at least a 2.5 cumulative grade point average. Students who are interested in participating in the program for next year must complete an application and return it to Mr. Loder, Office of the Registrar, no later than the deadline of March 1, 1973. Final selections, including a list of alternates, are expected to be completed by March 31, 1973.

Health Service Hours

The Out-Patient Clinic at the Health Center is held on weekdays from 8:00 a.m. to noon, and from 1:00 p.m. to 4:45 p.m. Although you can see a physician or nurse during these hours by coming to the Health Center, you are encouraged to make an appointment to avoid a possible long wait. The appointment number is 545-0057. For urgent problems only you can come on Saturdays between 8:00 a.m. and 11:30 a.m. There is, of course, 24 hour emergency care. Either come in or call 545-2671. Also, if someone you know is staying at the Health Center in the In-Patient Clinic, you can visit him/her on weekdays between 6:15 p.m. and 8:15 p.m. On weekends, the hours are 3:15 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. and 6:15 p.m. to 8:15 p.m.

If you wish to make an appointment with Mental Health, simply call 545-2337. The hours there are weekdays from 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.

Educ. Course

A new learning experience at the School of Education will begin February 1 and run Tuesdays and Thursdays from 2:30 to 3:45 until April 10. This class will meet in Hasbrouck 211 and is open to undergraduates and graduates. Its title is "An Introduction to Structural Innovation in Education." The learning experience will focus on a number of popular educational innovations from differentiated staffing and the open classroom to modular credit and University Without Walls.

NIGHT OF THE LIVING DEAD
plus
GROOVE TUBE DELIGHTS
Fri., Jan. 26
T-104 at 7 - 9 - 11

AMHERST CINEMA
AMITY ST., AMHERST
Now
"CASABLANCA"
Starring Humphrey Bogart, Ingrid Bergman and Sydney Green street
253-5426
Complete shows at 7:00 & 9:00
Rated X FRIDAY at 11:30 only Adults only
"Orgy of Revenge"
— Plus —
AMBLIN
A brand new short about the free life
WED. to SUNDAY with 50c DISCOUNT College I.D.
BARGAIN NITES Mon. - Tues. Adults $1

Robert Downey's
PUTNEY SWOPE
plus BETTY BOOP & Earth from Space Film
Sun., Jan. 28
7 - 9 - 11 Mahar

JAMES BOND 007

PROGRAM COUNCIL
presents
"HENDRIX AT BERKELEY"
a filmed live performance
plus Flash Gordon
Thursday, January 25
Friday, January 26
C.C. Auditorium 7 and 9 p.m.
Only 50¢

GOLDFINGER
Today
1 - 3 - 7 - 9 - 11
75¢
ALL SHOWS IN S.U.B.
ALL DAY
Another First From Butterfield Productions

Notices

ALCOHOL ANONYMOUS
Meeting every Thursday at 811 CC, 8 pm. All persons who have problems concerning alcoholism are invited. Anonymity respected.

BIOCHEMISTRY SEMINAR
Dr. John Nordin will speak at Rm. 1108, GRT at 4:15 Thurs. 1/25. Title: C1 and the Complement System.

CONCERT COMMITTEE
Meeting tonite at 8:00 pm in Rm. 811-815. Important booking Comm. meeting at 7:30 pm. All old or new members are urged to attend.

COMMUTERS
Three vacancies on the Commuter Assembly. Nomination papers available in the front of RSO, first fl., CC, for election on Feb. 15.

ECOLOGY GROUP (CEQ)
First meeting of Ceq coming up this Tues. nite 7 pm CC in the Student Activities Area.

FAMILY TIME
Frl. night at 7:00, our first second semester reunion; everyone welcome. To be held in Colonial Lounge.

GAY WOMEN'S CAUCUS
Meeting Thurs. at S. W. women's center, 5:30. All women welcome.

JAZZ ARRANGING
Two-hour class will meet once per week. Total; ten weeks. No grade. No credit. Taught by music grad. student. Syllabus posted at Old Chapel.

METHODS POTPOURRI STUDENTS
There will be a meeting for all education students enrolled in the Methods Potpourri on Frl., Jan. 26th at 8:15 a.m. or 3:35 p.m. in the Ed School Auditorium. Attend either meeting.

PEOPLE SELLING AT TABLES IN CC
Sign-up today for your table next week.

SKI PATROL
Regularly scheduled meeting for Ski Patrol tonight has been cancelled.

SUMMER COUNSELING ORIENTATION
Applications for 1973 Summer Orientation Counselors are due on Feb. 9 at the Counseling Center, 243 Whitmore. Applications are available from the Counseling Center.

TCEA DEPT.
Students who participated in Cultural and Design Resources (Field Visits) during Jan. must submit papers and reports to TCEA office by Frl., Jan. 26th.

UNDERGRAD T.A.'S—PSYCH 101
Beginning Mon., Jan. 28 undergrad Teaching Assistants for Dr. John Donahoe's section of Psych 101, will meet at 7:30 every Mon. evening in Tobin 622.

USED BOOK EXCHANGE SALE
The Business Club will sponsor a book sale on the lower level of S.B.A. from Jan. 25-Feb. 2.

WELCOME BACK SENIORS
Reminder to all CCEBS SENIORS. There will be an important meeting on Jan. 26 at five thirty p.m. CC 804. This meeting will be most informative. Please attend.

ZOOLOGY 101
zoology 101 (Introductory Zoo) labs will begin on Frl. Jan. 26. Lectures will begin as scheduled.

LOST
Black wallet, possibly at Mike's or vicinity Tues. night. Call Paul, 253-9921.

Textbook Annex Store Hours
Spring Semester

Thursday	January 25	9:00—9:00
Friday	January 26	9:00—9:00
Saturday	January 27	9:00—5:00
Monday	January 29	9:00—9:00
Tuesday	January 30	9:00—9:00
Wednesday, January 31 to Tuesday, February 6		9:00—5:30
Remainder of the semester, weekdays		8:30—4:30
Saturdays (Feb. 3, 10, 17).		10:00—2:00

Student Teachers
English Education is now beginning its selection process. If you are interested in student teaching in English for the Fall of 1973 and have not stopped by the office--Bartlett 474--or your address has changed since you were last in--please come by immediately. See Gary Aho, Fred Robinson, or Frances Stone.

The Shadow At Kirby Theater
"The Shadow", a play based on the now classic 1930s' radio show, will share a playbill with a new play, "Don Tomaso's Last Supper", at Amherst College's Kirby Theater Friday, January 26 and Saturday, January 27.

"The Shadow" production was adapted for the Kirby Theater stage by Amherst junior William Watts of Glencoe, Ill. Designed by Amherst Assistant Professor of Dramatic Arts Eugene Warner, it is being staged as an old radio show, including stand-up microphones and sound effects men.

Amherst freshman Robert E. Thayer, Jr., of Fanwood, N.J. plays the hero, Cranston Lamont. Margo Lane, the Shadow's friend and companion, is played by Miss Ann Malley, a Mount Holyoke College student. Amherst senior John H. Hasen of New York City plays the villain.

"Don Tomaso's Last Supper" was written by Dan W. Eaton, an Amherst senior from Wilbraham, Mass. The play is set in a metaphorical Spain on a cubist stage designed by Amherst Assistant Professor of Dramatic Arts Dennis L. Dorn. The play offers a confrontation between two men, the landed artistrocrat Don Tomaso and Juan Robledo, a young doctor.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST
By SYDNEY OMARR

Of all signs, Aquarius is the one who lives for the moment. Natives of this zodiacal sign react on impulse, strive to savor experience, abhor sameness, long for change, are progressive enough to perceive future trends. The Aquarian does what comes naturally. This does not mean Aquarius is always wise or mature. But if does mean these persons are basically true to themselves. For better or worse, says Aquarius, this is me and that's the way it is.

***

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Concern with the hidden or occult surfaces. You are not likely to be satisfied with status quo. Key is to investigate, to probe for answers. Source material is unorthodox. Money affecting mate, partner is involved.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Public relations improve. More persons express appreciation for your efforts. Social invitation is received—accept it. Don't push or force. One close to you has surprise. It receptive, you will be gratified.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Steady pace brings satisfaction, reward. You gain it thorough. Specifically, your work methods, your procedures bear fruit. Key is to know progress is being made—don't feel there must be fireworks. Sincerity and dedication are valuable commodities.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Good lunar aspect now coincides with creative change, special relationship and recognition from peers. Your ideas, style come across. Intensified relationship is much in picture. Don't run from emotions.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Changes occur within family. Keep antennas up for special signal. Gemini, Virgo persons figure prominently. Basic issues dominate. Don't neglect one who wants to tell you something. Be attentive, sympathetic.

VIRGO (Aug 23-Sept. 22): You may have to decide between course which seems rough and one which is tough. There is apparently no easy way. But once you get started, forward motion carries you to goal. Pisces is in picture. Short trip probably is necessary.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Accent is on money, personal possessions, how to get most from assets. Capricorn is likely to be in picture. Utilize lessons learned in recent past. You have allies in high positions. Know it and act like you are aware of it.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-November 21): Cycle high and you gain added recognition. Find better ways to distribute product. Get ideas across to key persons. In personal area, love blossoms. You can feel more complete. Highlight individuality.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Face what you fear. By so doing, you actually overcome obstacle. Key now is to maintain independent stance. By going behind scenes you obtain required data. Know it and proceed in direct manner.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Accent now is on friends, hopes, special aspirations. Family member helps you attain what is required. Be receptive. If you don't know, ask. Others now want to aid. But you must make initial gesture.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Go directly to source. Move in different direction. Accent ability to be versatile. You are not stuck with one method. Experiment. Expand horizons. Deal with Sagittarian. Give full play to intellectual curiosity. Leave details for another time.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Emphasis is on study, journeys, communications from a distance. You are able to get through to person willing to show you the key to progress. Aquarius, Leo and Scorpio persons figure prominently.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, you tend to be introspective. You usually choose quality. You now are embarking on new project, with ultimate success indicated in September. Leo person will play important role. You are an original thinker. This year many of your views will be vindicated.

Copyright 1973, Gen. Fea. Corp.

Crossword Puzzle

ACROSS
1 Simians
5 High mountain
8 Girl's name
12 Coin
13 Contend
14 Thus
15 Cancel
17 Older
19 Muse of poetry
20 Narrow inlet of the sea
21 Obtains
23 The sweetsop
24 Devoured
26 Shuts noisily
28 Organ of hearing
31 Symbol for tantalum
32 Mohammedan name
33 Sun god
34 Youngster
36 Remain erect
38 Everybody's uncle
39 Great Lake
41 Direction
43 Morning prayer
45 Jumps
48 Rugged mountain crests
50 Sewing implement
51 Ascend
52 Time gone by 54 Disturbance
55 Dines
56 Ship channel
57 Carpenter's tools

DOWN
1 Skin ailment
2 Equal
3 Pledge
4 Declare
5 Hail!
6 Chinese mile
7 Footlike part
8 Nature spirit
9 Hairy
10 Man's name
11 Nobleman
16 Small children
18 Newts
22 Writing tablet
23 Chemical compound
24 Unit of Siamese currency
25 Chinese pagoda
27 A state (abbr.)
29 Macaw
30 Male sheep
35 Hate
36 Mathematical ratio
37 Small valley
38 Sports arenas
40 Ceremonies
42 Prophets
43 Female horse
44 Solo
46 Furrow
47 Places
49 Sink in middle
50 Negative
53 A state (abbr.)

Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle

SORES MALAR
DENIAL OMELET
AN BROOD DUPE
RAT NOTED MAD
ETON PILES ID
SEWER CENTURY
EVILL DIET
REREDOS MATES
AD RECUR LENE
BIB SALES RUE
ITER TUNIS RD
DOTAGE TROPES
RAPID SEPIS

25

Distr. by United Feature Syndicate, Inc. 25

Welcome Back

Jolly Bull
Rte. 9, Hadley
584-2769

Army Win Sets Pace For Gymnasts

By JOHN CALBRIA

While UMass was caught in the grip of exams, the Minutemen gymnasts were competing against the cadets from the U.S. Military Academy. Before a knowledgeable crowd of UMies and others the UMass team defeated Army 155.95-145.4. In what turned out to be an easy win, UMass took the lead after floor exercise and never relinquished it throughout the rest of the meet.

Floor ex. saw two initially evenly matched teams distinguish themselves. Although neither team fared well in this event the Minutemen found themselves ahead with better than a one point lead.

Pommel Horse proved to be a more solid event for UMass. Behind the strong performances of Junior Rich Seikunas and Co-capt. Steve Scuderi UMass picked up an additional three points.

The climax of the first half came in the Still Rings. After what turned out to be a low scoring first two events, senior Dan Spier and senior Co-capt. Jay Aronstein combined to achieve a 9.0 respectively. Jay's flawless routine heard the spectators rise to the occasion with resounding applause.

Long Horse Vaulting relied on the score of its top performer, junior Jay Thomsen. A score of 9.1 on his vault gave Jay a first place tie with Rutherford of Army.

The usual main scorers for any gymnastic team are the all-around men and UMass proved this rule on Parallel Bars. Co-Capt. Steve Scuderi and sophomore Gene Whelan tied for first with an 8.85, fine scores for both performers.

The final event, High Bar, was also dominated by the all-around men. Senior Dan Spier put it all together for a fine 8.95. In addition Steve Scuderi came up with the only other routine to rival teammate Jay Aronstein. Steve performed a superb routine to score a 9.3, his highest score to date.

With this win under their belts, the Minutemen retired to their homes for a two week rest. During the week of Jan. 2 they returned to UMass for practice during the intersession vacation. This practice time is most important since it prepares the gymnasts for the most challenging part of their season.

The Minutemen will kick off their second semester season on Jan. 26 with a home meet against an unusually strong Syracuse team. This will be followed by three meets on one weekend, Feb. 2 & 3. UMass will compete against Pittsburgh, Dartmouth and the perennial power of gymnastics, Penn State. With the hard work of the intersession practice behind them the UMass team should be well prepared for these competitions, as well as those that follow.

In other action on the same day the UMass JV team defeated the U.S. Military Academy JV's by a score of 135.85-120.1. Standouts for UMass in this competition were Jack Fabbricante in Floor Ex. and Vaulting, Roy Johnson on Pommel Horse and in the All-Around. I,N addition Bill Brouillet had a good day with high scores on Parallel Bars, High Bar and a fine 46.95 in the All-Around.

The next JV meet comes on Feb. 3 when UMass goes against a strong Dartmouth team. This meet should be a real challenge to the abilities of the JV gymnasts.

THE 1972-73 UMASS GYMNASTICS TEAM: Standing, from left to right: Bill Brouillette, Jack Fabbricante, Tim Beasley, Roy Johnson, Rick Seikunas, Brian Hassig, Steve Nelson, Gene Whelan; Jay Aronstein and Steve Scuderi, co-capts; Dan Spier, Jay Thomsen, Earl Roy, Phil Aubrey, Jim Battista, Jack Berner, and John Oliver. Kneeling, left to right: Asst. Coach John Calabria and head coach Tom Dunn.

Spahn Makes It To "Hall"

By HUBERT MIZELL
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Stylish Braves' left-hander Warren Spahn, winner of 363 major league games, scored "the greatest victory of my life" Wednesday by being elected to the Baseball Hall of Fame.

"This is the epitome," he said.

Spahn was a landslide choice, named on 316 of 380 ballots of the Baseball Writers Association of America. He had 20 triumphs 13 different seasons and is the winningest southpaw in history.

A 75 per cent vote is required for enshrinement at the Baseball Hall in Cooperstown, N.Y., and the 51-year-old Spahn had 83 per cent.

Whitey Ford, one time clutch lefty of the New York Yankees, came close in his first shot at the Hall with 67 per cent. He got 255 votes and a total of 284 was required.

"Nice going, Spahnie," Ford told the newest Hall of Famer. "Maybe Mickey and I can go to Cooperstown as a two-man entry next year."

Mickey Mantle, the Yanks' powerhouse slugger during Ford's era, becomes eligible in 1974.

Spahn's first chance at the Hall of Fame was delayed by two seasons due to his brief appearances in the Mexican League in 1966 and with Tulsa of the Pacific Coast League in 1967.

Ralph Kiner was a high also--ran for the fourth straight time. The ex-Pittsburgh home run hitter was third. Gil Hodges was fourth with 218 and Robin Roberts, a 20-game winner six straight years for the Philadelphia Phillies, was fifth with 213 in his first shot at the Hall.

"Cooperstown...it's great to be there," Spahn said after the announcement. "My head on a plaque behind Babe Ruth, Ty Cobb, Walter Johnson and all the others. What more can a man ask?"

Spahn was at the home of his 77-year-old father, Edward, in Buffalo, N.Y., when word of his election came about midnight Tuesday.

"You ask about my smooth motion, my high leg kick? Well, my father taught me that," Spahn said. "He drilled it into me to propel the ball and not simply throw it. I am delighted he lived to see this great thing happen."

Warren was born April 23, 1921, at Buffalo and began his minor league career as an $80-a-month pitcher for Bradford, Pa., in the Class D Pony League.

Two seasons later, in 1942, the Boston Braves rewarded Spahn's success in the minors by promoting him to the National League for the tailend of the season.

"One of my greatest moments was walking into Braves Field, my first big league ballpark," he recalled "I looked at the other players like they were idols. And, they were."

World War II was rolling and Spahn was drafted into the Army. He missed 1943-44-45, winning a battlefield commission in Europe while participating in the Battle of the Bulge.

Spahn came back to the United States after the 1946 season was underway. He married his sweetheart, Lorene Southard, and posted an 8-5 record in only 24 games.

The legend began mounting in '47 when the 6-foot, 183-pounder had his first 20-game year, a 20-13 embellished with a league-topping earned run average of 2.33.

A dozen more 20-victory seasons came in the 16 years that followed. His lifetime record upon leaving the majors in 1965 at the age of 44 was 363-245 with a 3.08 ERA.

When the Braves' franchise moved from Boston to Milwaukee in 1953, Spahn went with it and charmed a new city with his almost artistic method of mowing down opposing hitters.

Spahn and John Sain had helped to pitch Boston to the National League pennant in 1948 and Warren was around when Milwaukee went a step farther, winning the World Series in 1957.

Rams Fire Prothro

By JACK STEVENSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tacitum Tommy Prothro was fired Wednesday as coach of the Los Angeles Rams. The National Football League team named Detroit Lions' assistant Chuck Knox as his successor.

Knox received a multi-year contract but no details were announced by the Rams, who apparently must pay Prothro at least $90,000 a year for the next three to fulfill contract obligations.

A court fight over disposition of Prothro's contract would not be a surprise.

"As soon as I heard the news this morning, I called my attorney and turned the whole thing over to him" declared Prothro, hired from UCLA two years ago after a successful collegiate coaching career.

"That's all I have to say at this time."

Actually, Prothro heard the news from his wife, Shirley, who had been at her dentist's office when she heard it on radio.

Marvin Meyer, Prothro's attorney, said he plans to meet with Rams' attorneys but otherwise had no comment.

Carroll Rosenbloom traded ownership of the Baltimore Colts for the Rams last summer in an unique National Football League transaction.

Pats Get Coach

BOSTON (AP)- Chuck Fairbanks, who led the resurgence of football at Oklahoma, accepted a job offer from the New England Patriots of the National Football League, WBZ television reported 11:30 Wednesday night. Details in tomorrow's paper.

BOOT SALE
ALL MEN'S & WOMEN'S Winter Boots
50% off
the SHOE-BIN

Tonite
PENNY NITE
with CUCKOOS NEST
at the
Rusty Nail Inn
Rte. 47, Sunderland
665-4937

TOP OF THE CAMPUS RESTAURANT
20% Student Discount
Try Our All New Menu.
Dinner 5:30 - 9:30 Closed on Mondays

SALE
SELECTED PANTS 50% OFF
Most All JERSEY'S & SWEATERS 30% OFF
WEAR-HOUSE

PC Recovers, Wins 91-78

Al Skinner climbs high for a rebound against Springfield in a game played January 18. Al was the outstanding player in last night's loss to Providence, collecting 24 points, and grabbing 13 rebounds.

By EARLE BARROLL

Providence College IS the number team in New England, and yes, 13th or 14th in the country, depending on your preferred poll. For the rest of this season the fight is for who's second, and after the gutsy performance of the Minutemen here last night, the number two spot may have already been decided.

UMass, a decided underdog to the nationally ranked and much heralded Friars, boarded the brink of oblivion and, in the same breath, stardom before falling to PC, 91-78, at the beautiful and spacious Providence Civic Center. The final margin was, as a disconsolate Coach Jack Leaman termed it after the game, "not a 13 point ball game." Indeed he was right.

On two separate occasions in each of the twenty minute stanzas, the Minutemen were on the verge of being launched somewhere onto Interstate 95 before once, tying the score at the half 43-43 on a 21-9 burst and a second time coming on a 65-63 on a 13-4 run midway through the second half before the East's No. 1 quintet iced it away for the home crowd of 9,000 plus. It was indeed a bizarre situation for the Minutemen as they fought back at the multi-defenses the PC coach, Dave Gavitt, had for them, their own miscues, and a set of officials who, for some unassuming reason, (maybe they were from East and West Providence) had PC in the one-and-one with only six minutes elapsed in the game, Charlie Peters with four fouls after eight minutes, and a knack for calling the same movements completely opposite for the respective teams.

Perhaps it was the decompression period after the UCLA game that fostered the seemingly lackadaisical performance of the Friars. If you go back to last season, it was nearly the identical situation as PC was coming off a stunning win over Southern Cal and had very much the same problems at the Cage. "I don't think it was as mentally tough as it was physically for us to get ready for this game," said PC Coach Gavitt.

"We have all the respect in the world for UMass. Many of our players know the UMass players, like Bill Endicott and Jimmy Burke. Any time you face a UMass team coached by Jack Leaman, you know it's always going to be a tough contest.

Or, it was just a case of a fine UMass team, that had upset previously 19th ranked Penn at the Palestra, that caused the scarry situation in which a team that had had wounds from such notables as Boston University and UConn, had a nationally ranked power on the ropes and the crowd in amazement and despair. As one partisan shouted out, "This isn't UCLA, Let's beat them!"

It was a combination of both.

"When we got back into the game," said Leaman, "we lost our poise. We shot poorly at times. When they went into the zone beginning in the second half, we burried our shots which led to five quick hoops and it's awful difficult to make up a big deficit in a short time of basketball.

"But heck," he philosophised," this is a good team that plays great teams. They have a great facility and 9,000 fans cheering for them."

Of all the notables and prominent national figures, including Ernie DiGregorio and Marvin Barnes, that led themselves to a "big time aura", UMass' Al Skinner led the field with an outstanding, 24 point, 13 rebound performance, his finest of the year. One writer to my left commented, "That No. 30 is quite the player."

The jumping-jack Junior forward (who's anti-gravity feet stirred the fans a number of times) was not alone as on separate occasions names such as John Murphy (18), Tom McLaughlin (15) and Bill Endicott, Charlie Peters and Rick Pitino ignited the Minutemen back into the fray.

As was expected, Ernie D had his usual 24 points and 7 assists, Barnes (who played when he felt like it) 17 points and 18 rebounds, and Kevin Stacom, the Holy Cross transfer who played against UMass two years back when UMass beat the Cross 60-58 at Worcester, 21.

Yes, PC is No. 1, but the Minutemen have layed a heavy claim on No. 2.

The score:

Providence	FG	FT	PTS	UMass	FG	FT	PTS
DeGregorio	11	2	24	Pitino	2	1	5
Crawford	2	4	8	Trow	1	0	2
Barnes	7	3	17	Skinner	10	4	24
Stacom	8	5	21	Peters	1	0	2
King	4	2	10	Murphy	8	2	18
Costello	3	5	11	McLaughlin	6	3	15
Baker	0	0	0	Endicott	4	0	8
Bello	0	0	0	Burke	1	0	2
				Austin	1	0	2
				Gilliams	0	0	0

Att: 9,139; Pct. UM 49% PC 48%; Score at Half, 43-43

Pucksters Face Providence Tonight

By BILL BALLOU

Up until last Friday, hockey coach Jack Canniff was faced with the problem of having three good goaltenders, and not enough game time to give them all enough work to keep them all sharp. So Canniff, who makes a minimum of changes anyway, played Peter Erickson most of the time and gave his other two goalies, John Kiah and Chick Rheault, as much work as he could.

Well, one-third of that problem disappeared Friday when Erickson injured his knees in a goal-mouth collision in practice. It's not known when, or if, Erickson will be back, so it's going to be up to Kiah and Rheault to carry the goaltending load, at least for a while. And, starting with tonight's game with Providence College, it's going to be a helluva load.

The last week of January sees UMass taking on Division I's Providence tonight, at Brown's Meehan Auditorium; St. Anselm's, a tough Division II foe, at Orr Rink Saturday night, and Boston University in Boston on January 30. But that stretch of games is a mere work-out compared to what February brings. The Minutemen play twelve games in a space of 25 days, including two game road trip to America's sun and fun spot, Waterville, Maine. So, both goalies are likely to see plenty of work.

As for Providence, well, they're a Division I team and so the game doesn't count in the divisional standings and they usually give UMass teams a hard time. Last year PC thumped the Redmen 8-3 at Orr Rink in the last regular season game before the playoffs. The Friars went on to make the Division I playoffs but were bombed in the opening game by Cornell.

This year PC has moved its games from the old RI Auditorium to Brown's Meehan Auditorium while they wait for the completion of their new rink. Meehan is a top-notch building and has one of the best ice surfaces in New England.

The Minutemen should be in pretty good shape, physically, save for Erickson, and should have more bodies around than for their last game, against Colgate.

In that one they were forced to play without Brian Mulcahy, who was out for fighting in the previous game, and with Mike Ellis sick and only at partial strength, the UMass defensive corps was hurting.

So, two of the next three games for the Minutemen involve Division I teams and both those games are on the road. Both Kiah and Rheault are talented goalies and they proved it against Colgate. However neither has seen enough game action to be a proven quantity.

The test begins tonight.

Undefeated Wrestling Team Highlights Varsity M

By JOHN BOCK

A visitor to the Varsity 'M' Club Luncheon at the Newman Center yesterday might have thought something was wrong with the food. The speakers at the head table had almost empty plates as did the group of men sitting at another table.

Well, the food was fine and the reason for the poor appetites was that Wrestling Coach Homer Barr and his undefeated Minutemen Team were the topic of the Varsity M.

Coach Barr addressed his remarks to the program he has built since coming to UMass six years ago. When so many coaches are out on the prowl looking for the best athlete, the so-called Blue-chippers, Coach Barr said that he is looking at a boy with a good attitude as well as exceptional skills and to illustrate his point remarked that he is not overly interested in the top high school wrestler in Massachusetts this year for just that reason.

"The team we have at the college this year is the best team I've had since I have been here and is close to being the best team I have ever coached."

There to talk about the team was senior co-captain Carl Dambman. He highlighted the varsity team and the casual listener might have been impressed with the number of 5-1 and 6-0 records the members sport.

Dambman gave a reason for the empty plates in front of him and his teammates. "I've been a heavyweight ever since I came here but I've wrestled 190 this year and I still have a lot of weight to lose because I went home and my mother fed me too good over the holidays."

The other half of the captainship was there in the form of senior 118 pounder Dave Amato who spoke about the upcoming match with Springfield College. He spoke of this match as being THE match of the year in New England but said that this year, because SC isn't in the NEUWA Tourney, it will be THE THE match.

"I know that I am ready for Springfield and I know that the other guys have been practicing hard for the match and feel ready for them. I just hope we don't overlook Oswego this Saturday."

Coach Barr, after telling a few anecdotes, recognized Coach Dick MacPherson in the audience as being a onetime freshman wrestling coach who wasn't willing to admit it. MacPherson said he would own up to it but he didn't think that the wrestlers would be willing to accept it.

A film followed showing, among other things, Carl Dambman's fastest pin in UMass' history (26 seconds.)

In the continuing saga of "Bill Ballou and the Elusive Door Prize", the best Bill could do was to be one digit off the winning number after which his tears turned the sauce on his stuffed shells to soup.

Mike Brophy

New "Home" for Minutemen

Now that you have arrived back at your room on campus and escaped from the routine household chores of living at home such as washing dishes or walking the dog, you will have a chance to orient yourself again and catch up on some of the things you missed while at home.

Yes, the basketball team has looked impressive while posting three consecutive victories on the road and the hockey team has gained valuable experience even though they fell 5-3 to Colgate after trouncing Hamilton 9-4.

Let us take a look at the not-too-distant-future and bring to mind those upcoming games at the Springfield Civic Center. The games are being played in the somewhat foreign arena so as to spread UMass Athletics out and to give some outsiders a chance to see what type of ball we actually do play up here in the Pioneer Valley. If you will take just one moment to look at the facts you must come to realize that very few outsiders ever get to see the Minutemen in action. This will give them the opportunity to do so and at the same time students may gain admission to all games played there for one dollar.

When assistant A. D. Bob O'Connell scheduled the game for the Springfield area he had a two-fold purpose in mind: (1) to give outsiders a chance to see UMass games and, (2) to give the students of UMass a chance to show their State Legislature that they do indeed have a crying need for a new sports arena to house the basketball and hockey teams.

I shall not attempt to acquaint you with all the particulars in the fight for money to finance the building operation of such a place. Let it suffice to say that if the students do not show . . . they might as well kiss the Convocation Center farewell for perhaps, as some sources indicate, five years.

And if we do not get this Center within the next few years, chances are the University will lose some of its fine coaches to other institutions and possibly pro or semi-pro organizations. And who can blame a coach if his salary is to be increased and if he can have adequate facilities to work with? These men represent something special and they give their all to UMass athletics but there comes a time when birds must fly the nest as the nest gets too small. Such is the case here.

The Holy Cross rivalry on the court will be played in the Civic Center on the night of January 30 and Boston College will also be met down in the city on February 7. Arrangements are in the process of being made for bus transportation for students who do not have transportation to the Center. So . . . there will be no excuse, other than academic, for not showing. This is your school and if you want that Center this is your chance to show it.

New England's Largest College Daily

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

Weather
It was a dark and stormy night as I whispered in her ear, "Is this any way to run a newspaper?"

Recyclable

VOLUME C, ISSUE 69 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS FRIDAY, JANUARY 26, 1973

U.S. Military Prepares For Peace

SAIGON (AP) — The United States military embarked yesterday on the start of a peacekeeping role in Vietnam, marking the beginning of the end of what President Nixon called America's longest and most difficult war.

Helicopters that once ripped through North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops with rockets and bullets were being altered to carry the Communist representatives who will join American and South Vietnamese on four-party joint military commissions.

The commissions will put into effect a cease-fire beginning at 8 a.m. Sunday Saigon time. That is 7 p.m. EST Saturday.

Distinguished by vertical white stripes from nose to tail instead of dangling machine guns and rocket pods, some of the helicopters also will temporarily support the International Commission of Control and Supervision. This permanent supervisory body is to include troops from Indonesia, Canada, Hungary and Poland, some of whom are scheduled to begin arriving this weekend.

The Hungarian government issued a communique in Budapest giving its first public pledge to take part in the commission, citing "the wish to contribute actively to the restoration of peace in Vietnam."

But the Hungarians disclosed no details on the departure of their troops, expected to number about 290 to help bring the four-member commission's total strength to the agreed 1,160.

Sources in Jakarta, Indonesia, said a contingent of Indonesian troops will fly to Vietnam even before the cease-fire is signed on Saturday in Paris.

Poland also gave its public commitment to participate on the truce commission.

In Canada, Foreign Secretary Mitchell Sharp said his government will start immediate contacts with the other three commission members to plot out the first steps. Canada has agreed to participate in the commission only on a 60-day trial basis, promising to give a definite answer on the basis of early experience on the scene.

Sharp told the House of Commons Wednesday that Canada demands freedom of movement in South Vietnam, freedom to report findings accurately and establishment of a continuing authority to which the commission would report.

Lack of these guarantees hampered operations of the cease-fire group set up after the first Vietnam peace agreement in 1954. Canada participated in that ineffectual group along with India and Poland, which may account for some of the Canadian caution now.

President Nguyen Van Thieu said in Saigon that conclusion of this cease-fire means only passage from one phase of the war to the next.

"The second phase of our struggle will be to win the real peace and to win the political war," he told newsmen.

Thieu predicted that if the political phase slips back into shooting because of Communist cease-fire violations, South Vietnam will get help from many nations.

Asked specifically whether that meant the United States has promised to help Saigon if the war resumes after the U.S. pullout, Thieu replied: "Let's see in a few days."

His passing up the chance to rule out further U.S. involvement, while possibly just a ploy for internal political ends, added to speculation that Vice President Spiro T. Agnew will underscore U.S. support for Saigon when he arrives here Sunday.

Nguyen Thi Binh, foreign minister of the Viet Cong's provisional revolutionary government, pledged in a Paris news conference that the rebel government "is disposed to respect scrupulously the agreement and hopes that the other parties will do the same to insure an authentic and lasting peace."

Mrs. Binh stressed as a problem still to be resolved the organization of "free and democratic general elections in all south Vietnam to allow the population to determine its own political future."

Hoang Duc Nha, Thieu's closest aide in the Saigon regime, said however that elections were out of the question until all North Vietnamese troops get out of the South. Their pullout is not specified in the cease-fire agreement.

Mrs. Binh's North Vietnamese counterpart, Foreign Minister Nguyen Duy Trinh, arrived in Paris from Hanoi to take part in the signing.

Among those greeting him was Le Duc Tho, the top North Vietnamese negotiator who worked out the accord with Henry A. Kissinger.

The opening of the Student Union lobby counter was celebrated by a concept featuring Ed Vadas. See story on page two. (Photo by Al Chapman).

Sarge Asks Belchertown Probe

By MARK VOGLER

BOSTON—Gov. Francis W. Sargent called for an investigation Thursday into the four deaths which occurred at Belchertown State School last year during a two-week period and indicated that public officials could be held accountable.

Steve Teichner, an assistant to the Governor, said that Human Services Secretary Peter Goldmark, assisted by Public Safety Secretary Richard McLaughlin, would conduct "a thorough investigation into the incidents."

According to Teichner, "Gov. Sargent has reviewed all material prepared to date and is concerned with the inconsistencies that various reports posed in terms of what happened."

The "various reports" referred to by Teichner, were those filed by the Department of Mental Health, the State Police, and the Trustees. He said that the Governor hoped "to resolve things once and for all."

Gov. Sargent has informed Goldmark and McLaughlin not to be afraid of specific recommendations in their report with regard to individuals and policy.

Teichner said that the citizens of the Commonwealth "are entitled to know the state officials responsible for these actions." "Public officials must have their actions held to a certain standard of performance."

The Governor's assistant said that it's impossible at the present time to determine who, if anybody, performed "improperly". "It may turn out that nobody did . . . it may turn out that a specific individual did. But it just can't be determined at this point."

Dr. Benjamin Ricci, president of the Belchertown State School Friends' Association, expressed approval at the Governor's decision to prompt an investigation into the Belchertown deaths, but was critical of the timeliness and the approach.

Ricci had written the Governor letters in November and December, criticizing the Department of Mental Health and the State Police for their "inaction" with regard to a search which was called off for a mentally retarded woman from the school Nov. 19. She was found dead the following morning. The Friends' president was also critical of the Governor's role in the matter.

Ricci said he didn't like the idea of Goldmark and McLaughlin being assigned to conduct the investigation. He argued that Gov. Sargent should have appointed an independent agency.

On The Inside:

•Mail Order Pregnancy Tests see page three

•Bromery Hits Reorganization see page three

•Nixon Cuts 'Great Society' see page four

HOW IT STANDS — With the signing of a cease-fire agreement expected Saturday, here is how the current situation stands. The area in black is controlled by the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong, while the area in white is controlled by South Vietnam, according to information from Washington and Saigon. (AP Wirephoto map)

Assistant superintendent Bear Acker, right, of the Crafts Shop in the basement of the Student Union, talks with a student in the shop. Thefts of tools has been plaguing the informal workshop. (MDC Photo by Al Chapman)

Crafts Shop Plagued By Tool Rip-offs

By CINDY GONET

"I'm not exactly sure what someone would do with a used pair of jewelry pliars. It's worth very little...except to the Craft Shop," said Penny Worman, staff assistant about tools missing from the shop.

As the atmosphere of the Crafts Area is presently open and relaxed, Ms. Worman says she hopes it will not be necessary to alter this by imposing mandatory deposits on tools and checking of ID's. "Since we do have more than 150 students come in a day, it would be almost impossible to even purchase so large a number of tools," Ms. Worman explained.

The idea of a Craft Shop germinated from a Craft Guild, which was an RSO group. It began a year ago last Fall in its present location, with its present lack of rules. Instruction is free, unscheduled, and unstructured.

Ms. Worman told MDC that since there are by far more students than tools, everyone had to do a great deal of sharing. "At Christmastime, we did three times more business than in the entire previous year. Then was the most opportune time to 'borrow' a tool which got almost constant use," stated Ms. Worman.

This semester, the Crafts Shop is operating with 80% less tools than every before. The budget, which is ample, paid for by student fees, does not allow for an 80% turnover in tools. It is hoped that the missing tools will be replaced so that others may be allowed to utilize the services offered by the Crafts Area.

In a notice to the students who work in the Area, James P. Riley, program advisor has indicated a "curtailed program" of the Crafts Area. "The Crafts Shop regrets to inform you that a great many of the tools used for jewelry and leather work have been borrowed, stolen, or otherwise removed from the area."

"It is not the philosophy of the Crafts Area to place stringent controls on the use of tools. Rather, we wish to maintain the individual's freedom of operation as it has existed here, by leaving tools out for general use. This important fundamental element of the Crafts Program requires your support. Please return any tools that you have that belong to the Crafts Shop. If you know anyone else that may have tools that belong here, please urge that they be returned," the notice reads.

"Unfortunately, until we have the proper number of tools to work with, we will have a curtailed program. We look forward to your cooperation in restoring the Crafts Shop with its original tool inventory as soon as possible."

Lobby Counter Now 'Sweet Shop'

By ERNIE ROTMAN

As most students are already aware from casual strolls through the Student Union, the candy counter has been vastly enlarged and improved. The former candy counter, now named the "Union News and Sweet Shop" has been renovated to the structure shown in the photo.

However, according to shop supervisor Bud Wilkes, the new outer structure is not the only aspect of the shop that has been changed. In an interview with Wilkes yesterday, various new items concerning the store were brought into focus.

"For instance," he stated, "students now have more of a choice in first line quality merchandise than ever before. If they don't feel like buying a Snickers bar or one of the other few wrapped candy bars previously sold, they now have more of a choice than before."

A market analysis, according to Wilkes, showed that this is what the students wanted. "Of course, we just can't build anything and this was no exception. We sent out various questionnaires to students and the response was quite favorable to this idea."

Wilkes also cited the fact that this new store "maximizes use" of the Student Union and will help, hopefully, to hold the C.C. tax down if not reduce it.

Before building the shop, other schools were explored and it was learned that many others are attempting this type of penny candy shop. "B.U. just opened one a week before ours opened, and U.R.I.'s candy shop is very successful, with money going to an athletic scholarship fund." It was pointed out, though, that profits made here would go back into the Campus Center.

The cost of this venture was six thousand dollars, with the money coming from the Campus Center tax money students already have paid. "We should make up that money quickly," Wilkes stated, "because students like candy. If sales keep up the way they have the first three days, we will make profits very soon."

As part of the opening of the shop, Ed "Candy Man" Vadas played before a big crowd in the afternoon yesterday. His appearance in front of the shop was a promotional idea that apparently worked out well.

Sometime in the future, Wilkes revealed, a travel center, a bank, a package store, and more are planned to enter the C.C. complex. If the "Sweet Shop" is any indication, students may have something to look forward to.

Students Trained For UMass

New freshmen and transfer students received training in how to get about the university and its procedures during an orientation program Sunday and Monday.

Approximately 400 freshmen and 600 transfer students met with faculty, staff, administrators and student counselors while they took part in workshops, meetings, and dinners.

Workshops, lead by student counselors, included small group meetings with various titles like "Survival Tips" and "How To Play The Academic Game."

The program lead by Salle Hamilton, Director of New Students, also included campus tours, special meetings for veterans and commuters and meetings in residential areas. They also received instructions on how to register and change courses.

Two randomly picke students were asked why they were here. The first, who had just gotten out of the Navy said that he had two alternatives: Either a menial job or college. With the veteran benefits involved, he chose college.

The second, who graduated from high school last June, claimed that this was his second choice school. He said that he has been working since graduation.

Movie Calendar

TONIGHT!

HENDRIX AT BERKELEY

C.C. Aud. 7 and 9 p.m. 50¢

SUNDAY, JAN. 28

SUMMER OF '42

S.U. Ballroom 7 and 9:30 $1.00

THURSDAY, FEB. 1

The Trojan Women

S.U. Ballroom 7 and 9:30 50¢

SUNDAY, FEB. 4

McCabe and Mrs. Miller

S.U. Ballroom 7 and 9:30 $1.00

all programs preceeded by Flash Gordon

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

The office of the DAILY COLLEGIAN is on the second floor of the Student Union on the campus of the University of Massachusetts, zip code 01002. Telephones: 545-2550 (news); 545-0344 (sports); 545-0731 (business).

Second-class postage is paid in Amherst. THE DAILY COLLEGIAN publishes Monday through Friday during the academic year, except during vacation, exam periods or holidays. Accepted for mailing under the authority of an act of March 8, 1879, as amended by an act of June 11, 1943. Subscription rates are $6.00 per semester or $10.00 per year.

The Place That Made Amherst Famous

DRAKE RESTAURANT 'TIL 2 a.m.

VILLAGE INN

Rathskeller

NEW FIRST FLOOR LOUNGE

40 International Beers

ART ANDREWS, PIANO DAILY 5-7 p.m.

85 Amity St., Amherst Tel. 253-2548

give to the March of Dimes

FLIGHT

Friday & Saturday

at the

Rusty Nail Inn

Good Friend Coyote

on Sunday

Rte. 47 Sunderland

665-1937

THE SALE IS ON

WEAR HOUSE

Doctor Doubts Mail Pregnancy Tests

By ROBERTA MARTONE

If you are a female who has suspected you were pregnant, then you know about the tremendous anxiety that can be experienced in this situation. Unfortunately, this anxiety may linger if you employ the mail away type of pregnancy test which is based on the use of a mail order pregnancy test.

Exactly what this test entails could not be ascertained. A similar test has been advertised in the Collegian.

Dr. Thomas McBride of the UMass infirmary seemed wary of this form of testing.

His first main objection concerned whether or not the test was accurate, which he said depended on several factors.

For example, the qualifications of the laboratory and the physicians. McBride said that the qualifications might be excellent but, "you just don't know". McBride said for this reason some of these tests have been taken off the market.

McBride said another problem with this "mail order" pregnancy testing was the risk of the "one-trial" test. He went on to explain that several tests should be given before the diagnosis be made final.

But, McBride's main complaint was the impersonal atmosphere of the testing. He said, "Because of emotional turmoil, the testing should be on a human basis, not through the mail. It is a shocking experience. Some people come close to suicide." McBride said he did not care to see medical care automated.

McBride also cited the difference in cost between the mail order test and the test administered at the infirmary. He said that at $4.95 the "mail order" was a "rip-off" as compared to the $.83 test given at the infirmary.

McBride said he is concerned about these "mail-order" type pregnancy tests. He asked, "What are we doing wrong that people feel they have to go through the mail for help?"

He stressed the privacy of the infirmary tests. All visits are confidential and there is no confirmation or non-confirmation of a pregnancy test reported by telephone.

Finally, McBride said, "We're here. We're really the best health buy. We can't do everything but, we're trying hard to make it easier."

Bromery Hits Reorganization

By DON BISHOP

In a meeting noteworthy only for it's brevity and lack of debate, the Faculty Senate yesterday took positive action on a variety of routine motions ranging from approval of the graduation lists from last semester, to acceptance of the report of the Senate's Committee on Committees.

The two main items on yesterday's agenda did not come up for a vote. The first, dealing with a motion from the Admissions and Records Board, that would allow each School or College of the University to set it's own minimum grade point average necessary for graduation, was sent back to committee.

The second motion, which if passed by the Senate, would have established a mandatory faculty tax to pay for the publication of Faculty Senate documents, was withdrawn after brief debate by the bill's sponsor.

Remarks made by Chancellor Bromery at the opening of yesterday's meeting were of some note. Bromery expressed dissatisfaction with the recently released report of the Governor's Office, on educational reorganization in the state.

In particular, the establishment of a Board of Post-Secondary Education concerned Bromery. Under this Board, the Undergraduate and Graduate programs on campus would be under separate authorities.

In response to a question from the floor, Bromery stated that to the best of his knowledge, no one in the public sector of higher education was consulted before the publication of the re-organization plan.

Chancellor Bromery also firmly denied allegations made recently, that the University had attempted to cover up an investigation made over intercession, into reported thefts from Worcester Dining Commons of a quantity of meat.

He stated that his office had only delayed in reporting the incident to the state's Attorney General's Office, to allow for final completion of the police investigation.

The motion from the Admissions and Record's Board dealing with individual School and College establishment on minimum cumulative grade point average necessary for graduation was sent to the Academic Affairs Committee of the Faculty Senate for study. The Senate ruled that the motion should not have been proposed by the Admissions and Records Board.

The motion, which would have established a mandatory system of faculty payment for publication and distribution of Faculty Senate documents, was made by Senator Joseph Larson.

Larson justified the fee by stating that it was better that the entire faculty was informed of all proceedings of the Faculty Senate through the Senate's publication of it's minutes; rather than having the faculty reading about faculty oriented events through the Collegian or partisan newsletters.

When it was explained that this motion would be in violation of state law (due to the fact that it would be unlawful confiscation of property) Larson withdrew it.

Chicago Strike Ends

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago Teachers Union voted late yesterday by an 8-1 margin to accept the city school board's latest contract proposal, thus ending the city's longest school strike.

The final vote by the system's teachers was 8,145 in favor of accepting the board's offer to 1,012 against.

Earlier the CTU House of Representatives voted overwhelmingly to send the contract proposal to the teachers for ratification.

CTU President Robert Healey told a news conference that teachers would return to work at the system's 66 public schools Friday morning, ending an 11-day strike.

About 550,000 public school children had been out of class since the strike started Jan. 10. The board had offered a $22.6 million package.

Agreement came yesterday morning after a night-long bargaining session between negotiators for the teachers and the board. Early in the strike, which began Jan. 10, the board had contended it faced a $73-million deficit for 1973 and could not meet the teachers' demands.

After announcing the agreement, however, Mrs. Lydon Wild, the board's chief negotiator, said the package would increase the board's deficit "very little if at all, this year."

She said most of the extra dollars would be available from money saved by not paying teachers while on strike and from money budgeted for 1972 but not spent.

The proposed contract provides a 2-1/2 per cent wage increase retroactive to Jan. 1, reduces the school year from 40 weeks to 39 weeks with no loss in pay, cuts class sizes and sets guidelines for preparation periods twice weekly for elementary teachers.

The walkout shut down the city's 660 schools, and kept from class 550,000 children, some of whom attended alternative schools staffed in churches and private homes by striking teachers.

The pay increase will bring starting teachers' pay to $9,797, the same as it was last year before the board chopped teachers' salaries to help save money.

Public school teachers were still off the job in St. Louis and Philadelphia.

In St. Louis, almost 3,000 of the 4,200 teachers represented by the St. Louis Teachers Union and the St. Louis Teachers Association went into the fourth day of their strike for increased wages.

Picket lines went up Wednesday at all 166 public schools, which serve 103,000 pupils.

St. Louis teachers have not received a raise in base pay since 1969 and are asking for a $1,000 midyear raise on the $7,200 base salary. The school board had promised a raise by September but has said the money is not now available.

In Philadelphia, a strike by 11,000 of the city's 13,000 teachers has kept 285,000 children out of class since Jan. 8.

Negotiators for the Philadelphia Federation of Teachers and the school board got together Wednesday night at the urging of Mayor Frank Rizzo, but failed to settle the 15-month-old contract impasse.

Two leaders of the striking Philadelphia Federation of Teachers were found guilty Thursday of contempt of court charges for defying a court injunction against the strike.

PFT president Frank Sullivan and chief negotiator John Ryan were convicted hours after six Democratic city councilmen gave assurances that they would approve any new taxes needed to resolve the school system's fiscal crisis.

Kissinger Asked For Job Decision

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Now that Presidential advisor Henry Kissinger has helped negotiate an end to the Vietnam war, his old faculty colleagues at Harvard are demanding that he make another decision–whether or not he wants his job back at the university.

The faculty of the government department meets Feb. 5, and if Kissinger hasn't sent word by then whether he wants to return as a professor, a search will be launched for a successor, a university official said Thursday.

Kissinger's position has been vacant since he took a leave of absence in January 1969 to go to Washington to be President Nixon's advisor on national security affairs.

When his two-year leave–the maximum allowed by the school–expired, he resigned, but the department left his job open in case he decided to return. Now the department is anxious to have the professorship filled.

"We have not heard anything from him," said James Q. Wilson, head of the government department."

Wilson said he hadn't attempted to approach Kissinger since Nov. 28, when he met him in Washington. Wilson said then, during the heat of the Vietnam negotiations, Kissinger told him that he had not really thought about returning to Harvard.

When the faculty meets next month, Wilson said, "if he wishes to return, we can vote to recommend his reappointment, or if we have not heard from him, start a search for other candidates to fill his vacancy."

No one would approach Kissinger before the meeting, Wilson said, because "he knows when we meet."

If Kissinger decides not to return now, Wilson said, it is doubtful that he would be able to get back into the government department in the near future, because professors are appointed only to fill vacancies. No new positions are created.

While at Harvard, Kissinger was a scholar of international affairs and military strategy. He joined the faculty in 1954 and became a professor in 1962.

WORK ABROAD! International Jobs — Europe, South America, Asia, Australia, U.S.A. Openings in all fields — Social Sciences, Business, Sciences, Engineering, Education, etc. Paid expenses, bonuses, travel. Includes Student Summer Job Guide to overseas, Alaska, U.S. Government, resort area and construction work. Ideas for part-time school-year jobs. All new 1973 application information — only $4.00. Money back guarantee. Apply early for best opportunities — write today!!! International Employment, Box 721-M512, Peabody, Massachusetts 01960. (Not an employment agency)

Welcome Back

Jolly Bull

Rte. 9, Hadley

584-2769

INTERVIEWS for Editorial Board Candidates will take place as follows:

MONDAY, January 29, 1973 — SU 402 (Olckie's office)
6 p.m. — Robert Scheier
6:15 — Steve Tripoli
6:30 — Don Glickstein
6:45 — Bill Ballou
7:00 — Steve Fine
7:15 — Chet Richardson
7:30 — Tom Borkowski
7:45 — Mike Shor

TUESDAY, January 30, 1973 — SU 402
6:00 — Paul Shuldiner
6:15 — Jerry Lazar
6:30 — Mark Vogler
6:45 — Hugh Owen
7:00 — Cindy Gonet
7:15 — Marty Kelley
7:30 — Stephen Crowe
7:45 — Alan Chapman
Thursday, January 30, 1972 — Election — 7:30 p.m.

THE Rusty Scupper

Welcomes you all back with 7 fantastic nights of entertainment!!

Thursday, Jan. 25th through Saturday, Jan. 27th

ENDLESS KNIGHTS

Sunday, Jan. 28th - PAUL McKINLEY

Monday, Jan. 29th - AUDITIONS

Tuesday, Jan. 30th - LYNN HOLOWAY

Wednesday, Jan. 31st - PAUL McKINLEY

In The Nation And The World

LBJ Buried; Nixon Cuts 'Great Society'

Burial At Ranch

STONEWALL, Tex. (AP) — Former President Lyndon B. Johnson was laid to rest yesterday in the ranch cemetery where his family members have been buried for three-quarters of a century.

It was a dismal afternoon, with rain falling and the threat of snow, but just before the ceremonies the skies began to clear somewhat. The footing was churned to mud by hometown folk and the nation's great coming to pay Johnson homage.

"Here amidst these familiar hills and under these expansive skies his earthly life has come full circle," said Evangelist Billy Graham, one of Johnson's favorite ministers, in a eulogy.

"No one could ever understand Lyndon Johnson unless they understood the land the people from which he came. His roots were deep in this hill country. They were also deep in the religious heritage of this country," the Rev. Dr. Graham said.

Johnson, 64, was fatally stricken Monday at the ranch house, a quarter mile from the cemetery where he was buried.

Throngs massed on both sides of the Pedernales River to pay their last respects, and his immediate family stood near the casket during burial.

A 21-cannon salute by Texas National Guard howitzers boomed over the rangelands and oak-studded pastures. A seven-man rifle team sent a three-volley musketry salute crackling across the rolling hills, and an Army sergeant played taps.

Singer Anita Bryant, who had entertained the Johnsons in the White House, sang the "Battle Hymn of the Republic", fulfilling a special request of the former president.

Pallbearers slowly folded the flag covering the silver casket and Brig. Gen. James U. Cross presented it to Mrs. Johnson.

Flag-draped coffin is taken from hearse on Constitution Ave. for long, mournful march to Capitol. (Reprinted from N.Y. Daily News).

Lady Bird looked longingly at the coffin, kissed the flag she had been handed and turned slowly away.

Mrs. Johnson went immediately in a separate car to the ranch house, accompanied by Secret Service agents. Linda and Chuck Robb lingered in the roadway to shake hands and greet acquaintances.

The coffin was lowered into the ground as the crowd, estimated at more than 10,000, was still breaking up.

John Connally, long a personal friend of the former president and secretary of the Navy under President John Kennedy and secretary of the Treasury under President Richard Nixon, also eulogized Johnson.

"It seems ironic on this day," said Connally, "that his predecessors began the war in Southeast Asia and his successor ended it.

"It was his fate to be the bridge over the intervening chasm of conflict that swept this country and the world. But he accepted that role without flinching, and no one would be happier today, no one would be more appreciative of the beginnings of peace and the President who achieved it, than the president who worked so long and so unselfishly for the tranquility that eluded him."

Earlier yesterday in Washington services, close friend Marvin Watson said in his eulogy: "The years will be lonely without him."

Poverty Office Split

WASHINGTON (AP)-President Nixon's fiscal 1974 budget will call for drastic cutbacks in many of Lyndon B. Johnson's Great Society programs, all in the effort of keeping inflation under control.

Among the agencies that will be affected by the economy drive is the Office of Economic Opportunity, scheduled to be broken up and its responsibilities placed in other agencies.

Others may be melted down, or phased out, through special revenue-sharing programs featuring less bureaucratic control from Washington, if Congress concurs.

The federal budget is being counted on as an inflation-checking tool more this year than in the past two years, when Nixon was trying to get the economy moving again.

Nixon's economic officials said the slashing must take place now. If the budget is allowed to get out of control this year, they say, the impact would be felt for years by way of higher prices.

The budget is expected to total around $268 billion or $269 billion, an increase of about $19 billion from the current fiscal year. This is considered relatively small in view of the rapidly expanding economy, growing population, and new federal services.

It will be one of the tightest budgets in recent years according to officials in the Office of Management and Budget. Nixon will send the massive document to Congress Monday.

Inside the blue-and-gold cover are cutbacks in funds for housing, health, education and social programs, subsidized public-service jobs, work training and community services.

Also scheduled for trimming are funds for science, technology, space and atomic-energy programs. "There will be some screams from the scientific community," said one official.

The administration has been looking at a 10 per cent cut in federal support for education, including "Title I" funds to help disadvantaged children.

The Commerce Department's Economic Development Administration, another program pushed by Johnson, is due for phasing out. Direct loans for rural power systems are no longer being provided.

the SHOE-BIN
SALE:
Boots
Shoes
BARGAINS
N. Pleasant St.

In Brief...

Young Stars Found

PASADENA, Calif. (AP)—A group of young stars and what apparently are several others still in the process of being born have been discovered some 10,000 light-years away from earth, California scientists reported on Thursday.

FBI Report

WASHINGTON (AP)—Acting FBI Director L. Patrick Gray III said yesterday that extremist groups continued their efforts to stir up racial unrest in 1972.

Publisher Elected

BOSTON (AP)—Gerald T. Tache, publisher of the New Bedford Standard-Times, has been elected the first president of the newly formed Massachusetts Newspaper Publishers Association, it was announced here Thursday.

"HAMBONE"
FRI., JAN. 26
9 p.m. - 1 a.m.
50¢
BLUEWALL

Montoya Returns!

Curry Hicks Cage
NEXT TUESDAY
Jan. 30 - 8 p.m.

Carlos Montoya, the great Flamenco guitarist joined by the Springfield Symphony Orchestra under Robert Gutter in an all-Spanish Program!

Special feature: "Carom" a recent work for magnetic tape and orchestra by Robert Stern, UMass composer.

TICKETS: $2.00 for UMass undergrads/$4 for others. Available now through Friday in Campus Center lobby. Tickets also available at Fine Arts Council, 125 Herter Hall. Remaining tickets at main entrance, Curry Hicks Cage from 6 p.m. on January 30th.

ORDER TICKETS EARLY AS SELL-OUT EXPECTED FOR THIS EVENT!

Fighting Continues As Ceasefire Nears

The pains of war are etched in face of South Vietnamese soldier who was wounded, captured and later escaped during bitter fighting near U Minh Forest, 100 miles southwest of Saigon. Troops were attempting to regain Viet Cong controlled area when ambushed, resulting in more than 100 men killed. (AP).

SAIGON (AP) — A Viet Cong rocket attack on the Bien Hoa Air Base near Saigon early Friday--just two days before the scheduled cease-fire--killed a U.S. Marine and wounded 21 Americans destined to go home soon, the U.S. Command said.

The 27 rockets came in a surge of enemy action that has killed dozens of South Vietnamese soldiers and damaged an American warship.

The dead Marine, who a Marine commander said had been on guard duty along a flight line, could be recorded as the last American to be killed in the decade of U.S. military involvement.

He was not identified, but the commander said he had been at the base since last May. All Americans are to be withdrawn within 60 days after the cease-fire is signed.

Some of the Americans were wounded when rockets struck a barracks housing U.S. civilian advisers to the South Vietnamese air force. The attack also wounded three Vietnamese soldiers on the base, destroyed a South Vietnamese jet fighter-bomber and damaged an American gunship.

Some of the rockets fired at the base fell in Bien Hoa City, injuring three South Vietnamese civilians.

A U.S. Army helicopter unit at Bien Hoa had started re-equipping its aircraft for use by cease-fire supervisors. The dead American was the first American casualty since the peace agreement was signed two days earlier.

Communist command units launched a total of 112 attacks against government positions and civilian centers during the 24-hour period ending at 6 a.m., Saigon time, Thursday, the South Vietnamese military command said.

The bulk of the enemy attacks were indirect fire by rockets and mortars, the command reported. The North Vietnamese and Viet Cong strikes were the highest number reported since Jan. 3. when there were 116.

Aftermath Of Peace: USSR vs. China?

MOSCOW (AP)-Vietnam at peace could become a new focus for rivalry between the Soviet Union and China.

Asian diplomats forecast that the two Communist giants will compete for influence in North Vietnam as Hanoi redirects its energy to postwar reconstruction.

Even during the height of the fighting in Indochina the Moscow-Peking dispute overflowed in what should have been a harmonious joint effort to aid a Communist ally.

The Soviets accused Peking of refusing transit across Chinese territory of essential munitions destined for the North Vietnamese.

Soviet commentators went farther to say that the Chinese had "adventurous" plans to cut economic relations between the Soviet Union and Asian countries.

In Peking, the countercharge was that "Soviet revisionism...wants to dominate the recipient countries politically so as to establish a colonial rule of the new tsars."

The influence was that Soviet aid in Asia-North Vietnam included-was aimed at expanding Russia's sphere of influence to China's southern border.

With their circumstantial bond as comrades in arms broken by the peace, Soviet-Chinese relations appear to have taken a turn for the worse.

In a speech Wednesday, Politburo member Andrei Kirilenko attacked the Chinese for their hostile, anti-Soviet policy and added a turn of phrase the Asia experts saw as ominous. He said: "Serious attention in our country as well as abroad is attracted by the question of Soviety-Chinese relations."

With this mention of foreign concern, a new formulation, Kirilenko appeared to suggest that the dispute could erupt into an international problem.

The North Vietnamese have been caught in the middle, but in their quest for development aid they can probably count on playing Russia off against China to obtain reconstruction funds.

During the war, the Soviets gave Hanoi an estimated $500 million worth of aid annually, most of it military. In 1970 non-military exports to North Vietnam totaled about $200 million and in 1971 they were worth $167 million. The figures for 1972 are not yet available.

In an apparent attempt to obtain rehabilitation aid on the same scale, North Vietnam's foreign trade minister, Le Thanh Nghi, conferred with Soviet officials in Moscow last month.

Western experts presumed he got what he wanted.

ENGIN-EER-
ING
IS the professional art of applying science to the optimum conversion of natural resources to the benefit of man."

Stanford School of Engineering's wide-ranging graduate programs offer qualified men and women exciting avenues to rewarding, satisfying, professional careers.
The Stanford School of Engineering is searching for graduate students from among qualified mainrs in engineering, mathematics, and the sciences.
A representative from the school will be on campus to discuss Stanford's ten engineering departments and interdisciplinary programs, research opportunities, the financial assistance available, and other aspects of engineering at Stanford.

■ February 1, 1973
Make arrangements to meet him through
■ Career Planning & Placement Service

SCHOOL OF ENGINEERING
Stanford University

Ways And Means Probes Tax Laws

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Ways and Means Committee's review of the tax system is starting earlier and may last longer and probe deeper into fundamental tax considerations than had been expected.

Feb. 5 is the starting date for public hearings. Estimates of the time required for the hearings have gone up from six weeks to eight.

Proponents of tax reform, in and out of Congress, are certain to be heard on proposals aired during last year's political campaigns--for changes, for example, in oil industry taxes, rapid depreciation and the investment credit.

But the committee, it was understood, is preparing also at least to look at potentially broader revisions that could include the rate of taxation on capital gains and the length of time an asset must be held to qualify for capital gains treatment, and on the whole structure of estate and gift taxes.

There were no predictions this early as to what the committee might eventually recommend. Any recommendations from President Nixon's administration would have an effect. But present plans are not to hear administration spokesmen until the end of the public sessions.

An idea that was discussed, but not acted on, at the time of the last major revision of tax laws in 1969 has come to the fore again, it was understood. This was a proposal to tax capital gains on a sliding scale, with the rate declining the longer the asset was held before being sold. Legislation along this line has been introduced.

Proponents argue that such a change might actually produce more revenue for the government. Persons who hold assets such as stocks which have greatly increased in value, they say, are now inclined never to sell them but let them become part of their estate. Under present law, taxes on capital gains accumulated during an owner's lifetime on such property are not charged against his heirs--although the estate tax applies.

By "unlocking" such holdings, proponents contend, the change would stimulate sales and increase tax collections, even if the rate were substantially lower.

COUNSELING
"Edge of Gorman"
B-2 Gorman
1-9 p.m. — 5-2947
CALL — DROP BY

BAGELS & LOX!!!
75¢ Pd. Members
BRUNCH
$1.25 Guests
Come & eat & come to meet PEOPLE
Sunday at 11:00 - Council Chambers
(Opposite Hillel Complex)

PROGRAM COUNCIL
presents
"HENDRIX AT BERKELEY"
— a filmed live performance —
plus Flash Gordon
Thursday, January 25
Friday, January 26
C.C. Auditorium 7 and 9 p.m.
Only 50¢

Scheurer Begins Campaign

George Scheurer talks with a concerned student voter during one of his campaign tours. Scheurer advocates exploring the feasibility of rent control in Amherst, improving student-town communication, and establishing a free day-care center.

George B. Scheurer, one of the two candidates to win nomination for Amherst Selectman in last Friday's primary election, declared yesterday that he would "wage a strong, issue-oriented campaign to win in the town's general election on February 20."

Scheurer, who defeated three other candidates in the caucus held January 19th, placed second after a strong showing by incumbent Merle Howes. According to figures tallied by registrars in the Town Clerk's Office, Howes led the field with 1,353 votes followed by Scheurer with 413, Eric Walgren with 217, Hubert Costigan with 66, and Robert Patterson with 53.

Analyzing the results, Scheurer attributed Howes's support to "the traditionally heavy Republican turnout in town primaries combined with an unusual amount of organizational work on behalf of the incumbent."

Scheurer began campaigning for votes some two weeks before the primary, concentrating mainly on a door-to-door canvass in some of the town's larger apartment complexes.

The candidate said that he would continue to campaign hard on the issues he had raised when he decided to run last December—preventing further exploitation of Amherst's resources by out-of-town land developers, exploring the feasibility of rent control in Amherst, improving student-town communication, establishing a free day-care center, and others.

Scheurer also expressed concern about the Selectmen's scheduling of the town's primary during the intercession period, when most student voters would be away.

Scheurer, who is himself a 1971 graduate of UMass, urged students to get involved in town government and work to support candidates for both townwide and precinct-level offices, those of Town Meeting. "Town government can become more representative and responsive to the needs of all town residents," he said, "including students and tenants. But first, those who want better representation are going to have towork hard to elect candidates committed to real reforms, like the reforms I'm advocating."

"Energy Crisis" May Cheat Public

WASHINGTON (AP)—A Ford Foundation researcher yesterday blamed this winter's fuel shortages on President Nixon's refusal to end present oil import restrictions and said the shortages may be setting up consumers for a fleecing.

"The 'energy crisis' could well serve as a smoke-screen for a massive exercise in picking the pocket of the American consumer to the tune of billions of dollars a year," said David Freeman, director of the Ford Foundation energy policy project.

"We have no energy crisis, but there are problems galore," Freeman said in a speech before the Consumer Federation of America's consumer assembly.

Airlines and truckers have reported they face disruption of schedules because of fuel shortages. Schools and factories in the Midwest and Rocky Mountains have had to close for lack of heat.

"This winter's so-called energy crisis was manufactured right here in Washington," said Freeman. "It could have been averted with the stroke of a pen."

Freeman referred to Nixon's rejection three years ago of a Cabinet-level task force recommendation to scrap the oil import quota system. The system, which restricts the amount of oil which can be imported, should have been replaced by tariffs to increase supplies and drive down prices, the task force said.

Freeman served as an assistant to the chairman of the Federal Power Commission during the Kennedy and Johnson administration.

The White House had no immediate comment on his speech.

Nixon eased the restriction earlier this month by exempting heating oil from the quotas and allowing a 51 per cent increase in the amount of all petroleum which can be imported.

Despite the action, Freeman said, industry and government proposals for ending energy shortages include continuation of the import quotas, removal of controls on natural gas prices and accelerated strip mining of coal.

The moves would be certain to prompt higher prices, Freeman said. "Recent industry estimates indicate price increases on the order of 50 per cent for crude oil and of 100 per cent for natural gas," he added.

"Higher prices may well be required in order to find and develop new sources of oil and gas that may involve higher costs," said Freeman. "But the oil companies are obviously not losing money on the oil and gas which is now flowing to the consumer."

As an alternative to hefty price increases, Freeman proposed scrapping the oil import quotas, initiating programs to trim energy consumption and spurring research into additional energy sources.

Guitarist Montoya Here Today

Carlos Montoya, the noted flamenco guitar virtuoso, will be featured as soloist in a promenade concert at UMass Tuesday, at 8 p.m.

Joining Mr. Montoya in an all-Spanish program in Curry Hicks Cage will be The Springfield Symphony Orchestra, under Robert Gutter's direction. This concert is offered by the University's Fine Arts Council as a special event marking the opening of the spring semester.

The promenade concert will be an informal evening of light classical music falling between a regular symphony concert and a pops concert.

Carlos Montoya has been described as "a legend in his own time" by critics throughout the world and guitar aficionados, particularly on college campuses. He has appeared at the University several times previously, always to sell-out crowds. This year's appearance will feature him as both soloist and composer, since the January 30 program includes his own "Suite Flamenca" for guitar and full symphony orchestra.

The Fine Arts Council says tickets are available now at $2 for UMass undergrduates and $4 for others and may be obtained through the Fine Arts Council, 125 Herter Hall, telephone 545-0202.

The Council urges early reservations for this event, which is expected to draw a large audience. The program will be repeated, with the exception of the Stern work, at Springfield Municipal Auditorium on Sunday, Feb. 11, under the auspices of the Springfield Symphony Orchestra.

SALE

SELECTED PANTS 50% OFF

Most All JERSEY'S & SWEATERS 30% OFF

WEAR-HOUSE

WANTED
PART-TIME
Cashiers
and Stock person for the new
People's Market

Bring your own application or a short resume to the Student Senate Office.

Towns Celebrate Peace

BOSTON (AP)—Eight Massachusetts communities will mark the end of the war in Vietnam with weekend celebrations.

In Boston, public schools will be closed today as "a day of thanksgiving for peace," according to School Committee Chairman Paul Tierney.

Tierney said, "At the end of a long, costly, controversial war, it would be valuable for students and teachers to be able to reflect on the true meaning of peace and to offer their personal gratitude for the long- awaited end of this war."

In seven other communities, fire horns will sound 10 times at 7 p.m. Saturday to mark the cease-fire.

Sat. Jan. 27
"J. Elliott Group"
9pm - 1am
Bluewall
25¢

Our $259.00 High Fidelity Music System

Under $300.00 has always been a difficult price range, both for you and for us. Equipment in this price range has been unreliable and often flimsy.

But we can enthusiastically recommend our $259.00 KLH system: the Model Fifty-five receiver produces 26 watts. RMS, enough to comfortably drive the KLH Model thirty-two speakers to room-filling volumes. The KLH/Garrard changer does its job of caring for your records smoothly and reliably.

The receiver, speakers, and changer bought separately would cost over $379.00. In an effort to get some good sound to you at a reasonable cost, we are selling the system for $259.00.

CLOSED ON MONDAYS

TRIPOD AUDIO

219 MAIN STREET — NORTHAMPTON, MASS. TEL: 584—6498

Some Came To Smile

Some Came To Work

Some Came To Frown

Some Came To Watch

A Day In Washington

The inauguration could have been called an American sampler. A little of everything was there; the important people and the common people, people for and people against the war, people who were there for fun and people there to work.

The inauguration actually went well. THE MAN was happy and there were only minor incidents of violence at the peace demonstrations. January 20 was the beginning of the last term for Nixon, and hopefully the ending of a long but necessary succession of peace rallies. (Photos and copy by Karasu.)

Over The Rainbow

Amherst Carriage Shops
233 N. Pleasant St.

Handmade - Pottery, Silver Jewelry
Belts
Photographs
Copper Ethings

Custom Embroidery on Workshirts, Jeans

Anything - bring your own or we supply.

People Needed

to bake bread, cakes, etc. for new

PEOPLE'S MARKET

Come Saturday, 11 a.m. to Sci. Fict. Rm. or to the Student Senate office, Mon., 3-5 p.m.

NOW OPEN IN AMHERST

Rani
The Indian Boutique

63 N. Pleasant St., Amherst — 211 Main St., Northampton

Imported Handmade Clothing, Smocks, Pinafores, Long Dresses, Pillows, Bedspreads, Jewelry

SALE 50% OFF

All Men & Women's

Winter BOOTS

also:
group of shoes
$6-$7-$8-$9-$10

the SHOE-BIN

187 NORTH PLEASANT ST.
AMHERST, MASS.

FOR YOUR INFORMATION:

THERE ARE THREE MUNCHYS MINI-MARKETS ON CAMPUS

#1 Franklin Dining Commons (East side on the main floor)

#2 Hampden Commons (Upstairs, next to Lobby Counter)

#3 Worcester Dining Commons (North entrance, under staircase opposite Snack Bar)

ALL THREE ARE OPEN DAILY-9 a.m. to 10 p.m.

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

BOARD OF EDITORS

EDITOR IN CHIEF	James E. Gold
MANAGING EDITOR	Nathan Gorenstein
BUSINESS MANAGER	William L. Manburg
EXECUTIVE EDITOR	Stephen G. Tripoli
NEWS EDITOR	Donald J. Bishop
SPORTS EDITOR	William E. Ballou
PHOTO EDITOR	Gib Fullerton
FINE ARTS EDITOR	Robert Nesti
ASST. MANAGING EDITOR	Steve Fine
ADVERTISING MANAGER	Jeanne Bauge
ASST. PHOTO EDITOR	Alan Chapman
ASST. SPORTS EDITOR	Roy Lyons

TODAY'S STAFF

ISSUE EDITOR	Bob Scheier
NIGHT STAFF	Jan Alexander
EDITORIAL	Steve Tripoli
SPORTS	Roy Lyons
DARKROOM	Steve Quigley, Karasu, Steve Smith
AD LAYOUT	Lisa Saunders

Undergraduate newspaper of the University of Massachusetts. The Staff is responsible for its content and no faculty members or administrators read it for accuracy or approval prior to publication.

Unsigned editorials represent the view of this paper. They do not necessarily reflect the views of the faculty, administration, or student body as a whole. Signed editorials, columns, reviews, cartoons, and letters represent the personal views of the authors.

The Collegian subscribes to the Associated Press and the Liberation News Service. Publication of their material does not constitute endorsement.

UMass Busing

Although delayed by slow delivery of new buses, the new program offered by the Student Senate Transit Service could revolutionize travel around the UMass Community.

The new routes will help alleviate traffic problems, allow more people to take advantage of the new service and may even help the pollution problem. Pedestrian traffic should become safer also.

An estimated 14,000 cars park on campus daily, crowding into 8,000 spaces. With bus routes extending north to Deerfield and east to Belchertown, more students, faculty and staff will be able to take a bus to UMass instead of fighting morning rush hours, struggles for parking spaces and afternoon rush hours.

The transit system is operating under funding from three areas: $475,441 from the federal government, $157,728 from UMass and $30,000 from the Student Senate. All will benefit from it. The federal government will get a research project on urban mass transportation, UMass will get good and plentiful bus service.

To be successful, the transit system will need the support of the entire community. If you live on campus, try taking a bus around campus. If you live in one of the commuter areas served by the system, try it instead of a car.

'SILVER BULLET, HELL...HE BIT THE NECK OF SOMEONE WITH THE LONDON FLU!'

Ed Bryant

Just Lower The Casket

When the rush of sympathy was cresting, they said it was his health. There were doubts as to whether he would live long enough to complete another term of office. Finally there was praise for his selfless decision to offer up his ambitions as a sacrifice to the cause of peace.

Those were perilous days for people with a conscience, those first days of April, 1968. They may pale in comparison to the days immediately ahead, when the hosannas will again be heard in eulogy of this great statesman. Henry Kissinger and Le Duc Tho have carved their initials on the parchment, the dead are brought back to life, it was all just a misunderstanding, and after all, his strong leadership was responsible for the passage of the 1964 Sanitary Shopping Bag Law, the greatest piece of domestic legislation since the First Hundred Days.

I shall not be joining in the parade behind the casket of "Landslide Lyndon." Four years of watching Richard Nixon on television have not converted me to the Pre Hoc Ergo Propter Hoc school of thinking as regards Lyndon Baines Johnson. It has been said that in death all is forgiven. Many, many more times it has been said, "forgive and forget." I shall forget at such time as the crators become lush with vegetation; I shall not forgive.

"The death of a Great Man" is a category easily abused. Death is still death, but Great Men are not what they used to be. It is nowhere recorded that Lewis and Clark ever said, "we will not be the first white men west of the Rockies to lose a trail." Lewis and Clark are considered great men in American history, from a time when greatness was more free-form than it is today. Today a great man is any government official who is featured in Time ten years in a row.

Great Men are buried only in the presence of Life photographers. This may cause embarrassment to the Johnson family. Life preceded Lyndon Johnson in death by a month. Presumably Time will send someone with a camera.

Lyndon Johnson did indeed look tired on March 31, 1968, when he announced that he and his biographers would be embarking on the long march back to respectability. This haggard man bore little resemblance to the arrogant Lyndon Johnson of three years earlier, the Lyndon Johnson who began the concept of troop escalation in Vetnam. He was not a well man physically. He did live long enough to serve out the term he renounced however. He beat it by a few short days. The war lasted longer than he did.

Great Men also receive understanding and sympathy from those kind souls who believe human frailty has its day every day. LBJ's great sin of pride is thus seen as a tragic and human flaw, one for which he must be forgiven in death.

Tell that, if you can, to those Vietnamese people who have died since 1965. No President in American history has ever continued a war which was ended during his predecessor's term. There are people in the peace movements who couldn't bring themselves to chant, "We don't want your fucking war" who chanted instead, "We don't want Nixon's war." It isn't Nixon's war. The war belonged to LBJ, who raised it from a pup.

Nostalgia is a heavy item, and Richard Nixon is not a tough act to precede. Warren Harding might look good in retrospect if he had preceded Nixon. Hindsight, which is usually lamented only as being too late, also suffers from severe refraction and parallel distortions. "As long as we survived," say the stoics. But many of us didn't.

After Dan Ellsberg is awarded the Nobel Peace Prize, perhaps there will be a special issue of Life, each week for two million weeks, recapping the lives of the dead from the Vietnam war. When the two million- week serial is over, then you will hear me say, "LBJ wasn't so bad. After all, he got Congress to pass the Truth-In-Barbecuing Law." Hoa binh.

Ed Bryant is an MDC Editorial Columnist.

Don Glickstein

Of Money And Men

Good ole Joel Stoneham, Director of the Food Services, is up to his old tricks again.

He thoughtfully closed Worcester and Hampshire Dining Commons for meals between 10:30 a.m. and 11 a.m. This disservice and inconvenience will especially be borne by those students who live in the Quad and Northeast, and those students who frequent the Basic Foods lines.

So remember, kids. Don't be late for breakfast or you won't get any food at all. And don't try to stay for lunch or you'll miss your 11:15 class. And when you see those long lines waiting to get into the Dining Commons for lunch on what will be cold February mornings, remember your Food Services.

•••

Wonder where your money goes to? Ask Joel Stoneham.

The Food Services got a real innovative idea. They decided to tape record the dining commons menu. This little delicacy, according to comparable Procurement Office figures, is costing students $168.00 an academic year, plus the initial installation charge of $15.00.

In addition, the Food Services has been advertising the boondoggle. In the first MDC of this semester alone, $14.00 of our money was wasted in advertisements.

That's not all. Assuming that the Food Services printed enough for the approximately 9700 students chained to the meal plan, the business-type cards announcing the Commons hours and distributed at the Commons cost approximately $150.00 (Campus Center Print shop prices).

We can only wonder at the logic of the Food Services. The Dining Commons hours (with the exception of the curtailment of brunch service at Hampshire and Worcester) are printed in every student's meal ticket. Even if the new hours are kept, the Collegian news department, I am sure, would print the new hours for free as a public service.

The Commons' menus for the week are mimeographed and distributed to the dormitories. They are also posted a day or two in advance in each of the Commons. Perhaps even the Collegian would print the menus for free, if the menu writers weren't so verbose; we know that milk and dessert are served every meal, and we really don't care whether the appetizer is jello or cottage cheese.

$347.00 may not seem like such a large sum of money to Joel Stoneham. He, after all, can walk into his "test" kitchen and get a free meal whenever he wishes under the guise of "quality control". (Is that famous test kitchen really producing anything more than breaded veal, various forms of potatoes, gravy and more starch?)

But approximately 3000 students were denied the financial aid they requested last year, and that $347.00 may well have been the amount needed by a few students to obtain an education.

•••

When it comes to wasting our money, Joel Stoneham is an amateur. (And I might add, he has done many fine things: unlimited seconds, the basic foods line, etc.)

An outstanding spender is our own President, Robert C. Wood, who approved the double salary for Vice President Phillips.

Everyone seems to have forgotten about it, but last semester it was discovered that the Vice President for Administration, Franklyn Phillips, is receiving two salaries; one, $29,000 as Vice President, and another , approximately $3000, as a faculty member.

Perhaps it is the Faculty Senate which should be up at arms about this; hundreds of faculty contribute just as much time as Mr. Phillips does. They do not receive special compensation.

The Board of Trustees should immediately formulate a policy which prevents double salaries. Trustee Ladd should initiate such a rule.

•••

In good news, the Nixon Court partially legalized the right of a woman to control her own body. In his majority opinion, Justice Blackman eloquently reviewed the legal precedence for abortion as well as the human realities. It is paradoxical that many people who approved of Vietnam murders—notably President Nixon and Cardinal Cooke—have so vehemently opposed abortion in the name of life.

•••

The past two months have been times of not a little import.

It was a tragic time, a fateful one, frustrating, discouraging, belittling.

Thousands of our brothers and sisters were murdered by a President in senseless, vomiting, indiscriminate aerial attacks.

The same President was inaugurated peacefully for a second term.

Two former Presidents, scorned in their own time, died. Though their policies were often dubious, their compassionate motives were underscored by the current leadership's brutality.

And now, peace is at hand once more, and we hope that someday, we will be able to forget our nightmares of guilt.

We hope that someday, we can assuage the shame of being American.

Don Glickstein is an MDC Editorial Columnist.

'A SHIELD! A CHAIR! A GARBAGE CAN LID! ANYTHING!'

Letters To The Editor

They're Killing Us

To The Editor:
O woe. Alas. Begone.

It's been said that many Americans were most fortunate to bear witness to the inauguration.

Most fortunate, indeed.

Those Americans were as fortunate as the country and the world, for that matter, would be if Dickie again knocked Pattie up.

Or, if she decided to pimp him off.

People. Human beings. Homo sapiens.

Freezing, starving, rotting to death.

Hospital and medical expenses, outrageous and atrocious.

Prices for food, high enough to force us to eat dog. And unpedigreed at that.

Billions of dollars, spaced out.

P.O.W.'s, on vacation?

M.I.A.'s, synthesized into air?

Greed and corruption.

Hate and discontent.

Havoc and chaos.

pressure. Pressure. PRESSURE!

Rape. Assault. Slaughter.

Homocide. Suicide. Genocide.

At least the dead don't worry none.

Enforcers of justice. Abiders of rights.

80 pounds of heroin, ripped off.

MAN!

Reprimands? Rebukes? Reproaches?

Indictments? Arrests? CONVICTIONS?

Not a chance.

Election campaigns, democratically fixed.

Peace talks, likewise.

(Not to mention, ludicrous.)

The war is over. Ha.

How many hooked on heroin?

How many dead?

How many vegetables?

For what?

The war is over. Bullshit.

Relocated is what.

Those mother-fuckers are playing, no, not just playing, but enjoying as well, ruthless and cold-blooded games with us! With our lives!

Man, they're killing us.

What's worse, it's legal.

They're killing us and it's legal.

Why do you shoot dope?

Because the wall's orange, you silly bastard.

FOUR MILLION DOLLARS!

Spent for what?

Anybody got a match?

Little nitro, perhaps?

Hoooo.

Richie Rashed

CEEBS Seniors

To The Editor:
This is a reminder about the meeting for CEEBS seniors tomorrow Jan. 26, 5:30-11:00, in room 804 of the Campus Center. This meeting is important to all of us, please attend.

Thank you.

Kenneth Whitsett
Stephanie Harriston
Tom Joyner

Yahoo Liberation

To The Editor:
We the People of the Y.L.C. (Yahoo Liberation Committee) convinced that the University's Humor Magazine should represent the will and wishes of the people of the University, wish to express our own aims in order to avoid confusion and clarify the issues. The present University Humor Magazine, namely Yahoo, is an affront to the august dignity of the student population. That bad humor can only lead to the moral corruption and social defabrication of the students (the aforesaid "PEOPLE") is a fact which emphasizes the urgency of this plea. The clique of the Yahoo staff (the humor elite and their running dogs) supported by the hard-earned funds of the student body have usurped their authority and abdicated their responsibility. THEIR GOALS ARE GREED AND FAME AND PETTY BOURGOUISE HUMOR. They will stop at nothing to attain these goals. We do not advocate reform but insist on destruction! Our priorities are schools, hospitals, and the struggle to free mankind. Life is not a situation comedy.

Adam Wright Bond
Reggie Faragut

Peace Treaty?

To The Editor:
At 7:00 P.M. EST. Saturday, January 27th, a cease-fire is scheduled to go into affect in Vietnam. After thirty years of waiting, dying, crippling, bombing, burning, and much anguish, the Vietnam War seems to be grinding to a halt. But is it?

For thirty years now the people of Vietnam have been fighting for their right of self-determination. President Nixon in his address to the nation Tuesday evening promised the people of this country that what had been fought for so hard had been won, the right for the government and people of South Vietnam to determine their own future. These two things, however, are contradictory from the beginning.

The "Peace Treaty" has guaranteed the continued separation of Vietnam and for the maintainance of a self-imposed government on the people of South Vietnam. No free election has been held in Vietnam in that entire thirty year stretch. Every time a free election is promised it is blocked or is a less than free election. As before, the Saigon government is officially recognized by the U.S. government "as the sole legitimate government of South Vietnam."

We must ask ourselves under what principle of democracy does a dictatorship become the legitimate government of a people? Indeed the people did not make it so, it was forced on them and any attempt to institute a government for the people was beaten back by the massive support of French blood, American blood, and American money.

Sixty days after the signing of the treaty the insignia of the occupying forces in Southern Vietnam will be changed. The burden of occupying Vietnam will no longer rest with the American soldier but now with the soldier of four other countries. Once again we find an outright slander of the right of self-determination.

What does the right of self-determination mean for Vietnam? It means that all Vietnamese have the right to decide on the future of their country without the outside interference including that of the United States. It is up to the Vietnamese to settle their internal affairs by whatever means it takes. The "Peace Treaty" just initialed by Henry Kissinger does not allow for that and until that internal conflict is settled and the Vietnamese are no longer forcibly separated that the real peace will come to Vietnam.

Once again we must demand the immediate and total withdrawal of all U.S. forces in and out of uniform, equipment, and economic aid from all of Southeast Asia. Let us remember that a treaty that does not answer the basic conflicts that started the war will never bring a lasting peace.

George Johnson
Student Mobilization Committee

Editorial Points

Overheard in the Collegian office: "I'd like to tell that computer to cram it up its (censored)!!!!!"

•••

Isn't it a drag getting back to classes?

Private Property

To The Editor:
In reply to John Frazier:

You ask: "Why is private property necessary for the realization of one's values and happiness?" the answer is that a person must have freedom in order to pursue his values and that freedom cannot exist in a system that denies the right of private property. The only alternative to an economic system based on private property is a system in which property is controlled by some central agency or bureaucracy–socialism, in one of its many variations. But then what happens to freedom? It disappears, because when socialist bureaucrats control the material economy of a country, they control the people as well. Who can afford to offend the government, when the government controls all the jobs, all the stores, all the housing, all the schools–when your whole life depends upon your relationship to the bureaucracy? What becomes of freedom of the press, when the government controls the supply of paper and ink, and the manufacture and distribution of printing presses? (Look at what is happening to our government-controlled airwaves already.) Where do you turn after the economic planners refuse to fund your idea for a new product or invention, and all the private fortunes and banks have been destroyed or absorbed? Without the right of private property, no one can be sure of his freedom to pursue his own course of life, because the government controls all material means of doing so. What you are free to do or possess is only by permission of the bureaucracy–and permissions can always be revoked. Socialism is nothing less than the economic blueprint of totalitarianism.

But to establish socialism fully, private property must first be abolished. The right of private property is the ultimate guardian of each person's independence and individuality, the protector of his freedom to go his own way unhampered by others, to make his own mistakes, to choose his own risks, to live his own life.

Many socialists have said that the system of economic competition in a free market is vicious and de-humanizing. What, then, can be said of a system in which, instead of competing to do the best job or make the best product, men are forced instead to compete for the favors of the ruling bureaucrats? Under socialism men are pushed into two groups: the boot-lickers, and the power-seekers. It is not an accident that socialist governments are forced to build walls and death-strips around their countries to keep the people from leaving.

Competition is not necessarily evil. On the contrary, a sense of competition often adds an extra zest and challenge to an undertaking, and can inspire a person to do far better than he might otherwise. A world with no competition would be a dull place.

As for surplus labor being the definition of profit: this definition is peculiar to Marxist economists, a seedy group whose thinking has not yet advanced past the mid-nineteenth century into neoclassical subjective value theory. It is wrong. But I cannot explain the economics of this issue in the context of a letter, unless the Third World Alliance decides to seize a few pages of the Collegian for me. Pending this unlikely happening, I refer you to the famous essay titled (in its English translation) Karl Marx and the Close of his System, by Eugen von Bohm-Bawerk, available in the economics section of the Goodell Library.

Steven M. Lord

Hampering Support

To The Editor:
Clifford Starr, Harry Somers, Dick Hassett, Jim Yamartino and Peter Johnson stop letting the cheerleaders impair your view at basketball games, see Coach Leaman and you may get a better seat next year. In the meantime utilize your energy and verbal aspirations in conjunction with our spirit instead of hampering fan support.

Arlene Peltola

$$ CASH! $$

For Your Used Books

The TEXTBOOK ANNEX

of the University Store

will pay up to 50% for your used books

if they are presently being used for a course.

Here is just a sample of some of the titles we will buy at half price:

Hare	BASIC PROGRAMMING
Pfeiffer	THE EMERGENCE OF MAN 2/e
Harris	CULTURE MAN, & NATURE
Janson	HISTORY OF ART
Faltermeyer	REDOING AMERICA
Abell	EXPLORATION OF THE UNIVERSE
Wilson, etal.	BOTANY 5/e
Pucciani & Hamel	LANGUE ET LANGAGE
Lenard	PAROLE ET PENSEE
Basmajian	PRIMARY ANATOMY
Mehr	LIFE INSURANCE
Hartzler	INTRODUCTION TO LAW
Speroni & Golino	BASIC ITALIAN 3/e
Gist	MARKETING & SOCIETY
Robertson	CONSUMER BEHAVIOR
Meserve	CONTEMPORARY MATHEMATICS
Goodman	FINITE MATHEMATICS WITH APPLICATIONS
Loy & Kenyon, eds.	SPORT, CULTURE & SOCIETY
Berger	INVITATION TO SOCIOLOGY
Liebow	TALLY'S CORNER
Wolfe	CURSO BASICO DE ESPANOL
Wolfe	CURSO INTERMEDIO DE ESPANOL
Moner	CELLS, THEIR STRUCTURE & FUNCTION
Winchester	HUMAN GENETICS
Volpe	UNDERSTANDING EVOLUTION 2/e
Jahnheinz	MUNTU
Butters	CASE PROBLEMS IN FINANCE
Layd	INTRODUCTION TO QUALITATIVE ANALYSIS
Foot	SURVEYING
Nichols	PRINCIPLES OF ECONOMICS
Lipsey & Steiner	ECONOMICS 3/e
Anderson	FOREST & SHADE TREE ENTOMOLOGY
Taffel	VISUALIZED PHYSICS
Reh	CONTINUING GERMAN
Palmer	A HISTORY OF THE MODERN WORLD SINCE 1815
Bogert, etal.	NUTRITION & PHYSICAL FITNESS
Brock	BIOLOGY OF MICRO-ORGANISMS
Oppenheim	TEXTBOOK FOR LABORATORY ASSISTANTS
Kerman	LISTEN
Grout	A HISTORY OF WESTERN MUSIC
Fitzpatrick	MATERNITY NURSING
Sears & Zemansky	UNIVERSITY PHYSICS
Agrios	PLANT PATHOLOGY

Remember, many of your other books may have value to our national distributor, so bring them in!!

This year, for your convenience we will be buying at two locations:

(1) THE TEXTBOOK ANNEX:

Fri., Jan 26th - Fri., Feb. 2, 9:30 a.m. - 5:30 p.m. (remainder of the semester schedule to be arranged)

(2) SOUTHWEST (Hamden Commons):

Mon., Jan. 29th - Wed., Jan. 31st, 6:00 p.m. - 10:00 p.m.

Course Additions

Chorus, Psych, And Vets

University Chorus:

The University Chorus, now in its sixth year under the direction of Professor Alan Harler, will rehearse and perform the Mozart Requiem this semester. An oratorio group open to all University students, the chorus has performed such works as the Bernstein Chichester Psalms, the Handel Dettingen Te Deum, Stravinsky's Symphony of Psalms, the Mozart Vespers, and most recently the Missa Brevis by Zoltan Kodaly.

The Requiem (completed by Sussmayer after Mozart's death), will be performed with orchestra and soloists selected from the chorus. The University Chorus (Music 162, one credit) meets twice weekly, Tuesday evening from 7-9 and Wednesday from 4:40 - 6.

For information, contact Mr. Harler at 545-0532 or Mrs. Spaid at 545-2227. The first rehearsal is next Tuesday evening at 7 P.M. in Cottage-C (above Worcester Dining Commons).

Psych. 190-Elements of the College Experience: Learning and Interpersonal Relations open to Freshmen only: 3 credits, see Spring schedule book for times.

Our goal is to help you make a smooth transition from home and high school to the college experience and self-directed learning. We will provide opportunities for you to develop and improve your understanding in the areas of "learning to learn" and "interpersonal relations".

We will emphasize what you can do, personal and interpersonal competencies, and theory-application to your educational and developmental concerns. In this course everyone is a student, everyone a teacher.

This course won't apply to everyone; if you don't think you'll be interested in the 2 areas mentioned above, please don't take this course.

Valley Peace Center Colloquium/Training Seminar in Military Law and Post Service Veterans Adjustment Problems:

The thrust of this colloquium will be twofold. First, the framework of military justice will be reviewed in terms of the junctures at which law and procedure affect individual rights of the accused or administratively separated personnel. Several related dimensions of the military legal structure will be covered which include the legal status of recruitment, basic training and eventual forms of discharge. The court martial system and administrative regulatory matters will be explained along the avenues within which C.I.'s may exercise their rights vis a vis judicial or administrative separations.

The scope of civilian judicial review of military determinations will also be clarified in the effort to demarcate the points at which the accused can seek civilian forums for adjudication of service-connected legal problems.

Veterans post-service adjustment problems will be discussed as they bear upon aspects of the military legal structure from which they invariably arise, such as less-than-honorable discharges, drug-connected offenses, medical/psychological problems and access to prior service records.

Secondly, the student will be equipped with information and materials which will enable him to apply his knowledge within the context of practical counselling and referral service, (i.e.; at the Valley Peace Center or other counselling agencies). Further, given a more sophisticated view of the framework and complexities of military and veterans problems, the participant will then be encouraged to develop political and legal strategies with which to improve the substantive and procedural rights of servicemen while reconciling the plight of the Vietnam era veteran.

The point of the colloquium then is to not only train and equip the participant in technical-legal aspects of G.I. and veterans rights in the context of preventative and post-service counselling, but to sensitize him to the relatedness of the veterans' post-service adjustment problems to the problems of a military justice system which has been insulated and isolated from important civilianizing influences.

The training seminar is scheduled to run for 7 weeks. The first meeting is scheduled to begin on Monday, February 12 from 7-9 p.m. at the Valley Peace Center, 1 Cook Place, Amherst. There will be a charge of $5.00 for legal materials and $5.00 for training costs.

For more details and a syllabus call either Bob Winston (Director of the Valley Peace Center) at 253-3683 or Tom Dalton (Colloquium Instructor) at 584-8186.

Counseling Offered

Beginning this semester, Central Area will have its own counselling center situated in B-2 of Gorman House. Because of its location on the north side of the basement next to the door, its name "The Edge of Gorman" seems poetic and appropriate.

The Center is being set up for the residents of Central and will deal with all areas of counselling concerns. Parny Hagerman, Head of Residence of Brooks, conceived the idea last spring.

The Center is run on a drop-in basis and is open from 1-9 p.m. but will remain flexible to oblige students and the residents of Gorman House.

Parny will be supervising the staff and counselling as part of her work toward her doctorate. The rest of the staff is composed of practicum graduate students in human relations, clinical psychology and heads of residence from Central who have expertise and background in counselling.

The aim of this is to utilize already accomplished counsellors who have a considerable amount of training, to supervise their counselling and to reach the students of Central who would just like to talk to someone.

The advisory staff to the Center is composed of personnel from Whitmore Counselling Center, Mental Health, Clinical Psychology and Human Relations.

If there are any inquiries as to the remaining staff positions available at the Center, please call Parny Hagerman at 6-4544.

Another important emphasis of the Center is the confidentiality of the client-counsellor relationship. Students should feel absolutely comfortable with the understanding that what is said in the relationship with a counsellor is totally between those two (client-counsellor) people involved.

So, after the 29th of January, if any Central Area people are seeking direction, ways to cope with hassles, or just some friendly talk, drop in to the Central Area Counselling Center, "The Edge of Gorman", or if you're busy call for a time to drop in when it is convenient for you. The number at the Center will be 5-2947.

What is

KALIKI KAI

Vet Gives Medals Away For Anti-War Protestors

BOSTON (AP)—Jerome Riley of Dorchester, Mass., said he didn't want the medals he won in Vietnam anymore, so he was giving them to State Rep. Peter Harrington, D-Newton, to "pin them on all the draft dodgers and anti-war protestors in Canada and Sweden and other places overseas."

The 26-year-old veteran told Harrington outside the House Chamber Wednesday, "I'm giving you these medals I earned in Vietnam in memory of all my comrades who died there, who gave their lives so that you could make a mockery of justice and democracy and the American system."

Riley said his action was in protest over a bill that Harrington sponsors which would require the state's attorney general to defend any resident of Massachusetts who left the country to avoid the draft.

Riley gave Harrington the Bronze Star he won for bravery while serving with the 173rd Airborne Brigade in Vietnam for 18 months. He was discharged in August 1967. Included in his medals were a campaign ribbon with four stars, to signify various actions in the war, and his combat infantry man badge.

Harrington said he didn't think draft dodgers deserve any medals.

Why is this mouse smiling?

He just signed up for his senior portrait. He's graduating from Southern Cartooning, Recreation, Engineering, Whistling University.

U Mass. Seniors can have their portraits taken, too, Jan. 29 - Feb. 9

Details — Sign up for appointment now at Index Office, 2nd floor Student Union

phases restaurant
bernardston, massachusetts
tel. (413) 648-9161

"When you are sincerely pleased, you are nourished."
(Ralph Waldo Emerson)

dinner-cocktails
from 5:30 p.m. weekdays, from 4:00 p.m. on Sundays, closed Mondays

reached from interstate 91, exit 28, and route 10, via bald mountain road, and huckle hill road

It goes to your head.

Have The New York Times delivered on campus

Send Coupon to
P.O. Box 788,
AMHERST, MASSACHUSETTS 01002.

The rate for weekday delivery (Mon.-Fri.) for second semester is $6.80

☐ Reserve my copy for pick up at the Newsstand Counter on the main level of the Student Union. (Make checks payable to Student Union Lobby Center, "Z-26"

☐ Deliver my copy to my campus address. (Make checks payable to Campus News Agency.) Delivery will begin January 29th.

Name _____ Phone _____

School Address _____

Notices

BAGELS & LOX
Bagels & Lox Brunch at 11 a.m. Sunday, January 28th Council Chambers (S.U.) opposite Hillel Complex. Come meet people and eat a bissle.

BELCHERTOWN VOLUNTEERS
Bus leaves at 12:45 p.m. Saturday in front of Whitmore. Will return at 3:45. Hope to see you there. We need you. Tours to be conducted for new members.

BOOK EXCHANGE
Used books. Bring in books Wed.-Fri. (1/24-1/26) Essex Room, S.U.

CHURCH SERVICE ANNOUNCEMENT
Unitarian Society of Amherst: Jan. 28, 11 a.m., Dr. Benjamin Ricci, President of Belchertown State School Friends Association, will speak on "The Mentally Retarded: Discrimination and Dehumanization."

COMMUTERS
Three Commuter Assembly Exec. Council vacancies. Nomination papers at RSO, first floor, c.c. Deadline Feb. 13th. election on Feb. 15th.

COLLEGE CHURCH BUS
8:48 Newman Center, 8:50 Waiting Station, 8:51 Hamlin House, 8:56 University Drive by Emerson, 9:30 College Sunday School 10:30 Worship Service.

DRAFTING COUNSELING SERVICES
Draft counselors! Special planning and updating meeting Monday, Jan. 29 at 7 p.m. If you're going to counsel this semester please try to attend. And spread the word to other counselors. Room 428 S.U. Peace.

ENGLISH EDUCATION
English Education is now beginning its selection process. If you are interested in student teaching in English for the Fall of 1973 and have not stopped by the office—Bartlett 474—or your address has changed since you were last in—please come by immed. See Gary Aho, Fred Robinson, or Frances Stone.

GAMMA SIGMA SIGMA
First meeting Tues. 1/30/73 6:30 p.m. Rm. 903 C.C.

HILLELL
Welcome in the new semester by welcoming in the Shabbat with us at 7:30 this evening at the Hillel Complex, S.U. 420. Oneg Shabbat & Singing included. Tomorrow 10 a.m.

KUNG FU
Important meeting—attention all interested in learning Chinese Self defense—both old and new members should attend 7:30 p.m. Rm. 904-908 C.C. Monday, Jan. 29.

LIVESTOCK CLASSIC
Organization meeting, Mon. Jan. 27 7 p.m. Stk. Reading Room. Volunteers welcomed. No experience needed. Please come everyone.

MOVIE
Tomorrow night at 7, 9, 11 we are blessed with the movie "Lovers & Other Strangers". It's great! C. C. Aud.

SOUTHWEST WOMEN
Meeting to discuss staffing at S.W. Women's Centre on Monday, Jan. 29 at 10 a.m. in the S. W. Women's Centre. All women welcome.

STRATEGY GAME CLUB
The first meeting this semester will be Jan. 31 in C.C. 165 from 6 p.m. to closing. Bring a game. All new members are welcome.

GEORGE WASHINGTON UPPER
Reunion Party on the 19th floor Washington Tower tonight at 9 p.m. Music by Maelstrom. Refreshments available.

LOST
Glasses. Lost 12/15 in Goes. 252 or in rides from UMass thru Amherst to Northampton. Rimless gold wire glasses in a black case. Please call 586-3271.

ENGAGEMENTS
Caryl Schneider, '72, Newton to Elliott Margolis, '72, Newton.

Debbie Rhoades, '73, Kappa Kappa Gamma to Larry Fischer, '72, of Univ. of Virginia.

Margo Zarlengo, '74, Iota Gamma Upsilon to Erik Cambier, of Cape Town, South Africa.

Diane Girouard, '73, Alpha Chi Omega to Paul Fontaine, Leominster.

Janice Queijo, '73, 247 Puffton to Allan Carpenter, '74, of 405 Dwight.

Janice Trout, '73, Malden to Alan Searleman, '73, of Springfield.

Norma Glazier, '73, of Field House to Glen Graham, '73, of Fiels House.

Rescheduled

W.C. Fields is replacing Night of the Living Dead because the distributor refused to send the scheduled movie. It will be rescheduled for some time in February.

Infirmary (In An Emergency) (54) 5-2671

NOW...YOUR CHOICE OF 5 Showcase R1. 5-W. Spfld. 733-5131 Cinema 1-2-3-4-5
AVANTI R
The Poseidon Adventure PG
Sounder G
The Getaway PG
Deliverance R

AMHERST CINEMA
AMITY ST., AMHERST
Now
"CASABLANCA"
Starring Humphrey Bogart, Ingrid Bergman and Sydney Greenstreet
253-5426
Complete shows at 7:00 & 9:00
— Plus —
AMBLIN
A brand new short about the free life
Rated X FRIDAY at 11:30 only Adults only "Orgy of Revenge"
WED. to SUNDAY with 50c DISCOUNT College I.D.
BARGAIN NITES Mon. - Tues. Adults $1

TONIGHT - Double Feature - TONIGHT
BEATLES'
"First Hurrah"
concert film — plus
W. C. FIELDS
"You Can't Cheat An Honest Man"
with Edgar Bergen and Charley McCarthy
TONITE! (Fri.) THOMPSON 104 at 7 - 9 - 11

Walter Matthau Carol Burnett
"Pete 'n' Tillie"
All about love and marriage!
Geraldine Page
"Honeymoon's over... it's time to get married."
Shown Daily at 7:00 & 9:00 - Rated - PG -

LADY SINGS THE BLUES
"DIANA ROSS DELIVERS THE KIND OF PERFORMANCE THAT WINS OSCARS!"
"DIANA ROSS—AHH, DIANA ROSS! SHE DOES A MARVELOUS JOB!"
(R) SHOWN AT 7:00 & 9:30
Campus Cinemas 256-6411 AMHERST-HADLEY LINE
DOLLAR NIGHT!
Every Monday Everyone $1.00

PETER O'TOOLE ALASTAIR SIM ARTHUR LOWE
THE RULING CLASS
"Peter O'Toole is Funny, Distrubing, Devastating". — Time Mag.
"A STYLISH COMEDY THAT IS BRILLIANT AND IMAGINATIVE! A tour de force that makes superlative comic history...Two movie performances by Arthur Lowe and Alastair Sim that make the film worth seeing twice." — REX REED
PG — SHOWN AT 7:00 & 9:30

We're Not Stuffy! We're CHEAP.
Amherst Film Coop & 33 GREAT FILMS For 6.00

SEE OUR SCREEN ABOUT CAMPUS
send $6.00 to: RSO BOX 472 CAMPUS CENTER, U MASS.
NAME
ADRESS
MASTER MEMBERS

Gravel Hints At Secret Pact

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP)- Sen. Mike Gravel says he believes there is an additional agreement in the Vietnam peace settlement, "either written or oral," that will not be made public to the American people.

Gravel, speaking to the Anchorage chapter of the Alaska Press Club, said he believes that the agreements include a disengagement of U.S. activity in Laos and Cambodia and that President Nixon has four years to make substantive statements about the "aid that will be given to North Vietnam to rebuilt North Vietnam."

The Alaska Democrat said that he believes "those promises have been made and are not part of the public agreement."

Gravel suggested that the U.S. has finally taken the advice of Sen. George Aiken of Vermont who said some time ago what "we should do is declare victory and then get out."

He said no one is rushing into the streets at the end of the war, and that the reaction of the "American people is more like: Thank God it's ended."

Health Services Info

The Out-Patient Clinic at the Health Center is open on weekdays from 8:00 a.m. to noon, and from 1:00 p.m. to 4:45 p.m. Although you can see a physician or nurse during these hours by coming to the Health Center, you are encouraged to make an appointment to avoid a possible long wait. The appointment number is 545-0057.

For urgent problems only you can come on Saturdays between 8:00 a.m. and 11:30 a.m. There is, of course, 24 hour emergency care. Either come in or call 545-2671. Also, if someone you know is staying at the Health Center in the In-Patient Clinic, you can visit him/her on weekdays between 6:15 p.m. and 8:15 p.m. On weekends, the hours are 3:15 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. and 6:15 p.m. to 8:15 p.m.

If you wish to make an appointment with Mental Health, simply call 545-2337. The hours there are weekdays from 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.

Weather (9) 256-6714

Kosher Food In S.U.

Kosher meat lunches are available Monday through Friday in the Student Union. Jewish students have established a co-op in order to make observance of kashruth more convenient and reliable. Meals can be arranged in advance for any day desired.

The co-op uses the facilities of the Hillel kitchen and room complex (420 S.U.). All regular participants in the co-op share in the preparation of the food and the maintenance of the kitchen.

A planning meeting will be held on Monday night at 6:00 at the Hillel Office. All those interested are asked to attend.

Action Has Openings

The Peace Corps or Action, as it is called now, offers many opportunities for students after graduation. The State of Ivory Coast has 18 teaching positions in Economics, Plant Science, Animal Science and General Agriculture and more volunteers will be needed when cooperation with Peace Corps, Ivory Coast, has been developed. Further opportunities are available in other African countries in Agriculture, Rural Development, Business and Public Management, Physical Education, Health, Urban Development and Public Works.

Since the majority of jobs are in French-speaking countries, some previous knowledge of the language is most desirable. The Department of French and Italian has offered to cooperate by making available French 110, a 3 credit introductory course; and French 126, a 6 credit extensive course in conversation, reading and writing (two semesters in one). Audition of the course is possible with the permission of the instructor and your identification to the department as a prospective Peace Corps candidate.

For more information and an application form, contact The Center for International Agricultural Studies, located in Stockbridge Hall, second floor, Room 211.

He runs it down the flagpole and up the establishment

"PUTNEY SWOPE"
The Truth and Soul Movie
plus 1933 BETTY BOOP
& color time-lapse film of Earth from Space
Sun., Jan. 28 7-9-11 Mahar

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE ACADEMY OF MUSIC NORTHAMPTON
ONLY AREA SHOWING at 7:10 & 9:10
"An Original Work Of Movie Art" - N.Y. Times
TUESDAY WELD ANTHONY PERKINS
"PLAY IT AS IT LAYS"
R
MONDAY & TUESDAY BALCONY SEATS $1.

GOOD MOVIE!!
Lovers and Other Strangers
SAT. 7:00 - 9:00 - 11:00 CAMPUS CENTER AUD.
75¢
Sponsored By Hillel.

MDC CLASSIFIED

REFRIGERATORS

Brand new — Made by Delmonico - 5 year guarantee -free delivery - 3 cubic foot $75 - 5 cubic foot $79. Call Gary - 1615. JFK 546-7839.

MISCELLANEOUS

Commuters! A limited number of lockers are available for personal use this semester. First come; first served basis. Jan. 25, 26, 29 and 30, Rm. 115 C.C. 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., $2.00 key deposit required. 1/30

INSTRUCTION

Kung Fu Club Chinese self-defense, first general meeting on Mon., Jan. 29 at 7:30 p.m., Campus Center, Rm. 804-8. All Are Welcome. tf1-26

TRADE

Flute Wtd. Will pay $ or trade 5 cu. ft. refrig., or will take 5 for frig. Call Andree at WMUA 545-2576. Leave Mesge in box. if not there. tf1-26

DATING SERVICE

MATCH 18 THE FIVE COLLEGE DATING SERVICE — A NEW CONCEPT IN MEETING NEW FRIENDS. SEND FOR FREE QUESTIONNAIRE: MATCH, BOX 759, AMHERST. tf1-30

TRAVEL

N. Y. — Frankfurt $159 rnd. trip. Open return - weekly flts. info & schedule, write German Overseas Tour, 56-1/2 Western A. Brattleboro, Vt. 05301. tf1-26

Crimson Travel offers low cost spring vacation trip to Bermuda for more info. call Rich Margil, 253-9096. tf1/31

TO SUBLET

Apt. in Belchertown $163.00 mo. Lease ends June 1, dbl. bed and other furnishings. Call 546-4779. tf1-30

1 bedroom apt. $185, Cliffside apts. Sunderland, furnished, dishwa., 3rd floor, faces woods, call Wally, work 545-0233. Home 665-4770, D4. tf1/29

HELP WANTED

Overseas jobs for students — Australia, Europe, S. America, Africa. Most professions, summer or full time, expenses paid, sightseeing. Free information, write, TWR Co., Dept. Q3, 2556 Telegraph Ave., Berkeley, Ca. 94704. tf2-4

Counselors for co-ed campus in Berkshires. Vacancies: Head Waterfront, Special Events, Athletic Director, Group Leaders, Tennis, Golf, Waterskiing, Dance, Guitars & folk singing, Radio station Director, Rocketry, wrestling Arts & Crafts, General Bunk Counselors. Contact Paul Krouner, 44 Sagamore Rd., Worcester, Mass. 01609. tf1-30

Receptionist-Dental Assistant for Modern Ortho. Office. Experience preferred — not essential. Call 586-0555. tf2/1

Creative innovative radical types — must have ideas, initiative and advertising experience. Call Ray Harpin evenings. 546-2576. tf1-26

Part time desk clerk night auditor, experience preferred, good with figures, apply in person. Howard Johnson's Motor Lodge, Hadley. tf1-30

EMPLOYMENT

1973 Student Job Opportunity Booklet for Cape Cod and Islands. Complete list of businesses requiring summer employees. Send $2.00 to: Student Job Opportunity Booklet, R. R. 1, Box 11-C, Orleans, Mass. 02653. tf1-26

Earn top money! Part time promoting student travel. Call or write: American Student Travel Center, 320 East 81st, N.Y., N.Y. 10028. tf1-26

RIDE WANTED

For child — daily ride, Ashfield Rd., Williamsburg to Amherst, 7:30 - 8:30 a.m. or return at 3 - 3:30 p.m. Will pay. Call 1-268-3382. tf1-26

Attn. cars from Rt. 9, Pelham Rd., Main St. — need a ride for 8 o'clock class — I'm on Main by Southeast. Please respond! Call 256-6203, Susan. tf1/29

Ride needed to Westfield or Vic. Mondays 5:00 - 6:00, F. Call Cathy. 549-6400. tf1/31.

FOR SALE

We buy and sell used Gibson, Fender, Martin guitars, banjos and amps. Also new guitars at low prices. The Guitar Workshop, North. 586-1766. tf5/11

Atl. ski rack for trunk of a car, complete with locks and keys. 1 yr. old in exc. cond., $20. No phone, come to #66 Colonial Village. tf1/29

Harman Kardon, Citation 11, pre-amp, perfect condition, 5 mos. old. $200 firm. 253-9411 eves. tf1-30

10 Meal Ticket for sale, call Bill at, 546-6430. tf2/1

H Lot sticker for sale $5, 256-8098. tf1/29

For sale, office typewriter. IBM electric. Please call Bill at 6-6308. tf1-29

4 mth. old refrigerator, 5 cubic ft., call 6-7440. tf1/30

Typewriter, sec. model — good condit., $30. Used electric guitar also up for grabs — $80. Call Tom at 253-9863. tf1/31

AR turntable base, dustcover cartridge included, all in excellent condition, $75. Call 546-7002, ask for Dave, keep trying. tf1-30

To sell: 2 Moor & Mountain design packbags & frames; good condition; one X-large, one medium; asking $30., ea. Call 549-0940. tf1-26

Book exchange, sell your books, bring books thru today, buy books Mon. - Fri. 1/29-2/2. Questions, come to the Essex Room, Student Union. 1/26

Portable T.V., G.E. 16" black & white with stand UHF-VHF in very good condition $50. Call 256-8417, after 5:30. tf1/30

ROOM WANTED

Would appreciate room in hse. or apt., near campus $60-$70/mo. Call Mark, 253-3018, or leave message please. 1/29

ENTERTAINMENT

Tonite!! "The Andromeda Strain" 7 & 9:30 — SUB 75¢. Don't miss it!! tf1/26

BEATLES' "FIRST HURRAH" PLUS W.C. FIELDS "YOU CAN'T CHEAT AN HONEST MAN" TONITE (FRI.) IN THOMPSON 104 AT 7-9-11. tf1/26

LAUGH YOUR ASS OFF! SEE PUTNEY SWOPE ON SUN., JAN. 28 AT 7 - 9 - 11 IN MAHAR — WELL, MAYBE NOT YOUR ASS! ALSO, BETTY BOOP & EARTH FILM. tf1-26

AUTOS FOR SALE

64 Ford Custom, new snow tires, auto. trans. Must sell by 2 Feb. So only $200. Call 253-5461 eve. tf1-31

1946 MERCEDES, Gas, automatic, AM-FM-SW, Michelin radials, power steering, power disc brakes, air, 665-2812 or 5-0055.

65 MGB rebilt. eng. 600, 67 Sunbeam Alpine hardtop - 300, 60 Triumph 250cc Trail - 200 bike with dicker, call 549-1263. tf1-29

1970 Firebird, trans - AM, Excellent condition, air cond., power windows, tape deck, auto. trans., best offer. Call Roger 549-6554. tf2-2

1969 Triumph Spitfire, 2 tops, AM-FM, Mich, Spfld. 781-6005, 567-3256. tf1/30

1969 Dodge Dart, a.t., radio, heater, good condition, $150 or best offer. Must sell by Fri., 26, 549-1068 anytime. tf1/26

FOR RENT

Room for rent, $80 month, util. included, center of Belchertown, Call Randy, evening, 323-7404. tf1-26

APARTMENT WANTED

Student into meditation wants to share apt. with people of similar interests. 549-1379. tf1-26

PERSONAL

Mrs. Saxby. Glad you finally came back. Love, Ralph J. tf1/26

Everyone in getting together at the party on 10 floor, Washington tonite at 9, music by Maelstrom and refreshments. tf1/26

Ollie Ogle: Happy 22nd! Have a great year and make the babe proud. Hiyo Silver! Love, The Friday Nite Smokers Club. tf1-26

S. Jacunski contact B. Mager at 253-9046 — concerns Larry Markes. tf2/1

Roy 1712 Kennedy your wife and baby missed you over Xmas, please come home. tf1/26

Rural Gay (Read Honest) Commune needs few more beautiful freak people to get on with it. P. O. Box 723, Amherst, Mass. tf1-29

WANTED

Photographer wants open minded liberal female models part-time, good pay. Write giving details to P. O. Box 122, Granby, Mass. 01033. tf2-1

Reliable student age 21 desires babysitting or tutoring French after. eve. Call 546-6762. tf1-29

Apt. or house to rent for wk.-end, Feb. 9-11, Fri. eve. to Sun. eve. Will pay, and take responsibility for damages. Call 546-5199, Joe. tf1/29

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female, own room in luxury apt., grad student preferred. 1 mile from Campus. Call 253-7874 days. 549-6556 evenings. tf1-30

Share room in 2 bdr. apt. $61.25/mo., all modern; utilities incl. in Amherst 253-2034. tf1-30

Your own upstairs rm., with bath & phone in 2 bdrm. Puffton Apt. 1 or 2 m/f, cathed. ceil., dishwasher. $104 or $80. 549-2554. tf2-1

Draft Counselor's Corner

Draft Still On Despite Cease-Fire

By GILBERT J. SALK

First, a couple of brief notes, then some thoughts on the state of the draft.

There will be an urgent meeting of draft counsellors on Monday, Jan. 29, at 7:00 p.m. in 428 SU. Plans for this semester, changes in draft regulations, and business will be discussed. If you plan to counsel this semester, please try to make the meeting.

For those of you who don't know, your student taxes help maintain a free draft counselling service. Located in 430 SU (that's on the second floor, way around in back), the service has trained counsellors who can give you accurate information about the draft, advise you of the legal and extralegal alternatives to military service, help you decide which alternative you would like to pursue, and then help you get where you want to go.

It's worth pointing out that nobody has to go into the service if they don't want to, and are willing to seek out and exercise their options. Draft Counselling Services will help you. Office hours are generally Monday through Friday from 9-4. It is not necessary to make an appointment.

Now, on to the draft. Let's make the risky assumption that we will continue to honor the peace treaty after the POWs have been returned (Is it only in Mass. that people say "if" about peace, or is the rest of the country still hanging on to a healthy piece of mistrust?)

IF there's peace, we can hope for the following: Draft calls will be relatively low, small consolation for those who are ordered to report. My hunch is that people with lottery numbers above 25 will probably be safe, at least through June. With luck, the draft law will be allowed to expire in June, and that will be the end of inductions. There will be no draft calls for Jan. and Feb., which means that some people in the Extended Priority Selection Group will probably slip through without induction orders.

That's the picture. However. Orders for physicals will be sent to men with numbers up to 75, so if you have any history of medical or emotional problems, start getting letters from your doctors. See a draft counsellor for advice.

The draft may end in June, but the Selective Service System will not. It will go on manipulating people's lives and inducing paranoia. Eighteen-year-olds will still be required to register, lottery numbers will be assigned, classifications will be issued and need to be appealed, and enough people will be given physicals so that, at any time that Congress decides that an army is needed, the proper number of pounds of beef will be all lined up at the stockyards and ready to go.

It just ain't goin' away, folks, even at the best.

This column will appear, hopefully regularly, in the Collegian to let you know some of the hows and whys of getting out from under the draft. no column can give you all the information pertinent to your particular situation, so if you have any problems or questions, please check with a draft counsellor.

PEACE.

Public Education Seminar

Professor Stephen Arons, formerly with the legal staff of the Harvard Center for Law and Education will offer a special seminar on the structure of public education. The seminar will explore the cultural, political economic and legal implications of Ivan Illich's contention that "the school is the established church in a secular society."

Students interested in the seminar may see Professor Arons at SBA—211 B.

Your first tampon should be a Kotex tampon.

Because only Kotex tampons have soft rounded ends for gentle insertion guides instead of two bulky tubes—and more protection than the leading brand. But the only way to be convinced is to let a Kotex tampon be your first one.

If it wasn't, here's a second chance.

For a trial size package of Kotex* tampons (5 tampons), a pretty purse container, and a very explanatory book entitled "Tell It Like It Is", mail this order form with 25¢ in coin to cover mailing and handling to:

Kotex tampons
Box 551 CN1
Neenah, Wisconsin 54956

Name _____
Address _____
City _____
State _____ Zip _____

Allow 4 weeks for delivery. Offer expires December 31, 1973. Limit one per customer.

Femininity today from Kimberly-Clark

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

☆ By SYDNEY OMARR ☆

"Would you please recommend two modern books on astrology?"- Raul Lopez, Santa Monica, Calif. Answer: You asked for two, but I will give you three-"A Time for Astrology," by Jess Stearn. "Astrology for the Millions," by Grant Lewi and "My World of Astrology," by Sydney Omarr.

***

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You may be traveling in connection with money transaction. Social contact now can prove important for future advancement. Be open to suggestion by Sagittarian. Emotion tends to dominate logic. Don't expect something for nothing.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Maintain low profile. Play waiting game. Do more listening than talking. Permit others to show their hands. Situation is not what it appears on surface. Retrench. Protect interests. Study document for legal loophole.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Be ready for basic change connected with work procedures. Dependent asks for more than you might be willing to concede. Key now is to get thoughts, ideas on paper. Outline what you want, what you are prepared to give.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You receive proof that one you care for does feel same way about you. Basic domestic adjustment is featured. Strive for harmony. Avoid needless disputes. Young person brings pleasure. Pride of achievement is spotlighted.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Take special care where land, real-estate deals enter picture. Protect long range interests. See situations, persons as they actually exist. Steady pace is necessary. Rushing past essentials would be error.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Information from surprise source adds to your prestige. Older individual has your best interests at heart. Know it and respond accordingly. Capricorn person plays prominent role. Gain indicated in money area.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Accent is on getting rid of situation that drains you emotionally and financially. Check with Aries. Stop trying to be all things to all persons. Strive now to be yourself. Means don't carry load that belongs to someone else.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your personality now could be dominant factor. Key is to be positive. Make new starts, contacts. Take initiative. Highlight originality. Lead rather than follow. Creative juices flow. Imprint your style.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Tendency now is to live in world of illusion. Key is to separate fact from fiction. Have fun but don't fool yourself. Message will become increasingly clear. Aquarian could play important role.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): More persons relate to you, find you stimulating than has been true in recent past. You get chance to move about, to travel, to experiment and to create your own products, assignments. Come out of shell. Be gregarious!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Restrictions are removed. Goal is closer than might be apparent. Be thorough and confident. Someone is making room for you at more elevated position. Your special abilities can be constructively exploited.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Travel, basic changes are emphasized. Member of opposite sex could play key role. Establish communication line. Let others become aware of your ideas, concepts, ambitions. Special document aids in achieving purpose.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, you possess natural ability as executive. You can organize and utilize you can set sights on goal and move toward it. Your relationships are seldom halfway. June stands out as being your most significant month in 1973.

Copyright 1973, Gen. Fea. Corp.

Crossword Puzzle

ACROSS
1 Ships' prisons
6 Aids
11 Sell to consumer
13 Bread and cake store
14 Above
15 Unproductive
17 World organization (init.)
18 Hit lightly
20 Turn inside out
21 Fuss
22 Ireland
24 Goal
25 Hurried
26 Return to 28 Knocks
29 Edible seeds
30 Rail bird
31 Rage
32 Lances
34 Vehicle
35 Pronoun
36 Retained
38 Simian
39 Stupefies
41 Meadow
42 A state (abbr.)
43 Part of spinning wheel
45 Teutonic deity
46 Weirder
48 Mexican shawl
50 Confidence
51 Frock

DOWN
1 Unthinking
2 Mend
3 Pronoun
4 Aeriform fluid
5 Location
6 Stop
7 Piece out
8 French article
9 Punctilious person
10 Church council
12 Foot pedals
13 Flying creature
16 Ease
19 Make ready
21 Clothing
23 Occurrence
25 Girl's name
27 Dine
28 Fish eggs
30 Squanders
31 Sword
32 Ignore
33 Slumbers
34 Proofreader's mark
35 Mix
37 Challenges
39 Barracuda
40 Winter vehicle
43 Relative (colloq.)
44 Be mistaken
47 Symbol for ruthenium
49 Diphthong

Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle

Distr. by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Pats Set To Sign Sooner's Fairbanks

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP)—The hapless New England Patriots, trying for a third time in a month to capture a topflight college coach, said Thursday they have reached "general agreement" with Oklahoma's Chuck Fairbanks.

Fairbanks, who has been offered the twin duties of coach and general manager of the National Football League team, will have a final meeting Friday with Billy Sullivan, Patriots' president, for what the Patriots hope will be a contract signing ceremony.

"It is anticipated that the Patriots will be in a position Friday to present to Coach Fairbanks a suggested contract for the positions of general manager and head coach of the club," a team spokesman said.

For more than a month Sullivan has traveled the country with a million dollar, long-term offer which Penn State's Joe Paterno rejected and Nebraska's Bob Devaney also reportedly turned down.

If he agrees to the rich contract, Fairbanks' first duty will be the pro draft, which starts next Tuesday, and then a long rebuilding job of a team which last year compiled a 3-11 record.

Along the way, Patriot's Coach John Mazur quit after the team was slaughtered 52-0 by Miami and General Manager Upton Bell was fired. Phil Bengtson was not kept beyond his five-week contract to be "interim head coach," and was subsequently dismissed by his original employer, San Diego.

Before leaving Norman Thursday, Fairbanks said he would accept the Patriots offer if "suitable contractual arrangements" are finalized.

Reportedly, those arrangements include at least what Paterno and Devaney are said to have turned down—$200,000 a year for five years.

Fairbanks led his Sooners to 11-1 records and a No. 2 ranking the last two years. Oklahoma also beat Paterno's Penn State team 14-0 in the 1972 Sugar Bowl game.

In Fairbanks' six years as head coach at Oklahoma, the Sooners compiled a 52-15-1 record and were ranked among the Top Twenty teams in the nation for five of those years. The Sooners won Big Eight Conference championships in 1972 and 1967 and shared the title with Kansas in 1968.

RECREATIONAL ACTIVITY SCHEDULE
SPRING SEMESTER 1973
EFFECTIVE JANUARY 27 TO MAY 11, 1973

NOTE FACILITIES ARE AVAILABLE TO UNIVERSITY STUDENTS, FACULTY AND STAFF ONLY, FAMILY MEMBERS AND GUESTS ARE NOT ACCEPTED.

FACILITY AND DAYS AVAILABLE	TIMES AVAILABLE	TYPE OF UTILIZATION
BOYDEN GYMNASIUM
Mon. thru Fri.	4:00- 6:00 p.m.	Open (May be utilized by students,
Sat. & Sun.	1:00- 4:00 p.m.	faculty and staff.)
BOYDEN AUXILIARY GYM
Tues. & Thurs.	7:00- 9:00 p.m.	Open (except Feb. 6, 20, 22, 27 & March 1.)
NORTH P.E. BLDG. (WOPE)
Mon. thru Thurs.	8:00-10:00 p.m.	Open (except Jan. 30, Feb. 1, 7, 15, 19, 23, March 5.)
Sat.	1:00- 4:00 p.m.	Open (except Sat., Jan. 27, Feb. 3, 17, 24.)

NOTE: North P.E. Bldg. Gym will be closed after Spring vacation.

BOYDEN POOL
Mon., Wed., Fri.	12:00- 1:00 p.m.	Faculty & Staff Only
Tues. & Thurs.	12:15- 1:00 p.m.	Faculty & Staff only
Sun.	1:00- 4:00 p.m.	Open
Thurs.	7:00- 9:00 p.m.	Open

NOTE: Women are advised to use some form of non-slipping footwear to and from the locker room.

HICKS POOL
Mon. thru Fri.	4:30- 5:30 p.m.	Open
Mon.	7:00- 9:00 p.m.	Open

NOTE: Swimmers must supply their own towels and suits.

NORTH P.E. BLDG. POOL (WOPE)
Mon. & Fri.	12:10- 1:10 p.m.	Open
Sat.	1:00- 4:00 p.m.	Open (except Feb. 17, 24, April 14.)

Complete schedules of all facilities available for Recreation Activity may be picked up in the Intramural Office, 215 Boyden.

"NO EXIT"
at the
TOP OF THE CAMPUS
Fri. & Sat. 9 - 1
20% Student Dinner Discount

"Poor Cousin" Minutemen Gain Respect of Powerhouse P.C.

By MARTY KELLEY

Providence, R.I.—Is there any consolation in defeat? Is it tough facing the fact that you have to settle for No. 2? And in the final analysis, maybe just knowing that respect did come your way is incentive for the future. And of everything that was made final at the Civic Center here Wednesday night, the Providence College locker room afforded the Minutemen a little respect...Just how far that goes remains to be seen.

Nearly 10,000 showed up to welcome their Friars back from the coast. The Civic Center, a taxpayer's delight for the Queens City, was just formerly dedicated to the city a week ago and the first formal cabaret was to be tomorrow against the Dolphins of Jacksonville. But at the half, the tired Friars weren't thinking Jacksonville or remembering their historic bout with the UClans on the coast Saturday night. They had all they could handle with Massachusetts.

But the class that had elevated the Friars to as high as ninth in the country, soon had to show...and it did. The second half was history, but a couple of All-Americans remembered two challenging comebacks, and it wasn't all the Friars' fault.

"I didn't expect them to roll over and play dead," said everyone's All-American Marvin Barnes. The 6'8 Providence native was unwilling to equate Charlie Peters with Bill Walton, and the going was rough for awhile. But the officials protected Marvin against the aggressiveness of Peters, and it was just time that mattered and Marv would explode.

Asked if he'd be on campus next year, Marv, probably reacting the way he should, was rather evasive. "Man, why you asking me that question?" I felt like asking him what size tire iron he used on Kertvertis.

It's nice not only to have one but two All-Americans germinating from your own backyard. And Providence has two of them. The man who runs the Friar carnival is Ernie "D" and he can deal. And when the Friars are flat, DiGregorio takes the blame.

"It was just like at Santa Claus," admitted Ernie. "We were up by 11 points and we should have put them away. We had UMass by 13 points and we started getting careless. It was really my fault. We should have kept coming at them. We were flat..."

Ernie "D", who put on quite a show for the home folk, called UMass an extremely well coached team and had particular praise for Rick Pitino. "That No. 22 was pretty quick and handled the ball well. I couldn't catch him on the press."

And when it was over the man responsible for all the Friar forthcomings at the Civic Center sat lazily slumped in the corner of the Friar locker room administering to the many monotoned writers. And it was Coach Dave Gavitt who exonerated Leaman in defeat.

Gavitt and Leaman have a lot in common. But Jack also envies the PC mentor. For Leaman has longed for a facility similar to that of the downtown Providence Palestra. He'd like to be playing Jacksonville this Saturday and invite the likes of St. Bonaventure, Dusquesne, Western Kentucky, Oregon, DePaul, etc. But Gavitt knows that to build a program the way he's done, you have to have something to offer Western teams beside character. UMass does have that but no facility for good measure.

But of that character Gavitt remarked, "They are well disciplined and a well coached club. Anytime I play a Jack Leaman team that's what I expect." Gavitt, however, didn't expect that much trouble from Massachusetts and wasn't ready to use the UCLA affair as an excuse. "We were ready physically but not mentally. A lot of the kids know your kids and they wanted it."

And so the deafening and ever so familiar NIT chant, "Let's Go Friars" echoed through the chambers of the Civic Center with eight minutes of the drama to play. And you kind of sensed that it was over. Valor for the Minutemen as far as the clock and scoreboard were concerned, had come to an end. But as far as the Friars go, it will last a little bit longer than that.

Yesterday's Sportshead was Charles O. Finley

HADLEY BOOK SHOP
Route #9
(Next to "Old Weird Harold's")
ANNOUNCES
New Management — "Red" Dwyer
New Hours — Open Evenings till 9:00 p.m.
New Prices — 50% "Get Acquainted Sale"
A COMPLETE BOOK SERVICE

Transactional Analysis Workshop
Given by Transactional Analysis trainees:
ROSEMARIE DANNER
EDWARD HOUGEN
Will Meet Once A Week:
Tuesday morning, 9:30 - 12:30 beginning Feb. 6
or
Thursday evening, 7:30 10:30 beginning Feb. 1
Fee: $25.00 per month
The focus of this workshop will be to develop an increased awareness and understanding of yourself, to become more in touch with others and to explore new options in directing your own life. Primary emphasis will be upon the Transactional Analysis model including ego states, life positions, scripts, rackets, injunctions and games. Open to the general community.
For further information call: 549-1351 or 617-544-6739

Stuff it.

Rent your own refrigerator...
Semester Special $17.50*
• Compact (20 x 17 x 18")
• Spacious (2 cubic feet)
• Inexpensive
• University approved
*plus tax & $10 refundable deposit
CONTACT:
253-2494
mini kool

PC Sinks UMass in Last Period, 4-3

By BILL BALLOU

PROVIDENCE, R.I.—It was another case of "close but no banana," against Division One for the UMass Minutemen at Meehan Auditorium last night as they squandered a two goal lead and fell to a third period Providence College comeback, dropping a 4-3 decision.

The game was as close as the score would indicate, and, in fact, the final shots-on-goal totals of 41 each indicates how evenly matched the teams were.

PC won it by coming back from a 3-2 deficit at the start of the third period, scoring two goals within the first four minutes. Dan Kennedy found himself alone in front of UMass goalie Chick Rheault at 2:43 and blazed a wrist shot past him to tie up, and less than two minutes later Gary Williamson finished off a three-on-two break by popping a backhander by Rheault from close in.

Despite those two goals, UMass had the better of things for most of the third period, but the Minutemen were stopped cold by freshman goaltender Phil Anchukaitis. Anchukaitis stopped 18 UMass shots as the Minutemen outshot PC 18-16 in the third period.

Anchukaitis was at his best around the ten-minute mark of the period. When PC's Terry Nagel was whistled off for tripping at 9:14, UMass mounted a fierce power play but couldn't beat the PC goalie. Just a couple of minutes later UMass again threatened with Pat Keenan, Brian Mulcahy, and Billy Harris all having golden opportunities. Keenan was stopped by Anchukaitis from close in, and Mulcahy fired the rebound just wide, the puck bouncing off the boards to Harris who was just outside the crease between Anchukaitis and the goal. He was stopped by a PC defenseman in a scramble right at the goal line and UMass never could get the equalizer.

Rheault was also sharp for the Minutemen. He was making his first start of the season, and kept UMass in the lead until the third period and in the game during the latter stages when the Friars had several good chances to ice it with an insurance goal. The junior from South Boston was blameless on all four PC goals, two of them coming on rebounds and the other two on clean breakaways.

UMass had an early 2-0 lead on first period goals by Pat Keenan and Jim Coleman. Keenan's at 13:56 was scored from just outside the crease and was his 22nd of the year. He has scored in all eleven games thus far this season and has a 15-game goal scoring streak, extending back through last season. He also picked up an assist, giving him 32 points on the year.

Coleman's goal came at the 19:19 mark on a similar close-in shot as Scott Stuart's backhander took a big bounce off the boards in back of the net and came out to Coleman. He just stuffed it in.

PC tied it in the second period on goals by Sean Shanahan and Peter Valenti, but Don Riley ripped home a 25-footer with nine seconds left in the period, and UMass had a 3-2 lead with one period left. But that was it for the night.

The loss gives UMass a 6-4-1 overall record, but, since PC is a Division One team, it doesn't affect the Minutemen's Division Two standing. Their next game is Saturday night against St. Anselm's at Orr Rink.

UMass winger Chico Shea battles for the puck in front of the Norwich goaltender in a game played last December. It ended in a 6-6 deadlock. (MDC Photo by Alan Chapman)

Wings Trip B's, 4-2

BOSTON (AP)—Henry Boucha scored twice and his teammates displayed rugged defense Thursday night as the Detroit Red Wings defeated the struggling Boston Bruins 4-2 Thursday night in a National Hockey League game at Boston Garden.

Red Berenson scored his seventh goal of the season at 7:42 of the third period as Detroit broke a 2-2 deadlock. Boucha got the insurance goal at 9:26.

Boston drew first blood as Fred Stanfield converted a Bobby Orr rebound at 1:04 of the first period. In the second frame, Mickey Redmond scored his 32nd goal of the season to tie the game 7-1.

After Boucha had put Detroit ahead in the third period with his first goal at 2:07, Ken Hodge took a pass from Orr at 5:11 and tied the score.

The victory was the first for Detroit over the Bruins at Boston Garden since March 10, 1968.

Rookie goalie John Adams, who suffered his 10th loss, was pelted with 40 shots on goal. Detroit net minder Denis DeJordy, continually surrounded by red-shirted Detroit defensemen, kicked away 29 shots.

Daily Collegian

SPORTS

Notices

INTRAMURAL BASKETBALL

There will be two important meetings pertaining to the intramural basketball program. It will not be necessary for team managers to attend both meetings, but they should attend one or the otiier. The first will be on Monday, January 29 at 7:15 in room 249 of Boyden. The second will be on Thursday, February 1 at 7:45 in room 251 of Boyden.

VARSITY FOOTBALL

Junior quarterback Peil Pennington and junior defensive tackle John Jones were named to lead the team next year.

Wrestlers in Oswego for Match Tomorrow

By JOHN BOCK

The undefeated Minutemen wrestlers are also the traveling Minutemen as they take to the road Saturday to open up the second half of the season in Oswego, New York.

It was Oswego State that started them on an undefeated streak of scheduled matches last year that has carried them over to this year where it now stands at 14-0.

The second half of the season has characteristics of being almost a brand new season in itself after the month long semester break. The team came back last week and went triple practice sessions that included at least five miles running per day plus three hours wrestling and drilling.

It all paid off last Sunday as the team traveled to Boston where they won the Senior Open Freestyle Tourney with four first places, a second and a third. Dave Amato, Cliff Blom, Steve Benson, and John Connolly grabbed first place crowns and Larry Reynolds took a second. The surprise of the tourney was the entree of Coach Homer Barr in the heavyweight class. Wrestling against opponents half his age, he took a third place after losing his initial bout to John Logan, the 1972 Olympic alternate.

Other intersession laurels were won by heavyweight George Ireland and assistant Coach Bruce Buckbee as both took first place in the MIT Christmas Tournament. In a taste of revenge Ireland beat the same Logan who defeated Barr.

There could be a few problems as almost half the starters are missing. Larry Reynolds received an injury to the sternum last Sunday in a tournament and experiences considerable discomfort when he wrestles. Because of this he will be using the weekend to heal up and be ready to go again next week against Springfield.

Regular 118-pounder Dave Amato will move up to 126 and Freshman Steve Ruggeri will fill in at 118. At 134 Mike McGlaughlin will provide some more stability in the lighter weights as he maintains his regular spot.

In the ever questionable 142 pound weight class freshman Doug LeMire has been given the nod. At 150 veteran Chris Cadwallader, who has been the all purpose man this year, will finally see action at his best weight. Steve 'Tony' Rome is dropping his weight to 142 lbs. in preparation for the Springfield match and will use the weekend to bring it down slowly.

Cliff Blom and Steve Benson will remain at 158 and 167 respectively. Benson will have the toughest match of the day as he meets Ernie ..'lliams, SUNY Conference Champion and winner of the Colgate Tournament.

Doug Rumpf comes in to fill 177, as John Connolly returns to the lineup at 190. John is on the way down to 177 but has been given the light to hold up 190 as co-captain Carl Dambman uses the weekend to fight weight problems.

At heavyweight Freshman Charlie Klein will jump in for George Ireland who is working with VISTA this week.

Orange Here Tomorrow Night

By FRANK ANTOSIEWICZ

A long time (about 5 weeks) has passed since the Minutemen have graced the floor of the Cage before a throng of rooters, but that matter will be taken care of tomorrow as the high flying Orangemen of Syracuse University start off a pseudo seven game home stand for the hoopsters (two of the seven will be in the Springfield Civic Center).

Before an Eastern television audience last year, UMass battled the NIT-bound Orangemen all the way, only to be squeezed 90-85 as time ran out in Syracuse. The hot hands of the number five scorer in the country at the time–Greg Kohls and Mike Lee kept the game just out of the grasp of the then Redmen.

In both preceding games between these two, Coach Jack Leaman's cagers have outplayed the Orange. The last time Syracuse visited the Cage, Dr. J embarrassed a much heralded 6'11 center by the name of Bill Smith, as a capacity crowd wildly cheered the 86-71 victory.

After losing a squeaker to Boston University (72-70), the traveling Minutemen have come on with three straight victories (Penn, Vermont and Springfield) and a respectable–though losing–effort against nationally ranked Providence. With the record standing at 7-5 and only three of the last 14 contests being away, UMass is in an advantageous position.

Syracuse, on the other hand, has run up a record of 11 wins and 3 losses, enroute to receiving mention in the voting for the top 20 teams. With losses to only Tennessee, Temple and Maryland, and thrashings of common opponents, Holy Cross (twice, 84-76 and 80-71) and Connecticut (104-71), the Orangemen rate just a notch below Providence and will provide a stern test for the hoopsters.

Though high scorer Kohls has gone on, a host of others remain to complement 6'8 soph Rudy Hackett (he's been averaging 13 pts/game along with 10 rebounds). The other half of the Kohls-Lee combination remains to haunt last year's viewers. To compound the confusion, Mike, who is averaging 17.6 pts/game, is joined by younger brother, Jim, with only a 9.2 scoring average.

The top scorer for the Orange thus far is 6'2 junior Dennis Duval with 18.5 markers per game. Overall, there is no super scorer to replace Kohls, but rather a more balanced attack with at least seven men being used extensively.

Height-wise the two teams match up about evenly, with UMass getting the nod when Coach Leaman goes with two of the bigger men in the lineup. The Orange rotate three 6'2 guards and use a starting front court of 6'3, 6'5 and 6'8.

Al Skinner has emerged over the last four games to take over as the tempo-maker. Using his anti-gravity moves, the soft pop, leaping carom snatching and good defense, Skinner has come on to be the team leader in scoring (13.9) and rebounding (8.8). In his last three games as a forward, he has grabbed 19, 10 and 13 rebounds.

Soph John Murphy continues his double figures scoring (eight straight) at 13.2 clip.

The starting line-up will consist of Skinner, with either Tom McLaughlin, Charlie Peters or Murphy up front. The guards will be taken from the foursome of Rick Pitino, Peter Trow, Bill Endicott and Jim Burke.

Clemente Fund Climbing

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Donations ranging from six tarnished pennies to $100,000 have been pouring into the office of the Pittsburgh Pirates as the Roberto Clemente Memorial Fund continues to build.

"It's hard to scrape up money when you're 17 and without a job. This is the best I could do," wrote a donor who identified herself only as Ms. Susan Romanski.

"As a housewife whose family lives from payday to payday, I can't send more . . . but I wish I could," wrote a woman from Kingston, R.I.

Nearly $350,000 has been received since Pirate baseball player Clemente and four others were killed in a Dec. 31 plane crash while flying relief supplies to earthquake-stricken Nicaragua.

The money will be used to continue the quake relief work and to help fulfill Clemente's dream of a sports camp for boys in his native Puerto Rico.

"I only wish this check could reflect the many thrilling moments Roberto has given me," said a brief, handwritten note from Larry Buckwalter of Pittsburgh.

Children at St. Luke's School in New York sent crayon drawings. One showed a body falling from a plane and carried the words, "Roberto Clemente was brave."

Students at St. Vincent elementary school in Latrobe, Pa., sent pennies taped to paper in the shape of Clemente's number: 21.

The donations have come from every state in the union, as well as Puerto Rico, Germany, England and Ireland.

They included $100,000 each from the Pirates and the Richard K. Mellon Foundation, plus $25,000 each from a Puerto Rican bank and newspaper.

New England's Largest College Daily

The Massachusetts

Daily Collegian

A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

VOLUME C, ISSUE 70 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS MONDAY, JANUARY 29, 1973

Weather

On that dark and stormy night, she whispered into his ear, "We can't get to the game in Springfield, so I made up one of my own."

Recyclable

'Home' Game Plans Lack Transportation

By JAMES E. GOLD

Few plans, if any, apparently have been made to provide transportation for UMass students to attend the "home" basketball game against Holy Cross at the Springfield Civic Center Tuesday.

When asked if transportation of students was worked into the original plans last year when the game was scheduled in Springfield, Robert W. O'Connell, Assistant Director of Athletics answered in a telephone interview last night "we assumed students would work this out for themselves."

He said that Victor Fusia, also of the Athletic Department, mentioned getting a bus. Fusia could not be reached by the Collegian last night for confirmation. However, an advertisement scheduled to appear in tomorrow's issue of the Collegian gives the number of Fusia's office for those wishing to "rent-a-bus" for the trip to Springfield.

Both O'Connell and George Richason, Chemistry Professor and chairman of the Athletic Council, said that when the game was scheduled for Springfield last year, Lee Sandwen, then President of the Student Senate and student representative to the council, received the idea enthusiastically and assured the council that Student Senate buses would be available for the trip.

A check with Bob Godding, Student Senate Transit Service director, revealed that no buses had been requested for the trip, and that none could be available for it anyway.

Apparently, Sandwen had been counting on the new fleet of buses which have not arrived yet. Richason gave the following reasons for scheduling the game in Springfield during a phone conversation last night:

—it will give students a chance to see the game at a good facility,

—it will provide access to everyone who wants to see the game, including fans from Western Massachusetts who normally assume the Cage is sold out so they don't come,

—it will display the team before the public.

Tickets for the game will cost a minimum of one dollar. Two and three dollar seats are also available. According to O'Connell, there is "beautiful viewing" from all seats in the facility. He added that Holy Cross had already bought 300 one-dollar seats.

When asked about complaints that UMass students already pay a $30 athletic fee and are entitled to free seats, O'Connell replied that when he came here twelve years ago, he worked on the budget, and the Athletic Fee never indicated purchase of seats at any events.

He said that the athletic fee is used for the support of 15 sports "across the board". In return for their support, "we bring students free of charge on campus."

O'Connell claimed that the false notion that the athletic fee went towards the purchase of student seats at home games came about three-four years ago concerning football games. This is when the athletic department started to issue coupons, which could be exchanged for reserved seat tickets at the new Alumni Stadium.

O'Connell said that if UMass wants to go up against better schools, a certain amount of money must be guaranteed to them. "If you don't have the money, you can't bring in the club," he stated.

He pointed out that extra revenues could be brought in by selling seats. However, "we don't have enough seats in the Cage for sale," he declared. He added that when you move to a facility like the Springfield Civic Center, it is a "commercial enterprise."

He stated that this is "an opportunity for basketball fans to show their numbers."

O'Connell and Richason termed the Holy Cross and Boston College games, both scheduled for Springfield, as an experiment.

Francis McInerny, the new Head of the Athletic Department said that if no one shows, next years games will stay on campus; but, if this experiment is a success, the teams will be moved off on a "selective basis."

When asked about the lack of transportation, McInerney said, "The athletic Department has very little to do with it." He also stated that he thought there was a student group that always took care of providing transportation. He cited the Boardwalk Bowl as an example.

O'Connell said, "you've got to try it." Otherwise, he pointed out, everyone "would continue to say, 'What if . . .'"

Costs involved in getting to Springfield, according to Collegian research, include the following:

—Transportation: one-quarter tankful of gas, round trip, by car, about $2.00-3.00 bus fare, round trip,

—Ticket: one dollar,

—parking: $1.50 Civic Center Parking garage, $.15 per hour Baystate West parking garage, some free on street parking available in Court Square area, across from the Civic Center.

Tom Austin (44) makes a two handed jump shot in last Saturday's game against Syracuse. This home game was played at the Cage, but the next home will be played at the Springfield Civic Center, without student transportation to the game being provided by the athletic department. Robert O'Connell, Assistant Director of Athletics, speaking about transportation to the game said, "We assumed students would work this out for themselves."

On The Inside:

•A Pair Of Loving Hands see page eleven

•Nixon's Peace Budget see page five

•Cease-Fire Shattered see page four

Will this UMass basketball fan still be smiling when he finds out that no transportation has been provided to the "home" game at Springfield? (MDC Photo by Gib Fullerton)

Consumer Groups To Intervene In Lawsuit

By AVIS YUNI

The Western Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group (WMPIRG) and Consum Irate (a committee of businessmen, labor leaders, and public officials) will intervene in a lawsuit brought by the Western Massachusetts Electric Company (WMECO) against the Massachusetts Department of Public Utilities (DPU) in the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts.

Ron Bogard, lawyer and director of WMPIRG stated that WMPIRG, is asking the court to support the reduction in the increase and not grant an amount over the $2 million. However, if the courts is disposed to granting the full original amount, WMPIRG is asking that the court remand the case back to the DPU with guidelines stating what is an appropriate hearing. Thus, the DPU hearings on the WMECO rate increase would start all over again.

Recaping the case's history, WMECO originally requested the DPU to grant it a $5.7 million rate increase. The DPU arranged to hold hearings on the request.

At the preliminary hearing on the WMECO rate increase request, WMPIRG presented a motion stating that the hearings should be dismissed on the constitutional basis that they violate due process of law since there was no one present at the hearings to intervene on the part of the consumer. The DPU considered the motion but overruled it.

WMPIRG and Consum Irate then filed a suit in the Federal District Court in Boston against the DPU and WMECO. Their objective in the federal court, stated Bogard, was to stop the DPU hearings altogether since the consumers were being denied due process—they were not represented and losing their rights. After consideration, the Federal Court ruled not to stop the hearings.

The hearings continued. The DPU decided to grant WMECO an increase, but they cut the $5.7 million request by $3.7 million, granting only a $2 million rate increase.

WMECO then decided to sue the DPU in the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts on the grounds that the DPU had no justification to not grant the full increase request. The DPU called no witnesses to speak against the increase. WMECO feels that the DPU's cut of its increase request results in a confiscation of its property and violates due process of law.

WMPIRG then decided that rather than appeal it's court case to the Federal Court of Appeals, to intervene and sue in the State Supreme Court as a party to the WMECO appeal.

In the present court case in the Supreme Judicial Court, there are three requests, explained Bogard. The DPU is requesting the court to support its reduction in the increase request. WMECO is asking that the court overrule the DPU's cut and grant it the full $5.7 million rate increase.

Bogard stated that the DPU responded by reducing the rate increase because of all the activity that WMPIRG had created. He cited the Northeast Telephone Company case of a year ago in which the courts decided to reverse a DPU decision to cut their rate increase request because the DPU had called only one witness and the telephone company, three. The courts felt the DPU couldn't place that much weight on one witness and granted the company's original increase request.

"No consumer group was present in the Supreme Court hearings saying don't just give what they are asking for, send the case back to the DPU with guidelines for proper hearings," Bogard stated. He said that if WMECO argues for its original request on the grounds that the DPU called no witnesses against them then WMECO is saying precisely what WMPIRG are arguing about all along. Bogard feels both WMECO and WMPIRG are arguing the same things but reaching different conclusions. WMPIRG wants the case sent back to the DPU and force new hearings with constitutional guidelines.

"Even though we lost in the hearing (in the Federal District Court) we really won because of the public attention and political attention we got," Bogard stated. "In a sense we won the battle not in court but in the papers and in the political process."

Bogard feels that WMPIRG can take the credit for the DPU's reduction in the increase. Feeling that the present system of setting rates is totally inadequate, he explained that WMPIRG has filed nine bills in the state legislature through Representative McColgan to correct the situation legislatively so that the consumers are really represented.

Bogard pointed out that John Verani, whom WMPIRG sued as the Chairman of the DPU has since become the Secretary of Public Affairs. He is now the Administrative Secretary of Consumer Affairs under Governor Sargeant and is the Secretary over the DPU, Consumer Council, etc. Bogard stated that Verani has now filed a re-organization plan for the state in which the faulty utility regulatory system in the state would be corrected. "Now he's putting through a re-organization package to correct what we sued against," Bogard stated.

WMPIRG has been successful, Bogard feels, "in putting enough political pressure on the institution awarding rates and in raising enough concern so that they're filing a system of legislation that is fair."

About the time that the state legislature is considering WMPIRG's 9 bills and Verani's re-organization the court case will have come up, Bogard stated. He explained that they can lobby pointing to the court case and say that they'll have the same thing next year.

"It's not just a court battle, but also a political one. The court show power and that we mean business but we can do it through the press and political pressure," Bogard said.

In the WMECO court case, WMECO asked the Supreme Judicial Court to stay the DPU's $2 million rate order. This would allow them to implement the $5.7 million request while the case is being considered in court. WMECO would post a bond and if the court granted less than their $5.7 million request, WMECO would return the money to their customers from the bond.

Bogard explained that this is a customary thing to do. It has a safety valve built in, with the bond, and WMPIRG would not battle on this issue. If the court doesn't allow this, each month WMECO would lose money because if the court does grant the $5.7 million, WMECO can't go back and collect it for the time the case was in the Supreme Judicial Court.

WMECO made its bond request in early December, Bogard said, but there's been no decision yet. Presently, WMPIRG is preparing legal documents to present to the court and doing the necessary paperwork. He said that the case will probably be decided about March.

Bogard stated that he'll be very surprised if the court decides to grant WMECO the full original increase. "If it happens, a lot of people will be pretty outraged and shocked."

Amherst Towing: A Monopoly?

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Today begins a series of articles on the present state of contract vehicle towing at the University. The series has been compiled by Collegian staffer Bill Densmore.)

By BILL DENSMORE

Cars parked illegally on University property usually receive a ticket before they are towed, although the serving of a ticket may sometimes occur as a tow truck arrives to pick up the vehicle.

The car is removed to a site owned by the towing company, where it is stored until retrieved by the owner, or sold after several months as a derelict. According to the UMass-Amherst towing regulations, "the owner of the vehicle so removed or towed away shall be liable for the cost of such removal or storage."

So, for the owner of a towed car to claim his vehicle, he must by law pay the towing company a fee before he drives away from the lot. To eliminate the possibility of "scalping" by towing companies, and to permit orderly removal of illegally parked vehicles, the fee is a non-negotiable amount stipulated in a contract between the towing company and the University Procurement office.

During 1972 the contract the University signed with Amherst Towing, Inc. called for a fixed charge of sixteen dollars for removal, and one dollar for each night the vehicle was stored at the company's lot on Sunderland Road in North Amherst. The maximum amount chargeable is now set by state law at twenty-five dollars.

The full amount paid, normally seventeen dollars, goes to the towing company--neither the University or the Security office receives a "cut".

In an ideal situation the cost of towing reflects the least amount a towing company can charge and still run a profitable business. But in 1972 Amherst Towing received a contract because it was the only bidder located close to the University. A sole second bidder was from South Deerfield.

Thus the towing contract in 1972 was "one of those unfortunate situations where you have a monopoly" as Director of Procurement Francis J. Teahan said early in December.

During December at least ten bid requests for a 1973 towing contract with the University were sent out from Teahan's office. Only two firms responded. One was Amherst Towing But for the first time the gas station on Northampton Road known as Plaza Shell bid along with Amherst Towing, Inc. for this year's contract.

The two sealed bids returned to the Procurement office were opened at 2 p.m. on December 27th as specified on the bid request. Amherst Towing, Inc. proposed $14 for a tow and $1 for each night of storage. Plaza Shell's bid was $13 for towing and $2 for each night of storage.

According to Plaza Shell's manager, Richard Yourga, "the contract was awarded to us, but of course Amherst Towing wants to keep it." Yourga claims that when the bids were opened and studied during the last days of December his firm verbally received the contract.

According to Yourga the contract was withdrawn a few days later after the University Procurement office received a complaint from Amherst Towing, Inc. Yourga says that the complaint was about the zoning regulations governing Plaza Shell's proposed storage area for towed cars--such storage would be illegal.

Procurement Director Teahan said Friday that his office never sent a letter to Plaza Shell awarding the contract, and that "no decision" was made on December 27th about the contract. According to Teahy, "we're still checking into it. We gave this Plaza Shell a chance to clarify this zoning permit downtown, and they haven't done it yet."

If the contract was indeed awarded to Plaza Shell and then withdrawn because of a complaint, it would mean that the University very nearly contracted with a tower who couldn't legally perform the work required by the agreement. The bid specifications sent out with the bid request in early December state that the tower should include with his cost bid the "size of area for storage of vehicles and what hours this area is open for the pick up of vehicles."

Teahan explained that should Plaza Shell get a rezoning for storage of towed vehicles at the Northampton Road site, "we'd look at it again and if it's a closer area to store the vehicles (than the Amherst Towing, Inc. yard) we'd certainly take that into consideration."

The Town Zoning Board of Appeals (ZBA) which would have authority to grant a zoning variance for the storage of towed cars at the service station site has scheduled a meeting for Thursday, February eighth, but a zoning appeal filed by Richard Yourga of Plaza Shell is not going to be considered at that meeting.

Plaza Shell is located closer to the UMass campus than the Amherst Towing, Inc. yard, and presumably would be easier to get to for a student who has had his car towed and can't drive. It is alleged that in at least one case University Security personnel have encouraged a female student to hitchhike to the Amherst Towing site when her car was towed.

400 Apply For CC Director

A total of over 400 applications for the position of Director of Campus Center have been actively studied by students and professional people the past two months, according to Jay Denning.

"This is a very, very difficult position to fill," Denning, co-chairperson of the Director's Search Committee (DSC) said. "As far as the student is concerned, this is one of the most important positions on the campus."

The Director is responsible for planning and directing the programs and staff of the CC/SU Complex, according to a DSC advertisement. Among the qualities the candidates must have are "considerable skill in human relations and knowledge of student needs as they relate to the functions of the CC Complex."

Sometime this semester the DSC will take a "single or small group of persons before the Board of Governors for approval," Denning said. Ultimately the final decision rests with the Chancellor and trustees.

Notice

The Central Area Counseling Center, located in B-2 Gorman House, cannot open until February 5th because of uncompleted renovations. The Center will definitely open on the 5th, officials state.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

The office of the DAILY COLLEGIAN is on the second floor of the Student Union on the campus of the University of Massachusetts, zip code 01002. Telephones: 545-2550 (news); 545-0344 (sports); 545-0731 (business).

Second class postage is paid in Amherst. THE DAILY COLLEGIAN publishes Monday through Friday during the academic year, except during vacation, exam periods or holidays. Accepted for mailing under the authority of an act of March 8, 1879; as amended by an act of June 11, 1943. Subscription rates are $6.00 per semester or $10.00 per year.

at

CRONOPIOS BOOKS

27 N. Pleasant St.
AMHERST

The Real Isadora — Victor Seroff
Journey to the Beginning — Edgar Snow
Maurice — E.M. Forster
Alpha Brain Waves — Jodi Lawrence
Lady Sings the Blues — Billy Holiday
The Wolf Man — Sigmund Freud

come in and pick up an idea

*plus AMERICAN POETS BROADSIDES attractive first editions of most recent poems by Eberhart, Bly, Ginsberg, McClure, Creely, Oates, and others.

Transactional Analysis Workshop

Given by Transactional Analysis trainees:
ROSEMARIE DANNER
EDWARD HOUGEN

Will Meet Once A Week:

Tuesday morning, 9:30 - 12:30 beginning Feb. 6
or
Thursday evening, 7:30 - 10:30 beginning Feb. 1
Fee: $25.00 per month

The focus of this workshop will be to develop an increased awareness and understanding of yourself, to become more in touch with others and to explore new options in directing your own life. Primary emphasis will be upon the Transactional Analysis model including ego states, life positions, scripts, rackets, injunctions and games. Open to the general community.

For further information call:
549-1351 or 617-544-6739

Student Hint Number One: When settling down to do some serious studying, try to find a spot with pleasant surroundings, like 4,000 miles from UMass. (MDC Photo by George Withers)

WTIC-TV to Focus On Belchertown

By MARK VOGLER

Most people familiar with the conditions of Belchertown State School have read newspaper accounts of the low-quality life in the Western Massachusetts institution for the mentally retarded. Fewer have been there to see the actual conditions.

Tonight at 10:00, Television Station WTIC Channel 3 of Hartford, will bring true-to-life sights of Belchertown into the living rooms of area people in a one-hour documentary-"They Need Love, They Get Angry, They Bleed."

Executive producer of the film and vice-president of public affairs for WTIC, Richard Ahles, said his telecasting crew was inspired to do a close-up of the state school upon learning of the class action suit filed by the Belchertown parents against the state to force major improvements in the conditions.

WTIC did most of their filming for the program during a three-week period in December. Ahles said the program shows the conditions of the various buildings and gives an in-depth picture of some of the problems the undermanned staff must cope with.

According to Ahles, "A question is raised throughout the documentary as to whether a resident at the school could improve if he had more attention and lived in a better environment; or if he is just destined to degrees. And we kind of feel that with an improvement in conditions, there is hope."

Ahles said he was appalled when he first visited Belchertown State School. "When you walk into one of those buildings, the smell on the very first floor hits you. It's horrible, that smell is just beyond belief.

"The second impression I got was the general need for affection that these residents share. A 50-year-old woman approached me with a rag doll tucked under her arm and called me "daddy". That poor woman must have been looking for some kind of affection for all these years. And all she had was her rag doll."

He said that the Christmas decorations and the residents going around singing carols in one particular setting, "added to the grotesque atmosphere."

"It seems like a hell of a thing that it has to go on in 1973. After leaving a place like that and going home, I didn't want to touch my two little children until after I had a shower. The place is just so filthy that the smell permiates your clothing. I think the film should bring this out."

Ahles, has in the past, won awards for some of his programs which have focused in on the problems of disadvantaged people. Some say that this is the best documentary he has produced.

He was honored last year by the Radio and Television News Directors Association with the Edward R. Murrow award for WTIC's special on the Seyms Street Jail in Hartford, a 100-year-old structure.

"Many of the conditions we filmed in the Seyms Street Jail were relevant to Belchertown. That place was a fire-trap, was overcrowded and just disgusting--unfit for human beings."

Ahles' production of "To Know Somebody", a program which dealt with the problems of the black people in the Hartford area, had received an Emmy.

In regard to his most recent film about Belchertown, Ahles is quite optimistic. I think it came out well, and I hope it disturbs some people's consciences. In the past, there has usually been a fleeting reaction to programs of this nature. Everybody becomes disturbed for a while, but then there's no change."

Take a walk!!
To the ART SHOP
For: Artist Materials
Supplies for Landscape Architecture
In The Amherst Carriage Shops

Education Conference Here

By DON BISHOP

Students, administrators, legislators, and key figures in state public higher education will be converging on the UMass-Amherst campus in two weeks to participate in a "state conference on higher education," sponsored by the Student Government Association here.

The main purpose of the conference, according to coordinator Bobbie Lapore is, "to set up a statewide organization of students in public higher education." Student Government delegates from nearly all the state's universities, colleges, and community colleges will be attending the three day event, beginning February 9th.

Included among the list of public figures planning to attend the conference are UMass President Robert Wood, Chancellor Randolph Bromery, Secretary of Educational Affairs Joseph Cronin, Chairman of the Board of Higher Education Patrick McCarthy, the Chairmen of the Joint State Senate-House Committee of Education: Senator Walter Boverini and Rep. Michael Daly, and Dean of the Harvard Graduate School of Education, Dr. Paul Ylvisaker.

The conference has been in the planning stages since last April. It will be held entirely in the Campus Center, where conferees will hold workshops, attend lectures, and have their meals. The costs of the conference are being met through a registration fee (which is $12 for UMass-Amherst students) and a sum from the Board of Higher Education.

A tentative schedule of events for Friday includes registration, then a plenary session for the delegates, dinner, and then a speech by Harvard Dean Ylvisaker.

Saturday morning will be devoted to workshops which will deal primarily with localized student issues including "student legal services", "academic reform" and "veterans affairs".

Saturday afternoon, Sen. Boverini and Rep. Daly will present a workshop entitled "Politics in Higher Education" and Undersecretary of Educational Affairs Gladys Hardy will give one on "Woman in Higher Education".

Later in the day, there will be a panel discussion to include Wood, Cronin, and McCarthy, at which time, according to Ms. LaPorte, "tuition, the budget cuts, and re-organization will probably come up."

On Sunday there will be another plenary session in the morning and a luncheon speech by Secretary Cronin on "Reorganization".

The conference is for the most part restricted to those active in student government. If you feel you fit this mold and are willing to pay the $12 registration fee (which covers meals and activities), you have until this Friday, February 2, to register in the Student Senate Office.

Throughout the conference the student delegates will be working with a set of proposals to be drawn up by SGA Special Assistant Ed Voci as to what exactly state college students can do to play a greater part in the state higher education decision-making process.

One possibility here is what Ms. LaPorte suggests as "a permanent advisory group to the state Board of Higher Education".

While conferences of this nature have been slightly less than successful in the past, SGA President Larry Ladd is confident enough to say, "This conference will be the first step towards organizing students statewide to have a future impact on state education."

Everywoman's Center Sponsors Workshops

By SUE R. HUBBARD

A series of seminars and workshops entitled Everywoman's University attracted several hundred participants to the Campus Center between January 8 and 11 in an effort to enable area women to share their common grievances and problems.

Addressing itself to the needs of those women who are traditionally ignored by society, the program of lectures and discussions was attended by students, faculty and local women. The intersession break in the normal scheduling of classes allowed for participation by the professional staff of the University as well.

Everywoman's Center, located in Munson Hall, acted as the coordinating and organizing group for the program. Through Everywoman's Center, speakers were recruited and workshop subjects selected.

Registering for the workshops were 122 women and two men. However, as many as 300 persons attended some of the scheduled events, including a dance and the presentation of two one-act plays.

These one-act plays were the original work of two women at UMass and had never before been performed. As a result of their enthusiastic reception, one of the plays is currently being made into a film.

Another result of Everywoman's University will be the publishing of a special addition of Women's Journal which will include poetry that was read during the program.

Discussions and seminars covered such topics as child care on campus and the escalating costs of working women returning to school. Special eight week workshops on similar topics will be sponsored by Everywoman's Center during this semester.

Everywoman's Center is open Monday through Friday, 9:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., with a counseling staff available for academic, vocational and personal advising.

Massachusetts POWs Listed

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Following are names of Massachusetts servicemen on a prisoner of war list provided Saturday by the North Vietnamese. It was compiled from Defense Department releases and reports of families who received confirmation their men were on the list from Pentagon officials. According to Pentagon sources the list may not be complete.

In releasing the information, the Pentagon provided only names, service and ranks of the men.

Additional information such as hometowns and date of capture comes from files based on a variety of sources, including lists provided over the years by antiwar groups, Radio Hanoi broadcasts and reports of foreign correspondents.

In numerous cases, the man's name never appeared on public lists available to the Associated Press and this is so noted. This does not mean, however, that the man was not a known POW. The government has in the past set a figure of 591 for POWs while public lists have shown about 400 names. Cases of missing men listed as POWs for the first time are noted on the basis of reports by families.

Here is the list:

.Brown, Capt. Paul Gordon, Marines, Newton, Mass., captured July, 1968.

.Brudno, Capt. Edward A., air Force, Harrison, N.Y., and Quincy, Mass., captured Oct., 1965.

.Eastman, Cmdr. Leonard C., Navy, Bernardston, Mass.

.Lewis, Capt. Frank D., Air Force, Massachusetts native, captured Dec. 27, 1972.

.Mulligan, Capt. James A., Jr., Navy, Virginia Beach, Va., and Lawrence, Mass., captured March, 1966.

.Purrington, Lt. Cmdr. Fred R., Navy, North Dartmouth, Mass.

.Sullivan, Lt. Timothy B., Navy, Springfield, Mass.

.Wanat, Capt. George K., Jr., Army, Foxboro, Mass., captured April, 1972.

Over The Rainbow

specializes in custom embroidery

Bring your own jeans, workshirts, or anything else, and we will embroider them with whatever you wish — or we will supply new articles embroidered as you want.

TEN PIN BOWLING

Monday - Saturday
4:30 - 10:30

(Except during league play)

BOYDEN LANES

50c/string

SALE

PANTS $6 OFF
2 styles offered
1/3 rd. OFF and more
tops from 1.95

SWEATERS 6.95
JACKETS 5.95 → up
HATS $50
limited supply available in

The University Store — Campus Center

In The Nation And The World

Cease-Fire Broken In Early Stages

SAIGON (AP) — The United States began speeding up the withdrawal of its remaining 23,000 troops Sunday under a cease-fire shattered in its infancy by dawn to dusk fighting from the demilitarized zone to the Mekong Delta.

U.S. officials said they anticipated more hard fighting ahead.

The Saigon command reported more than 4,000 North and South Vietnam casualties in the five days since the announcement of the cease-fire. The U.S. command reported four Americans dead and four missing during the same period. The cease-fire did not officially begin until 8 a.m. Sunday-7 p.m. EST, Saturday. A land grab preceded the truce and continued beyond the designated time for a halt in the fighting.

As the fighting for political control flared in scores of hamlets, members of the International Commission of Control and Supervision and Vietnamese Communist delegates to the peace agreement's Joint Military Commission converged on Saigon to set up machinery designed to strengthen the fragile cease-fire.

The Vietnamese Communist delegates were scheduled to join the United States and South Vietnam on Monday for the initial meeting of the four-party Joint Military Commission which also has the task of determining the methods of the American withdrawal.

Ten Viet Cong representatives refused to get off the plane that carried them here, apparently because they objected to filling out South Vietnamese government customs and immigration cards. The Viet Cong are South Vietnamese.

North Vietnamese delegates refused to ride in U.S.-provided limousines flying white and blue flags of the old International Control Commission on the grounds that the flags looked like emblems of surrender. Although a U.S. Air Force sergeant removed the flags, the delegates went into Saigon on a bus.

The United States stepped up its troop withdrawal schedule to about 800 men for the first two days of the cease-fire, compared to an average of 100 men a week for the past several weeks.

The peace agreement signed in Paris on Saturday calls for a full withdrawal of U.S. military personnel within 60 days, at which point the Joint Military Commission will be disbanded.

The final daily communique from the U.S. Command said in a single sentence: "All offensive military operations by U.S. forces in the Republic of Vietnam ended at 8 a.m. today."

But U.S. fighter-bombers flew right up to the deadline, logging 494 strikes against North Vietnamese and Viet Cong positions during the 24-hour period ending at 8 a.m. Sunday. The strikes were the heaviest since May during the height of the Communist command's 1972 spring offensive.

While there was still no word on the release of American prisoners of war, South Vietnamese military sources said thousands of Viet Cong and North Vietnamese POWs are being gathered in the Can Tho region in the Mekong Delta, 80 miles south of Saigon, for an impending release.

Both the International Commission of Control and Supervision and the Joint Military Commission face a difficult task since there are no provisions written into the peace agreement giving them any enforcement authority.

Despite widespread fighting that gave the Communist side territorial gains, mainly in the Saigon region, and which cut four major highways leading from the South Vietnamese capital, senior analysts said the attacks and counterattacks were not unexpected. They said they did not feel that Saigon's hold on the country was seriously threatened yet.

U.S. officials said about 400 American servicemen left Sunday and another 400 were scheduled to depart Monday in an accelerated pace of troop withdrawals. Before the cease-fire, U.S. troop withdrawals had been averaging 100 men a week. The deadline for all American troops to be out of Vietnam is March 28.

The U.S. officials said some of the American servicemen leaving Vietnam were simply going "west", meaning they are being transferred to Thailand.

555 POWs Named; MIAs Still In Doubt

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Defense Department said Sunday that the Communists listed only 555 living U.S. servicemen as prisoners in North and South Vietnam and another 55 who died in captivity. The Pentagon said no clues to the fate of more than 1,300 Americans missing in action were provided.

Pentagon spokesman Jerry W. Friedheim said the two lists of the living and dead covered men imprisoned in North and South Vietnam but failed to identify any GIs known captive in Laos.

He said the United States expects to receive shortly another list covering the 317 Americans who previously were listed as either captured or missing in Laos.

Although the Pentagon had listed only six of the 317 as captured in Laos, officials were hopeful that several more would turn up as among the living.

Before the cease-fire Saturday, the Pentagon had listed a total of 591 U.S. servicemen believed captive in Communist camps in North and South Vietnam and Laos but expected that some were dead.

Officials said the POW list given U.S. officials in Paris Saturday by the North Vietnamese as part of the cease-fire agreement contained the names of only a few of those 1,334 previously listed as missing in Indochina.

This came as a bitter disappointment to the Defense Department and the families of the missing, many of whom waited in anguish for as long as eight years with the slim hope that their men would turn up as prisoners and some day come home.

Friedheim said notification of relatives of the 555 living, the 55 dead and the 1,315 still missing was completed within 24 hours after the POW list was received from Paris.

The prisoners to be released by Hanoi within the 60-day period required under the cease-fire agreement include 76 Army men, 135 Navy, 318 from the Air Force and 26 Marines.

Friedheim said every effort will be made to learn the cause of death in each case.

As for the missing, Friedheim said, "We have not really begun the missing-in-action process." This is a question, he said, that will be pursued in the coming months.

In announcing completion of the notification of relatives, the Pentagon spokesman again repeated—as he had Friday—that the United States hopes to begin flying the prisoners out of Hanoi during the first seven days of February.

The National League of Families of American Prisoners and Missing in Southeast Asia said it learned also that 22 civilian prisoners were on Hanoi's list. The group said 23 prisoners, including three not previously reported, have died in North Vietnamese camps.

Those not on Hanoi's list are still considered missing in action until boards of inquiry meet to consider each case and possibly declare the men presumed dead.

U.S. Planes Still Bombing Cambodia, Laos

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 120 U.S. war planes bombed North Vietnamese supply trails in Laos and military targets in Cambodia after the Vietnam cease-fire went into effect, it was learned Sunday.

The American planes met relatively light antiaircraft fire, and there were no reported U.S. losses.

One hundred F4 phantom jet fighter-bombers flew from three bases in Thailand and 22 B52 bombers attacked out of Guam.

A top State Department official confirmed the continued bombing of Laos, but said nothing about Cambodia.

William Sullivan, former ambassador to Laos, said on television:

"In the interim period between now and whenever there is a cease-fire in Laos, we are continuing to provide air support to the Royal Laotian forces in resisting whatever Communist movements there are taking place."

Sullivan, a deputy assistant secretary of state, gave no details on the nature or scope of the air support.

The Pentagon noted Sullivan's statement and said it would have nothing to add at this time.

Pentagon spokesman Jerry W. Friedheim replied with a "no comment" when asked about reports that the United States still was waging air war over Laos.

Last week, Friedheim left open the possibility that U.S. bombers would continue to hit North Vietnamese supply trails in Laos and military targets in Cambodia after the fighting stopped in Vietnam.

At the time, Friedheim said he could not go beyond the words of Henry A. Kissinger, chief U.S. negotiator of the Vietnam peace pact.

He quoted Kissinger's statement last Wednesday that the United States has "full expectation that within a short period of time there will be a formal cease-fire in Laos" and a halt in the fighting in Cambodia as well.

Laotian Prime Minister Souvanna Phouma said last Friday he expects a Laos cease-fire within about 15 days.

The peace agreement worked out by Kissinger and North Vietnamese diplomats stipulates that "foreign countries shall put an end to all military activities in Cambodia and Laos." But it did not specify a date.

The United States has more than 500 bombers, fighter-bombers and gunships stationed in Thailand. There have been many indications that this force will not be reduced at least until after the 60-day period, starting last Saturday, when the more than 23,000 remaining U.S. troops are to be withdrawn from Vietnam and all U.S. war prisoners returned to American hands.

The bombing would appear to be aimed at interfering with any further flow of North Vietnamese supplies to Communist troops in the South for as long as possible.

The cease-fire agreement rules out any further North Vietnamese infiltration from Laos or Cambodia and limits resupply of North Vietnamese troops remaining in South Vietnam to controlled replacement of worn-out or damaged equipment on a one-for-one basis.

In Brief...

Ribicoff Jubilant Over Accord

HARTFORD (AP)—"My prediction is we will enter into an era of unprecedented prosperity," said U.S. Sen. Abraham A. Ribicoff, D-Conn.

C130's Fly To Hanoi

WASHINGTON (AP)- Two U.S. Air Force C130 transport planes flew to Hanoi Sunday night to pick up about 150 North Vietnamese military men who will serve with a new commission supervising the Vietnam cease-fire, the Pentagon announced.

The C130s were due at Gia Lam airport near Hanoi at 10 p.m. EST.

FALL SEMESTER - ISRAEL

Brandeis University/The Jacob Hiatt Institute
Study in Jerusalem/July-December, 1973
(43 students from 22 universities in 1972)

Juniors and Seniors eligible

Four courses/Hebrew not required/Earn 16 credits

Cost: $1850/tuition, room, board
Financial Aid available

Application deadline March 1st
For information write:

The Jacob Hiatt Institute
Brandeis University
Waltham, Massachusetts 02154

Senate Lecture Note Program

Antro 102; 104B
Botany 100; 101B(3)
Econ 100 A,B; 103A; 104 (1A,3B)
Food Sci 101
Micro 140
Poli Sci 100 (A,B)
Psych 101A (1A,3); 262 (A,B) 263 (A,B); 270 (A,B) 280A (1); 301B
Soc 101 (2,3)
Soc 256 (2)
Speech 115
Zool 101 (A,B,D); 135; 145; 221

Distribution

1) Student Union, Rm. 318 9:30 a.m. - 4:00 p.m.

2) Southwest, JQA Lobby 11:00 - 4:00 p.m.

Tuesday Nite

Clean Living

at the

Rusty Nail Inn

Rte. 17, Sunderland

665-1937

USSR Ready For Force Cut Talks

LONDON (AP)—The Soviet Union has advised the North Atlantic Allies it is ready to join preliminary talks on force cuts in Europe but without prejudicing its call for widening the projected negotiations.

A note delivered to Britain Saturday night brought an expression of hope from the Foreign Office that talks will begin, as NATO originally suggested, next Wednesday.

A spokesman declined to disclose the content of the Soviet note.

But he said the site of the preliminary exchanges most likely will be Vienna rather than Geneva—plainly in deference to the Soviet Union and its Eastern European allies, who suggested the Austrian capital as the meeting place.

A special meeting of NATO's permanent council is being arranged in Brussels for Monday to consider the issues and to send conclusive replies to the Soviet Union and four other East European governments.

In diplomatic jargon the projected conference is for the purpose of negotiating "mutual balanced force reductions"—MBFR— in Central Europe.

Twelve NATO countries in mid-November invited five East European states to a conference on the subject.

The 12 NATO countries were the United States, Britain, Canada, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, Holland, Luxembourg, Norway, Denmark, Greece and Turkey. The Norwegians, Danes, Greeks and Turks were to participate on a sort of part-time basis, when their interests were affected.

The five Communist countries invited were the Soviet Union, Poland, Hungary, Czechoslovakia and East Germany.

But two weeks ago the East European countries came back with an amendment urging that any European country interested in the negotiations should have the right to participate.

This plainly was their way of opening the door to such nations as France, Romania and certain neutral countries which were concerned with the question but which did not want to take part in negotiations involving the two rival European military blocks—NATO and the Warsaw pact.

'Zero Induction' Draws Mixed Reaction

BOSTON (AP)-The Defense Department's abandonment Saturday of Selective Service as a way to fill the ranks of military drew a mixed response among interested people in the Boston area.

"I'm not the least bit surprised," said Harvard Prof. Samuel F. Popkin, who was jailed for refusing to disclose his sources for the controversial Pentagon Papers.

"...This is a move that has to do with domestic policy," Popkin added, "and has absolutely nothing to do with American options for the future in Vietnam.

"What's 5,000 men out of a few million? This isn't a permanent end to the draft; it is an experiment to see if an all-volunteer army will work.

"But it won't affect our foreign policy. You don't need a draft for the Bay of Pigs, or the Dominican Republic, or Lebanon, or to keep a fleet in the Mediterranean to defend interest abroad."

William Schendel, draft counselor at Harvard, said he believes some will drop out of the ROTC program. He said, "I can't see a single person who isn't going to be happy.

"I personally think that those drafted last fall were inducted more as a face-saving thing. We really didn't need the manpower, but the administration had to fight so hard to get the act renewed.

"We won't be closing up shop here. There are still people who are in trouble for not complying with the act."

Joan Sherman, who has worked to defend those who have refused to register in the Boston area, said she was glad the draft was dropped, "but I would like to see the authority to force people to continue registering denied the local boards.

"I think it sets a bad precedent to require men to register when we don't need the draft. It's sort of a zero induction operation, and it wouldn't take too much effort to make the draft real again."

Most college students on Boston area campuses applauded the change. "It's a great personal relief," said Rick Healey, a Boston College senior. "My family will be so happy, and now I can make some definite plans for graduate school."

Barton Alexander, a Harvard government major, said he thinks amnesty for those who avoided the draft would be an important next step.

He added, "But I find the situation ironic. The draft is ending at a time when the military budget is being stuffed, and the domestic budget remains emaciated."

Janet Gottler, a Tufts junior, said the end of the draft was not surprising because "we don't need high manpower totals to fight the technological warfare we are presently using.

"Reducing manpower doesn't impress me. It doesn't signal in a new era. America is going to carry out its same imperialistic goals in the world."

Nixon 'Peace' Budget Slashes Old Programs

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (AP)-Declaring it is "time to get big government off your back and out of your pocket," President Nixon told the nation Sunday he is sending Congress a peacetime budget holding the line on taxes and slashing several popular federal programs.

A day after the formal end of American fighting in Vietnam-the nation's longest way-the President said in a nationwide radio address that his $269-billion budget "will give us the chance...to make our new era of peace a new era of progress."

Nixon's budget goes to Congress at noon Monday, but he set the stage for his battle of the budget with Congress by unveiling some of its key provisions in the radio address taped before he flew to Florida on Friday.

—He is proposing "some very sharp reductions in some very familiar programs...regarded as sacred cows in the past." As examples he cited the Hill-Burton hospital construction program, urban renewal assistance and special aid for schools near federal installations.

—He has searched for waste in "every nook and cranny of the bureaucracy." His own executive office payroll will be cut 60 per cent, while deep cuts were made in projected defense and agricultural budgets.

—He is seeking to shift more spending to such programs as pollution control, crime and drug abuse, energy needs and cancer and heart disease research.

—He will press Congress to set "a firm ceiling on overall expenditures," which was rejected last year by legislators.

Nixon disclosed, too, that his State of the Union report this year will be "a series of detailed messages on specific subjects," rather than a single report "covering a laundry list of programs."

The first of the messages will reach Capitol Hill this week and altogether, Nixon said, "will chart a new course for America-a course that will bring more progress by putting more responsibility and money in more places."

Aides said the chief executive worked on the messages Sunday after flying by helicopter from his Key Biscayne home to an island in the Bahamas owned by a friend.

Nixon's slashes in programs popular with Congress, coupled with his vow to keep current fiscal year spending to $250 billion by withholding congressionally approved funds, already has touched off major controversy on Capitol Hill.

The President appeared to extend an olive branch to unhappy congressmen, while at the same time seeking public support for the White House position, when he said:

"Every member of the Congress gets enormous pressure from special interests to spend your money for what they want. And so I ask you to back up those congressmen and those senators, whether Democrats or Republicans, who have the courage to vote against higher spending. They hear from the special interests, let them hear from you."

Nixon declared that "if we are going to keep taxes and prices down, the Congress must keep spending down."

"What is at stake is not just a big, impersonal federal budget," he said. "What is at stake is your job, your taxes, the prices you pay..."

Corona Attorney Moves For New Trial

FAIRFIELD, Calif. (AP)—Juan Corona's attorney—caught off guard by a guilty verdict based on circumstantial evidence—is maneuvering for a new trial that might include the first testimony from Corona.

Defense attorney Richard Hawk's motion for a new trial in the nation's biggest mass murder court case is scheduled for hearing Monday at the same Fairfield court where the four-month trial ended Jan. 18 with 25 guilty verdicts.

Since then, one juror has said she now wishes she had voted innocent on the charges that Corona, a 38-year-old labor contractor, hacked to death and buried 25 itinerant farm workers in makeshift orchard graves along the Feather River north of Yuba City.

Hawk also says he has evidence that a matron who was supposed to guard jurors from any outside influences actually influenced that same wavering juror; 61-year-old Naomi Underwood, to vote for conviction. Authorities have denied that the matron intended to sway the juror.

Hawk also said he will seek a new trial on grounds that prosecution arguments violated the "presumption of innocence" guaranteed to Corona in the U.S. Constitution.

Both Hawk and Corona's family still say Corona is innocent and that he deserves a new trial because the prosecution misled the jury.

During the first trial, Hawk repeatedly attacked what he called "the errors, omissions and mistakes" of the prosecution. He surprised observers by resting his case without calling a single defense witness.

VC Delegates Hassled

SAIGON (AP) — The first Viet Cong delegates to arrive here in a decade refused to get off their plane Sunday and were still on it the following morning because of a hassle involving immigration forms. Diplomats were trying to sort it out.

The 10 Viet Cong peace-keeping representatives arrived Sunday afternoon from Bangkok and refused to fill out the South Vietnamese forms.

By mid-morning Monday, the VC representatives had spent more than 18 hours aboard the South Vietnamese air force DC3 at Tan Son Nhut Airport. A second group of Viet Cong officers scheduled to take part in the four-party military commission was to arrive from Paris later in the day.

A spokesman for the U.S. Embassy said: "All of the members of the four-pbwer commission are in close communication and are trying to resolve the situation."

U.S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker "is one of several principals who is also in touch with the concerned parties," the spokesman said.

Infirmary (In An Emergency) (54) 5-2671

HADLEY BOOK SHOP
Route #9
(Next to "Old Weird Harold's")
ANNOUNCES
New Management — "Red" Dwyer
New Hours — Open Evenings till 9:00 p.m.
New Prices — 50% "Get Acquainted Sale"
A COMPLETE BOOK SERVICE

SEXUAL FRUSTRATION

Slowly he peeled back the cover, revealing a perfect 8½ x 11 x 96 editorial body. His fingers trembling with anticipation, he began to caress the silky smooth pages, his hands gliding over the perfect binding and the firm young staples. "Oooooh," he breathed, "I've never seen such well-set-up premises, such pert punch-lines, such full, thrusting ads. It's—it's built-like-a-brick magazine!" The February issue of the National Lampoon . . . on sale now at your newsstand.

Have you heard National Lampoon's comedy album, RADIO DINNER?

phases restaurant
bernardston, massachusetts
tel. (413) 648-9161

"When you are sincerely pleased, you are nourished."
(Ralph Waldo Emerson)

dinner-cocktails
from 5:30 p.m. weekdays, from 4:00 p.m. on Sundays, closed Mondays

reached from interstate 91, exit 28, and route 10, via bald mountain road, and huckle hill road

Last American Killed In Final Hours Of War

SAIGON (AP) — The last American killed before the Vietnam cease-fire was the father of five children, an Army officer who had lived through the siege of An Loc and was passionately dedicated to rebuilding the devastated city.

Ironically, Lt. Col. William Nolde of Mount Pleasant, Mich., was killed in An Loc by a direct artillery round hit just as he finished conferring with his Vietnamese counterpart on how to get the economy rolling again. The official end of the war was only hours away.

"Bill was a very compassionate person," said Robert Walkinshaw, the pacification chief for the 3rd Military Region and a close personal friend "He drove all over Binh Long Province in his jeep encouraging the people to go back and put the pieces of their city together again."

Nolde, 43, was assigned to An Loc, the capital of Binh Long Province, in early May as senior adviser, just as the city was midway in its 4-1/2 month siege by Communist command troops and heavy guns.

Once a lovely city surrounded by rubber plantations, An Loc after its relief was little more than a moonscape of rubble and dust.

"But Bill loved that place," Walkinshaw continued. "He was always getting together with the Catholic priest on how to rebuild the church, and hardly a week went by that he didn't run over to refugee camp at Phu Van in the neighboring province to see how the people were making out whom the war had driven from their homes."

Nolde's obsession with the dream that An Loc would rise again had given him a street corner fluency in Vietnamese. "More than enough to carry on a conversation on getting things going again," said another American friend.

At the height of siege, when 7,000 rockets, mortars and artillery shells a day were falling on An Loc, Nolde made his headquarters in neighboring Binh Duong Province.

The enemy wanted the town 60 miles north of Saigon as the showpiece of their spring invasion and perhaps as a provisional capital for the Viet Cong government. More than 10,000 North Vietnamese troops were killed trying to take the city.

Friends say it was then that Nolde made up his mind to help rebuild what the helicopter pilots who circled the town described as a red dust bowl made up of clay and blood.

George Jacobson, the chief of staff for pacification in Vietnam and Nolde's top boss, said, "While I realize someone has got to be the last one killed in the official part of the war, I regret exceedingly it had to be Bill. He was a first class officer and a first class person. The Vietnamese people loved him."

"He was a fine gentleman," said a South Vietnamese officer who knew him well.

Nolde was killed about 10 p.m. on the last day of the war. While the rest of the country was witnessing a marked upsurge in fighting, the town on Highway 13 was relatively quiet.

"That night, the town wasn't taking that much fire," said Walkinshaw. "Bill was just leaving the ranger compound, after saying goodnight to the province chief, when the round came in."

McCloskey Assails U.S. Fuel Shortage

DETROIT (AP) — Americans will have to accept higher priced imported fuel, less industrial growth and a greater use of mass transit to avoid recurrences of the present fuel shortage affecting much of the nation, the executive director of the Sierra Club said in Detroit Saturday.

Michael McCloskey said there is no plausible reason for a fuel shortage in the United states and he criticized the "crisis" mentality which he said is being spread by oil producers.

"It is time to call the oil industry's bluff" about the so-called "energy crisis", said McCloskey, whose organization has been in the forefront on environmental issues.

Any "crisis" in fuel production, he said, is the result of artificial controls to protect investments of domestic oil producers and a lack of governmental planning.

Speaking to newsmen before a speech to the Michigan Sierra Club, McCloskey said the oil industry is attempting to exploit a "temporary shortage" of fuel to gain concessions that would make exploration and drilling cheaper and to get permission for tapping such areas as Alaska's North Slope.

McCloskey said national planning is needed to reduce energy consumption and to find new fuel sources, whether domestic or foreign.

The argument that the United States, for defense reasons, should not turn to such areas as the Middle East for oil is phony, he said. It makes more sense, McCloskey said, to conserve oil during times of peace for use during war.

He traced part of the oil shortage to what he called artificially low prices which result in overconsumption of the fuel.

People Needed

to bake bread, cakes, etc.
for new

PEOPLE'S MARKET

Come Saturday, 11 a.m. to Sci. Fict. Rm. or to the Student Senate office, Mon., 3-5 p.m.

Montoya Returns!

Curry Hicks Cage

TOMORROW

Jan. 30 - 8 p.m.

Carlos Montoya, the great Flamenco guitarist joined by the Springfield Symphony Orchestra under Robert Gutter in an all-Spanish Program!

Special feature: "Carom" a recent work for magnetic tape and orchestra by Robert Stern, UMass composer.

TICKETS: $2.00 for UMass undergrads/$4 for others. Available now through Friday in Campus Center lobby. Tickets also available at Fine Arts Council, 125 Herter Hall. Remaining tickets at main entrance, Curry Hicks Cage from 6 p.m. on January 30th.

ORDER TICKETS EARLY AS SELL-OUT EXPECTED FOR THIS EVENT!

presenting . . .

Dr. Wernher Von Braun

"Our Space Program After Apollo"

illustrated with 35mm slides and 16mm film.

Wednesday,
January 31
S.U.B.
8:00 p.m.

dvp

Snow Removal Will Prohibit Parking

The major objective of snow removal activities at times of severe storms is to make it possible to hold classes and conduct all University activities in as normal a way as possible. In order to facilitate snow removal, parking will be prohibited in the following lots between the hours of 1 a.m. and 7 a.m., from December 1 to April 1, as provided for in the Motor Vehicle Regulations Manual approved by the Board of Trustees.

Lot #1, #2, #4, #5, #6, #11, #12, #13, #14, #N.

Overnight parking will continue to be available in lots other than those listed.

Since the plan described above provides for only a little more than half of the parking spaces used on a normal day, it is suggested that all persons who normally bring a car onto campus consider the following possibilities during heavy snow:

a. Pool rides with others whenever possible.
b. Walk if it is at all possible to do so.
c. Have someone drop you off so that the car does not have to be left on campus and so that the snow removal job during daylight hours is facilitated.
d. If space is not available in your assigned lot, go to one of the other lots listed because under such emergency conditions, it is not possible to guarantee that normally assigned space will be available.
e. Make use of the Campus Center garage (open 24 hours a day).
f. Make use of the new bus service to the campus to be initiated this winter under the Department of Transportation grant.

The Town of Amherst ban on overnight street parking also goes into effect December 1 through April 1 from 2 a.m. to 8 a.m. on all public streets. Overnight parking is permitted in the Lincoln St., Pray St. and Amity St. Parking Lots until 9 a.m. during this period.

WMUA To Examine Peace Agreement

Tonight on WMUA's "Focus" series at 10 P.M., commentator Ken Mosakowski will examine some of the terms of the new Indochina peace agreement signed on Saturday, along with the effects of the agreement on future American involvement in the governmental affairs of South Vietnam.

Tonight's program will also be concerned with the subject of amnesty for deserters and other draft resistors who are now living in exile in foreign nations around the world. One feature of tonight's live, 60-minute program will be an excerpt of an interview taped more than two years ago with a UMass graduate who fled to Canada to avoid induction into the army.

Other topics to be covered on tonight's program include the costs of the war, the impact of the peace movement, and the work which faces the peace movement in the future.

English Ed

English education is now beginning its selection process. If you are interested in student teaching in English for the Fall of 1973 and have not stopped by the office—Bartlett 474—or your address has changed since you were last in—please come by immediately. See Gary Aho, Fred Robinson, or Frances Stone.

MDC NEWS HOTLINE 5-2550

Where is

KALIKI KAI

...n for your

SENIOR PORTRAIT

Se... ...ol ... will h... ...eek.
... ...ting,
dive in ... t shot
... h Feb. 9

Free Candy

...details — ...
appointme... ...door
Student U...

Montoya Here Tomorrow

Curry Hicks Cage will rebound to the sound of music rather than cheering basketball crowds at 8 p.m. tomorrow, Tuesday, Jan. 30.

While the UMass basketball team meets Holy Cross College in Springfield's new Civic Center, their usual habitat will be used by the University's Fine Arts Council for the first Promenade Concert, marking the opening of second semester activities. The concert will feature the popular flamenco guitarist Carlos Montoya in concert with The Springfield Symphony Orchestra under Robert Gutter's direction.

Mr. Gutter has programmed an almost all-Spanish program in honor of the visiting guitar virtuoso, including a performance of Mr. Montoya's own "Suite Flamenca" for guitar and full symphony orchestra. The program, which will be repeated Feb. 11 in Springfield Municipal Auditorium will be light-classical in nature and will include works by Chabrier, de Falla, Benjamin, and Ginastera. In addition, Mr. Montoya will perform a group of works for solo guitar.

A special innovation in tomorrow evening's concert at the University will be a performance of "Carom", a work commissioned and first performed by The Springfield Symphony Orchestra last season and composed by UMass faculty member Robert Stern. While the work does not conform to the all-Spanish flavor of the concert, Conductor Gutter programmed "Caron" at the University so area listeners would have an opportunity to acquaint themselves with this work for orchestra and magnetic tape.

This concert marks the second visit to campus by the Springfield Symphony, the first with Robert Gutter as music director. Remaining tickets for this concert are available from the University's Fine Arts Council, 125 Herter Hall in Amherst, telephone 545-0202, and are priced at $4 (half price to UMass undergrads). Due to the large attendance expected, the Council's box office will remain open until 6 p.m. tomorrow. A box office at Curry Hicks Cage main entrance will open at 6:15 p.m. to handle tickets which still remain.

No Eng. 380F

The English Department is very sorry to announce that because of the sudden illness of Professor Richard Dorson, Director of the Folklore Institute at the University of Indiana, who had accepted an invitation as visitor to UMass, Amherst, English 380F (Folklore in American Civilization) cannot be offered.

Steak & Brew™

IN SOUTH HADLEY

The Greatest Eating & Drinking Public House Ever!

489 GRANBY ROAD

U.S. Route 202

OPEN FOR LUNCH AND DINNER

ALL THE SALAD YOU CAN MAKE.

Help yourself from our huge Salad Carousel™ tables to a mountain of fresh, crisp, mixed green salad. Garnish with bacon bits, cheese, croutons, onions, chopped olives, then ladle on your favorite dressing.

plus a

BONELESS SIRLOIN, N.Y. CUT

ALL FOR JUST

$4.25 small $4.95 medium $5.95 large

STEAKBURGER ON A SEEDED BUN 2.95
TERIYAKI BONELESS CHICKEN BREAST 3.50
SLICED SIRLOIN STEAK 3.95
A BASKET OF GOLDEN FRIED SHRIMP 3.95
BEEF STROGANOFF WITH RICE 4.50
ROAST PRIME RIBS OF BEEF 4.95
STEAK & SHRIMP 5.50 FILET MIGNON 5.95
WHOLE BROILED MAINE LOBSTER 6.95
ALL WITH FRENCH FRIES

THE ABOVE PRICES INCLUDE DRAUGHT BEER OR RED WINE OR SANGRIA

MONDAY & TUESDAY ARE PARTY NIGHTS AT EVERY STEAK & BREW

MON OUR REGULAR $4.95 MED. BONELESS SIRLOIN, N.Y. CUT IS $3.95

TUES ALL YOU PAY FOR OUR REGULAR $4.95 ROAST PRIME RIBS IS $3.95

- An intimate old English Pub, in an atmosphere of deep, rich woods, pewter tankards, kegs and antiques.
- Junior portions for children with all the birch beer they can drink.
- Plus a cocktail lounge and all kinds of drinks.
- Sportjacket or bluejeans—you're always comfortable at Steak & Brew.
- Facilities available for private parties. Telephone (413) 536-3100

Entertainment in the lounge

Steak & Brew™

Also in Farmington, New Haven and Southport, Connecticut.

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

BOARD OF EDITORS

EDITOR IN CHIEF — James E. Gold
MANAGING EDITOR — Nathan Gorenstein
BUSINESS MANAGER — William L. Manburg
EXECUTIVE EDITOR — Stephen G. Tripoli
NEWS EDITOR — Donald J. Bishop
SPORTS EDITOR — William E. Ballou
PHOTO EDITOR — Gib Fullerton
FINE ARTS EDITOR — Robert Nesti

ASST. MANAGING EDITOR — Steve Fine
ADVERTISING MANAGER — Jeanne Bauge
ASST. PHOTO EDITOR — Alan Chapman
ASST. SPORTS EDITOR — Roy Lyons

TODAY'S STAFF

ISSUE EDITOR — Jerry Lazar
NIGHT STAFF — Mona Robitaille
EDITORIAL — Gabe Imperato
SPORTS — George Withers, Steve Smith, Karasu
AD LAYOUT — Jan Auman

Undergraduate newspaper of the University of Massachusetts. The Staff is responsible for its content and no faculty members or administrators read it for accuracy or approval prior to publication.

Unsigned editorials represent the view of this paper. They do not necessarily reflect the views of the faculty, administration, or student body as a whole. Signed editorials, columns, reviews, cartoons, and letters represent the personal views of the authors.

The Collegian subscribes to the Associated Press and the Liberation News Service. Publication of their material does not constitute endorsement.

'Home' Games Away

The Athletic Department has scheduled Tuesday's basketball game against Holy Cross and the upcoming Boston College game to be played at the Springfield Civic Center, 30 miles from campus. And they still have the audacity to call it a "home" game.

The scheduling, which was done last year, has been termed "an experiment" by several high ranking members of the Athletic Department and Athletic Council. Although we will naturally be happy if it works, we fear that the entire plan is doomed to fail.

It is based on the entire neglect of general student interests.

The reasons given for playing in Springfield include the following: providing access to everyone, namely to UMass fans from the Western Massachusetts area who can't get into the Cage; displaying the team to the taxpayers; and attracting better teams to play.

The costs for a typical UMass student to get to Springfield for a game could prove to be prohibitive. A student must pay for bus fare or car expenses (gas and parking) and a ticket. If it was truly a home game in the Cage, the student could walk over or drive over and have free parking and walk in free.

We cautiously look forward to the Holy Cross game.

Bill Manburg

No More Chips

Attention hot dog eaters, the Campus Center coffee shop no longer serves potato chips with a grilled frank.

It has come to my attention, unfortunately I'm not at this time able to reveal my sources, that this delightful snack will only be served with hamburger products. The "tube steak" will be garnished with only a slice of pickle. My source informs me that this cutback was made for economic reasons, exactly what, he was unable to ascertain.

Mr. A. Smith, a noted economic specialist and theorist speculated, on my inquiry, that there are three possible reasons for this cutback. First, there are the obvious factors in dollars and cents. Past studies revealed that from 5 to 7 potato chips were served with each hot dog. If 100 hot dogs were sold each and every day, 500-700 potato chips were served. Potato chips cost from 1/10 of 1¢ to 1/2 of 1¢ per chip, depending on the quantities purchased, size of the chips, and brand name. So, by simple multiplication and addition, based on a 360 day year, between 180 and 1260 dollars will be saved. Now these figures probably don't mean much to the average student, so Smith figured that this would reduce from 1¢ to 6¢ from the yearly campus center tax. I might note, Smith is completely responsible for these figures.

Smith also pointed out that there may be a severe potato shortage sweeping the country, causing the curtailment of potato chip production. I personally find this hard to believe, for only yesterday I was talking with friends in Idaho and Maine, and in the course of our conversations they assured me that this was a bumper crop year for potatoes.

Finally, Smith suggested that speculators might be secretly buying all the nations potatoes, in the hope of selling them to the Russians. When queried by this reporter, the White House refused to comment.

I believe, that the Food Service management simply succumbed to pressure from students demanding noise level reductions in the coffee shop, or from a massive write in campaign from the area's children, demanding an increased supply of potatoes for the making of funny faces.

Bill Manburg is Business Manager of the Collegian.

Don Glickstein

I Came To Drool

I paid my 25¢ and walked into the darkened basement lounge in Moore House. The projector rolled and for the next ten minutes, I oogled at a woman slowly undressing herself, pursing her lips, and giving great spread shots and a simulated masturbation.

Then, we ran the film backwards.

It was my first stag film, and the year was 1969.

Last weekend, Kevin and me and Nancy and Marie and Walter and Jan walked to our local cinema, the one which advertises the Friday night skin flicks.

We were a little early. In fact, we were a little unsure of ourselves, because when we arrived, there were only two other people there—two proverbial, unshaven, beer-bellied dirty old men, who promptly sat in the last row of the theater, aisle seats.

But soon, we were put at ease. The Collegian Business Manager showed up with some of his friends, a couple of Student Senate biggies were there with their girl-friends, and together, we waited for the show to begin, telling each other "come" jokes.

You know "come" jokes:
"Do you want to come with us?"
"Where are you going?"
"We're not going, we're coming."

They began with two cartoons. The first was a social satire on prison conditions at Sing Song prison, where all of the scum (get it?) of society sang pretty songs except for one degenerate who kept trying to escape, until at last, a thoroughly defeated man, he was paroled.

The other cartoon featured the penguin, Chilly Willy, in a story appropriately titled, "Guess Who's Not Coming".

At last, the feature presentation, Orgies of Revenge.

Directed by Peach Yancy, Orgies starred Peter La Pointe as Butch, Emily Upthrow as Marion, John Encumber as Harold, and a lot of others whose names I didn't get. It was filmed on location in Florida.

The plot was simple, yet profound:

John and Ellen have just come in. John begins undressing as Ellen prepares martinis. Before they make love, Ellen screams syllable by syllable.

"Shit. John. You. Just. Love. Me. As. I. Am. An. Easy. Lay."

John protests, arguing that he has to work fast because he is the city's leading television news commentator, and he has to finish before Ellen's roommate, Joan, comes home from Court, where she is the city's leading prosecuting attorney.

Ellen decides to take matters into her own hands.

She arranges a quiet weekend away from the apartment for Joan with two girlfriends. Joan accepts the offer to get away from the crunch of work, and has great difficulty in keeping a straight face.

Cut to a country chateau.

Joan, a redhead, emerges from the car, then Mary Elizabeth, who is tall and brunette, and finally the daughter of the owner of the chateau, Clara, who is blond and European.

Meanwhile, a motorcycle gang zooms up to the chateau. The leader had been unjustly prosecuted by Joan, when Joan had been prosecuting because she was an attorney. Now, he wanted revenge.

The gang comes into the chateau. One guy proceeds to rape Mary Elizabeth in a sitting position. Another rapes Clara. The kid brother of the leader goes into the kitchen and makes something to eat. Butch, the big guy, rapes Joan, and hurts her badly. ("I'm not a virgin, as you may well guess", she indignantly tells the leader, "but I prefer to choose who I screw with".)

The leader accosts Joan.

"Now either you take your clothes off, or I'm going to cut them off", he says menacingly. Joan defiantly flings them off.

(Now that was, undoubtedly the most pisser scene for me, because it reminded me of my pre-pubertal flings with Sophia Loren.)

In the meantime, Mary Elizabeth is still screwing on her chair. The guy is completely tuckered out, so she invites him and the one who was with Clara the Blond European, to try it in the swimming pool.

Butch has disappeared from the scene. Joan is grateful to the leader because he got rid of Butch. Together, they walk out of the chateau onto a convenient mat in the woods, where the leader shows Joan new evidence (as to his innocence), Joan falls in love with him, they decide to marry, and proceed to make heavenly love.

Clara, while all this was going on, had been sobbing on her bear rug. Kid brother, a sensitive and co[illegible] passionate human being, asks,

"Did they hurt you much?"

Clara, realizing that this one is diff[illegible] and purrs, and the two touch each other wi[illegible].

Now comes the villain. The She[illegible] by Clara's father that something wa[illegible] because the phone seemed to be out of order, [illegible] up to the chateau. Joan adroitly slips into her [illegible] suit and assures the Sheriff that nothing is amiss. Mary Elizabeth, however, is getting bum fucked and reverse screwed in the swimming pool, but we are assured that she can take it all.

And what of poor, bestial Butch?

Butch has found the liquor cabinet, and [illegible]ies of Revenge ends with Butch giving one [illegible] lustful shoutfu[illegible] and fainting dead away in a [illegible] of vomit.

Undoubtedly, the [illegible]vie can be improved. Too many t[illegible] we saw [illegible] penises missing their [illegible] corpuscles. The cam[illegible] work was horrendou[illegible] mit, when we see p[illegible], we don't want asses, [illegible] frontal shots.

Pornography, although gross a[illegible] hardly pernicious. Recognizing our [illegible] sexualities in this sexual society through po[illegible]nography is certainly safer than exhibiting our suppressions with violence.

Indeed, in our America, if [illegible] things as sexual objects, [illegible] to favor them.

Don Glickstein is an MDC Editorial Columnist.

Peace With Honor

Letters To The Editor

Demented Points Of View

To The Editor:

This is written as a reply to Don Glickstein's column of January 26.

Don, your listing of Joel Stoneham was good. It is something that is deserving of Mr. Stoneham.

Also, the same goes for President Wood. You are correct in saying that these people foolishly spend our money, as well as money doled out by the taxpayers.

But you fail to mention that the abortion decision made recently by the Supreme Court is just another example of the usurpations made by that court since 1954 (Brown vs. Board of Education). The making (or not making) an abortion laws is something reserved to the States by the 9th and 10th amendments. These liberal abortion laws are also setting the precedence of the federal government's determining where life begins. Next thing you know, the government will try and legally determine where life ends.

Abortion is nothing more than a plot created by subversives which hopes to make human life negligible and cheap. It is really nothing more than murder. From the beginning, the fetus is another human being, struggling to live-first within it's mother's uterus and then, in the outside world.

As far as abortion being a woman's right goes, what about the rights of the unborn child to live? While the woman is not being forced to have an abortion, the child is being forced to undergo a procedure which kills him. And, by choosing to have an abortion, a woman is choosing to have another human being killed. Talk about denying someone their rights, a woman having her child aborted is denying that child the precious gift of life.

Your last paragraph implies that you are ashamed of being an American. What would you rather be, a Russian, a Chinese? Don, if you don't like being an American, go renounce your citizenship and go live behind the Iron Curtain for a year. I am willing to bet that if you were to do such, at the end of that year, if you don't become a Communist official, you will be thankful that such a place exists as the United States of America. You are correct in saying that there is something wrong with the Nixon Administration. What is wrong is that since approximately 1900, sinister forces have twisted our constitution with the hope of dismantling the United States and every other country and setting up a one-world socialist state. Through time and patience they have withered away the checks and balances of our government so badly that the United States is on the brink of falling to totalitarianism. To actually find out what has happened, read Gary Allen's "NONE DARE CALL IT CONSPIRACY". Then you'll be able to understand what is really wrong with the U.S.

One more thing, Don. There are many patriotic Americans left. Unfortunately, they seem to be a minority around UMass. I guess this is why dimented points of view like yours are presented.

Bob Estelle

A Rip Off

To The Editor:

I am a Teaching Assistant in the Art History Department who discovered that all of the final exams and papers for Art 285 that were left outside of the office door so that students could conveniently pick up their work were all ripped off during finals week last semester. I do not know if the motivation for this was greed, a chance to make a fast buck, morbid curiosity or just plain nastiness, but I do know that whoever did this has prevented the students in the [illegible] from seeing their work evaluated and from [illegible] from the suggestions and comments on [illegible] great deal of time was spent. Whoever took papers and exams violated not only academic [illegible] but the rights of students to have their own [illegible] returned to them.

This incident is of course not an isolated one. It fits right into the mentality that deliberately has no respect for the rights and property of others. I am very sorry for those students in Art 285 who were victimized, but moreso for a society that must learn to expect such things.

Ms. Brenda Johnson

D.C. Blooz

To The Editor:

The other night Worcester Dining Commons served turkey, which is generally considered to be one of the "better" (not to be confused with good) dinners. But I didn't have turkey, mashed potatoes with gravy, and all the fixins. Two glasses of milk and a banana was it for me. Why? Because the lines were so fuckin' long that you had to wait a half hour before you could even get close enough to smell the food, never mind taste it!!!

Right at the moment I'm pissed off and hungry. Is this waiting at dinner going to continue in the future, or were these long lines just due to the difficulty of serving turkey in particular? If the people at Worcester find half-hour waits for dinner becoming commonplace, they should complain. Eating at the D. C. is enough of a chore already.

Michael Stephano

Letter To Nixon

To Robert W. Gage:

I think your letter to President Nixon (Jan. 24) was very rude. "It can be understood only as the irresponsibly vengeful reaction to frustration of a petulant madman." Are you frustrated because Mr. McGovern lost the election?

Certainly everyone is entitled to his own opinion. But, if you are trying to make people believe they made a mistake in voting for Mr. Nixon by your derogatory remarks about his method of seeking peace, maybe you should have thought twice before you wrote such an objectionable letter. For me, at least, your letter has had the opposite effect. When someone's entire campaign centers around belittling "the other guy," that person must be inadequate himself.

I would suggest that you read an article written by Sen. Barry Goldwater (in Thursday's Daily Hampshire Gazette). It gives a more subjective and intelligent assessment of the situation.

N. J. Widger

Editorial Points

It was once said that the Bruins could win hockey games without trying–almost out of memory. That seems to be holding true lately, except that they're remembering the way they played ten years ago.

•••

Isn't it ironic that the Faculty Senate meeting last week was delayed because a satire class was being held in the Fac-Sen's auditorium? Sometimes fact is stranger than fiction.

•••

Peace is here supposedly and the draft is over supposedly, which doesn't do anything for those who were killed or maimed by the war.

•••

Is winter back? Tune in tomorrow, same place, same paper.

Student Nigger

To The Editor:

I have recently invented a new game which I feel will be of interest to many members of the UMass community. The game is called STUDENT IS THE NIGGER OF THE WORLD GAME and the rules are rather simple (especially if you are a student). All you need do is state as many ways as you can think of in which the student is treated as nigger (i.e. ways in which the student or young person is treated as a second class citizen.) The person who can think of the most examples wins and as his prize he gets to park his car in V lot and walk from there to his class in the Engineering Bldg.

I'll be a sport and start the game. I have already hinted at one area of student niggerdom (parking assignments); here are a few more: (1) Student salary-part time non-student employees begin for the most part at an hourly rate approaching 3.00–students can not usually make more than 2.50 and almost always begin at the minimum wage for the same work that non-students make almost twice that to start. (2) How about the law which requires out of state students (but not out of state faculty-staff) to register their cars with the police. (3) How about auto insurance in which those under 25 pay a significantly higher rate without regard to their individual driving ability and record. (4) Been stopped by the police for a routine check lately–I bet your father hasn't. (5) Been to the library lately– Undergraduates are discriminated against in countless ways there. (6) etc., etc., etc.

I challenge everyone to play this game with me but let me warn you all--If any non-student, "respectable citizen" type decides to play he wins automatically (Sorry, it's in the rules).

Richard Dunkelberger

Collegian Bias?

To The Editor:

After reading the editorial page of the Daily Collegian for Friday, 1/26/73, I became aware of the need for some sort of shielding to serve as a kind of reader protection from the various forms of spurious radiation emitted from within. I was particularly impressed by the logical argument presented by Mr. Glickstein concerning the Food Services. After all, as a member of a publication that spends over $80,000 of student funds for its unquestionably valuable, unslanted services to the student body, one can see why $347.00 spent by the Food Services to provide those who frequent the dining commons with an on-the-spot of the daily menu would be considered an outrageous, flagrant misuse of funds.

Although the Student Activities Fee from which the MDC derives its existence is also a mandatory fee, it differs from the dining commons by providing the populace with a means of venting their pent-up frustrations, a far more valuable service than feeding them, and one of which Mr. Glickstein takes full advantage.

Mr. Glickstein, I wish to commend you and Mr. Bryant for keeping the longstanding tradition of the Daily Collegian of objectively presenting the public with both sides of every issue, thereby providing us with an unbiased viewpoint upon which we can steadfastly depend.

Scott D. Hankin

We Seek Your Help

Dear President Nixon:

Frustration, exasperation, and outrage are manifested in the daily lives of parents of institutionalized mentally retarded residents of Massachusetts. As President of an active, independent, concerned parents' group, I seek the support of the President of the United States of America in a serious attempt to eradicate hypocrisy.

We request your personal involvement in two ways. First, we ask you to initiate a "domestic Marshall Plan" for the institutionalized mentally retarded. The term, borrowed from Whitney Young, embraces a minority group which is diverse: it is composed of males and females of all races, culture groups, and creeds. This group suffers the dual indignity of discrimination and dehumanization.

Many of us participated in World War II. Some of us have visited post-war Europe and have witnessed the miracles wrought by the Marshall Plan. We are excited at the prospect of meaningful changes which can be affected by the implementation of a "domestic Marshall Plan".

Second, we ask you to visit Belchertown State School–within minutes of Smith and Amherst Colleges, places familiar to you. Visit the residents who have committed no crime, yet are forced to languish. Visit the sons and daughters of your constituents–Americans who are being denied the right of protection afforded by the first, fifth, eighth, and fourteenth amendments to the Constitution of the United States of America. As an example, one-third of the Belchertown State School population (of 950) is being denied the right to education. Visit the voiceless-whose parents are familiar with the resolutions adopted by the United Nations General Assembly on December 20, 1971: "Declaration for the Rights of Mentally Retarded Persons".

Visit! Note carefully with all your sense, then retire to the comfort of the White House, Camp David, or your San Clemente or Key Biscayne homes and imagine your son or daughter, your grandchild, even yourself, as a resident in that uncomfortable, dehumanizing environment. Visit!

We seek your active involvement.

Benjamin Ricci, President
Belchertown Friends Association

LAFAYETTE
SEIDEN SOUND RADIO ELECTRONICS

JANUARY CLEARANCE SALE

JANUARY IS THE TIME OF THE YEAR FOR CLEARANCES AND WE'RE LOOKING TO MAKE ROOM FOR NEW SHIPMENTS OF STEREO EQUIPMENT AND THOUSANDS OF OTHER ITEMS. THE SHELVES MUST BE CLEARED OF DEMONSTRATORS, TRADE INS, DISCONTINUED MODELS, MANY ARE ONE OF A KIND, BUT ALL EXCEPT USED ARE FULLY GUARANTEED. SO IF YOU'RE LOOKING FOR A GREAT BUY IN STEREO COMPONENTS, TAPE RECORDERS, HEADPHONES, RECORD PLAYERS, ETC.

NOW IS THE TIME

HURRY! QUANTITIES LIMITED
All items subject to prior sale

SPEAKERS • RECEIVERS • TAPE DECKS • HEADPHONES • RECORD CHANGERS

RADIO, PHONO, TAPE COMBINATIONS

	Regular	SALE
PANASONIC RE-7430 3 PIECE AM-FM STEREO RADIO	599.95	69.00
BSR RT530 AM-FM STEREO RECEIVER WITH SPEAKERS AND 31 OZ CHANGER	179.95	139.00
PANASONIC SE840 AM-FM PHONO	139.95	99.00
LAFAYETTE LRK-855 8 TRACK RECORDER/PLAYER	199.95	175.00
AM-FM, ORIG. $228.00-49-025 1W
PANASONIC RS257 AM-FM PHONO SYSTEM WITH CASSETTE RECORDER	329.95	239.00
PANASONIC RF800 8 TRACK PLAYER WITH AM-FM RADIO	179.95	149.00
PANASONIC SE990 AM-FM PHONO WITH CASSETTE RECORDER	199.95	175.00
PANASONIC SE-1077 POP UP PHONO WITH AM-FM RADIO	219.95	149.00
ELECTROPHONIC RADIO-PHONO-TAPE	149.95	129.95
ELECTROPHONIC PRTG RADIO-PHONO-TAPE	199.95	169.95
ELECTROPHONIC PRT71 HI-FI COMPACT	199.95	169.95

TURNTABLES

	Regular	SALE
AR-XA 2-SPEED TURNTABLE	92.00	79.00
FISHER 802	169.00	85.00
DUAL CS16 1214	124.50	89.00
FISHER 202	129.95	69.00

10% to 30% Off All Demo Turntables

	REGULAR	SALE
SCOTCH 150-1800 REELS	$4.11	1.99
MEMOREX C-60 CASSETTES	1.99	1.59
MEMOREX C-90 CASSETTES	2.99	1.99
MEMOREX C-120 CASSETTES	3.99	2.99
SONY C-60 CASSETTES	1.49	.99
SONY C-90 CASSETTES	2.79	1.4

PIONEER SE-30

STEREO HEADPHONES

Save $15.51

Regular $34 Now $19.50

PIONEER

SA500/TX500 50 WATT

STEREO AMPLIFIER-TUNER COMBINATION

NOW P $178.00 COMPLETE

1972 FAIR TRADE PRICE $239.90

PIONEER T-3300
Stereo Cassette Tape Deck
REGULAR PRICE $150.
NOW $98.00

PIONEER SA-600
Integrated Stereo Amplifier

PIONEER TX-600
AM-FM Stereo Tuner

SAVE $114
SA600/TX600 100 WATT STEREO AMPLIFIER TUNER
REG. $379 NOW $265.00 COMPLETE

PIONEER SALE

PIONEER SA-800
Integrated Stereo Amplifier

PIONEER TX-800
AM-FM Stereo Tuner

160 WATTS STEREO AMPLIFIER AND TUNER
SAVE $151 1972 Fair Trade Price $489.00 NOW $338.00 Complete

PIONEER SA-1000
Integrated Stereo Amplifier

PIONEER TX-1000
AM-FM Stereo Tuner

170 WATT STEREO AMPLIFIER & TUNER
SAVE $224 1972 FAIR TRADE PRICE $659.00 NOW $435.00 COMPLETE

TAPE RECORDERS AND TAPE DECKS

	Regular	SALE
SONY TC127 CASSETTE TAPE DECK	150.95	129.00
LLOYDS 8 TRACK RECORD DECK	114.95	89.00
AKAI-280DSS 4 CHANNEL, 2 CHANNEL REVERSE DECK	649.95	499.00
AKAI-GX-365 SOLENOID, 3 HEAD, 3 MOTOR REEL TO REEL DECK	649.95	549.00
SONY 650 DELUXE REEL TO REEL SOLENOID DECK	499.95	349.00
AKAI CR80SS-6 CHANNEL 8 TRACK, RECORD-PLAY DECK	249.95	179.00
AKAI-CS350 CASSETTE DECK	159.95	119.00
SONY TC160 CASSETTE DECK	219.95	159.00
SONY TC163 REVERSING CASSETTE DECK	269.95	189.00
TEAC-A24 CASSETTE DECK	179.95	119.00
LAFAYETTE RK520 CASSETTE DECK WITH 20 WATT STEREO AMPLIFIER	159.95	119.00
LAFAYETTE RK760A CASSETTE DECK	124.60	89.00
SONY CR110 CASSETTE RECORDER WITH AM-FM RADIO AND SPEAKERS	299.95	239.00
AKAI-GX60H DELUXE CASSETTE DECK	239.95	189.00
FISHER RC-800 CASSETTE-DOLBY DECK	269.95	129.00
CRAIG 2621 PORTABLE-BATTERY AND ELECTRIC CASSETTE RECORDER	41.95	31.00
PANASONIC RF2490 AM-FM CASSETTE RECORDER STEREO	149.95	109.00
TOYO CSM502 CASSETTE STEREO RECORDER PLAYER	[illegible]	49.50

STEREO RECEIVERS, TUNERS AMPLIFIERS

	Regular	SALE
LAFAYETTE LR100 50 WATT AM-FM RECEIVER	149.95	119.00
FISHER 301 140 WATT AM-FM RECEIVER	349.95	229.00
FISHER 401 150 WATT AM-FM RECEIVER, REMOTE CONTROL	449.95	249.00
FISHER 601 4 CHANNEL 200 WATT RECEIVER - 2 ONLY	599.95	299.00
LAFAYETTE LR1500 150 WATT AM-FM RECEIVER	329.95	269.00
FISHER 202 100 WATT AM-FM RECEIVER	299.95	185.00
KENWOOD 2120 50W AM-FM RECEIVER	189.95	139.00
SANYO DCR 2000K 4 CH. RECEIVER	249.95	199.00
PANASONIC SA5500 70W AM-FM RECEIVER	249.95	219.00
SANYO DCX-3300K 4 CH. REC.	349.95	275.00

SPEAKER SYSTEMS

	Regular	SALE
PIONEER CSX-500 3 WAY SYSTEM	159.95	109.00
LAFAYETTE CRITERION RS 3 WAY SYSTEM	[illegible]	64.00
LAFAYETTE ES-85 5 WAY ELECTROSTATIC SYSTEM	69.95	49.00
PIONEER MODEL 100 2 WAY SYSTEM	99.95	66.00
KLH MODEL 6 2 WAY SYSTEM	144.00	95.00
PIONEER CS44 8" 2 WAY SYSTEM	74.95	59.00
A.R.-2AX 3 WAY SYSTEM	128.00	106.00
A.R.-3A 3 WAY DELUXE SYSTEM	250.00	207.00
INTER AUDIO-4000 "BY BOSE" 100 WATT 2 WAY SYSTEM	198.00	139.00
INTER AUDIO-MODEL 3000 "BY BOSE" 75 WATT 3 WAY SYSTEM	104.95	79.00
FISHER XP65 3 WAY SYSTEM	109.95	69.00

NEW HOURS
MONDAY - SATURDAY
9:30-5:30
FRIDAY EVE. 'TIL 10 P.M.

THIS IS ONLY A SAMPLE LISTING OF OUR SALE ITEMS - MANY MORE IN EVERY CATEGORY AT SIMILAR SAVINGS.

LAFAYETTE RADIO ELECTRONICS
ASSOCIATE STORES SEIDEN SOUND

OWNED AND OPERATED BY SEIDEN SOUND

Amherst Store
15 E. Pleasant St.
549-1105

OTHER STORES - PITTSFIELD, MASS. COLONIE, N.Y., ALBANY, N.Y., SCHENECTADY, N.Y., GLEN FALLS, N.Y.

Wanted: A Pair Of Loving Hands

By DON GLICKSTEIN

Abbott Chrsiman grew up in Northampton, became a directing major at the Boston University theatre, and left school two years later.

He's a Special Student at UMass now.

His deportment seems unexceptional; his build is average.

But Abbott Chrisman has been doing a lot of thinking lately and he's come up with some ideas.

"What we have, what we see the world with, how we understand it. I want to make people think about perception," Chrisman explains.

And that's exactly what a lot of people have been doing this past week at his Student Union Art Gallery Show, Wanted: A Pair of Loving Hands-An Exploration of Non-Visual Perception.

Visitors to the Gallery are warned to remove their hats, coats, and shoes upon entering. After donning a blindfold, they follow and feel their way along a maze of texture, shape, and size.

"It is the purpose of this tactile gallery", the catalog reads, "to rob the participants of their vision, to make them realize that they have become partially blind with their hands."

The tactile substances (which should remain an unprinted surprise) reach out at the visitor from all sides. Soft and hard, round and angled.

Is it art? Christman says that art is difficult to define and whatever it is, is irrelevant to the purposes of the exhibition. He tells the story of a girl who entered the gallery, looked around, and left, indignantly saying, "I don't see any art." For the record, the visitor can feel one piece of traditional sculpture.

Wanted: A Pair of Loving Hands will continue at the Student Union Art Gallery through Feb. 9, weekdays from 1-5 p.m. and 7-10 p.m., and Saturdays from 1-5 p.m. Partially financed by the Fine Arts Council, the exhibition is free.

.....

As one proceeds through the exhibit, the blindfold, on which eyes are painted, limits perception to a very moving and touching experience. (MDC photos by Steve Smith)

.....

COUNSELING
"Edge of Gorman"
B-2 Gorman
1-9 p.m. — 5-2947
CALL — DROP BY

NOW OPEN
Mystique Moustache
PROFESSION MEN'S HAIRSTYLING
By Susan Perkins
For Appointment
Call 549-3667
The Carriage Shop AMHERST

BRIDGE TOURNAMENT
SATURDAY, FEB. 3
Two Sessions Starting Promptly at 9:30 a.m.
CC RMS. 905 and 909
All grads & undergrads eligible to qualify for Regional Intercollegiate Championship
ACBL sanctioned
Entrance fee $1.00
Call 546-9531 for res. & info.
ALSO:
WEEKLY DUPLICATE PLAY TONITE at 7:00
and Thursdays at 7
Throughout the Semester

BLUEWALL
Jan. 30 - Feb. 3
Tues. Movies
Wed. "Some of my best friends" . . .
Thurs. Coffeehouse
Fri. Featherbed
Sat. Rainbow Grease
9 p.m. - 1 a.m.
BLUEWALL
Campus Center

Television Tonight

5:00 JIM AND TAMMY (18)
MISTER ROGERS NEIGHBORHOOD (24) (57)
SUPERMAN (27)
THE BEVERLY HILLBILLIES (30)
GOMER PYLE (40)
5:30 HOGAN'S HEROES (22) (30)
THE ELECTRIC COMPANY (24) (57)
GOMER PYLE (27)
NEWSBEAT NEWS (40)
5:55 WHAT'S HAPPENING (3)
6:00 NEWS, WEATHER, SPORTS (3)
13 O'CLOCK HIGH (18)
BIG NEWS 90 (22)
HODGEPODGE LODGE (24) (57)
PETTICOAT JUNCTION (27)
TO TELL THE TRUTH (30)
WILD WILD WEST (40)
6:30 CBS EVENING NEWS (3)
NBC NIGHTLY NEWS (22) (30)
DESIGNING WOMAN (24)
THE EARLY SHOW—"Son of Fury" (27)
THE NURSING PROCESS (57)
6:55 NEWSBEAT NEWS WITH JOHN DEEGAN (40)
7:00 AFTER DINNER MOVIE—"Bridge to the Sun" (3)
DICK VAN DYKE (18)
BIG NEWS (22)
OPEN LINE (24)
NEWS EARLY REPORT (30)
ABC EVENING NEWS (40)
LOUIS LYONS NEWS AND COMMENT (57)
7:30 LET'S MADE A DEAL (8)
STAND UP AND CHEER (18)
THE HOLLYWOOD SQUARES (22)
THE MOUSE FACTORY (30)
POLKA WITH FRANK KNIGHT (40)
THE REPORTERS (57)
8:00 THE ROOKIES (8) (40)
THE PRISONER (18)
ROWAN AND MARTIN'S LAUGH-IN (22) (30)
THE HEIFETZ CONCERT (24) (57)
8:30 THRILLER (27)
9:00 HERE'S LUCY (3)
ABC MONDAY NIGHT MOVIE—"Lawrence of Arabia" Part 2 (8) (40)
THE 700 CLUB (18)
NBC MONDAY NIGHT AT THE MOVIES—"Diary of a Mad Housewife" (22) (30)
THE BIRTH AND DEATH OF A STAR (24) (57)
10:00 THE NEW BILL COSBY SHOW—Guests: Robert Culp and William Conrad (3)
THE STATE OF CONNECTICUT (24)
NEWS (27)
MARTIN AGRONSKY EVENING EDITION (57)
10:30 PEYTON PLACE (27)
A REPORTERS SPECIAL—The Springfield Mayoralty Race (57) (24)
10:35 MARTIN AGRONSKY: Evening Edition (57)
11:00 NEWS, WEATHER, SPORTS (3)
ACTION NEWS (8)
NEWS (18)
NEWS, WEATHER, SPORTS (22) (30)
NEWSBEAT NEWS (40)
11:05 JANAKI (24)
11:30 STARLIGHT MOVIE—"Mississippi Gambler" (3)
ABC WIDE WORLD OF ENTERTAINMENT—"Alan King in Las Vegas" (8) (40)
THE TONIGHT SHOW (22) (30)

Draft Counselors Still Needed

With the draft apparently ended, Draft Counseling Services has called an urgent meeting of all campus draft counselors for tonight at 7:00 p.m. in 428 S.U.

According to Gil Salk, Coordinator of DCS, it is crucial that counselors be aware that the Selective Service System will continue to operate even without the power to induct, and that the power to induct can be reinstituted at any time.

It would be a great mistake, Salk stated, if counselors assumed that they were no longer needed, for people will still be required to register at age 18, lottery numbers will still be drawn each year, registrants will continue to be called for physicals, and classifications will be given out.

All this will ensure that there will be a fully processed group of potential inductees in the event that the draft is again needed. The great danger now, Salk warns, is that people will get too casual about getting 1-A classifications, allow their appeal rights to go by, and find themselves caught short if induction orders start being issued again.

Salk's statements were made in response to the news that Melvin Laird had ended the draft. Laird announced that he had instructed the SSS to cancel all outstanding induction orders, and notified the Armed Forces that no new induction orders would be issued. This was seen as a move toward an all-volunteer army.

There was nothing in Laird's directive, however, which would prevent the draft from being reinstituted at any time should Richard Nixon deem it necessary. The law giving him power to induct does not expire until the end of June.

Salk urges anyone who receives an undesirable classification to write a letter of appeal to his draft board at once, and to immediately seek the advice of a competent draft counselor. He points out that appeals must be made within 15 days of the date of mailing of the classification. Copies of the appeal letter should be retained, and it should be sent by certified mail, return receipt requested.

Draft counseling can be obtained without cost from draft Counseling Services in room 430 S.U.

Town Residents Must Be Listed

Notices have been sent to all Heads of Residences and Presidents of Fraternities and Sororities at the University relative to street listing of residents now in process as prescribed by Chapter 51 of the Massachusetts General Laws:

Every city and town in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts is required by Chapter 51, Section 4 of the General Laws to "annually in January or February visit every building in their towns, and, after diligent inquiry, make true lists containing, as nearly as they can ascertain, the name, age or date of birth, occupation, nationality if not a citizen of the U.S., and residence on January 1st in the preceding year and in the current year, of every person 17 years of age or older, residing in town.

A supply of street listing postcards has been left with each Head of Residence and Presidents of Fraternities and Sororities. All occupants of University residences who are registered to vote in Amherst or who wish to claim Amherst as legal residence should complete such a card and return it immediately to the Town Clerk of Amherst. Failure to do so on the part of registered voters of the Town will result in their being dropped from the Amherst Voter List.

Any questions pertaining to street listing should be directed to the Town Clerk - 253-3885.

Room-To-Move Offers Bio-energetic Workshops

Room-to-Move, continuing its program to broaden its scope to include alternative experiences for personal and spiritual growth, is again offering on-going Bio-energetic workshops led by Gene Silver.

–A group meeting weekly for a ten week series, taking time and energy to discover, on a bodily as well as a mental level, who you are as well as how you function in a developing community with others.

–To realize that you exist in your body as well as in your mind.

–To realize that your body is a neglected source of rich insight, feeling, energy.

–To realize that getting in touch with your body and its natural movement means becoming more "grounded", gaining a greater sense of reality, living more in the present instead of dwelling on "how things ought to be".

Gene Silver is a practicing therapist who was trained by Dr. Alexander Lowen and Dr. George Greenberg of the Institute of Bio-Energetic Analysis in New York. In addition, her background includes work in body movement, Yoga, Gestalt, sensory awareness, plus a more recently developed interest in meditation and its implications in terms of personal growth.

Gene will be available at the Room-to-Move office on Wednesday, Jan. 31 from 9-12 a.m. and from 1-3 p.m. for personal interviews with those interested in participating in the groups. The ten week series will be limited to 12 students and no one will be elected without a preliminary interview. If you are interested, but cannot come on Wednesday, call the Room-to-Move office to set up an alternate appointment, 545-0400.

Head Of Residence Info

Information on applications for Head of Residence and Resident Director positions for the 1973-74 academic year is available at the Information Desk just inside the ramp entrance, second floor of Whitmore Administration Building. Head of Residence positions are full-time, twelve-month professional appointments. Resident Director positions are part-time service assistantships, September through May, available to students enrolled in the Graduate School. The deadline for all application materials to be returned is March 1, 1973.

Course Info

#127359 CAS 100 - Preparation for Foreign Language Study - Mrs. Fata - MWF 11:15.

Organization: Small lecture - discussion with maximum student participation.

Aim: This course is designed for students who have experienced difficulty in learning a foreign language because of weakness in their English language skills. The course is divided into four main parts: the nature of language; language as a social and cultural phenomenon; the comparative structures of languages (with major emphasis on English grammar); the way in which sounds are produced. The course also attempts to aid students in analyzing their own reactions to foreign language study in order to help them develop positive strategies for learning another language.

Readings: George O. Curme; English Grammar; W. Nelson Francis, The English Language, various other books will be placed on reserve for use by the class.

Requirements: weekly reports and writing exercises.

Pre-requisites: none.

ART 104, "Dialogues in Art", is an approved "C" Distribution course. Through an error in the registration schedule booklet, core designation was not listed. There are many openings in the Studio sections. Students wishing to add Art 104 should sign up with Jim Wozniak, Room E-24 Machmer Hall, CASIAC.

Walter Matthau Carol Burnett
"Pete 'n' Tillie"
All about love and marriage!
Geraldine Page
"Honeymoon's over... it's time to get married."
Shown Daily at 7:00 & 9:00 - Rated - PG -

LADY SINGS THE BLUES
"DIANA ROSS DELIVERS THE KIND OF PERFORMANCE THAT WINS OSCARS!"
"DIANA ROSS—AHH, DIANA ROSS! SHE DOES A MARVELOUS JOB!"
(R) SHOWN AT 7:00 & 9:30

Campus Cinemas
AMHERST-HADLEY LINE
DOLLAR NIGHT!
Every Monday
Everyone $1.00

PETER O'TOOLE ALASTAIR SIM ARTHUR LOWE
THE RULING CLASS
"Peter O'Toole is Funny, Distrubing, Devastating." — Time Mag.
"A STYLISH COMEDY THAT IS BRILLIANT AND IMAGINATIVE! A tour de force that makes superlative comic history...Two movie performances by Arthur Lowe and Alastair Sim that make the film worth seeing twice." — REX REED
PG — SHOWN AT 7:00 & 9:30

"THE ANDROMEDA STRAIN"
Mon., Jan. 29 7 & 9:30
S.U.B.
75¢

TONIGHT - Double Feature - TONIGHT
BEATLES'
"First Hurrah"
concert film — plus
W. C. FIELDS
"You Can't Cheat An Honest Man"
with Edgar Bergen and Charley McCarthy
TONITE! (Fri.) THOMPSON 104 at 7 - 9 - 11

Outreach Places Student Interns

National politics has been a popular program for years with students constantly running in and out of senators' and representatives' offices in the state, as well as Washington. Outreach coordinator, Bill Burke, recently toured the offices of members of the House of Representatives from Massachusetts and one from California, in order to place interns from the University in the service of these Congressmen in Washington and Massachusetts. Congressman Ronald V. Dellums, from the 7th Congressional District of California, Berkley and Oakland has placed Kindreth Taylor on his staff in Washington to accept the responsibility of working for a deep understanding and commitment to coalition politics. From Massachusetts Congressman Robert Drinan, recently re-elected to his second term in the House, is placing Steven Thoma on his district office staff in Waltham for the Spring Semester. The Congressman feels that the nature of his district office operation, which primarily concerns the distribution of federal funds to cities and towns, and involves communities in federal programs, is probably the most important part of his work with the Congress. The work the intern provides will serve as a valuable asset to the Congressman's work and also be a meaningful learning opportunity for the intern.

After a long uphill battle for a House seat, Gerry E. Studds was elected by the 12th Congressional District of Massachusetts to serve in the Congress for the upcoming term. Although only recently elected, he was contacted by the Center for Outreach and stated that he was very anxious to create an intern program for his office in Washington. Janet Shriber will be employed in Congressman Studds' new office this semester. Another recently elected Congressman, Joe Moakley, who defeated Louise Day Hicks for the right to sit in Congress and represent the 9th Congressional District, has also expressed a desire to create an intern program. He will be taking Peter Lynch, Mark Doyle and Richard Pierce with him to Washington this term as intern-assistants.

•

Congressmen Silvio Conte of the 1st Congressional District and James Burke of the 11th District, have placed William Higgins and Dennis Arouca, respectively, in their Washington offices as intern for the coming semester as well. Finally through the further struggles of the Outreach program, Congresswoman Margret Heckler and Congressman Michael Harrington have placed University students on their staffs in both Washington and Massachusetts. Representative Heckler will have Bert Forsberg in Washington and Thomas Pontes in her district office in Fall River, as well as Joseph Byrnes in Taunton. Representative Harrington will have James Aven, Joseph Cleary and Catherine Cole in Washington and Robert Oborne, Kevin Kinnally and Stephen Reardon in Salem.

Textbook Store Hours

Monday	January 29	9:00-9:00
Tuesday	January 30	9:00-9:00
Wednesday, January 31 to Tuesday, February 6		9:00-5:30
Remainder of the semester, weekdays		8:30-4:30
Saturdays (Feb. 3, 10, 17)		10:00-2:00

Free Bus Service In Progress

No-fare bus transportation for UMass is a reality, with on-campus routes beginning with the first day of spring semester classes, Thursday, Jan. 25, and off-campus routes scheduled to begin Monday, Feb. 12.

"On-campus" routes include service toward North Amherst, to provide transportation for residents in apartment complexes in the vicinity of North Village, UMass housing for married students, on North Pleasant St.

In this pilot project partially funded by the federal government, UMass will show how many automobile commuters will leave their vehicles home if public transportation is available, at no-fare. The University will also use parking regulations on campus to encourage the use of buses.

Ten regularly scheduled buses and three back-up buses will serve three routes on and near the campus, and two off-campus from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily. Buses will regularly travel the on-campus routes to dormitories, commuter parking lots, and housing adjacent to campus. The off-campus routes will be north to Sunderland, and southeast to serve the center of Amherst and Belchertown Road (Route 9).

To support the project, a grant of $475,441 from the U.S. Urban Mass Transportation Administration is being supplemented by $157,728 (in money, labor, and services) from UMass, and $30,000 (in money and leased buses) -from the Student Senate.

Air and noise pollution reduction devices will be installed in all buses by the second semester of operation.

Though the federally sponsored project will last only 19 months, UMass is committed to carrying on with bus service, in an attempt to alleviate traffic situations on and near the Amherst campus.

The urban-like character of the campus--about 28,000 people on 300 acres (the heart of the campus)--will give federal project officials a chance to see if no-fare bus transportation could help alleviate traffic problems in cities. Approximately 16,000 cars are registered to park at UMass.

Besides measuring the possible shift from private cars to public buses, the project will estimate the benefits and costs of these shifts to bus users and non-users, to the University and to the Town of Amherst. It will also measure community attitudes toward public transportation.

Buses will be available at seven to 20-minute intervals on intra-campus route stops, and at 30-minute intervals on off-campus route stops.

This transportation project increases bus service substantially for the University community. Since 1969 the UMass Student Senate has provided buses in major classroom and dormitory areas on campus; and students have been able to obtain no-fare bus passes to commute on commercial lines to classes at Mount Holyoke, Smith, Amherst, and Hampshire Colleges, and UMass. But now the no-fare service will extend to apartment complexes along Routes 116 and 9.

Health Service Hours

The Out-Patient Clinic at the Health Center is held on weekdays from 8:00 a.m. to noon, and from 1:00 p.m. to 4:45 p.m. Although you can see a physician or nurse during these hours by coming to the Health Center, you are encouraged to make an appointment to avoid a possible long wait. The appointment number is 545-0057.

For urgent problems only you can come on Saturdays between 8:00 a.m. and 11:30 a.m. There is, of course, 24 hour emergency care. Either come in or call 545-2671.

Also, if someone you know is staying at the Health Center in the In-Patient Clinic, you can visit him/her on weekdays between 6:15 p.m. and 8:15 p.m. On weekends, the hours are 3:15 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. and 6:15 p.m. to 8:15 p.m.

If you wish to make an appointment with Mental Health, simply call 545-2337. The hours there are weekdays from 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.

The Whvy Experience
94point7on FM

WANTED
PART-TIME Cashiers
and Stock person
for the new
People's Market
Bring your own application or a short resume to the Student Senate Office.

MDC CLASSIFIED

REFRIGERATORS

Brand new — Made by Delmonico - 5 year guarantee - free delivery - 3 cubic foot $75 - 5 cubic foot $79. Call Gary - 1015. JFK 546-7630.

DATING SERVICE

MATCH IS THE FIVE COLLEGE DATING SERVICE — A NEW CONCEPT IN MEETING NEW FRIENDS. SEND FOR FREE QUESTIONNAIRE: MATCH, BOX 759, AMHERST. tf1-30

SERVICES

Experienced model will do all types of work for photographers, artists, whatever. Call Diane at 665-1200. 1/31

FOR RENT

Available now, 8 bedroom Colonial in quiet country. Wendell Center. All remodeled. Call 256-8096 days, 253-2162 nites. tf2/2

PERSONAL

Hey big sis, you're not getting older, you're getting better! Happy 22 and happy day. Live, little sis, Terry. tf1/29

BISEXUAL, HOMOSEXUAL. Anyone with questions or wanting general information call 586-2811. Ask for Paul, eve. tf2/2

Anyone witnessing Dec. 10 midnite wt. 63 Ply. Wgn. that was run off road on N. Pleasant and assault-arrest of driver, call 584-6372. tf1/30

L.M. If loving you is wrong, we don't want to be white. 1/29

S. Jacunski contact B. Mager at 253-9066 — concerns Larry Markos. tf2/1

Rural Gay (Read Honest) Commune needs few more beautiful freak people to get on with it. P. O. Box 725, Amherst, Mass. tf1-29

ROOMMATE WANTED

Fem. roommate wanted, Puffton VII. Approx. $70/mo. Call Beth or Karen, 549-6509. tf1/31

F. roommate needed for sunny 5-rm. apt. in Florence. Own rm., $67.50 & $10 util. I like animals, have a cat. Call Cindy, 584-2273. tf1/30

FOR SALE

Skis — Hart Javelin XXL, 2T5 CM with marker heel and Miller tec. $50. Also Lange standard boots, size 9-1/2, $40. Nordica boots, size 10, $25. Call 6-5022. tf1/30

Med. size portable typewriter, very good condition, Underwood Olivetti, $40. A pr. of cross country skis and poles, $25.00. 665-2630. tf2/2

Brand new down sleeping bag, with carrying bag, $40 or best offer. Call Joanne, 549-6871 after 6.

Stereo — 50 watt amp., Garrard turntable, mag. cart., 2 Criterion speakers, $100. Call 253-5072 after 4 p.m. tf1/29

Double bed, good condition, sm. desk, Oriental rug, couch, 1 Toyota tire, good spare. Call Chuck at 256-6681 after 8. All items reasonable. tf1/31

10 meal ticket for sale cheap. Call 545-2361, Rm. 401. tf1/29

Lange Comps. ski boots for sale, size 9, with Lange Flo, only used twice. Asking $70. Call 546-5461. tf2/5

Double bed, good condition. Call 549-6821. tf1/31

New Delmonico refrig., 3.5 cu. ft., guarantee, $60. Carolyn, 549-0063. tf2/1

For sale, 10 meal ticket. Best offer. Call 6-5781. tf1/30

Waterbeds: $18.95, 5-year factory guaranteed, all colors, king & queen sizes. Waterbed heaters $27.50, 546-9161 afternoons & evenings. tf2/2

For sale cheap, must sell this 15 meal ticket to stay in school. (male). $195 or best offer. Call Paul at 253-7550, won't last! 1/31

For sale — meal ticket, 10 meal plan. Call 6-1174. tf1/30

Nivico SRP — 671E turntable with Shure cartridge. $40 or best offer. Call Charlie at 546-6648. tf2/2

Portable TV, Whouse, 19-inch. New tubes and circuit repair. Cleaned inside and out, ex. picture, $40. Call 532-0473. tf1/31

Meal ticket — 10 meal plan. Call Terry, 546-7438. tf1/31

FOR SALE

We buy and sell used Gibson, Fender, Martin guitars, banjos and amps. Also new guitars at low prices. The Guitar Workshop, North. 586-1766. tf5/11

Att. ski rack for trunk of a car, complete with locks and keys. 1 yr. old in exc. cond., $20. No phone, come to #66 Colonial Village. tf1/29

Harman Kardon, Citation 11, pre-amp, perfect condition, 5 mos. old. $200 firm. 253-9611 eves. tf1-30

10 Meal Ticket for sale, call Bill at, 546-6450. tf2/1

H Lot sticker for sale $5. 256-8098. tf1/29

For sale, office typewriter, IBM electric. Please call Bill at 6-6808. tf1-29

Typewriter, sec. model — good condit., $50. Used electric guitar also up for grabs — $80. Call Tom at 253-9883. tf1/31

AR turntable base, dustcover cartridge included, all in excellent condition, $75. Call 546-7002, ask for Dave, keep trying. tf1-30

Portable T.V., G.E. 18" black & white with stand UHF-VHF in very good condition $50. Call 256-6617, after 5:30. tf1/30

Bass cabinets (2) w/ev. Speakers ($150), cab. for 2 speakers (15"), Dynaco head (120), Akai X150-D tape deck ($75). Call, 549-6425, Kent. tf2/2

Hoover portable washing machine. One year old. Best offer. 549-6684. tf1/31

TO SUBLET

Apt. in Belchertown $163.00 p/o. Lease ends June 1, dbl. bed and other furnishings. Call 546-4779. tf1-30

1 bedroom apt. $185, Cliffside apts. Sunderland, furnished, dishwa., 3rd floor, faces woods, call Wally, work 545-0233, Home 665-4770, D4. tf1/29

2 bedroom townhouse in Amherst $230/mo., util. incl., $175 reduced summer rate. Available Feb. 1. Call, 253-3254. tf1/31

MISCELLANEOUS

Commuters! A limited number of lockers are available for personal use this semester. First come; first served basis. Jan. 25, 26, 29 and 30, Rm. 112 C.C. 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., $3.00 key deposit required. 1/30

HELP WANTED

Overseas Jobs for students — Australia, Europe, S. America, Africa. Most professions, summer or full time, expenses paid, sightseeing. Free information, write, TWR Co., Dept. Q3, 2550 Telegraph Ave., Berkeley, Ca. 94704. tf2-6

Counselors for co-ed campus in Berkshires. Vacancies: Head Waterfront, Special Events, Athletic Director, Group Leaders, Tennis, Golf, Waterskiing, Dance, Guitars & folk singing, Radio station Director, Rocketry, wrestling, Arts & Crafts, General Bunk Counselors. Contact Paul Krouner, 44 Sagamore Rd., Worcester, Mass. 01609. tf1-30

Receptionist-Dental Assistant for Modern Ortho. Office. Experience preferred — not essential. Call 586-0555. tf2/1

Part time desk clerk night auditor, experience preferred, good with figures, apply in person, Howard Johnson's Motor Lodge, Hadley. tf1-30

RIDE NEEDED

Need ride any weekend to and/or from area of Durham, N.H. Call 545-2304, Lee, Rm. 401. tf1/29

RIDE WANTED

Attn. cars from Rt. 9, Pelham Rd., Main St. — need a ride for 8 o'clock class — I'm on Main by Southeast. Please respond! Call 256-6203, Susan. tf1/29

Ride needed to Westfield or Vic. Mondays 5:00 - 6:00, $. Call Cathy, 549-6460. tf1/31.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Share room in 2 bdr. apt. $61.25/mo., all modern; utilities incl. in Amherst 253-3034. tf1-30

Female, own room in luxury apt., grad student preferred. 1 mile from Campus. Call 253-7874 days, 549-6556 evenings. tf1-30

Your own upstairs rm., with bath & phone in 2 bdrm. Puffton Apt. 1 or 2 m/f, cathed. ceil., dishwasher. $104 or $80. 549-3554. tf7-1

ENTERTAINMENT

SEE D.H. LAWRENCE'S "WOMEN IN LOVE" WITH ALAN BATES & GLENDA JACKSON AT MAHAR AUD., 7-9-11. DIRECTED BY KEN RUSSELL. tf2/2

AUTOS FOR SALE

64 Ford Custom, new snow tires, auto. trans. Must sell by 2 Feb. So only $200. Call 253-5461 eve. tf1-31

68 Pontiac Lemans, 30,000 miles, good mech. cond., needs some body work, 4 speed, $700 or best offer. Call 536-3409, 546-5835. tf1/31

66 Ford std., 8 cyl., studded tires, $325. 549-6321. tf2/1

65 MGB rebit. eng. 400, 67 Sunbeam Alpine kardtop - 500, 69 Triumph 250cc Trail - 300 bike will dicker, call 549-1283. tf1-29

1970 Firebird, trans - AM, Excellent condition, air cond., power windows, tape deck, auto. trans., best offer. Call Roger 549-6554. tf2-2

1969 Triumph Spitfire, 2 tops, AM-FM, Mich. Spfld. 781-8005, 567-3256. tf1/30

ROOM WANTED

Would appreciate room in hse. or apt., near campus $60-$70/mo. Call Mark, 253-3018, or leave message please. 1/29

WANTED

Photographer wants open minded liberal female models part-time, good pay. Write giving details to P. O. Box 122, Granby, Mass. 01033. tf2-1

Reliable student age 21 desires baby-sitting or tutoring French after, eve. Call 546-6762. tf1-29

Apt. or house to rent for wk.-end. Feb. 9-11, Fri. eve. to Sun. eve. Will pay, and take responsibility for damages. Call 546-5199, Joe. tf1/29

Experienced black belts in Karate. Wanted for sparring practice. Call 546-8831. tf1/31

String bassist, cellists & tuba, etc.! Musicians interested in playing in new music ensemble. 584-0797, 5-5:30 p.m. only. tf1/31

TRAVEL

Crimson Travel offers low cost spring vacation trip to Bermuda for more info. call Rick Margil, 253-6096. tf1/31

Notices

ALPHA PHI OMEGA
Brotherhood meeting to be held tonight at 7:30 in Mem. Hall. An important meeting—be there.

BRIDGE PLAYERS
Duplicate Game played in the Commuter Lounge (S.U. 2160) at 7. Please come to learn and play.

CARREERS FOR WOMEN
What can we do: Alternative Careers for Women Feb. 5, 7 p.m., 163 CC an informal exchange with working women.

Selectmen Handbook Updated

A handbook for Massachusetts selectmen has been updated for the Massachusetts Selectmen's Association by Assoc. Prof. Edwin Andrus Gere.

Dr. Gere was a selectman in Leverett from 1961 to 1965 and has been a UMass faculty member in political science since 1957. His handbook revision attempts to reflect some of the changes which have occurred in town government in the past few years—changes, for example, in the sanitary code, the conflict of interest statute, sales tax, and home rule.

Previous handbooks for selectmen have been primarily references to state law, while this latest revision, according to Dr. Gere, also tries to emphasize "the new directions in state- local relations made possible through the home rule amendment."

Twelve County Selectmen's Associations are affiliated with the Massachusetts Selectmen's Association which has offices at 6 Beacon St., Boston, 02108. Handbooks are $2 a copy.

THE ROISTER DOISTERS

present

February 1, 2, 3, 4

8:30

Admission $2,

$1.50 with UM ID

Bowker Auditorium

Reservations

545-2149

COUNTRY COMFORT COFFEE HOUSE
We're looking for performers and talent of any kind. Interested please call Sogo at 665-4354 for more info.

ENGLISH EDUCATION OFFICE
English Ed. is now beginning its selection process. If you are interested in student teaching in Eng. for Fall of 1973 and have not stopped by the office—Bartlett 474—or your address has changed since you were last in—please come by, see Gary Aho, Fred Robinson, or Frances Stone.

EROTIC FILM CIRCUS
Remember the N.Y. Erotic Film Festival, well Funny Farm is presenting the Erotic Circus on Feb. 9 at S.U.B., 7, 9, 11.

HOUSING COMMITTEE
Anyone interested in attending the next housing Committee meeting, it will be Wed. 31 at 7:30 p.m. Rm. 162. Thank you.

KOREAN KARATE
All students interested in learning the Korean Martial Art, Tae Kwon Do come to WoPe Rm. 101 Mon. & Wed. 7:30 p.m. Course worth 1 credit. Call Ken, 6-8659 or Lee 5-2418.

OUTING CLUB
Meeting tonight at 6 p.m. in 165 CC. All are invited to help get 2nd semester trips going.

PE 100 SKI CLASSES
Ski class students must pay lab fee at Boyden Ticket Office before the first class. Lab fee cards are available at the Ticket Office. Receipt must be submitted to Boyden 209.

SEXISM IN EDUCATION
The Women's caucus will be offering a series of presentations or issues of SEXISM in Education—open to all students, teachers and other interested parties. Course offering on Wed. 4:00-6:30. 1st class Feb. 7. For info call 5-1565.

TCEA LIAISON COMMITTEE
There will be no TCEA Liaison Committee meeting tonight but there will be a short meeting the following Mon., Feb. 5th at 6:30 p.m. in Skinner Lounge. Please come!

LOST
Rimless, gold-wire glasses in black case—in Goes. 252 or in rides from UMass. to North. Call 586-3271.

Mistaken identity—last home Ball game (Harvard) blue parka, fur hood switched on me. Whoever has it, please call 253-2708—have yours and it's much too small.

Lost dog, black and brown Shephard-Lab cross. Male with brown collar if found or have info call Alan at 549-3551 or go to 418 N. Pleasant St.

4 subject notebook at bookstore Annex. Call Debby, 549-6710.

One Spanish textbook, Curso Basico de Espanol, from the book racks in the U Store. Needed desperately. No questions asked—call Karen 546-1116.

Near Durfee Greenhouse, book: Flower Arranging, 150 Illustrated concepts. Call 584-2682.

Paper bag filled with new paperback books from bookstore. Lost in Bartlett Hall 1/25 in Rm. 456 or phone booth in basement. Please return to Eng. office in Bartlett or CC Lost & Found or call Wendy at 6-9566.

FOUND
Four textbooks found near Book Store. Call 546-5141.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

By SYDNEY OMARR

I find that the most erudite, inquisitive, charming persons are concerned with self-knowledge and astrology. Conversely, I find that bores, bigots, and boorish persons are concerned, not with self-understanding, but with preconceived notions which rule out any consideration of astrology.

***

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Hold off on changes, travel plans; don't be premature with submission of formats, ideas. Strive to be diplomatic. Don't create unnecessary problems. Means those who make inquiries should be treated courteously. Adhere to Golden Rule.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Protect valuables. Get recognition for what you do—means don't permit others to take credit for your efforts. Guard reputation. Those who advocate otherwise have nothing to lose. You are responsible to yourself. Key now is to act in mature manner.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Study Taurus message. Take nothing for granted where personal welfare is concerned. Many are willing to make promises—not many are really capable of fulfilling them. Pisces plays prominent role. Capricorn offers opportunity to display special abilities.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Accent is on health, medical appointments, hours devoted to work and recreation. Key is to be practical. Avoid extremes. Follow through on diet resolutions. You will complete project, assignment. Look to future, not past.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Strive for greater independence. Apply original touch. You get truth about member of opposite sex. Welcome chance for knowledge. Don't cloud issues with preconceived notions. Another born under Leo is much in picture.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): One with authoritative attitude may test your patience. Maintain sense of balance. Share knowledge. Learn by teaching. Give full play to intuitive intellect. Hunch now is likely to pay dividends. Aquarian is involved.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Look to one who recently settled domestic crisis. Be receptive to voice of experience. Confusion exists but is no reason for panic. Expand horizons. Accept invitations. Contacts made now can prove valuable in near future.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be aware of fine points—a check of details is necessary. Applies especially where finances are concerned. Protect assets. Aquarius and Leo persons could play prominent roles. Leave nothing to chance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Check area of communications, especially as it applies to mate or business partner. Cycle is high but some are determined to create problems. Key now is to be flexible. Get thoughts, opinions, statements on record.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Home, domestic relations—these can now be of paramount importance. Emphasis also is on clubs, special organizations, areas of confinement, such as hospitals, institutions. Don't force issues. If diplomatic, you take steam out of opposition.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You learn truth about friends, hopes and wishes. Pisces could play important role. See persons, situations in light of reality. Wishful thinking can create needless roadblocks. Know it and respond accordingly.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): This can be "power" period. Means people listen and respond to you. Personal magnetism flows in abundance. Don't play games with emotions. Relationships are intensified. Build for future. Reject the superficial.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are intuitive, a natural teacher, quite progressive and inventive. By October, you could be considering a change in basic domestic situation. March and December are indicated as outstanding months for you in 1973.

Copyright 1973, Gen. Fea. Corp.

Crossword Puzzle

ACROSS
1 Weight of India
4 College degree (abbr.)
6 Talk idly
11 Heavenly body
13 Evaluating
15 Cooled lava
16 Ingredient
18 Proceed
19 Negative
21 Country of Asia
22 Mix
24 Animal's coat
26 Young girl
28 Number
29 Vapor
31 Abound
33 Man's nickname
34 Landed
36 Bespatter
38 Symbol for tellurium
40 Hint
42 Sliver
45 Macaw
47 God of love
49 Merit
50 Strokes
52 Nerve network
54 A continent (abbr.)
55 Exists
56 Nearest
59 Physician (abbr.)
61 Mend
63 Empower
65 Leases
66 French article
67 Article of furniture

DOWN
1 Resort
2 Kite
3 Sun god
4 Warning device
5 Take unlawfully
6 Ironed
7 Hurried
8 Units of Siamese currency
9 Note of scale
10 Motor
12 Compass point
14 Pierced
17 Protective ditch
20 Genus of olives
23 Preposition
24 Postscript (abbr.)
25 Soapstone
27 Oceans
30 Distance measure
32 Slipper
35 Frights
37 Predilection
38 South American animal
39 Rubber on pencil
41 Troubles
43 Baby's bed
44 Printer's measure
46 Near
48 Metal
51 Peruse
53 Slave
57 Illuminated
58 Symbol for tantalum
60 Crimson
62 Hebrew letter
64 Baseball (abbr.)

Answer to Saturday's Puzzle

Distr. by United Feature Syndicate, Inc. 29

"Jack Walks Alone"

By MARTY KELLEY

The Sour Sitrus Society--How alone can one man be? Alone with his thoughts...Alone with his emotions...Or alone with his expectations....Jack Leaman has battled triumph and adulation for the better part of his 12-year reign here at Massachusetts, and when he falters, he walks it off by himself, there's not much company in defeat...

So in a typical misconstrued Sports Night in town Saturday, with buffs having their choice of either humidity at the Rink of the Lord Jeff, or the pandemonium at the Cage, somebody lost. First it was the student who wanted to see UMass hockey perhaps on a Friday night and then on the following Eve, see what Jack could do against Syracuse.

Both places were typically jammed. And while Jack Caniff left the ice a winner, Jack Leaman was the man left alone. He came so close and now in two successive years of trying to better the Orange from Syracuse, he's lost by a total of 8 points (90-85 last year). And there's not a helluva lot you can say in defeat.

So it was the first time that the youthful Minutemen had been home since Dec. 16th. And they stood and they cheered some 5,000 strong and you could tell the Cage gang appreciated that little excursion to Pennsylvania. But this was a team cut out of the Penn mold and you could sense the fear at the Cage...

And the Sitrus Society played and they played and they played some more. And perhaps their most biting hour of presence came as the Cagites filed out. It's tough to be serenaded by a salute from the victors and could you really care.

And the gals continued to dance and the trumpets never stopped. They kept pounding defeat into your eardrums. But, hell, they were only musicians. But they were happy for their Orange comrades spearheaded by the Lee's (Mike and Jimmy) and Dennis DuVal who came alive just in time to save it. Leaman was left 7-6, and now where from here...

So instead of the rampaging and the Saturday night psych that usually accompanies the Cage, it wasn't there that night. The Orange took it away. And in a game that the difference was no more than 2 hoops at any given time, Jack had to settle for the foul shooting of DuVal and an errant Charlie Peters' pass, to walk this one off alone.

After a stint with the radio stations, Leaman gabbed a bit with the annual Lobby Crew (writers, parents, friends, statisticians, girlfriends, and oldtimers). And in an obscure press room behind the mainstream of smoke, he sat with Jerry Radding of the Springfield papers. And maybe if it wasn't for me, Jack probably would have just sat there. Jerry wasn't going to say anything. Hell, he didn't need a quote. What does he care? He doesn't get paid extra for the amount of Minuteman wins. Syracuse for him was just another assignment. So he didn't even bother interviewing Leaman who I'm sure was waiting to be quoted.

Quote or no quote, I just felt like talking basketball with the man who used to take time and chat with me between halfs years ago when he coached the freshman team.

"It's tough when you're playing over your head. What can you ask of them when you play a 12-3 team after they have just played Providence?" And Jack went on and on in a very tired troubled type tone which easily portrayed the loneliness of the loss the half hour before.

Leaman did admit something that the quiet John Murphy wouldn't after the game--that he along with Jimmy Burke were fluridden. Praise went out to Tom Austin for one of his finer performances in five years and to Rick Pitino. And it's better for the team when the club quarterback doesn't shoot, but come on Rick, that's thirty minutes of playing time without a shot.

So for the first time since the heyday of Julius Erving, the seats on top of the practice baskets were sold out. You had to be political to deal an aisle seat for this one. Cheerleader Karl Piepho must of had his feet in bounds the whole game. And Joe Paradise to the left of Paul Gorant at the mike had his moment.

When the Cage, minus a certain section, stood in an overdue tribute to the terrible war's end, Joe brought the crowd from its feet with the horn to move the show along. I guess he felt 12 years of involvement was at least 25 seconds worth of tribute. A few Blacks could have felt it wasn't worth even that...

And when it was finally over, the only sound heard was that of the Sour Sitrus Society...And they weren't alone.

...Bobby Dooms gazes at the purple lights but there's not much he can do here. Grimacing but yet assertive in the process, Billy Endicott accounts for a coupie of Minutemen digits...Endicott finished with 8 points for the evening but it was four short as the Orange stole a three point 70-67 verdict at the Cage. As Endicott tells the world, it was a night for long faces for all of Metawampe's oid friends Saturday night... (MDC Photo by Gib Fuilerton) (Cutline by Marty Kelley)

Swimmers Take Consistent Dive

By JANIS AHMADJIAN

Despite strong individual performances by various Minutemen, the UMass swimmers were overwhelmed by Vermont Saturday 72/40. UMass excelled in the Diving Competition though the Catamounts dominated the swimming events.

Vermont did not boast as strong a team as the year before and in many of the events they had cause to worry. Their strength was with Bruce Willard star Butterflyer who swam the Individual Medley with a time of 2:09. Also their 400 Medley and Freestyle Relay Teams each won scoring 7 points apiece.

Highlight for UMass was the Diving Competition in which they gave an excellent show. In both the one and three meter events divers Jeff Crouse and Paul Lelito won the first two places scoring 16 out of the 40 UMass points.

First places for the Minutemen were scored by Ron Boucher in the 200 Freestyle, time 2:06 and Mark Dagnese in the 50 Freestyle time 23.6.

Valuable second places were won by Dick Blaisdell--100 Freestyle, Dagnese--200 Backstroke, and co-captain Bob Okolita--who swam his best time to date in the 200 Breaststroke.

Third place points were scored by Sullivan--1,000 Freestyle, co-captain Jack Tyler--200 and 500 Freestyle, Duncan Loomas--200 Individual Medley and Pete Ouliette--100 Freestyle.

Three outstanding Freshmen swimmers have just joined the UMass team. Dagnese, a veteran from Williston Academy whose specialty is Backstroke, IM, and sprint Freestyle. Loomas, from Seekonk, Mass., strong in IM and Freestyle. Tom McGinn (brother Kevin also on the team) who's good in the Breaststroke from St. Francis, one of the best Catholic H.S. swim teams in the country.

The Minutemen have a young team of mostly freshmen and sophomores with which to build. They have more depth than last year and are hoping to get in 5,000 - 8,000 yards a day of practice for the next ten days to get back in shape after the long vacation.

Wednesday at 4 p.m. in Boyden Pool, the Minutemen Swimmers face Coast Guard, their toughest opponent of the season but a good one for experience in preparation for the easier ones - URI, Tufts, and MIT which are up and coming.

St. Anseim's goalie Tom Gavin watches his shutout drop to the ice during the second period of Saturday night's game. The first, being scored here by Kevin Connors, was followed by four more in the Minutemen's 5-1 triumph. (MDC Photo by Alan Chapman)

Duarte Deals J.V. Record In Early Show

By EARLE BARROLL

Dartmouth has refused an open invitation three years running to play the UMass varsity basketball team. And after Saturday night's mauling of their jayvees, 87-72, by the UMass yearlings it would behoove them to hold out ad infinitum.

Greg Duarte and Mike Stokes combined for 62 points in leading the UMass jayvees to their finest moment of this season before a packed house at Curry Hicks Cage. For coach Fan Gaudette "it was a great win for the kids and a bit surprising", alluding to the fact that Dartmouth was 6-1 coming in and rated as one of the best in their division, while UMass was 2-3.

Gaudette termed it a "steal".

Duarte, a 6'4 sophomore from powerful Hyde Park High (Russell Lee of the Milwaukee Bucks alma mater) connected on 14 of his 30 field attempts and added nine of 12 from the charity stripe for a record setting 36 point outting.

Stokes, the diminutive (5'7) backcourt whiz from Philadelphia, Pa. had 25 points and the kind of all- around floorgame that has been expected of him since his arrival on this campus. In all three UMass losses Stokes has been out twice due to injuries and a third time saw limited action when he sustained his sprained ankle at St. Anselm's.

Their combined dosage was a result of Gaudette's game plan "to get them the ball". "We played a one guard set with Mike (Stokes) at the point", explained the jayvee mentor "and tried to get the ball to Greg up front so they could work one on one." And mirable dictu, they go the sphere enough, like 56 shots worth.

Duarte's total (he also had a game high 17 rebounds) eclipsed the previous high of 36 set by Rick Vogeley ('72) against Rockwood Academy and Henry Wilmore (now an all-American at Michigan) for the undefeated (15-0) freshman of 1968-69.

In their first home game since December 16, the jayvees vaulted from an 8-5 lead early in the first half and escalated it by an additional 13 before the first twenty minutes was over.

The Light Greens (no more Indians—remember ???) could come no closer than a double-figure deficit in the second half as they became the third straight first year Dartmouth crew to make the trek from Hanover with defeat awaiting.

With 62 points neatly spread out amongst only two, somehow 6'9 center Tom Ryan managed 13 of his own and nine rebounds. Gaudette was quick to heap plaudits on the big guys "board work", as he was for reserve Eddie Rodriquez. "He's been ill the past week," Gaudette said. "He only began practice on Friday for us, but due to foul trouble he was forced into action and did a fine job (five points, six rebounds— like double figures in proportion to "Du's" and Stoke's output.)"

The jayvees return to action tomorrow night at the Springfield Civic Center when they take on Holy Cross and Thursday night they lead off a double slate at the Cage against Rockwood Academy (6 p.m.).

NOTES: Gaudette reports that Glenn Cooper, a 6'6 freshman from Kingsley Prep and Newtown, N.Y. has undergone successful operation for his knees. He's the guy who had the Satch Sanders knee wraps on the last time he saw service at the Cage. He should be ready to play again before the end of the season . . . Joe Artime, another freshman, has transferred to UMass from South Carolina. He's on campus now and will be eligible next January. . . .Where's the infamous Dave Dibble you ask?? Dibs was at the game Saturday night, but as a civilian, as he's taken this semester off . . . On being confronted with the inevitable "36 points!!! Super", Du brushed it aside sighting defensive lapses and erratic floor play as keeping his game from complete "tightness". Funny thing, Gaudette mentioned that, too.

Turnovers Trip Minutemen, 70-67

By FRANK ANTOSIEWICZ

The Sour Sitrus Society (the Syracuse pep band)'s tubas, trombones and whatever shook the rafters until the lights were dimming in the Cage, as the Orangemen edged the Minutemen 70-67 Saturday.

A capacity crowed jammed into the Cage to see what was billed as an evenly matched contest and what proved to be, as throughout the game no more than two baskets separated them at any one time.

After the game, Head Coach Jack Leaman just shook his head after looking at the number of turnovers. He said, "Anytime we turn the ball over 22 times, but lose by only 3, you can say we lost it."

Leaman also had words of praise for Syracuse, calling them, "one of the better teams we play. They fight and scrap all the way."

The yo-yo battle was marked by the inability of both sides to profit by the other's mistakes. A key rebound would be grabbed, only to be thrown away, especially by UMass.

The last minute of play in the first half characterized the changing tempos (like two kids fighting over a piece of candy). The Minutemen led by four due to the play of Bill Endicott and Al Skinner on the offensive boards and the defensive play of Rick Pitino on the Orange's leading scorer (averaging 18.5) Dennis DuVal (only two hoops in the first half).

Then, Orange soph James Lee, little brother of Mike, scored his eighth straight point for the visitors to bring them within two. Brother Mike, not wanting to be outdone, drove to the hoop as soon as he gathered in the ball for a three point play and a 36-36 half-time lead.

What was by far the biggest crowd this year at home and probably the biggest since Julius left Amherst, sat stunned as the battle continued between the competing pep bands (tuba versus cowbell) at the half.

The changing tides continued when play resumed. The man called Dooooms by the citrus fans recorded foul number four, two minutes into the second stanza, but the Lee brothers continued.

Endicott was whistled out of the game with foul four with fifteen minutes to go and remained on the sidelines until late in the game. Peter Trow and Tom Austin provided the excitement until Al Skinner almost stole the show at the end.

Skinner snatched the ball twice and at 2:16 two free throws by Austin put UMass ahead, 63-62. Two seconds later Austin fouled out.

The one point margin changed colors four times as the clock ticked away. Mike Lee, who finished with 27 points put the Orangemen ahead, 66-65.

Four foul shots, caused by UMass attempts to get the ball, were sandwiched around a hoop to make the final margin, 70-67.

Coach Leaman said afterwards, that "defensively we broke down and in crucial spots when we needed the ball, we could not get it."

The Minutemen outrebounded the smaller Orangemen, 35-21, outfouled them, 24-17 and turned the ball over more times, 22-16. "After Providence," Leaman said, "we just weren't sharp."

Syracuse is now 13-3, while the Minutemen drop to 7-6.

BOX SCORE FOLLOWS:

UMass	FG	FT	Pts.
Skinner	7	1	15
Murphy	6	1	13
Austin	3	6	12
Trow	5	0	10
Endicott	4	0	8
McLaughlin	3	2	8
Burke	0	1	1
Pitino	0	0	0
Peters	0	0	0
Totals	28	11	67
Syracuse	FG	FT	Pts.
M. Lee	10	7	27
J. Lee	6	2	14
DuVal	4	4	12
Wadach	3	2	8
Dooms	3	0	6
Stundis	0	1	1
Hackett	1	0	2
Totals	27	16	70

UMass' Tom Austin stretches for a rebound in Saturday night's game against Syracuse. The Minutemen actually outrebounded the Orange, 35-21, but lost the game. Looking on are Charlie Peters (54), Syracuse's Bill Stundis (53), and the UMass bench. (Photo by Gib Fullerton)

Rheault Shines As Skaters Trip St. Anselm's 5-1

By BILL BALLOU

Chick Rheault owed a little something to the not-so-kind folks from St. Anselm's and Saturday night he paid them back with interest.

Last year Rheault made just one start all season, and it came against St. A's up in Manchester. He didn't play particularly poorly but came up on the short end of a 5-4 score in a game most memorable for the bathroom the Redmen had to dress in and the timekeeper who wouldn't stop the clock in the last minute.

Rheault more than made up for that game with his play against them at Orr Rink. He made 32 saves in a 5-1 win over the "team of the future" in Division II, and turned in one of the best goaltending performances Orr Rink has ever seen.

The win was not only important standing-wise, it was important in the complete overall drubbing administered by the Minutemen. They came out hitting, and skating, and by the end of the night had the swifter Hawks tired, sore, and barely able to mount any facsimile of an attack.

At first, though, it seemed like it might be a long night for UMass. The Minutemen came out winging and had a multitude of good scoring chances, but they couldn't beat St. A's goalie Tom Gavin, who, when he's hot, can give any team a hard time.

Meanwhile St. Anselm's had jumped off to a 1-0 lead on John Cahill's goal at 6:49. Cahill slid a 10-foot backhander past Rheault after some pretty stickhandling that sent him through the UMass defense.

But Rheault held them off after that and UMass came back with three goals in the second and two in the third period to put it out of reach.

Kevin Conners started things off at 5:46 of the second period when Gavin couldn't hold on to his backhander and it hopped over the goalie's shoulder into the net. It was Conners' sixth of the season and came with Mike Gavin (Tom's brother) off for St. A's on an elbowing call.

The eventual game winner was scored, surprisingly enough, bu Brian Mulcahy on a tough angle shot which it seemed he didn't have a prayer of scoring on. But, it somehow slipped through the screened Gavin and Mulcahy had his first goal of the season white mqmass had the lead for good.

Billy Harris made it 3-1 in the final minute of the period when he flipped a forehand shot over the sliding Gavin after being set up alone in front by Pat Keenan.

The Hawks had a chance to close the gap early in the final period when John Powers broke in alone on Rheault and was stopped as the UMass goalie went to his knees. Then John Cahill picked up the rebound of that shot and had what appeared to be a sure goal taken away from him on an incredible glove save. Those stops appeared to kill any hope the Hawks had for a win and the only suspense that remained was to see if Pat Keenan could keep his goal-scoring streak alive.

The suspense didn't last long as Keenan scored twice within 85 seconds to make the final margin 5-1. The first came at 5:30 on a shot he took with his back to the net after a nice set-up by Lonnie Avery, the second at 6:55 on a 40 foot slap shot that Gavin couldn't hang on to. The goals were his 23rd and 24th of the season and marked the 16th straight game he has scored in, extending over two seasons.

St. A's is now 8-4 overall while UMass is 7-4-1, 6-2-1 in Division II. The Minutemen play BU tonight in Boston.

SCORING SUMMARY

First Period

1. (SA) Cahill (Powers, Condon) 6:49

Penalties: (UM) Mulcahy 3:14; (UM) Conners 10:27; (SA) Gerry 10:27; (UM) Conners 16:57

Second Period

2. (UM) Conners (Shillalie, Ellis) 5:46
3. (UM) Mulcahy (Riley, Coleman) 9:13
4. (UM) Harris (Keenan, Ellis) 19:04

Penalties: (SA) Gavin 4:53; (UM) Keenan 7:15; (SA) O'Brien 8:28; (UM) Keenan 15:19

Third Period

5. (UM) Keenan (Avery, Shillalie) 5:30
6. (UM) Keenan (Harris, Shillalie) 6:55

Penalties: (UM) Stuart 7:53; (UM) Lowe 10:46; (UM) Muse 19:27

Shots on goal: UMass. 30, St. Anselm's 33.

Friday's Sportshead was George Foreman, Boxing's Heavyweight Champion of the World.

Daily Collegian

SPORTS

Notices

LACROSSE NOTICE: There will be an important meeting this Tuesday afternoon at 4:30 in room 249 in the Boyden building for all JV and varsity candidates.

INTRAMURAL BASKETBALL: There will be two important meetings pertaining to the IM basketball program. It will not be necessary for team managers to attend both meetings, but they should attend one or the other. The meetings will be: Monday, Jan. 29 at 7:15 in room 249 Boyden OR Thursday, Feb. 1 at 7:45 in room 251 Boyden.

Matmen Fall To Oswego

By JOHN BOCK

Oswego, New York-In their first appearance after the extended semester break the Minutemen wrestlers had their undefeated streak snapped as they dropped the dual match 24-17 to the Oswego State Lakers.

Just about everything that could happen to a wrestling team before and during the match happened to the UMass matmen. Weight problems, injury, and lack of depth kept three varsity spots from being filled. Carl Dambman was about ten pounds overweight at 190 so he stayed home. Larry Reynolds was recuperating from an injury and was out. Steve Rome is trying to cut to 142 pounds to fill in the spot that has been left open due to the loss of defending New England Champ Russ Chateauneuf for the rest of the season.

That was before the match. What happened during it will probably never be seen again in one match. The Lakers forfeited the 118 pound class to UMass and the Minutemen started off with a big 6 points. At 126 Captain Dave Amato was moved up from 118 in hopes for a win. Amato was the aggressor for the whole match, shot all the takedowns and rode his man out for the entire third period, but still ended up losing 2-0.

At 134 Mike McGlaughlin bested Mel Pettys 4-0 in a match that was saved for Mike by his uncanny ability to keep his man under control. After losing the takedown Mike came back to reverse Pettys with his switch and proceed to dominate the match.

The 142 pound contest saw Freshman Doug LeMire get taken to the cleaners by three year veteran Carl Carrozza to the tune of 15-0. It was Doug's varsity debut and he gave it his best, but lack of experience was in evidence. (Carozza was 16-2 going into the bout.)

Chris Cadwallader dropped a 3-0 decision to Oswego's captain Tim Law. Cad looked tough on top and was doing a good job riding and then Law brought one leg up, Chris slipped a cradle on, turned Law over and lost him and ended up behind two points.

The roof started falling in at the 158 pound class. If you see Cliff Blom walking around with a stiff neck, ask him if full nelsons hurt. Regardless of what people in New England do or do not know about wrestling they are now about to learn that in collegiate wrestling full nelsons are ILLEGAL. Cliff was taking his man apart and was ahead 4-0 at the end of the first period. He was on the bottom in the second period and Ed Pucci of Oswego put a full nelson on him, severely injuring his neck.

A protest by Coach Barr was met by the rather ridiculous reply from the referee that he didn't see the hold. Now, from this reporters position at the scoring table the nelson was obvious. Even the Oswego coach asked Pucci why he did it. Well, it was all Cliff could do to finish the match which he lost 7-4.

At 167, true to pre-match speculation, Steve Benson did have a tough match on his hands. Ernie Williams' ankle picked Steve twice but Steve had a few smooth takedowns of his own.

At the end of the second period he used one that should have started the riding time clock ticking in his favor. It didn't though because the Oswegonian at the clock didn't turn it on. Result-Benson lost twelve seconds that would have given him a full minute advantage and an extra point to win. Instead he drew 5-5.

Doug Rumpf saw the lights early in the second period in his 177 pound bout. The sight seeing trip came courtesy of Wayne Hoffman, senior 177 pounder for the Lakers and 15-0 on the season.

John Connolly was still a little rusty from almost a years layoff and lost his comeback match 5-3 to Dennis Luzon.

The most pleasing performance of the day was registered by Frosh Heavyweight Charlie Klein as he pinned Oswego's Bill Schraer in 3:42. Charlie had it all over his man right from the start and shows great promise for being a varsity regular for the next four years.

It was disappointing but this loss might be the thing that will spark the Minutemen to victory over arch rival, Springfield College, Tuesday night in the Boyden Auxiliary gym.

New England's Largest College Daily

The Massachusetts

Daily Collegian

A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

Weather

On that dark and stormy night, she cried, "No, we can't this Thursday, it's the Collegian elections!"

Recyclable

VOLUME C, ISSUE 71 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS TUESDAY, JANUARY 30, 1973

Quietly, beneath the drooping evergreens, a silent house in a silent wood. (MDC Photo by Pete Manera)

On The Inside:

•Amherst: Not Co-ed — see page two

•Vote On Endowment Funds — see page three

•56 POWs Missing — see page four

New Violations Mar Vietnam Cease-fire

SAIGON (AP)-Hundreds more reported cease-fire violations and casualties by the thousands threw the Vietnam truce into bloody turbulence yesterday bringing swift U.S. diplomatic intervention.

A weeklong land-grabbing effort and diplomatic bickering between the Communist Vietnamese and the Saigon government left large parts of the countryside in chaos from the demilitarized zone to the Mekong Delta. The attacks and counterattacks left military positions of both sides in disorder and added to the already confused pattern of disputed holdings.

The International Commission of Control and Supervision, still in the preliminary stages of organization, stalled over haggling between the two Vietnamese sides. Lacking enforcement authority, it faced a monumental task in restoring order.

Vice President Spiro T. Agnew was due in Saigon today on the first leg of a seven-nation Asian tour that also will take him to Cambodia, Thailand, Laos, Singapore, Indonesia and Malaysia. Agnew's press secretary, J. Marsh Thompson, said the trip is intended partly to assure the Asian countries that "we're not abandoning our friends."

U.S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker was reported to have intervened for the second successive day in trying to solve a second diplomatic snag that could prove embarrassing to Agnew.

Nearly 150 additional North Vietnamese delegates, flown from Hanoi to Saigon aboard two U.S. Air Force C130 transports to join the four-party military peace commission, imitated their Viet Cong allies and refused to budge from their planes.

The delegates were parked at Tan Son Nhut air base in front of U.S. base operations, in the same area where Agnew's jet was scheduled to land.

They "will be there till morning," said an Air Force man. "The big man is coming, and if they ain't gone by then, we're going to tow them away or taxi them away."

There were reports that the first two meetings of the four-party Joint Military Commission broke up in acrimonious disputes over the failure of at least one of the two Communist delegations to present credentials.

The U.S. and South Vietnamese demanded that they offer such documents. But the Viet Cong claimed they did not need them because they had been invited to the meeting, it was learned.

There were conflicting reports as to whether the North Vietnamese also refused to offer credentials. The cease-fire agreement makes no mention of credentials in its section on the military commissions.

The two sides were said to have accused each other at both meetings of cease-fire violations. One source said the meetings accomplished "absolutely nothing."

The Americans and South Vietnamese walked out of the first meeting about noon, shortly after the Viet Cong delegates arrived from Tan Son Nhut air base. The 10 had stayed on the base for 20 hours aboard a plane that had brought them from Bangkok Sunday.

Their overnight sit-in aboard the South Vietnamese air force plane was yet another dispute over credentials. It was originally characterized by U.S. sources as a refusal to comply with South Vietnamese immigration procedures. However, it was learned Monday that the dispute centered mainly on their travel documents.

Bunker intervened in the impasse, sources reported. He met with Premier Tran Thien Khiem at midmorning and shortly thereafter President Nguyen Van Thieu gave the order to let the Viet Cong off the plane, these informants said.

The second dispute, also apparently based on entry papers, developed soon after the second contingent of North Vietnamese landed at Tan Son Nhut at mid-afternoon but did not disembark. Bunker again intervened.

The South Vietnamese Foreign Ministry issued a statement saying it waived immigration procedures for the Viet Cong delegation "in the interests of peace and in accord with the spirit of the Paris agreement." But the statement said the decision does not constitute a precedent for other delegates, leaving in doubt the issue of the North Vietnamese commission members.

The South Vietnamese command reported nearly 500 violations in the first 24 hours of the cease-fire. Small but bloody battles raged in villages and hamlets in many parts of the country in anticipation of deployment of the international cease-fire observer team.

South Vietnamese authorities in Quang Tri Province just below the demilitarized zone separating the two Vietnams said 168 Saigon soldiers and 1,095 enemy troops died in the 24 hours ending at 6 a.m. Monday, including 22 hours of supposed peace. More than 3,000 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops have been claimed killed since the truce agreement was announced Wednesday. Saigon said it had suffered 575 killed and 2,236 wounded in the same period.

South Vietnamese warplanes flew bombing missions in support of the ground troops, but the number of sorties was not disclosed. Some of the planes, along with tanks and armored personnel carriers, pounded Viet Cong and North Vietnamese troops in treeline hideouts along a highway near Trang Bang, 30 miles from Saigon.

The foreign ministries of North Vietnam and the Viet Cong's Provisional Revolutionary Government in South Vietnam charged that the United States and the Saigon government have violated the peace agreement.

The cease-fire observers were to be in the field by Tuesday, but their departure from Saigon was believed sure to be delayed by the impasse in the Joint Military Commission.

Ambassador Michel Gauvin, head of the Canadian delegation, said the international supervisory body cannot move unless the Joint Military Commission provides transportation, security and guidance.

DVP Speaker

VonBraunHereTomorrow

In their first presentation of the new year, the Distinguished Visitors Program is bringing the eminent scientist Dr. Wernher von Braun to campus tomorrow night. He will lecture tomorrow at 8:00 p.m. in the SUB.

Dr. Wernher von Braun

Currently Wernher von Braun is Deputy Associate Administrator for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration in Washington, D.C.

Dr. von Braun heads the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's planning effort for future U.S. space missions. He was appointed to this position in March, 1970. Dr. von Braun joined NASA when the Army Ballistic Missile Agency (ABMA) development team at Huntsville, Ala. was transferred to NASA in 1960. While Dr. von Braun was its Director, the Marshall Space Flight Center developed the world's largest rocket, the Saturn V, which carried men to the moon.

Campus Survives Snowstorm

By CINDY GONET

An unexpected long weekend greeted students and faculty yesterday, in the form of a foot of snow. Somehow, it didn't seem to matter because most people had to get up to find out there weren't classes being held.

As snowstorms go, yesterday's was not very incidental. Amherst police reported no accidents and children of all ages were playing . . . on sleds, snowshoes, and skiis.

Traveling was very hazardous with a few people finding themselves in snowbanks. No cars apparently were towed when plowing began at 2 a.m. yesterday.

At 4:30 yesterday morning, according to Vice Chancellor Gluckstern, Mr. Campion began to receive information that the area would get beseiged with very heavy snowfall before dawn. The snow was originally supposed to subside by 11:00 a.m. when snow removal would be nearly completed.

By 9:30, the weathermen, altered their prediction to snow fall until 12:30 or 1:00 p.m. Pioneer Valley received about 12" of snow.

No more snow is expected over the next 24 hours. The Amherst weather burea, WTTT, predicted a clear, sunny, cold, but windy day at about 5 to 10 degrees. Because of the wind, 20 to 35 mph, drifting would necessitate plowing today. There is a 10% probability of precipitation, so there will most likely be classes, with chance working against the students.

Snow removal began on campus at approximately 4:00 a.m. and was still going on all night.

By 8:00 this morning, according to officials of the Physical Plant, lots 2, 4, and 5 and all of the lots across from Whitmore should be cleared.

Campus snow removal includes all of the main roads to the University. It was "pretty heavy" and the snow is presently in small mounds scattered around the vehicles that didn't get moved.

The Physical Plant operates about 5 or 6 bigger plows and a few smaller ones. It also runs several loaders to move the snow.

Students Mischarged For Senior Portraits

By JAMES E. GOLD

Students who ordered senior portraits this month from Root Photographers were probably mischarged, according to Colleen Yuu, Editor-in-Chief of the Index.

Price listings sent out with proofs taken last fall include a group of "Budget Specials" for UMass students only. Two prices are undercharges, one is an overcharge, and several are just missing, said Yuu.

Root Photographers was selected partially on the basis of the prices they would offer to students, she said in an interview Monday. However, it turns out "they just aren't offering what they said they would. They can make all the offers they wish as long as they include what was stated in their bid," she explained.

The following table, extracted from the Root bid of last fall indicates what the proper charges should be:

Quan.	Type of Portrait	Black & White	Color
9	wallet size	$ 2.50	$ 6.00
2	5X7's	6.00	11.00
4	5X7's	7.00	19.00
8	5X7's	8.00	29.00
1	8X10	5.00	8.00
2	8X10's	6.50	9.50
4	8X10's	9.50	12.50

Root's mischarge for three and six 5X7's is in favor of students. They are the same price which should be charged for two and four 5X7's. However, Root is required also to offer eight 5X7's at a special rate, but they offer twelve instead.

Root makes none of the required offers for 8X10's (except for orders of one) and makes the wrong offer for wallet sizes. Root states that if only wallet sizes are ordered, the minimum order must be for 18. For this they are charging five dollars for black and white and $15 for color.

However, Root should be charging $2.50 for nine wallet size black and white portraits and six dollars for nine wallet size color photos. However, they don't even offer nine unless larger portraits are also purchased.

The Index staff, in efforts to rectify overcharges, has sent a letter to Root's representative. The letter states, "We need assurance from you that the overcharges involved in the fall sittings will be refunded, and that the correct prices will be sent out for the next set of sittings.

The letter carries a warning that if nothing is done to correct the procedure, Root will not be considered in next year's bids.

Automotive Workshop Open

Does your car sound like a lawnmower? Does it refuse to start, climb hills, or stop? Do you ask gas station attendants to check the gas and fill the oil? Are you afraid of what a garage might find wrong with your car and how much they want to repair it? If you feel like getting your hands greasy instead of paying out a lot of money, there is now a RSO group, the Student Automotive Workshop, that will help you repair that poor, sick car yourself.

The idea that the SAW was started from is that an automobile or truck is not a complicated piece of machinery as an automotive expert will tell you and, in fact, most work done in garages now can be done by anyone with the proper work space, tools and instruction. The Student Automotive Workshop now has five spaces, $1,000 worth of tools, seven student mechanics, and a colloquium on auto repair.

The SAW is now located on the Permit Parking level of the Campus Center Garage in spaces 122c-130c. The workshop is open Monday-Thursday nights from 7 to 11, and Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. The fee for the use of the tools and a space is 1 dollar per hour.

(Continued on P. 3)

Amherst Won't Go Co-ed

By ROBERT STEINBROOK

The movement for coeducation at Amherst College is dead for the present. But at the same time the College's Trustees, and the presidents of Smith and Amherst have all affirmed their commitment to Five College Cooperation.

At their winter meeting, the Trustees of the private Amherst College did not approve President John W. Ward's recommendation "that Amherst College become a liberal arts college for the education of men and women at this time."

In so doing, they neither accepted nor rejected the principle that the college should become a liberal arts institution for men and women. Rather, they postponed a decision on the issue. And, according to President Ward, "you can translate 'for some time' to be three to five years."

While the Trustees killed coeducation, also requested that President Ward "strengthen inter-institutional relationships" and to seek further information relevant to, among other things, Five College cooperation.

Ward has made it clear that coordinate education such as cooperation between Valley educational institutions, notable Smith and Mt. Holyoke colleges, cannot take the place of coeducation in his mind. But he also said that he "intends to be particular" about Five College cooperation in the future.

A statement from the office of Smith College President Thomas Mendenhall released yesterday said that Mendenhall supported the decision of the Amherst Trustees. "Of necessity, coeducation at Amherst would have turned inward much of the college's time and energy from this cooperative effort which in my opinion is as vital to Amherst's future as it is to Smith's," the statement said. Mendenhall referred to the concept of Five College Cooperation.

Amherst President Ward announced the Trustees' decision to the college community early yesterday afternoon at a meeting of faculty and students. "I would be less than human if I did not regret that I was unable to persuade the Board of Trustees to accept the recommendation I have made to them that Amherst College should become a liberal arts college for the education of men and women," Ward said.

Amherst College thus joined Haverford College as the only major eastern all-male institutions which have considered coeducation over the last ten years and rejected it. Williams, Wesleyan, Princeton and Yale among others are now coeducational institutions.

Ward said that he had accepted the decision and that he was "not about to pick up my marbles and go home because people don't play the way I do." The quip ended any speculation that Ward had considered the coeducation issue at vote of no confidence in his leadership of Amherst over the past years–leadership which included his arrest at anti-war demonstrations outside Chicopee's Westover Air Force Base last year.

Ward said at the afternoon student gathering that he did not feel compromised in his position as President because of the vote. One student close to Ward confirms that there is "absolutely no chance" that he would resign because of the no vote on coeducation. "He never looked at it as a vote of confidence that would force his resignation," another student said of the decision.

Young Businessmen For Marijuana

HAMDEN, Conn. (AP) — An increasing number of young businessmen in Connecticut are uniting in an attempt to win repeal of the state's laws against possessing even a small amount of marijuana for personal use.

"It's not that we support the use of marijuana," said Martin Bernstein of the Hamden Jaycees. "We feel that the laws don't make sense and, because of them, drug programs don't work."

ARE YOUR CIVIL LIBERTIES BEING VIOLATED?

Call Us and Talk it Over

American Civil Liberties Union, Hampshire County Chapter

Phone: 256-8448

MDC Classifieds Pay

MDC NEWS HOTLINE 5-2550

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

The office of the DAILY COLLEGIAN is on the second floor of the Student Union on the campus of the University of Massachusetts, zip code 01002. Telephones: 545-2550 (news); 545-0344 (sports); 545-0731 (business).

Second-class postage is paid in Amherst. THE DAILY COLLEGIAN publishes Monday through Friday during the academic year, except during vacation, exam periods or holidays. Accepted for mailing under the authority of an act of March 8, 1879; as amended by an act of June 11, 1943. Subscription rates are $6.00 per semester or $10.00 per year.

presenting . . .

Dr. Wernher Von Braun

"Our Space Program After Apollo"

illustrated with 35mm slides and 16mm film.

Wednesday,
January 31
S.U.B.
8:00 p.m.

dvp

Trustees To Vote On Endowment Funds

By DON BISHOP

This Wednesday will mark the first Trustee meeting of the new year. On paper, the agenda for this month's session looks fairly routine.

Looking into the report of the Trustee Committee on Finance, however, one finds that a motion dealing with proposed investment guidelines for the University's endowment fund will come up for final vote on Wednesday.

Within the last couple of years, concern with ethical questions has been expressed at many Colleges and Universities over the investing of monies in such companies as Dow Chemical and Gulf Oil.

The endowment investment recommendations of the Trustee Finance Committee reflect the concern with this issue at UMass, which came to a head at the Trustee meeting in Boston last April.

Over this past summer, two sets of recommendations on this matter were made to President Wood's Wood's Office. One set came from a student here, Edward Voci, and the other was made by University Treasurer Kenneth Johnson.

While the proposals made by each were basically similar, a major and substantial difference exists with the question of the creation of a committee to allow for the University community to air their feeling on UMass investment policy.

Johnson's proposals, which were passed unanimously by the Finance Committee on January 22nd, would have members of the University community present their opinions through the appropriate Chancellor, rather than through a committee established for that purpose.

Johnson's objection to the creation of this type of committee reportedly stem from a feeling on his part that it would become a grandstand for certain individuals.

Voci's and SGA President Larry Ladd's feelings are that the creation of such a committee is necessary for a truly responsive investment policy.

If the Trustees pass the Finance Committee's recommendations, UMass will be about the only university in the country that is adopting investment guidelines without setting some sort of advisory committee, according to Ladd.

The Finance Committee's and Treasurer Johnson's feelings about this question of an advisory committee comes as the last of six specific recommendations which read as follows:

1. "The principal criterion for the selection or retention of portfolio securities should be that of maximum economic return within the context of a prudent but flexible investment policy that maintains a reasonable balance between the income, growth and security of the fund.

2. "The University will seek to invest in corporations that have a responsible posture in matters relating to (1) the protection of the environment, (2) public health, (3) consumer protection, (4) equal employment opportunities, and (5) compliance with national and international law.

4. "When there is evidence that a corporation in which the University owns stock is persistently engaging in activities that are grossly contrary to these guidelines, the Treasurer, after consultation with investment counsel, will recommend the sale of that stock.

5. "In all cases, the Trustees of the University acting in accordance with its Bylaws through its Finance Committee shall make the final decision on all investments.

6. "In the event there are individuals or groups within the University communities that wish to express an opinion or to present factual information pertaining to securities held by the University, they may do so through the appropriate Chancellor or Dean of the Medical School to the President who may present them to the Finance Committee of the Trustees."

The university's investment counsel: Standish, Ayer, and Wood released a report late last year which indicated that over $1,700,000 is currently invested by UMass in diversified stocks and bonds.

Figures as of October 6, 1972 list the value of the securities as $1,736,692, with an annual income of $67,651. In terms of distribution, 25% is invested in bonds, 7% in preferred stocks, and 68% in common stocks.

Common stocks are distributed to a variety of interests, the majority held in chemical and electrical companies, banks, oil companies, office equipment firms; and mining and metal corporations.

It appears that in the future, any question as to the morality of any of the university's investments will have to be made to either of the two chancellors, rather than to a more accessable committee; unless the Trustees decide to alter the guidelines passed by their own committee.

Iranian Student Calls Deportation Political Move

By BOB SCHEIER

Siamak Zahraie, an Iranian student attending graduate school at UMass, has been ordered to leave the country by February 15, and claims the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) has ordered him to leave because of his political views.

Zahraie, a former University of Washington student, also says his brother and another student currently at the University of Portland have also been ordered to leave because of their opposition to the present Persian government and the war in Vietnam.

Mr. and Ms. Zahraie

A spokesman for the Immigration and Naturalization Service in Boston denied any political motivation for the order, and said Siamak had been ordered to leave because he had transferred from UWashington to UMass before requesting such a transfer from the INS.

The Boston INS said the cases of Siamak's brother Babak and the other student, Bahram Atai, were being handled respectively by the Seattle and Portland, Oregon INS offices. The case of Babak has attracted greater national attention so far than that of the other two defendants, and Bahram Atai is the secretary of a "Committee to Defend Babak Zahraie."

The defense committee is handling the defense for all three students, and says deportation back to Iran would mean "imprisonment at the very least, and possible death by execution" for Babak.

According to Siamak, who came to the United States in 1967 and entered Stanislaus State College in California, the three are being harrassed by the INS because of Babak's role in a tuition roll-back campaign at UWashington, and the opposition of all three to what Siamak calls a "political dictatorship" in Iran.

Babak was also active in foreign student affairs at the University of Washington, and was elected president of the Iranian Student Association and the Foreign Student Council in 1971.

Both Babak and Siamak are married to American citizens.

Siamak graduated from Stanislaus in 1971 with majors in Physics and Mathematics, and entered the University of Washington graduate program in Math in September of 1971. Last fall, he transferred to UMass.

District Director Patrick F. Coomey of the INS said that if Siamak did not leave by the February 15 deadline (which had been pushed back from January 15) the INS would start deportation procedures.

Coomey said that in addition to Siamak's transfer from Washington to Massachusetts without asking permission, Siamak was taking only 6 credits in the fall--not a "full course load"--and thus was considered to have completed school in June, 1972.

Babak, who also came to the U.S. in 1967 and attended high school in Turlock, California, before majoring in Physics and Mathematics at Stanislaus, transferred to UWashington in 1969.

The committee to defend Babak says he was ordered deported March 14, 1972, after a brief camping trip to Canada after which he allegedly attempted to return to this country without the proper visa. The committee says he did not have the proper visa because the INS had been holding his passport and visa for over a year.

A hearing is scheduled for February 12 in Babak's appeal of the INS refusal to grant him permanent residency. The defense committee says it is prepared to take the case to federal courts.

The third student, Bahram Atai, received a B.S. in Electrical Engineering from the University of Washington after coming to the United States in 1968. Siamak says an appeal to an INS deportation order to Bahram is currently in the Seattle immigration court (which is separate from civil or federal courts).

Siamak likened the Iranian students to Vietnamese, Arab, and other students in this country who he said "have been afraid of the INS" and who have been harrassed or deported because of their political views.

Coomey said he "saw nothing about political activities" engaged in by Siamak in the student's file, and said it was part of the job of the INS to look into the background of all students.

Oil Rationing

BOSTON (AP)-A major New England fuel oil supplier which had asked that Massachusetts temporarily relax its air pollution regulations said Monday it has begun to ration oil to its customers on a priority basis.

(Continued from P. 2)

The workshop now has a full set of standard and metric wrenches, jacks, jack-stands, a hydraulic jack, timing lights, engine analyzers, compression gauges, brake tools, shock absorber tools, etc., and a library of auto repair manuals.

(Continued from P. 5)

In its economic summary for 1972, the government newspaper Izvestia not only recorded production shortcomings in the consumer goods sector but criticized industry for turning out items in insufficient variety and poor quality.

Correction

The caption under yesterday's front page picture was incorrect in that it should have named Greg Duarte as number 44 of the UMass JV squad that played Dartmouth. Duarte scored 37 points to set a new JV single game scoring record.

INTERVIEWS for Editorial Board Candidates
— New Schedule —
will take place as follows:

Tuesday, January 30, 1973 — SU 402 (Dickie's office)
6 p.m. — Robert Scheier
6:15 — Steve Tripoli
6:30 — Don Glickstein
6:45 — Bill Ballou
7:00 — Steve Fine
7:15 — Chet Richardson
7:30 — Tom Borkowski
7:45 — Mike Shor

Wednesday, February 1, 1973 — SU 402
6:00 — Paul Shuldiner
6:15 — Jerry Lazar
6:30 — Mark Vogler
6:45 — Hugh Owen
7:00 — Cindy Gonet
7:15 — Marty Kelley
7:30 — Stephen Crowe
7:45 — Alan Chapman

Thursday, January 30, 1972 — Election — 7:30 p.m.

Concert Committee presents

James Montgomery Band

Feb. 3 8:30
S.U.B. $1.50 at door

Special Guests: SAGEWORTH

TONITE

CLEAN LIVING

at the

Rusty Nail Inn

Rte. 47, Sunderland

665-4937

In The Nation And The World

Maryland Busing Works Smoothly

UPPER MARLBORO, Md. (AP)—The first day of court-ordered busing worked smoothly on Monday for some 33,000 pupils in Prince Georges County public school system, an official said.

U.S. District Court Judge Frank Kaufman ordered the busing to implement his plan to further desegrate the nation's 10th largest school district which serves several Washington, D.C., bedroom communities.

About one public student in five was affected by transfers to carry out U.S. Supreme Court rulings on desegregation.

County Schools Supt. Carl Hassel said the first day was a "smooth transition which reflects the good jobs teachers did in preparing their students for the change."

A one-day boycott, or "day of mourning," urged by Concerned County Citizens to protest the busing order, drew a group of 30 women to picket an elementary school near here.

Some 12,000 pupils—7 1/2 per cent higher than normal for this time of year—were absent, the board said Monday night. Over-all attendance was about 82 per cent, compared with 90 per cent on a normal school day, a spokesman said.

County school principals followed routine procedures and positioned staff members at entranceways to check schedules, issue locker numbers and direct students to home room classes.

Bowie Senior High School students began arriving before daybreak, stumbling sleepily from buses and heading to their classes. One black student looked over her shoulder and shouted to a friend, "Hey, we got here at 7 a.m!"

Parents and school administrators had tried hard over the past year to avert busing and preserve the neighborhood school concept.

A petition by the school board to delay implementation of the desegregation order was rejected by the U.S. Supreme Court Friday.

The busing order resulted from a suit filed last year on behalf of eight black pupils by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and the American Civil Liberties Union.

US, USSR, Allies Agree To Meet About Cuts

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP)-Representatives of the United States, the Soviet Union and 17 of their allies have agreed to meet Wednesday in Vienna to try to work out a basis for cutting the armed forces of the East and West facing each other in the heart of Europe.

The meeting may help focus the attention of President Nixon's administration on Europe, now that a cease-fire agreement has been signed in Vietnam.

With the United States, which has over 300,000 men in Europe, will come Canada, Britain, West Germany, Belgium, the Netherlands, Luxembourg, Italy, Turkey and Greece.

The Soviets are bringing East Germany, Poland, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria and Romania, which often takes an independent line from Moscow.

The fact that Western countries will outnumber the Communists, 12 to 7, will not affect events. At meetings like this, each participant has a virtual veto.

The 19 countries will be represented by high-level diplomats.

Their job will be to seek common ground. They must see if agreement exists on what countries should participate in further talks, what area should be covered by reductions in force, what kinds of troops or weapons might be withdrawn.

If the diplomats succeed, Cabinet ministers would come next. A conference might be organized in the fall at which the lines of the negotiation would be laid out, but it would probably take years to reach concrete agreements.

The U.S. delegation arrived in Vienna Monday.

56 POWs Unaccounted For

WASHINGTON (AP)—Fifty-six Americans known to have been prisoners of war in Southeast Asia remain unaccounted for by North Vietnam, the Pentagon said Monday.

Defense Department spokesman Jerry W. Friedheim said an initial name-by-name analysis indicates that there were "56 men that we had previously carried on our list of prisoners of war that are not on either list" received from the North Vietnamese.

Officials said these men were known to have been alive in Communist prison camps at some point during the war.

Two lists turned over to U.S. officials in Paris Saturday by the Communists identify 555 U.S. fighting men captured in North and South Vietnam and 55 others who died.

There also were no clues to the whereabouts of 1,269 men listed as missing in Southeast Asia, including more than 300 lost in Laos during air strikes against enemy supply routes.

"We don't have any further information about them at this point," Friedheim told newsmen. But he said a list of the missing and captured in Laos was expected shortly.

"We're continuing to seek clarification on that through diplomatic channels" in Paris and also through the four-power joint military commission, he said.

The commission—comprising the United States, North and South Vietnam and the Viet Cong—will supervise the cease-fire during the first 60 days until the International Control Commission takes over.

Friedheim said the Laos list was expected despite the continued U.S. bombing of Communist supply lines in that country. "We don't see any connection there," he replied when asked if the bombing would jeopardize the release of POWs and an accounting of the missing.

Sen. Charles Percy, R.—Ill., said unless the Communists provide a full accounting of all Americans there will be massive resistance" in Congress to any postwar reconstruction aid to North Vietnam.

In outlining terms of the peace agreement, presidential adviser Henry Kissinger had said the issue of economic aid would be discussed only after implementation of the agreement "is well advanced."

Friedheim reported that an analysis of the POW list provided by North Vietnam showed some discrepancies and variations with information previously known by the Pentagon.

The Defense Department had carried 591 Americans captive and 1,334 missing—a total of 1,925.

He said the total has now been revised upward to 1,935—including 555 Americans awaiting release from prison camps in North and South Vietnam, 55 POWs who died, 56 prisoners still unaccounted for and 1,269 now carried as missing.

New 'Pentagon Papers' Volumes Opened

LOS ANGELES (AP)-U.S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge warned against "annihilation" in North Vietnam in 1964 on grounds there would "be nobody left in North Vietnam on whom to put pressure," heretofore secret volumes of the Pentagon papers revealed Monday.

The volumes have been introduced as evidence at the trial of Daniel Ellsberg and Anthony Russo, charged with espionage, conspiracy and theft in connection with the release of the Pentagon papers.

The papers showed that Lodge sent a message to the U.S. secretary of state on May 15, 1964, discussing tactics to be used by the United States while the Canadian government was acting as a third party in negotiations with Hanoi.

From Saigon, Lodge, then ambassador to South Vietnam, advised that before a Canadian envoy next visited North Vietnam, the South Vietnamese air force should hit a "specific target in North Vietnam," assuming there had been a "terroristic act of proper magnitude beforehand by the North Vietnamese."

"I much prefer a selective use of Vietnamese air power to an overt United States effort perhaps involving the total annihilation of all that has been built in North Vietnam since 1954 because this would surely bring in the Chinese Communists and might well bring in the Russians," Lodge's memo read.

"Moreover, if you lay the country to waste, it is quite likely that you will induce a mood of fatalism in the Viet Cong. Also, there will be nobody left in North Vietnam on whom to put pressure."

Lodge's cable, marked top secret, is among numerous communiques in the four volumes recording the secret diplomacy of Lyndon B. Johnson's administration.

Ellsberg and Russo are not charged with releasing these four volumes to the press, only with copying them. The volumes were entered into evidence by the government at the trial last Friday and segments were shown to jurors on photoslides.

In Brief...

Harvard Gets Grant

WASHINGTON (AP)—A grant of $337,071 to Harvard University in support of a new program of humanities fellowships for lawyers in the teaching profession was announced Monday by the National Endowment for the Humanities.

Announcing the grant, Chairman Ronald S. Bergman said the program is designed to encourage lawyers in the early stage of their teaching careers to spend an academic year studying the humanities.

Chapin Resigning as Nixon's Secretary

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (AP)—With firm denials he was being forced out, the Florida White House said Monday that Dwight Chapin is resigning as President Nixon's appointments secretary.

Chapin's name cropped up in last fall's controversy over alleged political espionage by Republicans, and newspaper accounts named him as White House contact for California lawyer Donald Segretti, identified as a coordinator of the disruptive efforts.

Brennan Confirmed as Labor Secretary

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate Labor Committee today approved President Nixon's nomination of Peter J. Brennan, New York labor leader, to be secretary of Labor.

All of the President's new Cabinet members now have won committee approval, but four of the six still have to be acted on by the Senate.

If you can't find it
you haven't looked at
THE ART SHOP
for all tools of the trade
In the
Amherst Carriage Shops

Montoya Returns!

Curry Hicks Cage
TONIGHT!
Jan. 30 - 8 p.m.

Carlos Montoya, the great Flamenco guitarist joined by the Springfield Symphony Orchestra under Robert Gutter in an all-Spanish Program!

Special feature: "Carom" a recent work for magnetic tape and orchestra by Robert Stern, UMass composer.

TICKETS: $2.00 for UMass undergrads/$4 for others. Available now through Friday in Campus Center lobby. Tickets also available at Fine Arts Council, 125 Herter Hall. Remaining tickets at main entrance, Curry Hicks Cage from 6 p.m. on January 30th.

ORDER TICKETS EARLY AS SELL-OUT EXPECTED FOR THIS EVENT!

President Nixon's newly confirmed secretary of defense, Elliot L. Richardson, waved to cameramen after hearing of his nomination last November. He vacates the office of Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare. (AP)

Richardson Confirmed Secretary of Defense

WASHINGTON (AP)—Senate action on President Nixon's second term Cabinet changes advanced Monday with confirmation of Elliot L. Richardson to be secretary of Defense.

The Senate Labor Committee approved the nomination of Peter K. Brennan, New York labor leader, to be secretary of Labor. A Senate vote was set for Wednesday.

The Foreign Relations Committee began hearings on 11 nominations for ambassadorships and other high positions in the State Department, indicating early approval of Kenneth Rush to be deputy secretary of State, and John A. Scali to be U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, with Cabinet rank.

Richardson, present secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, was confirmed by an 81 to 1 vote, with only Sen. James Abourezk, D-S.D., voting no.

Abourezk said he believes Richardson "very capable," but voted against him as part of an overall campaign to "retrieve Congressional power that has eroded away to the executive branch."

Sen. Harold E. Hughes, D-Iowa, who had blocked Senate action before the peace agreement as a symbolic protest against the Vietnam war, joined in Richardson's support.

POWs To Have Fun

CLARK AIR BASE, Philippines (AP)-If the nurses at Clark Air Base Hospital have their way, the American prisoners of war scheduled to make their first stop here on their journey home from Hanoi will get a sweet taste of femininity and fun.

"We'll stay up with them all night if they want, we'll read to them," said a young blonde nursing lieutenant at the 270-bed hospital that is being specially prepared for the released men's arrival.

"We've got all kinds of games to play, and skits, to make them at home," said another attractive nurse. "This is all we've been able to talk about for the past 1-1/2 years-greeting our boys."

One of the nurses made a special trip to Hong Kong to purchase French perfumes to wear when the men get here.

"Heaven knows what a good French perfume will do to a man who has been in prison for six years," one of the nurses said with a laugh.

They asked that their names not be used because hospital authorities told them not to talk with reporters so that Operation Homecoming-code name for the prisoner release project-would not be jeopardized.

"But we don't think this will jeopardize it. We want everyone at home to know we will do our best to welcome the men," one of the nurses said.

Two of the most attractive nurses will dress up especially for the POWs. The doctors have been collecting stacks of Playboy magazines and other male literature for the men to read as they relax.

A key part of the program will be to familiarize the POWs with recent events in the United States, to bring them up to date on what has happened. Some of the men have been imprisoned since the mid-1960s.

To this end, the hospital staff has planned a series of skits, similar to those in the movie, and television series, M-A-S-H, which told of the zany activities at an Army hospital in the Korean War.

The returning men are expected to spend three to five days in the base hospital before continuing their journey to America.

The Whvy Experience
84point7on FM

Watergate Prosecution Rests

WASHINGTON (AP)—The prosecutor in the Watergate bugging trial told the jury Monday that defendant Gordon Liddy was "the moneyman, the supervisor, the organizer" of espionage in Democratic headquarters and that co-defendant James W. McCord Jr. did his bidding.

Never once referring to involvement by the Committee for Re-Election of the President, for which both men worked, prosecutor Earl J. Silbert said of the two defendants: "He and Liddy were off on an enterprise of their own."

Both sides had rested earlier in the day—the 15th of the trial, and Silbert completed his one-hour closing argument. Judge John J. Sirica put off the defense's closing arguments until Tuesday and said he would issue his instructions to the jury afterward.

Repeatedly turning toward the two defendants—the only ones left on trial from an original seven—Silbert asked:

"Who was the boss that night?" referring to an evening when the men were riding around with a young college student looking over McGovern headquarters.

"The boss was the defendant Liddy, the moneyman, the supervisor, the organizer."

The case against the two men—and the other five who pleaded guilty earlier—began in the predawn hours of June 17th last year, when the political campaign was just heating up. That morning three plain clothes policemen arrested McCord and four others inside Democratic headquarters.

The defense for Liddy and McCord presented only 11 witnesses in an hour and 12 minutes before resting in the early afternoon.

Gerald Alch, McCord's attorney said in his opening arguments three weeks ago that McCord had "no evil- meaning mind—no evil-doing hands."

Peter Maroulis, Liddy's attorney, who reserved his opening statements until Monday, said he would—through his witnesses—"establish a line of innocence in the chain of command."

Government witnesses have testified, Maroulis said, that Liddy was given an intelligence gathering function in the campaign but the prosecution made it appear that the guilt for illegal activities went no higher than Liddy.

McCord, 53, was a one-time FBI radio specialist and for 21 years in the Central Intelligence Agency. He was security director for the Republican National Committee and the Committee for the Re-election of the President at the time two wiretaps were placed in the Democratic party headquarters in the Watergate office building.

McCord is charged in eight counts with conspiracy "to obtain and use information illegally from the offices and headquarters of the Democratic National Committee;" with burglary, and with using bugging devices. A conviction on all eight counts could carry a maximum 60 years in prison and a fine of $60,000.

Liddy, 42, also was in the FBI, had practiced law, and had been a top assistant in the Treasury Department and a White House aide. He was legal counsel for the Committee for the Re-election of the President and then for its finance arm at the time of the alleged conspiracy.

Govt. Expected Recent S. Viet Fighting

WASHINGTON (AP)-The Nixon Administration Monday indicated it had expected the flurry of fighting in South Vietnam that followed the signing of the cease-fire.

Spokesman focused on efforts to make the complicated peace agreements work.

"We're not surprised," presidential press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said in Key Biscayne, Fla., when asked about reports of hundreds of initial cease-fire violations across South Vietnam.

Ziegler said he expects "the peace deal to be scrupulously adhered to."

At the State Department, spokesman Charles W. Bray said: "Everything is new. Solutions to problems, if any, will have to be worked on the ground."

Both spokesmen noted too that the Vietnam and international groups assigned to supervise the cease-fire are beginning work.

Privately, high U.S. officials said they had anticipated right along that the 7 p.m. EST Saturday cease-fire would not mean an immediate silencing of all weapons in the scattered battlefronts throughout South Vietnam.

But they said initial reports indicate that only small fighting actions are taking place.

The officials indicated too that they expect it will take somewhat longer than the one or two days mentioned by William H. Sullivan for the post-truce violence to subside.

Sullivan, top Southeast Asia specialist who helped negotiate the peace agreement, said in Paris Sunday that "in the next day or two we will certainly know how seriously these problems affect the cease-fire.

The officials decline to speculate on what Nixon would do if the peace arrangements threaten to break down.

At the same time, they did voice concern over the possibility of offensives being waged by North Vietnamese forces in neighboring Cambodia and Laos, now that they are freed from combat in South Vietnam.

Efforts are under way for cease-fires in both the adjoining Indochina countries. A North Vietnamese push there now presumably wold be to increase the Communist hold in advance of local truce deals.

Soviet Economy 'Disappointing'

MOSCOW (AP)-The Soviet economy turned in a disappointing performance in 1972, failing to attain planned goals in all major indicators, according to figures published Monday.

There were shortfalls in national income growth, industrial production, labor productivity, personal income and agricultural output.

Especially serious were weaknesses in the consumer goods sector, an area General Secretary Leonid I. Brezhev promised would be given priority in the 1971-75 five-year plan. Two years ago, Brezhnev spoke of "saturating the market with consumer goods."

(Continued on P. 3)

Senate Lecture Note Program

Antro 102; 104B
Botany 100; 101B(3)
Econ 100 A,B; 103A; 104 (1A,3B)
Food Sci 101
Micro 140
Poli Sci 100 (A,B)
Psych 101A (1A,3); 262 (A,B) 263 (A,B); 270 (A,B) 280A (1); 301B
Soc 101 (2,3)
Soc 256 (2)
Speech 115
Zool 101 (A,B,D); 135; 145; 221

Distribution

1) Student Union, Rm. 318 9:30 a.m. - 4:00 p.m.

2) Southwest, JQA Lobby 11:00 - 4:00 p.m.

How do you spell the word for that strange noise your automatic transmission makes?
Sssh.ee. that's how!

They're warning symptoms. Heed them. Have them checked and corrected while they're still minor, and you can save yourself a major repair bill later.

This is the way we've built our business on your confidence in us ... by helping you avoid serious trouble whenever we can.

United Transmission Exchange Inc.
380 King Street Northampton, Mass.
584-6790

An invitation to join...

The Paulist Fathers...A contemporary religious community serving the people of America communicating the Christian message: in the city, on the campus, in the parish, on radio and T.V. Dispelling uncertainty and imparting peace, celebrating the hope of the people of God and speaking on issues that concern the Church.

As an individual, you can develop and share your talents with others. As a member of the Community, you will experience the encouragement and support of fellow Paulists.

We're interested, if you are.

For more information write: Father Donald C. Campbell, Room 104.

Paulist Fathers.
415 West 59th Street
New York, N.Y. 10019

New England Digest

Snow Buries Region, Digging Out Begins

(ASSOCIATED PRESS)

New England had almost made it through January without the expense of major snow removal when a storm buried the six-state region in up to a foot and a half of new snow Monday.

The central part of the region was hardest hit with new accumulations of 15 inches in Keene, N.H., and one foot in Worcester, Mass., reported before the storm started to taper off Monday afternoon.

The snow was welcome at ski resorts in the area, many of which were reporting bare spots last week.

Schools were closed in many sections from Boston to Hartford, Conn., and northward. As the storm was at its most intense point in most places, Cape Cod's radar station at Chatham reported it was just outside the area of precipitation and was enjoying sunshine in a break in the clouds.

A spokesman for the Steamship Authority that connects Woods Hole, Mass. with Nantucket Island and Martha's Vineyard said winds in excess of 70 miles per hour on Nantucket caused the firm to cancel all ferry trips for the day.

The spokesman said winds were so high a chartered flight to carry mail to the mainland had to be cancelled.

Deep snow was reported in parts of Connecticut, central and western Massachusetts and central and southern Vermont and New Hampshire, but cities ringing the area had lesser amounts.

The National Weather Service listed the following depths in inches: Concord, N.H., 3; Hartford, Conn., 4; Caribou and Portland, Maine, 3; Boston and Providence, a trace.

Although many of the southern coastal sections recorded little snow, they had no shortage of precipitation, as rain and rain mixed with snow caused minor flooding and hazardous, slushy driving conditions.

Numerous minor skidding accidents were reported over the six-state region, although icing was not a problem in most places.

The driving conditions were not expected to improve immediately in most areas as temperatures dropped, increasing the threat of icing, and as winds picked up, reducing visibility with wind-driven snow.

Snow removal in the western Massachusetts town of North Adams, where about a foot accumulated, was slowed by a temporary early-morning "sick out" by road crews, city Public Works Commissioner Joseph Girardi said.

Most of the 39-man workforce failed to appear at 2 a.m. because they were protesting being sent home at 10:30 p.m. Sunday, he said, adding snow removal returned to normal at 7 a.m.

Elsewhere, crews were able to keep most highways open throughout the storm, state police said.

Stopping by Central Area on a snowy afternoon we find New Africa House and Wheeler overlooking the snowy situation. (MDC photo by Pam Perry)

GETTING PUSHY—Outside of Gorman, these guys must push this car out of snow. (MDC Photo by Pam Perry)

POW's To Return To Area

Associated Press

BOSTON (AP)—When Navy Lt. Cmdr. Fred Purrington went off to war seven years ago, he said goodbye to his parents and sister. Only his sister will greet him when he comes home from six years in a prison camp.

"I never thought I'd have to go it alone," Elizabeth Purrington said at her New Bedford home. She said she believes her brother knows that his mother died more than a year ago, but probably doesn't know of his father's death four weeks ago. But at least Purrington is among the 555 American POW's coming home. Jimmy Ray and Donald Cook are among those who aren't, they died during the long Vietnam war in unnamed Communist prison camps.

Jimmy Ray, a Marine staff sergeant, always wanted to go to war, his mother said Monday. He wanted to so badly, in fact, he even lied about his age to enlist in the Marines six years ago at the age of 16. He was found out and discharged, but a year later he volunteered again, and headed off for Vietnam.

"Jimmy didn't have to go," Mrs. Mau Ray said. "But in his way he figured he had a job to do, and he did it.

"Jimmy was trying to prove that he was just as good, maybe even a little better, than some of the others. I knew he was as good, but he was trying to prove it to himself."

S.Sgt. Ray became a POW in March of 1968. A year later, a released POW paid a visit to the Ray's Woonsocket, R.I., home and told the family their son was alive and well in Communist prison. On Saturday night, believing her son was a POW, Mrs. Ray found out the truth—Jimmy Ray had died in that prison camp.

"I always believed that Jimmy would come back home," Mrs. Ray said. "I accept this news; I didn't want it, but I accept it."

The same news was delivered to the family of Air Force Maj. Donald G. Cook in Burlington, Vt. Maj. Cook reported to his family to have been alive as late as 1970 in a prison camp, had died in 1967.

"We had so many hopes," Mrs. Cook said. But she and her four daughters ended more than eight years of hoping and planned a memorial service.

"I was so hopeful about peace with honor," she said, "but I don't think there's going to be much honor."

Maj. Cook was captured New Year's Eve, 1964. His family received a letter from him in 1967 and in 1971. The government told the Cooks that a Viet Cong defector had reported seeing Maj. Cook alive and well a year earlier in a prison camp.

Mrs. Cook said she used to like Orientals, "but suddenly I don't have the same fondness for them. I think they're cold and calculating. They can use the bombing for propaganda purposes and tell us about all the people being killed, but they can let an American wife sit for five years and not have the common decency to tell her that her husband is dead." For some people there was reason to celebrate.

"I'm going to cry, I'm going to laugh. I'm just going to go crazy," Mrs. Aran Tellier said Monday in Woonsocket, R.I. She and her husband found out Saturday night that their son, Marine Sgt. Dennis A. Tellier, was among the American POWs who would be coming home.

Tellier was one of the few American soliders reported missing in action—he disappeared in the spring of 1969—to show up on Hanoi's POW list.

"It's wonderful," Mrs. Tellier said. "It's wonderful."

Long Lost Winners Found

NEWTON, Mass. (AP)—Two "long lost" winners in the Massachusetts lottery reported for their $50,000 prizes Monday after the Lottery Commission ran advertisements Friday that $1.5 million in unclaimed winnings are going begging.

Mary Machado, a widow from North Dartmouth, said she had been buying tickets weekly since the lottery began last April, but rarely checked them because she always felt she "wasn't lucky."

A friend who saw the newspaper ad and knew Mrs. Machado bought tickets called her and told her to check her numbers, she said. The winner she found was dated Oct. 12.

Mrs. Machado said she's employed at the regional welfare office in New Bedford.

John Schultz, 27, of Quincy told lottery officials he was in the hospital when his lucky number was drawn Dec. 28.

He said he works for Norfolk Conveyor in Cohasset, is married, has one child and his wife is expecting another.

Lottery winners have one year from the date on their tickets to claim their winnings. After that the money reverts to the prize fund and is distributed along with the other proceeds to the state's 351 cities and towns, a lottery spokesman said.

The spokesman, Dave Ellis, said he expected the commission to run another ad before the lottery's anniversary date of April 6. Unclaimed prizes are in all amounts from $25 to $50,000 he said.

Walpole Becomes 'Another Attica'

BOSTON (AP)—The Walpole State Prison will soon be "another Attica," a group of relatives and friends of inmates predicted Monday.

The convicts have been confined to their cells for several weeks now and the institution has recently undergone a massive "shakedown search that reportedly uncovered a substantial volume of contraband, including weapons.

Top officials were dispatched immediately to the strife-torn institution to assess the situation and to talk with inmates, guards and administrators. Steve Teichner, an aide to vacationing Gove. Francis W. Sargent, said the inspection team includes Acting Correction Commissioner Walt Williams, some deputy commissioners and Garry Robinson, assistant secretary of Human Services. Teichner met with the sometimes emotional group for more than an hour. He said he didn't want to recommend any action that could "make a volatile situation more volatile."

One 4-year-old boy complained he hasn't been able to visit his father and asked the gubernatorial secretary, "Why are they treating them like children?"

Five capitol police officers were at the meeting, held in a basement hearing room far removed from the governor's office.

The conference with Irwin didn't materialize, reportedly because the group insisted on meeting with him in a body. A spokesman for the attorney general's office said Irwin said he would talk with a delegation from the group and that he would not be able to talk to all of them at one time. The spokesman said this arrangement wasn't satisfactory and the group departed.

The contingent had arrived outside the chief executive's suite but they were directed to the basement room and met with Teichner, who has specialized on urban problems for Sargent. From that point, the group planned to meet with Assistant Atty. Gen. John Irwin.

Teichner said the visitors want the prison "unlocked." He said they want to establish an 11-person visiting program with clearance immediately for a smaller group—four or five—to go into the prison to talk with inmates.

SKI CLUB MEETING

JAN. 30, Tuesday 8:00 P.M. Mahar

TRIPS:

Feb. 10 Saturday — to Ascutney

Upcoming Weekend — to Sugarbush

COME AND SIGN UP

JUST ADDED TO THE SCHEDULE:

PHYSICS 100—INTRODUCTION TO PHYSICS: THE WORLD BEYOND OUR SENSES.

Instructor: E. Golowich, Hasbrouck 406, 545-0441.
Course time & place: MWF, 9:05, Hasbrouck 106.

ALSO STILL OPEN — 115, Physics of Music. 117, Nuclear Energy. Inquire in Hasbrouck 110.
These courses are for non-science majors. No prerequisites, 3 credits. Satisfy a science (E) core requirement.

Smoke and volcanic ash billows over the island of Heimaey in Iceland's Westman Islands group Thursday. The smoke spiral is just above the town on the center of the island. (AP)

Psych. Colloquium

On Monday, Feb. 5th, at 4 p.m. in room 304 Tobin Dr. William McGuire, Chairman, Dept. of Psychology, Yale University will present a colloquium entitled, "Perpetual Selectivity and the Self Concept". Dr. McGuire is probably best known for his research and theory into innoculation against attitude change but he is also widely known as an integrator and critic of all kinds of attitude research. He is the former editor of the Journal of Personality and Social Psychology and a member of many national panels for evaluating research. He is perhaps one of the half-dozen most visible social psychologists in the world.

A more specific research talk will be given at noon in room 520 Tobin entitled, "Cognitive Structure in the Remote Attitudinal Effects of Persuasive Communications". This talk will be concerned with the procedures and results of some of Dr. McGuire's current research.

Anyone interested in meeting with Dr. McGuire prior to the colloquium may do so at a coffee hour at 3:15 p.m. in room 423 Tobin.

Tenor To Present Recital

Jon Humphrey, tenor, will present a recital at 8:30 p.m., Wednesday, Feb. 7, in Bowker Auditorium at the University of Massachusetts-Amherst.

Mr. Humphrey has sung throughout the United States in numerous oratorio performances with several major symphonies and has been called by critics "one of the greatest oratorio tenors of our day". He has also sung at many summer festivals and has toured as soloist with the Robert Shaw Chorale. In addition to performances with the New York Pro Musica, on Decca records, he has recorded with RCA, Victor and Columbia Recordings.

This will be Mr. Humphrey's fourth recital in as many years of teaching at the University of Massachusetts.

All future faculty recitals at UMass will begin at 8:30 p.m.

Why is he smiling?

He just had his senior portrait taken for the Index.

All UMass. seniors can come between today and Feb. 9.

Details — Sign up for appointment at Index Office, 2nd floor, Student Union.

Free Candy

Nerve-racking SAT Questions Written By Free-Lancers

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — Miriam Burstein teaches 10th and 12th grade English in New York City, but she devises test questions which affect some 1.5 million college-bound students across the country this year.

Miss Burstein, chairman of the English department at Hunter College High School, moonlights as an "item" writer for Educational Testing Service - ETS.

She is part of a pool of teachers paid on the free-lance basis to submit questions for use in the College Board Standard Aptitude Test - SAT - or College Board Achievement Tests which most high school seniors take to get into college.

How these tests are devised and administered holds a more than passing interest for parents and students. More than 3,500 institutions of higher education and scholarship agencies either require or recommend that applicants take the "college boards", as students and parents all over the country refer to the tests.

Even though ETS emphasizes that test scores provide only one indication of a student's ability, and should be considered along with the overall high school record, interviews and other information, the SATs produce not a few nervous stomachs.

A few become too unhinged even to take the test.

Last year, 1.34 million seniors from 20,000 high schools spent three hours of a Saturday morning hunched over ETS-prints testbooks choosing answers to hundreds of questions from multiple-choice lists.

While all of the questions on the SAT are multiple choice, they do not all simply reflect a student's memory of facts.

Some are designed to show a student's ability to interpret, evaluate, analyze and synthesize.

The SATs are scored within a range of 200 to 800, but Marian Epstein, associate director of test development for ETS, says less than 1-10th of 1 per cent of all those who take the test achieve the 800 level.

"We pitch the difficulty so the mean score will be 50 to 60 per cent correct, so students need not be worried about scoring well if they can't answer every question," Epstein said.

Although students and parents often express concern that a score of less than 650 will bar a student from a good college or university, the mean score for all students who took the SATs in 1971-72 was 450.

The SAT, designed to show verbal and math abilities are offered at some 4,000 centers across the country six times a year. An estimated 211,000 young people are due to take their College Boards on the next testing date, March 3.

Colleges and universities depend on aptitude tests such as the SAT and the ACT assessment examination given by American College Testing of Iowa City, Iowa, to help guide them in selecting from among their applicants. The ACT test last year attracted one million students.

They do it because curriculum and grading are not standard in schools across the country.

So each year college-bound students mail off their $6.50 registration fee. If they plan to attend a Big Ten school or other college in the Midwest or Southwest, they might also take the ACT exam.

In addition, about one-fourth of those taking the SATs will pay an extra $10.50 to take from one to three-hour-long College Board Achievement Tests in any of about 15 subjects.

ETS, now in its 25th year, was set up to meet the measurement needs of American education. Although it is now heavily involved in educational research, most Americans are familiar with ETS because it produces and administers tests for the College Entrance Examination Board, a nonprofit association of 1,600 colleges and universities, secondary schools, school systems and education associations.

The type of questions included in the SATs and what they are designed to measure is determined by ETS's test development staff and a standing committee of the College Board on Aptitude Testing.

Study Of Poor Women As Students

The University of Massachusetts is currently involved in a short-term study of its responsibility to local poor and welfare women as potential students, and the feasibility of meeting that responsibility. Coordinated by Elizabeth Dickey, a staff member of Everywoman's Center, the study is being sponsored by the office of the associate provost.

Ms. Dickey is contacting local organizations and individuals who would have information that would lend itself to completing an accurate picture of the higher educational needs and interests of area poor women. Based on the results of the study, the University of Massachusetts will determine the extent to which it can meet the needs. This involves admissions, financial aid, day care, compensatory reading and math, counseling, and other considerations of immediate importance to women-becoming-students.

Women in the Amherst area who are poor, and for economic reasons have not pursued a college education, are urged to call or write Elizabeth Dickey, Everywoman's Center, Munson Hall, 545-0883.

Wanna be an example? Give a kid a break. Show him a model he can form his character on. Be an alternative to the world he couldn't make it in.

Come to the Commonwealth Room in the Student Union Tues. TONIGHT at 7:30 p.m.

Didn't you come here for an education?

JOE, Juvenile Opportunities Extension volunteers are needed at Westfield Detention Center and in the Holyoke, Springfield area.

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

BOARD OF EDITORS

EDITOR IN CHIEF James E. Gold
MANAGING EDITOR Nathan Gorenstein
BUSINESS MANAGER William L. Manburg
EXECUTIVE EDITOR Stephen G. Tripoli
NEWS EDITOR Donald J. Bishop
SPORTS EDITOR William E. Ballou
PHOTO EDITOR Gib Fullerton
FINE ARTS EDITOR Robert Nesti

ASST. MANAGING EDITOR Steve Fine
ADVERTISING MANAGER Jeanne Bauge
ASST. PHOTO EDITOR Alan Chapman
ASST. SPORTS EDITOR Roy Lyons

TONIGHT'S STAFF

ISSUE EDITOR Tom Borkowski
NIGHT STAFF Karen Lynch, Lucille Hryniewich
EDITORIAL Ed Fogarty
SPORTS Bill Ballou
DARKROOM Pete Manera, Pam Perry
AD LAYOUT Lisa Saunders

COLLEGIAN STAFF

NEWS STAFF: Don Bishop, News Editor, Bob Scheier, Pam Hylek, Linda Craven, Shelley Bakst, Bill Densmore, Bob Callahan, Mark Vogler, Don Glickstein, Susan Hubbard, Steve Seche, Kevin Kevill, Laura Dubowski, Steve Fisher, Mary Goodyear, Hugh Owen, Joyce Kosofsky, Avis Yuni, A.J. Bastarache, Arnie Newberger, Roberta Martone, Buffy Spencer, Jeff Levin, Wall Laliberte, Barbara Voorhees, Carolyn Caldwell, Cindy Gonet, Steve Ruggles, Brian Coyne, Kerry Mello, Anne Collington, Imelda Rojek, Frances Brock, Kent Best, Jerry Altman, Marilou Barsam, Jeannette Martineau.

ISSUE EDITORS: Mary Vorderer, Jerry Lazar, Tom Borkowski, Steve Ferrara, Bob Scheier.

NIGHT STAFF: Karen Lynch, Dick Fitzgerald, Sharon Lempicki, Christine Olhoff, Jan Liva, Gail McDonnell, Jan Alexander, Caroline Majka, Mona Robitaille, Joe Vinsky.

EDITORIAL STAFF: Steve Tripoli, Executive Editor, Ed Bryant, Randy Shuldiner, Jeannette Martineau, Don Glickstein, Steve Anderson, Shelly Karp, Gabe Imperato, Dean Tucker, Matt Tackett, Reid Fishman, Ed Fogarty, Andrew Barraford.

BUSINESS STAFF: Bill Manburg, Business Manager, Jeanne Bauge, Advertising Manager. CIRCULATION: Tom Miller, Mike Saleeba. AD LAYOUT: Lisa Saunders, Shelley Sack, Jan Auman, Norma Friedman, Nadine Gray. AD REPRESENTATIVES: Jeff Billig, John Mullen, Richard Rothstein, Kevin O'Malley, Joan Plante, Michael Wallace, Laura Sicklick, Michael Shor, Brent Wilkes, John Edmund.

SPORTS STAFF: Bill Ballou, Sports Editor, Roy Lyons, Earle Barroll, Marty Kelley, Steve Crowe, John Bock, Mike brophy, Doug Fidler, Avis Yuni, Diane Bissonnette, Geoff Kurinsky, Dan Kamai, Bob Estelle, Frank Antosiewicz, John Calabria, Mike Kasavana.

PHOTO STAFF: Gib Fullerton, Photo Editor, Alan Chapman, Steve Smith, Pete Manera, George Withers, Doug Hurst, John Neisher, Steve Quigley, Kevin Erkkila, Bill Beggs, Mark Maleski, Kevin Mack, Sue Goldbaum, Steve Ruggles, Jim Pappas, Pam Perry.

POOR RICHARD'S STAFF: Bob Nesti, Ken Sulin, Christine Sullivan, Jim Lavrakas, Howard Bloom, Steve Ferber, Ed Bryant, Mike Kostek, Jeff Clayton, Richard Bean, Steve Feld, Gary Gomes, Brian Dailey, Galen Tinder, Carl Greenburg, David Ritchkoff, Richard Hanson, Ed Smith, Faye Halpern, Jeff Maienza, Diane Staaf.

Undergraduate newspaper of the University of Massachusetts. The Staff is responsible for its content and no faculty members or administrators read it for accuracy or approval prior to publication.

Unsigned editorials represent the view of this paper. They do not necessarily reflect the views of the faculty, administration, or student body as a whole. Signed editorials, columns, reviews, cartoons, and letters represent the personal views of the authors.

The Collegian subscribes to the Associated Press and the Liberation News Service. Publication of their material does not constitute endorsement.

Attention Collegian Staff

A complete listing of the staff of the Massachusetts Daily Collegian is printed above. If your name appears on the list, you are eligible to vote in the Collegian staff election Thursday, February 1st, at 7:30 P.M. (the site of the election will be announced in the Collegian before then). If your name does not appear above and you feel that it should please contact the editor in charge of your department immediately.

Gabe Imperato

No Deal

It is the day after Lyndon Johnson's funeral. Richard Nixon is overheard discussing the future of his administration with his close friend and advisor H. R. (Bob) Haldeman.

NIXON: Well Bob, Lyndon has passed away.

HALDEMAN: How did you feel at the funeral?

NIXON: I had mixed emotions. I felt sorry for Lyndon and his family, but you know I was never enthusiastic about his domestic policies and programs.

HALDEMAN: You mean The Great Society programs and agencies.

NIXON: Yeah.

HALDEMAN: Oh.

NIXON: Now don't get me wrong, I liked Lyndon as a person, but all this Great Society bunk doesn't sit very well with me.

HALDEMAN You mean big government.

NIXON: Exactly. The scourge of the sixties. Lyndon was largely responsible. He pushed it on the American people. He helped to destroy their responsibility and sense of initiative. He helped to perpetuate the erosion of the moral fiber of America, that I intend to restore.

HALDEMAN: You're being quite candid aren't you.

NIXON: Well yes. I want this to be perfectly clear. I intend to reduce the size of the government. I intend to dismantle those remnants of the Great Society. We will move towards a return to those glorious days of Calvin Coolidge.

HALDEMAN: Interesting.

NIXON: This is the job I meant to carry out while campaigning in '68. It's actually the job I meant to carry out when I first came to the House of Representatives. Now I am President. I am in the best position to realize my dreams.

HALDEMAN: Interesting.

NIXON: Bob the first four years were tough. There were many external problems to get out of the way before I got down to my real program.

HALDEMAN: Oh you mean Vietnam, re-election, court-packing etc. Those things?

NIXON: Exactly. They are now out of the way. They are behind us. The road is now clear for us. Congress has been reduced to nothing, the Court is mine, 75% of the population voted for me and there isn't a Democrat in signt. Lyndon was the last to go. My power is consolidated; we are just golden Bob. I will leave the Nixon stamp on America before I leave office.

HALDEMAN: Splendid.

NIXON: I will restore America back to what it is.

HALDEMAN: Yes, back to what it is.

NIXON: I will give America back to America.

HALDEMAN: Yes America.

NIXON: Yes for America. For those silent ones that cannot be heard. They are out there, I can here them.

HALDEMAN: Yes America.

NIXON: America.

HALDEMAN and NIXON: God Bless America.

NIXON: Yes God.

HALDEMAN: Amen.

NIXON: You see Bob I really haven't changed much since I first came to D.C. I set out to do then what I want to complete now.

HALDEMAN: You mean send America back to the Stone Age?

NIXON: Well not exactly the Stone Age. I'll settle for anything before the New Deal.

HALDEMAN: How are you going to fit a 1973 American society into an 1873 value orientation.

NIXON: Easy, we'll just do it.

HALDEMAN: What shall we call the program?

NIXON: Well I was thinking of calling it the NO DEAL.

HALDEMAN: Sounds great.

NIXON: Yup NO DEAL.

Gabe Imperato is an MDC Editorial Columnist.

Andrew E. Barraford

Peace?

It is a quiet day today, a time to think in peace. Some premature shouts of peace have been filling the newspapers and as there was no beginning to the war; the end is only the cessation of our involvement. This is the hope of most people, although clothing it in the rhetoric of 'peace with honor' ranks close to being an empty phrase. The war goes on as if the Americans had only been a mirage.

Peace!

Then one thinks about having peace. Times with the memory of peace seems to wane in an unimportant fraction of my thoughts. In an unused and spider-web world I dimly perceive when I used to not think of war. As I recalled, it is a childhood world of twilight and sparkling discoveries, where even though a war was in the process of being made (prepared or conducted) the twilight world was all that my universe could understand.

Peace?

It seems incredibly unreal as though it could not really be true and I wonder if America will actually be able to enjoy a peaceful world. Maybe the United States after its Spartan enterprises (WWII, Cold, Korean, & Indochina Wars) is now truly what Russian propaganda warned the world of in its exaggerated overtones; maybe it has become a war machine. True our participation in Vietnam and hopefully throughout Indochina is over yet many of our attitudes will reflect our government and vice versa. Nixon is rightly cutting down the expenses of government, but a nation which needs internal attention by a truly delicate surgeon now has all the edges worn off his scalpels. The domestic budget has been ravaged of its under-expenditures. The whole nation is going to suffer. It is another war; the War of Inflation. America has had a long time to learn about wars and suffering. The budgetary effort, the suffering, though needed, is misplaced in an economy that is cut down in all the humane capacities; the war machine suffers very little. A 2.7 billion dollar drop is only a 3% reduction which is basically explained in the drop of military manpower. Do you think peace is going to last? There is not a 'Red Scare' to propel the dollars to the war machine without question. There is (time will tell) no more involvement in Vietnam.

Peace!

Who is going to talk of peace when 1/3 of the economy, the country, is a war machine? How will the war machine justify itself? To a war machine peace is only the times between wars. War only justifies a war machine. Peace even without Vietnam shows the long expanded domino effect of war after war after war.

Peace?

I do not know if I should worry about that sort of stuff, the stuff of dreams. Maybe I should leave my dreams in the cobweb world of my memories for actually I do not know of any other world than the twilight world of war. Where everything is tempered with death; where everything is grown to produce a death machine.

Dimly, I recall some sparkling discoveries and remember that they were mine only if I wanted them, but they are growing dimmer as I listen to the rhetoric.

Andrew E. Barraford is an MDC Editorial Columnist.

'NO. . . NO PLANS. . .'

Peace, Love, and Friendship

Letters To The Editor

S.W. Assembly

To The Editor:

On the 30th of January 1973 at 8 p.m. in the backroom of the Hampden Student Center in Southwest (entrance faces the horsehoe; the room is upstairs) the Southwest Assembly as one of the first orders of business will elect three new officers to fill the presently vacated posts of vice-president, secretary, and treasurer. Any resident of Southwest is eligible to run for these posts in student government.

The Vice-President of the Assembly will assist the President at his duties and is an ex-officio member of all Southwest committees. The secretary will keep the minutes and is responsible for publishing an Assembly report as soon as possible after each meeting. The Secretary is responsible for all records not otherwise assigned.

The Treasurer is responsible for all financial records of theAssembly and the administration of its funds. The Treasurer will submit a monthly report of expenditures, incomes, and balances to the Assembly, and verbal reports when called upon to do so at meetings. The Treasurer is ex-officio Chairman of the Finance Committee.

Each of these positions carries with it full voting privileges in the Southwest Assembly and membership on the Executive Committee.

There are also a number of openings on important groups in Southwest. The first is a newly formed committee called Budgets which will handle all the Southwest budgets. There are six student positions available and this committee will require hard work and at least weekly meetings.

Another new group, the Hampden Student Center Board of Governors has five student openings. This group will handle the rules, regulations and allocation of space in the three dining commons.

There is also an opening for a student to represent Southwest on the Student Union/Campus Center Board of Governors.

There are also approximately four to five openings available for Southwest residents on the Southwest Curriculum Committee which meets approximately monthly and decides whether a Southwest 390 proposal becomes a course.

Each of these positions are important and will involve 5-10 hours of work a week. Any Southwest resident interested in any of these positions should contact Larry St. Cyr, Jr., President of the Southwest Assembly at either 6-1463 (451 Patterson) or 5-1552 (J.Q.A. Lobby, SWA Office) or leave a message in the office in J.Q.A. Lobby or pick up an application there and fill it out and return it. All positions except the officers are appointive positions and will be announced at the SWA meeting of 6 February. Applications are due by noon the 5th of January. The officers will be elected at the 30 January meeting.

Lawrence M. St. Cyr, Jr.

Tragic Hero

To The Editor:

Very few heroes have come out of the political and military atrocity which we call the Vietnam war. The young sergeant who blew the whistle on Gen. John D. Lavelle was one of those exceptions. A few years earlier, Sgt. Frank would have gone to jail if he had tried to focus public attention on the illegal acts of his superiors.

A new hero has emerged from the bloody tragedy in Southeast Asia. His name is Capt. Michael J. Heck, a much decorated B52 commander who refused to fly any more combat missions after the Christmas cease-fire. Heck stated: "War creates an evil far greater than anything it is trying to prevent, whatever the reasons, even for the self-determination of South Vietnam. The goals do not justify the mass destruction and killing. It's torn our own country apart."

To speak up while one is still in the military is a difficult job. The pressure, the harrassment, the real probability of going to jail is so strong that few men can surmount the obstacles and speak their conscience. I know, I was a captain in the Air Force stationed just a few miles north of Capt. Heck's base in southern Thailand. I did not cry stop to this war until I was discharged. That is why Capt. Heck is a hero and I am not.

While I was able to stand on my home ground and decry the bloodbath in Indochina with reasonable impunity, Capt. Heck faces a two-year prison term. Write to your Congressman and Senators today and tell them in your own words that Capt. Heck should not go to jail for saying what many Christians now admit. The participation of American forces in Vietnam was immoral and unjust.

Joseph M. Carlin

'IF HE THINKS VIETNAM WAS A HARDSHIP, WAIT TILL HE TRIES TO SIGN A PEACE TREATY WITH US!'

Editorial Points

What! You missed yesterday's edition of The Collegian! Go down quick to the C.E.Q., and take one out of recycling.

•••

Looks like those little white trucks are under fire. You know, the tow trucks that flit about here and there gathering up those pesky autos. We wonder if they got stuck in the snow.

•••

(click)"...and the tension is mounting. The hands are raised! Who's going to win." Nope, there's no telling. But this Thursday, The Collegian will have a new Board of Editors. It's a tight race folks.

•••

Looks like that new fleet of buses has fouled a lot of people. The people in Cliffside are stranded, and the UMass supporters are stuck. There's no transportation to the basketball games. (see yesterday's Collegian)'

•••

Over 400 people have applied for the position of Director of Campus Center. But isn't the Campus Center losing money? Isn't it inherent that the C.C. should lose money? Then why do all those people want that job? Must be they want the experience.

It's Ended

If it's over -
And I hope it's over;
If it's done -
And I hope it's done;
If it's finished -
And I hope it's finished;
If it's ended -
And I hope it's ended;
If it's over -
It's done,
It's finished,
It's ended.
God, finally, it's ended.

Frank Jay

Len and Cindy

Honey suckle her flowing hair of many sunshine colors
smells a nearness
I have to be a rose petal's smooth softness

the fine flour of pollen
the bloom of her skin dew upon a Spring sunrise sparkle her naked clear eyed smile

the sweet breath of her laughter

the bee of the flower
the breath of each other into each other warm to the feel we have to be

Bill English

Carlos Montoya, the famed flamenco guitarist, is shown signing autographs on his last visit to UMass in 1969. He returns tonight to give a performance with the Springfield Symphony Orchestra in Curry Hicks Cage.

Guitarist Montoya To Perform Tonight

Curry Hicks Cage will rebound to the sound of music rather than cheering basketball crowds at 8 p.m. tomorrow, Tuesday, Jan. 30.

While the UMass basketball team meets Holy Cross College in Springfield's new Civic Center, their usual habitat will be used by the University's Fine Arts Council for the first Promenade Concert, marking the opening of second semester activities. The concert will feature the popular flamenco guitarist Carlos Montoya in concert with The Springfield Symphony Orchestra under Robert Gutter's direction.

Mr. Gutter has programmed an almost all-Spanish program in honor of the visiting guitar virtuoso, includinga performance of Mr. Montoya's own "Suite Flamenca" for guitar and full symphony orchestra. The program, which will be repeated Feb. 11 in Springfield Municipal Auditorium will be light-classical in nature and will include works by Chabrier, de Falla, Benjamin, and Ginastera. In addition, Mr. Montoya will perform a group of works for solo guitar.

A special innovation in tomorrow evening's concert at the University will be a performance of "Carom", a work commissioned and first performed by The Springfield Symphony Orchestra last season and composed by UMass faculty member Robert Stern. While the work does not conform to the all-Spanish flavor of the concert, Conductor Gutter programmed "Carom" at the University so area listeners would have an opportunity to acquaint themselves with this work for orchestra and magnetic tape.

This concert marks the second visit to campus by the Springfield Symphony, the first with Robert Gutter as music director. Remaining tickets for this concert are available from the University's Fine Arts Council, 125 Herter Hall in Amherst, telephone 545-0202, and are priced at $4 (half price to UMass undergrads). Due to the large attendance expected, the Council's box office will remain open until 6 p.m. tomorrow. A box office at Curry Hicks Cage main entrance will open at 6:15 p.m. to handle tickets which still remain.

Fellowships Available

Fellowships are available beginning academic year 1973-74 to women pursuing graduate studies at UMass or at other institutions. The Palmer Fellowship carries a stipend of $3,500, and the recipient may study in the U.S. or abroad, however she must be no more than 26 years of age at the time of appointment and remain unmarried throughout the tenure of the appointment. The Shackford Medical Scholarship is for the study of medicine with a view to general practice, not psychiatry and carries a stipend of $3,500. This announcement is posted on the Graduate School Bulletin Board, Second Floor, Graduate Research Center.

Applications may be obtained from the Secretary to the Committee on Graduate Scholarships, Wellesley College, Wellesley, MA 02180, and must be filed before February 20, 1973.

RENT A BUS TO CIVIC CENTER

U.MASS
VS.
HOLY CROSS

JAN. 30 8:00 P.M.

FOR INFORMATION CALL
UM TICKET OFFICE 545-0398

'Language Workshop' In Speech

Language, its whats, whys and wherefores, will be featured in a special course offered this spring semester by the communication disorders area of the speech department at UMass.

The "Language Workshop" will be a series of coordinated lectures on various aspects of human language. Speech 690A, "Seminar in Communication Disorders: Language Workshop", may be taken for three academic credits; and the public may also attend individual lectures in the series--Wesnesdays from 6:30 to 9 p.m. in Thompson room 106. Several of the lecturers will have informal discussions Thursday mornings.

Eminent scholars in various fields of study will give the lectures which will stress an interdisciplinary approach to language theory, acquisition, assessment, remediation, and education. The course is designed for UMass students, and as a resource to the surrounding community.

Dr. E. H. Nober, director of the UMass communication disorders area, has developed the lecture series and will be instructor for students who register for academic credit. The course may be taken by graduate students, and undergraduate students may enroll with permission of the instructor. Course work will involve reading assignments and a final examination.

Dr. Murray Miron of the Syracuse University psychology department will give the first lecture tomorrow on "Of Men and Other Singing Animals."

Other lectures in the series:

Feb. 7, Michael Arbib, UMass department of computer and information science, "Cybernetics, Perception and the Evolution of Language".

Feb. 14, John Carroll, Princeton University psychology department, "Language Performance".

Feb. 21, Ronald Tikofsky, Florida International University psychology department, "Psycholinguistics and Language Disorders".

Feb. 28, Michael Marge, United States Office of Education, "Language Acquisition in Children".

March 7, Jay Keyser, U'lass linguistics department, "What We Do When We Speak": An Introduction to Linguistic Theory.

March 14, John Black, Ohio State University speech and hearing science, "Letter Predicting in Learning and Relearning English".

March 21, Walter Wolfram, Center of Applied Linguistics, Washington, D.C., "Black and White Speech Relationships in the Deep South".

April 4, Elizabeth Wilig, Boston University special education department, "Aphasia Diagnosis and Therapy in Adults".

April 11, Herbert Goldstein, Yeshiva University special education, "Social Learning Curriculums".

April 18, Richard Schiefelbusch, University of Kansas Center for Research on Human Development, "Strategies for Teaching Language to Normal and Handicapped Children".

April 25, Harris Winitz, University of Missouri-Kansas City division of speech and hearing science, "Implications of Psycholinguistics for Speech and Language Testing and Therapy".

May 2, Eric Lennenberg, Cornell University psychology department, "Biological Aspects of Language".

May 9, E. Harris Nober, UMass speech department, Summary and Review.

DuBois 'Series' Continues

The W.E.B. DuBois Center in Springfield, the community contingent of the W.E.B. DuBois Department of Afro-American Studies at UMass, is offering its "Cultural Series", open to the general public. The series will be held Tuesday and Thursday evening at 7:00 p.m. at the W.E.B DuBois Center, located at 80 Hancock Street in Springfield. For further information, please call 413-737-3515 or 413-538-2507.

Listed below are the programs for February:

THE BLACK WOMAN

1, Thursday - "The Third World Woman" - ROSA BLANCO, DIANA RAMOS.

ARTS & ISSUES

6, Tuesday - "Art and Politics" - ACKLYN LYNCH.
8, Thursday - "Great Black Music" - BILL HASSON.
13, Tuesday - "Black Music in the Inner City" - ROLAND WIGGINS.
15, Thursday - "The New Africa Choir" - MAX ROACH
20, Tuesday - "Black Music in the Americas" - ARCHIE SHEPP.
22, Thursday - "The Don Blackman Jazz Group" - DON BLACKMAN, ARCHIE SHEPP, and others.
27, Tuesday - "Black Dance: Its Origins" - DIANA RAMOS.

BLUEWALL COFFEEHOUSE
Anyone can Play!
call Flo or Karen
546-7393

J.O.E. NEEDS YOU.

The Juvenile Opportunities Extension needs volunteers to work with youthful offenders in and out of an institutional setting. There's more to an education than classrooms and books. Come to our meeting on Tuesday the 30th of January in the Commonwealth Room of the Student Union.

Television Tonight

5:00 JIM AND TAMMY (19)
MISTER ROGERS NEIGHBORHOOD (24) (57)
SUPERMAN (27)
THE BEVERLY HILLBILLIES (30)
GOMER PYLE (40)
5:30 HOGANS HEROES (22)
THE ELECTRIC COMPANY (24) (57)
GOMER PYLE (27)
HOGANS HEROES (30)
NEWSBEAT NEWS (40)
5:55 WHAT'S HAPPENING (3)
6:00 NEWS, WEATHER, SPORTS (3)
12 O'CLOCK HIGH (18)
BIG NEWS 90 (22)
ZOOM (24) (57)
PETTICOAT JUNCTION (27)
TO TELL THE TRUTH (30)
WILD WILD WEST (40)
6:30 CBS EVENING NEWS WITH WALTER CRONKITE (3)
NBC NIGHTLY NEWS (22) (30)
FOOD FOR YOUTH (24)
THE EARLY SHOW "The Grapes of Wrath" (27)
6:55 NEWSBEAT NEWS (40)
7:00 THE AMAZING WORLD OF KRESKIN (3)
DICK VAN DYKE (18)
THE BIRTH AND DEATH OF A STAR (24)
NEWS EARLY REPORT (30)
ABC EVENING NEWS (8) (40)
LOUIS LYONS NEWS AND COMMENT (57)
7:30 I'VE GOT A SECRET (3)
THIS IS YOUR LIFE Guest Dana Andrews (8)
THE MANCINI GENERATION (18)
THE PARENT GAME (22)
BOOK BEAT "The Best and the Brightest" by David Halberstam. (24)
ANIMAL WORLD (30)
DRAGNET "The Big Little Victim" (40)
8:00 MAUDE (3)
TEMPERATURES RISING (8) (40)
THE ADVENTURER (18)
NBC TUESDAY NIGHT AT THE MOVIES "Baffled" (22) (30)
FOURTH ESTATE Discussion of page one story. Joseph Steinberg moderates. (24)
THE FRENCH CHEF (57)
8:30 HAWAII FIVE-O (3)
TUESDAY MOVIE OF THE WEEK "A Cold Night's Death" (8) (40)
BILL MOYERS JOURNAL (24) (57)
THRILLER (27)
9:00 THE 700 CLUB (18)
BEHIND THE LINES (24) (57)
9:30 THE NEW CBS TUESDAY NIGHT MOVIE "Bird of Prey" (3)
BLACK JOURNAL (24) (57)
TWILIGHT ZONE (27)
10:00 MARCUS WELBY M.D. (8) (40)
IF YOU WANT US TO STAND DOWN TELL US. (22) (30)
THE STATE OF CONNECTICUT (24)
NEWS (27)
MARTIN AGRONSKY EVENING EDITION (57)
PEYTON PLACE (27)
10:30 SOUL (24) (57)
11:00 NEWS, WEATHER, SPORTS (3)
ACTION NEWS (8)
NEWS (18)
THE BIG NEWS (22)
NEWS LATE REPORT (30)
NEWSBEAT NEWS (40)
11:05 JANAKI (24)
11:30 STARLIGHT MOVIE "Look Back in Anger" (3)
ABC WIDE WORLD OF ENTERTAINMENT "Honeymoon Suite": Rose Marie and Morey Amsterdam (8) (40)
THE TONIGHT SHOW (22) (30)
1:00 LOCAL NEWS HEADLINES (8)
NEWS (22) (30)

Alumni Seminars Planned

Red Tide and Constitutional Rights will be discussed at University of Massachusetts Alumni Seminars in Peabody and Braintree in February.

The seminars are the first in a new series of education programs planned for UMass alumni.

UMass faculty members will lead the discussions which are open to UMass alumni and guests, Feb. 13 and 28.

Prof. Charles Yentsch, director of the UMass Marine Station in Gloucester, and Dr. Edward Gilfillan, Marine State research associate who discovered Red Tide off the Massachusetts coast last fall, will discuss Red Tide causes, and will clarify questions concerning shellfish poisoning. This seminar will be Tuesday, Feb. 13, at 7:30 p.m. at the Holiday Inn, Peabody.

"Constitutional Rights: Are we losing our personal freedoms?" will be the second seminar Wednesday, Feb. 28, at 7:30 p.m. at the Sheraton Tara, Braintree.

Dean Alfange will talk about the Warren Court's protections of free speech. He is dean of the faculty of social and behavioral sciences at UMass-Amherst. Courts, cops and criminals will be the discussion topic for Dr. Robert Steamer, acting chairman of the politics department at UMass-Boston. He will be concerned with guarantees in the Bill of Rights of persons accused of crimes.

Further information on the seminars, which involve a small fee, and related readings, may be obtained from Arthur E. Petrosemolo, Director of Alumni Relations, UMass Alumni Office, Amherst, Mass. 01002. Telephone (413) 545-2317.

Women's Info For Library

Needed: one or several women to organize area women's information for the projected Community Information Center at Jones Library, Amherst.

Job would largely entail responsibility for collecting information on women's needs and services available in our local area; and designing an efficient system to make this information available that is easily used and updated. Hours are flexible, but would entail a minimum of three hours per week.

Information skills, i.e. the ability to look at masses of information and give it a semblance of order, or the desire to develop such skills are needed, as well as a knowledge of area women's groups; a large degree of self-initiative and some writing ability. These requirements, however, can be waived for the enthusiastic, energtic, concerned, and willing to act.

Credit will probably have to be arranged by individual women with their respective departments, but Everywoman's Center can give some leads as to what faculty would be most receptive.

For further information contact: Bonnie Isman, Adult Services Librarian, Jones Library, Amherst, 253-3101.

Stuff it.

Rent your own refrigerator...
Semester Special $17.50*

- Compact (20 x 17 x 18")
- Spacious (2 cubic feet)
- Inexpensive
- University approved

*plus tax & $10 refundable deposit

CONTACT:
253-2494
mini kool

China-India Lectures Continue

The last four lectures of an Amherst College fall-winter lecture series on "New Approaches to the History of Modern China and India" will be given on successive Thursday evenings during February. Each lecture will be held at 8 p.m. in the Converse Hall Assembly Room. The lectures are addressed to students of the social sciences and are open to the public without charge.

On Feb. 1, Angus McDonald, Jr., of the University of California, Berkeley, will speak on "Urban Origins of Rural Revolution in Twentieth Century China" and the following Thursday, Feb. 8, Michael Metelits, also of the University of California, Berkeley, will give a lecture on "Naiks and Natus: Two Family Responses to Changes in Socio-Political Power in Western India."

Susan J. Lewandowski, of the University of Chicago, will speak on "Kerala Migrants in Madras City, India: A Case Study in Social Change" on Feb. 15 and on Feb. 22, the final lecture, "Comparative Asian History and Social Science Theories: Approaches to Early Nineteenth Century Calcutta and Canton" will be given by Assistant Professor Dilip K. Basu, University of California, Santa Cruz.

The series, presented by the College's department of history, featured five lectures in the fall and is comparative and cross-disciplinary in perspective. It is intended to demonstrate innovative approaches being devised and employed by young specialists to further an understanding of modern China and India.

'Student Exchange' Open

Applications are available until March 1, 1973, in the Admissions Office, Whitmore Hall, for Undergraduate Students interested in going on exchange either semester of next year. The participating institutions for 1973-74, are:

Illinois State University, Montana State University, Morgan State College, Ohio University, Oregon State University, Rutgers-the State University of New Jersey (at New Brunswick), University of Alabama, University of Hawaii, University of Idaho, University of Maine-Fort Kent, University of Massachusetts-Amherst, University of Montana, University of Nevada-Reno, University of Oregon, University of South Florida, University of Wisconsin-Green Bay.

The student applying for an exchange should be a sophomore. The exchange would be during his junior year. The student must have at least a 2.5 cumulative grade point average. Students who are interested in participating in the program for next year must complete an application and return it to Mr. Loder, Office of the Registrar, no later than the deadline of March 1, 1973. Final selections, including a list of alternates, are expected to be completed by March 31, 1973.

Veteran Grads

The veterans affairs office (239d Whitmore) is compiling a referral list of tutors. All veteran graduate students are urged to come to the veterans office so that they may be listed as possible tutors for undergraduate veterans. Standard tutorial rates paid.

Weather
(9) 256-6714

TEN PIN BOWLING

Monday - Saturday
4:30 - 10:30
(Except during league play)

BOYDEN LANES
50c/string

FURNITURE HUNTING FOR YOUR KIDS & TIRED AND OF TRIPS TO BOSTON AND NEW YORK? WE HAVE SOME BEAUTIFUL SOLUTIONS... BUT YOU HAVE TO SEE THEM. THESE ARE CONTEMPORARY SOLUTIONS TO THE PROBLEM OF COST. THEY'RE DESTRUCTIBLE - GIVE AND INDESTRUCTIBLE - GIVE THEM TO YOUR GERMAN CHILDREN IN 20 YEARS! BUY US. BED $57. HANDMADE BY US. BED $57. TABLE AND CHAIRS $34. TOY BOX $15. SHELVES - ALL PIECES + ALSO + CLOTHES - LUNCHE - THE - POOH AND FRIENDS - VERMONT WOODEN TOYS - T-SHIRT 10-5

THE WALRUS AND THE CARPENTER
AMHERST CARRIAGE SHOPS

Valentine Cards

American Greetings
Creative Excellence is an American Tradition. . .

available at UNIVERSITY STORE
CAMPUS CENTER
Remember the Univ. Store is open Thurs. night until 9:00

Morning After Pill Related To Cancer

NEW YORK (LNS)—Diethyl stilbestrol, better known to the public as DES, is a female hormone used in cattle feed and also injected into cattle to make them reach maturity faster (thus shortening the time and money that has to be invested in them). Last summer, DES was banned from cattle feed by the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) because it was found to be carcinogenic (cancer inducing).

But even though people were understandably upset about the presence of DES, in their meat, few talked or even knew about diethyl stilbestrol's use as a postcoital contraceptive—The Morning After Pill.

The Morning After Pill (MAP) is administered in a massive dose twice a day for five days. The amount of DES—25 mgs.—is about 500 times that produced naturally in the body. This use of DES is unapproved by the FDA. The FDA has rules governing the use of new drugs under investigation, and the unsupervised use of DES as a contraceptive does not follow those rules.

It appears that drug firms like Lilly (biggest supplier of DES for both MAP and animal uses), Upjohn, and other major drug firms are encouraging the current uses of DES. In fact, the use of the MAP has increased in the past year—despite the warnings.

Tens of thousands of women were exposed during the 1940s and 1950s to large doses of DES prescribed by doctors to prevent miscarriage. And 100 daughters of these women are already known to have developed cervical cancer. Most of the women are being operated on to stop further spread of the cancer. If it is detected early enough they will live—others have and will continue to die. (All the more appalling is the fact that DES proved ineffective in preventing miscarriages.

Most University health Services are giving the Morning After Pill to women to prevent pregnancy after they have had intercourse without contraception while potentially ovulating. Rape victims are also frequent recipients of DES.

Recently, the Health Research Group—a group that works with consumer-advocate Ralph Nader—compiled a report on the use of DES as a Morning After Pill. Their report points the finger at the health services of universities and at the University of Michigan in particular where:

". . . Doctors have issued the drug without determining the family and individual history of estrogen exposure and cervical or breast cancer and even without attempt to determine whether the patient is already pregnant from a prior intercourse. Most of the women surveyed received no follow-up of any kind after the drug was prescribed, not even to determine if it had prevented pregnancy."

The report continues, "Women are not asked key medical questions which bear on the amount of risk they might suffer . . college women are being used as guinea pigs."

But experts in hormonal cancer have repeatedly stated that the best available information suggests that all estrogens (female hormones) given at comparable doses and for comparable periods of time as Des, would cause the same carcinogenic effects.

"Addition of any artificial estrogen beyond the natural estrogen produced in the body disrupts a natural balance which even under ideal conditions is precarious, demonstrated by the fact that 1 of each 16 women will develop breast cancer during her lifetime," said Dr. Roy Hertz at a Congressional hearing on DES in November 1971.

Hertz also stated, "Actually, our inadequate knowledge concerning the relationship of estrogens to cancer in women is comparable with what was known about the association between lung cancer and cigaretts smoking before extensive epidemiologic study delineated this overwhelmingly significant relationship."

Advocates for Medical information (AMI) in Ann Arbor, Michigan conducted a survey of 69 women who were given the Morning After Pill—most of them at the University of Michigan. Although most of the women were warned that DES might cause nausea—and it does (many women vomit violently for a day or two)—as well as providing a tremendous shock to the women's system, only five were warned about a cancer danger to their offspring. None were informed of suspected cancer hazards to themselves.

Doctors who prescribed DES asked only three of the women their family medical histories, in spite of the fact that a family history of cervical or breast cancer is a known contraindication for approved use of DES. Only four out of 64 women were given pregnancy tests or questioned about possible pregnancy from previous intercourse before being given DES, although DES could not end such pregnancies and could cause cancer in the fetuses.

Only ten women were questioned about other personal exposure to estrogens, such as birth control pills. And only seven women were informed that the Morning After Pill was an unapproved use of DES.

For over 75% of the women given DES there were no follow-up examinations either for short-range side effects or to see if they had become pregnant.

Rules Of Thumb For Women Hitching

NEW YORK (LN)—I've hitched a lot for about twelve years, and over that time have learned some things that make it feel safer. I'd like to pass my ideas on to other women; maybe you can use some of them. Maybe, too, you have some tips I haven't thought of and you can turn sisters onto them.

1. Most important, I turn down a lot of rides, one out of every three or four offers maybe, which is high. I don't get into a car unless I feel it's absolutely safe in there. Admittedly, I'm oversuspicious and probably wrong 99% of the time, but that 1% is an important 1%. I've gotten over feeling guilty for making snap judgements and the fear of hurting feelings.

When turning down a ride, I say, "Thanks an awful lot, but I only ride with women." I've gotten responses from "Right on, sister," to "Fuck you, you bitch." The first ride was probably okay, but no feelings were hurt; the second ride was probably a rapist who got his feelings hurt. If drivers are really friendly, they are into your playing it safe and won't be hurt by your refusing them.

2. I don't often ride in a car with more than one man, particularly if it means getting in the back of a two-door car or into a closed van. I figure that if a man has to drive I stand a better chance of getting out of the vehicle if there are any signs of trouble.

3. I don't hitch much at night, especially in areas of town where there aren't many people around.

4. I hitch with a dog or a partner whenever I can. Sometimes I find a partner on the road at one of those spots where four or five people are waiting for rides.

5. I carry a hatpin or a knife or something although I've never had to use any weapon. I'm not sure that fighting is always the best response especially if you don't know how to. And remember, it can be dangerous to pull out a knife and not know how to use it—your opponent might. But if you feel competent, hatpins are inconspicuous and easy to carry.

6. I wear loose, non-revealing clothes.

7. I make the approach whenever I can. Often I talk to people who look like they're traveling because they carry luggage and stuff at restaurants or gas stations. This is especially useful along freeways where hitching is illegal and where there are a lot of rest stop places, but it is also just generally safer for me to pick my ride than for my ride to pick me I think. On short hitches in town, I use a variation of this technique, standing near a red light and making eye contact with a woman or couple hitching and showing them my thumb.

I think out my hitches before I do it, too. Otherwise, it takes me a lot longer to get where I want to go and I become impatient; when I'm impatient I'm much more likely to take a potentially dangerous ride. I use a map, figuring out where it is legal to hitch and where it's not; where I would have to stand on on-ramps in small towns for an endless time; where the biggest cities are.

I might turn down a 200 mile ride to a small town with an on-ramp for a 90 mile ride to a spot where I can get a lot of traffic.

I don't stand where it's hard for drivers to stop. And I don't stand in a long line of hitchers because long lines overwhelm drivers who just pass everybody up in a hurry. I make clear signs. Good luck and good traveling!

Find
KALIKI KAI

W. C. FIELDS
3 Shorts
7, 8:30, 10
WED., JAN. 31
CCA 50¢

THE ROISTER DOISTERS
present
AR THUR MILLER'S THE CRUCIBLE
February 1, 2, 3, 4
8:30
Admission $2,
$1.50 with UM ID
Bowker Auditorium
Reservations
545-2149

War of the World's
Tues., Jan. 30 S.U.B.
7:00, 8:45, 10:30
Starring
Gene Barry
from the novel
by H. G. Welles

Walter Matthau Carol Burnett
"Pete 'n' Tillie"
All about love and marriage
Geraldine Page
Shown Daily at 7:00 & 9:00 - Rated - PG -
Honeymoon's over, it's time to get married!

LADY SINGS THE BLUES
"DIANA ROSS DELIVERS THE KIND OF PERFORMANCE THAT WINS OSCARS!"
"DIANA ROSS—AHH, DIANA ROSS! SHE DOES A MARVELOUS JOB!"
(R) SHOWN AT 7:00 & 9:30
Campus Cinemas 256-8461 AMHERST HADLEY LINT
DOLLAR NIGHT!
Every Monday
Everyone $1.00

PETER O'TOOLE ALASTAIR SIM ARTHUR LOWE
THE RULING CLASS
"Peter O'Toole is Funny, Distrubing, Devastating". — Time Mag.
PG — SHOWN AT 7:00 & 9:30
"A STYLISH COMEDY THAT IS BRILLIANT AND IMAGINATIVE! A tour de force that makes superlative comic history...Two movie performances by Arthur Lowe and Alastair Sim that make the film worth seeing twice." — REX REED

FREE MOVIES
TUES. NIGHT at the BLUEWALL
10 P.M.

Parking Snow Policy

The major objective of snow removal activities at times of severe storms is to make it possible to hold classes and conduct all University activities in as normal a way as possible. In order to facilitate snow removal, parking will be prohibited in the following lots between the hours of 1 a.m. and 7 a.m., from December 1 to April 1, as provided for in the Motor Vehicle Regulations Manual approved by the Board of Trustees.

Lot #1, #2, #4, #5, #6, #11, #12, #13, #14, #N.

Overnight parking will continue to be available in lots other than those listed.

Since the plan described above provides for only a little more than half of the parking spaces used on a normal day, it is suggested that all persons who normally bring a car onto campus consider the following possibilities during heavy snow:

a. Pool rides with others whenever possible.
b. Walk if it is at all possible to do so.
c. Have someone drop you off so that the car does not have to be left on campus and so that the snow removal job during daylight hours is facilitated.
d. If space is not available in your assigned lot, go to one of the other lots listed because under such emergency conditions, it is not possible to guarantee that normally assigned space will be available.
e. Make use of the Campus Center garage (open 24 hours a day).
f. Make use of the new bus service to the campus to be initiated this winter under the Department of Transportation grant.

The Town of Amherst ban on overnight street parking also goes into effect December 1 through April 1 from 2 a.m. to 8 a.m. on all public streets. Overnight parking is permitted in the Lincoln St., Pray St. and Amity St. Parking Lots until 9 a.m. during this period.

ResidenceHeadInformation

Information on applications for Head of Residence and Resident Director positions for the 1973-74 academic year is available at the Information Desk just inside the ramp entrance, second floor of Whitmore Administration Building. Head of Residence positions are full-time, twelve-month professional appointments. Resident Director positions are part-time service assistantships, September through May, available to students enrolled in the Graduate School. The deadline for all application materials to be returned is March 1, 1973.

Sociology Has Visiting Prof.

Among the new faculty faces on campus for the spring semester is Professor Elbridge Sibley, a visitor for the spring semester only in the Department of Sociology. Professor Sibley has recently retired from his position as Executive Associate of the Social Science Research Council. However, his career serves as an influential model for many younger social scientists these days because it involves work at the various interfaces between academia, government, and the private foundations. Trained as a demographer with skills and interests in interpreting social trends and problems, Sibley has applied his "ivory tower" training in the trenches of social policy.

This spring, Professor Sibley will be offering two courses in the Department of Sociology, both of which reflect his distinctive pattern of interest. The first is a seminar for undergraduates, Sociology 391D, devoted to the analysis and interpretation of population data with special reference to current social problems. The seminar will meet weekly and the students will work with Professor Sibley in undertaking individual investigation of particular topics. The course is open to advanced undergraduate students in sociology and related social science fields.

Professor Sibley's second course will be at the graduate level: Sociology 737, "Social Science and Social Policy". This seminar will explore a wide range of topics in the application of social science knowledge to social policy innovation and evaluation. Special attention will be given to the role of the social scientists in a nonacademic setting, such as the government itself. While the course is primarily directed to graduate students in sociology, students from related fields are also encouraged to consider it.

Housing Crisis To Be Topic For Northampton Tenants

Meeting of Northampton Area Tenants Feb. 5 at the Peoples Institute on the HOUSING CRISIS: This meeting is URGENTLY needed to help us, the TENANTS, fight for our rights for decent housing. It will be held Monday, February 5, at the Peoples Institute, 38 Gothic St., Northampton, at 7:30 p.m.

Do you know your rights as a tenant? Do you know that you may be able to force the landlords to fix up your apartment; that you may be able to withhold your rent or to use your rent money to fix your home? But we need unity to do this. The housing situation in the Northampton area is critical. There exists a severe shortage of apartments and rentals continue to rise to outrageous heights. Present housing is often in very poor condition with rats, cockroaches, poor heating, unsafe electrical outlets, insufficient hot water, drafts, holes in the walls and ceilings, low water pressure and much, much more. And when we dare complain, the landlord threatens to throw us out! Landlords are big and loud. They often don't respect the privacy of their tenants. They put property before people, and the laws are in their favor....BUT!!

Tenants have power if they know their rights and unite toward a common goal: decent housing for a fair price.

Over The Rainbow
specializes in custom embroidery
Bring your own jeans, workshirts, or anything else, and we will embroider them with whatever you wish — or we will supply new articles embroidered as you want.

MDC CLASSIFIED

FOR SALE

PAUL'S OLD TIME FURNITURE, furniture, costumes, curios, all at honest prices. In the heart of downtown Amherst in The Alley 253-5511. tf2/5

---

61 VW Bus, good motor 36 hp., transmission shot, $75; water bed, frame, heater, liner 3 months old. $50, call Tom 628-2836. tf2/1

1969 VW Bug, fair cond. $650. Call 549-6652 after 5. tf2/1

Skis — Hart Javelin XXL, 275 CM with marker heel and Miller toe, $50. Also Lange standard boots, size 9-1/2, $40. Nordica boots, size 10, $25. Call 6-5032. tf1/30

Med. size portable typewriter, very good condition. Underwood Olivetti, $40. A pr. of cross country skis and poles, $25.00. 665-2830. tf2/2

Brand new down sleeping bag, with carrying bag, $40 or best offer. Call Joanne, 549-0671 after 6. tf1/31

Double bed, good condition, sm. desk. Oriental rug, couch. 1 Toyota tire, good spare. Call Chuck at 256-6681 after 8. All items reasonable. tf1/31

Lange Comps. ski boots for sale, size 9, with Lange Flo. only used twice. Asking $70. Call 546-5461. tf2/5

Double bed, good condition. Call 549-6821. tf1/31

New Delmonico refrig., 3.5 cu. ft., guarantee, $90. Carolyn, 549-0063. tf2/1

For sale, 10 meal ticket. Best offer. Call 6-5781. tf1/30

Waterbeds: $18.95, 5-year factory guaranteed, all colors, king & queen sizes. Waterbed heaters $27.50, 546-9111 afternoons & evenings. tf2/2

For sale cheap, must sell this 15 meal ticket to stay in school, (male), $195 or best offer. Call Paul at 253-7559, won't last! 1/31

For sale — meal ticket, 10 meal plan. Call 6-1171. tf1/30

Nivico SHP — 171E turntable with Shure cartridge. $40 or best offer. Call Charlie at 546-1638. tf2/2

Portable TV, Whouse, 19-inch. New tubes and circuit repair. Cleaned inside and out, ex. picture. $40. Call 532-0173. tf1/31

Meal ticket — 10 meal plan. Call Terry, 546-7138. tf1/31

We buy and sell used Gibson, Fender, Martin guitars, banjos and amps. Also new guitars at low prices. The Guitar Workshop, North. 586-1706. tf3/11

FOR SALE

10 Meal Ticket for sale, call Bill at, 546-6450. tf2/1

Harman Kardon, Citation 11, pre-amp, perfect condition, 5 mos. old. $200 firm. 253-9611 eves. tf1-30

Typewriter, sec. model — good condit., $50. Used electric guitar also up for grabs — $40. Call Tom at 253-9083. tf1/31

AR turntable base, dustcover cartridge included, all in excellent condition. $75. Call 546-7002, ask for Dave, keep trying. tf1-30

Portable T.V., G.E. 18" black & white with stand UHF-VHF in very good condition $50. Call 256-6617, after 5:30. tf1/30

Bass cabinets (2) w/ev. Speakers ($150), cab. for 2 speakers (15"), Dyna head (120), Akai X150-D tape deck ($75). Call, 549-6425, Kent. tf2/2

Hoover portable washing machine. One year old. Best offer. 549-6684. tf1/31

Inventory clearance sale. Univox amp to 40% off, 105 RMS Twin Reverb list $480 — now $290. Creative Endeavor, Miles St. Grnfld. 774-2831. tf2/23

Fender Twin Reverb less than 1 yr. old $350. Used Traynor Reverb Gult. Amp $120. Creative Endeavor, Miles St., in Grnfld. 774-2831. tf2/9

Motorolla TV in good condition, best offer, call Colleen at 253-9957. tf1/30

---

1 pr. Lange standards exc. cond. used only one season. Ladies size 5 or 5 1/2, $70 will haggle, 6-5321. tf2/1

Typewriter, Olivetti-Underwood — excellent condition. Like new. $45. (Originally $90.) Call Lita, 549-0647, evenings. tf2/1

Used banjo. Good cond. $45, call 253-5731, Elliot. tf2/2

Attention: For sale K. size water bed w/liner, heater w/thermo., frame, mat. $59.95. Call Jack 546-8212. tf2/5

1967 Volkswagen Fastback — 50,000 miles, new brakes, good condition overall — Needs minor body work. $400, call Al 367-2058. tf1/31

Lange Pro Ski Boots, used once, cost $150 new, will take best offer. Call Bob at 546-8097. tf2/2

Meal Ticket for sale, 10 Meal Plan cheap, call 546-6379. tf1/31

REFRIGERATORS

Brand new — Made by Delmonico - 5 year guarantee - free delivery - 3 cubic foot $75 - 5 cubic foot $79. Call Gary - 1615, JFK 546-7839.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommate needed to share two bedrm. apt. $85 per month, includes utilities. Ph. 253-9445. tf2/2

Roommate wanted, 24A Nutting Ave., walking distance to campus: completely furnished; cheap, drop by or call 549-6833. tf2/1

Share room in 2 bdr. apt. $61.25/mo., all modern; utilities incl. In Amherst 253-3034. tf1-30

Female, own room in luxury apt., grad student preferred. 1 mile from Campus. Call 253-7874 days, 549-6556 evenings. tf1-30

Your own upstairs rm., with bath & phone in 2 bdrm. Puffton Apt. 1 or 2 m/f, cathed. ceil., dishwasher. $104 or $40, 549-3554. tf5-1

FOR RENT

Room in private house Montague Ctr. $55/mo. inc. utilities, call Bob 367-2762. tf2/2

Available now, 8 bedroom Colonial in quiet country. Wendell Center. All remodeled. Call 256-8096 days, 253-2162 nites. tf2/2

HELP WANTED

Anyone interested in delivering the Boston Globe in Southwest, please call Cecilia, 6-8409. tf2/2

Energetic mature people at Friendly Ice Cream, Nilamp, full/part time. Weekend avail. own trans. necessary, call 584-0555 for appt. tf2/2

Mechanic to repair pin ball machines, call 253-3305 or write Box 51, Amherst. tf2/2

Overseas jobs for students — Australia, Europe, S. America, Africa. Most professions, summer or full time, expenses paid, sightseeing. Free information, write, TWR Co., Dept. Q3, 2530 Telegraph Ave., Berkeley, Ca. 94704. tf2-6

Counselors for co-ed campus in Berkshires. Vacancies: Head Waterfront, Special Events, Athletic Director, Group Leaders, Tennis, Golf, Waterskiing, Dance, Guitars & folk singing, Radio station Director, Hockey, wrestling, Arts & Crafts, General Bunk Counselors. Contact Paul Krouner, 11 Sagamore Rd., Worcester, Mass. 01609. tf1-30

Receptionist-Dental Assistant for Modern Ortho. Office. Experience preferred — not essential. Call 586-0555. tf2/1

Part time desk clerk night auditor, experience preferred, good with figures, apply in person, Howard Johnson's Motor Lodge, Hadley. tf1-30

ENTERTAINMENT

SEE D.H. LAWRENCE'S "WOMEN IN LOVE" WITH ALAN BATES & GLENDA JACKSON AT MAHAR AUD., 7-9-11. DIRECTED BY KEN RUSSELL. tf2/2

Professional DJ, with 1000's of oldies and monster PA. Will entertain for your party or dance. Phone Steve at 467-2612. tf2/2

Trying to get back into the swing of things? Try a little Lynn. For over a month, Tuesday nights have been something special at. The Rusty Scupper, Route 9, Amherst. That's Lynn Holoway Night. Drop in and find out what special is all about. tf1/30

AUTOS FOR SALE

61 Ford Custom, new snow tires, auto. trans. Must sell by 2 Feb. So only $200. Call 253-5461 eve. tf1-31

---

68 Pontiac Lemans, 30,000 miles, good mech. cond., needs some body work. 4 speed, $700 or best offer. Call 536-3408, 546-5835. tf1/31

---

66 Ford std., 8 cyl., studded tires, $325. 549-6321. tf2/1

---

65 MGB Eng. rbt., 400. 67 Sunbeam Alpine hardtop — 500. 69 Triumph Trailbike — 300. Will dicker. 549-1263. tf1/31

1970 Firebird, trans - AM. Excellent condition, air cond., power windows, tape deck, auto. trans., best offer. Call Roger 549-6554. tf2-2

1969 Triumph Spitfire, 2 tops. AM-FM. Mich. Spfld. 781-8005, 587-3256. tf1/30

WANTED

Photographer wants open minded liberal female models part-time, good pay. Write giving details to P. O. Box 122, Granby, Mass. 01033. tf2-1

Experienced black belts in Karate. Wanted for sparring practice. Call 546-6631. tf1/31

String bassist, cellists & tuba, etc.! Musicians interested in playing in new music ensemble. 581-0797, 5-5:30 p.m. only. tf1/31

Poetry wanted for possible inclusion in cooperative volume. Includ. stamped envelope. Editor, Box 1114C, Whittier, Calif. 90607. tf2/5

RIDE WANTED

Ride needed to Westfield or Vic., Mondays 5:00 - 6:00, $. Call Cathy, 549-6490. tf1/31.

DATING SERVICE

MATCH IS THE FIVE COLLEGE DATING SERVICE — A NEW CONCEPT IN MEETING NEW FRIENDS. SEND FOR FREE QUESTIONNAIRE: MATCH, BOX 759, AMHERST tf1-30

SERVICES

Need help with tax forms? Call 323-7601 for fast, cheap service $3.00 and up. tf2/2

Butch's repair service — No rip off. Special this week: tune-up $10, plus parts for 6 or 8 cyl. for appt. call, Butch at 549-3626. tf2/1

Experienced model will do all types of work for photographers, artists, whatever. Call Diane at 665-4300. 1/31

PERSONAL

BISEXUAL, HOMOSEXUAL. Anyone with questions or wanting general information call 586-2611. Ask for Paul, eve. tf2/2

Anyone witnessing Dec. 19 midnite wi. 63 Ply. Wgn. that was run off road on N. Pleasant and assault-arrest of driver, call 584-6372. tf1/30

S. Jacunski contact B. Mager at 253-9066 concerns Larry Markos. tf2/1

ROOMMATE WANTED

Fem. roommate wanted, Puffton Vil. Approx. $70/mo. Call Beth or Karen, 549-6508. tf1/31

F. roommate needed for sunny 5-rm. apt. in Florence. Own rm., $67.50 & $10 util. I like animals, have a cat. Call Cindy, 584-2273. tf1/30

TO SUBLET

Apt. in Belchertown $163.00 mo. Lease ends June 1, dbl. bed and other furnishings. Call 546-4779. tf1-30

---

2 bedroom townhouse in Amherst $230/mo., util. incl., $175 reduced summer rate. Available Feb. 1. Call, 253-3251. tf1/31

Attention: Sublet for 2nd semester. Own room w/air cond., 2 closets, tele, furnished, all electric $70/mon. Call Jack 546-8212. tf2/5

MISCELLANEOUS

Commuters! A limited number of lockers are available for personal use this semester. First come; first served basis. Jan. 25, 26, 29 and 30, Rm. 112 C.C. 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., $2.00 key deposit required. 1/30

TRAVEL

Crimson Travel offers low cost spring vacation trip to Bermuda for more info. call Rich Margil, 253-9096. tf1/31

REWARD

Reward for book, Flower Arranging, 150 illustrated concepts lost 1-24-73, near Durfee Greenhouse 584-2662. tf2/1

Notices

COMMUTERS
Run for Executive Council of Commuter Assembly. Three vacancies. Nomination papers at RSO, first floor C.C. Deadline Feb. 13. Election Feb. 15.

ENVIRONMENTAL GROUP (CEQ)
First meeting of the semester. Getting things rolling again. New members welcome. 7 p.m. C.C. Student Activities area tonight.

GAMMA SIGMA SIGMA
First meeting of semester. Tonight at 6:30 p.m. Room 903 C.C. All girls must attend.

HATHA YOGAI
We are inviting undergraduates to continue their practice with our small group. Mitchel Salnick will be instructing Wed. eves. 6-8 p.m. Please call Susan at 323-4077 or Mitchel at 256-6298.

Amherst Street Listing

ANNUAL STREET LISTING, TOWN OF AMHERST

Notices have been sent to all Heads of Residences and Presidents of Fraternities and Sororities at the University relative to street listing of residents now in process as prescribed by Chapter 51 of the Massachusetts General Laws:

Every city and town in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts is required by Chapter 51, Section 4 of the General Laws to "annually in January or February visit every building in their.. towns, and, after diligent inquiry, make true lists containing, as nearly as they can ascertain, the name, age or date of birth, occupation, nationality if not a citizen of the U.S., and residence on January 1st in the preceding year and in the current year, of every person 17 years of age or older, residing in...town.

A supply of street listing postcards has been left with each Head of Residence and Presidents of Fraternities and Sororities. All occupants of University residences who are registered to vote in Amherst or who wish to claim Amherst as legal residence should complete such a card and return it immediately to the Town Clerk of Amherst. Failure to do so on the part of registered voters of the Town will result in their being dropped from the Amherst Voter List.

We appreciate the cooperation of all residents in complying with this legal requirement. Any questions pertaining to street listing should be directed to the Town Clerk - 253-3885.

HOUSING COMMITTEE
Housing Committee meeting tomorrow night, Jan. 31 at 7:30 in Rm. 162. All commuters are welcome to attend. We will be discussing the first publication of the monthly newsletter. Thank you.

ORG
What is an ORG? An ORG is a group of people who get together to share and love. All are welcome to attend tonight at 6:45 p.m. in Room 911 C.C.

U. MENTAL HEALTH SERVICE
Saul Cooper, Assoc. Prof. at Univ. Michigan, Community Diagnostics for Mental Health Workers," C.C. 917 Feb. 5, 9-12 a.m.

PHOTOGRAPHY
Basic B&W darkroom procedures. Seminars and instruction. Craft shop in Student Union. Come see.

PHI SIGMA KAPPA
Open smoker today 8:00 p.m.

SKI CLUB MEETING
Tonight trip information. Feb. 10 Saturday trip to Ascutney, upcoming weekend to Sugarbush.

THIRD WORLD MEETING
Mandatory meeting for all Third World students, graduate and undergraduates to discuss and develop procedures for the election of a Steering Committed for the Cultural Center, New Africa House, tomorrow

USED BOOK EXCHANGE
Save money by buying your books at the GSS used book exchange. Open 10 a.m.-4 p.m., Monday-Friday in the Essex Room, Student Union.

POLITICAL SCIENCE LECT. 1
Discussion section assignments posted Thomp. 238 and Dickinson 209.

VOLLEYBALL
Reorganizational Practice at WoPe Wed. night 8:00.

WAR OF THE WORLDS
Stars Gene Barry. Novel by H. G. Wells 10:30 in S.U.B.

CONCERNED JEWISH STUDENTS
Meeting to finalize plans for newspaper and other events. Tonight at 8:30 in S.U. 420. Full attendance.

LOST
Maroon checkbook. Contact: Margaret S. Walsh at 415 Leach House.

Girls green wallet lost between Campus Center and Southwest. If found please return to Campus Center Lost & Found or call 546-1442.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

By SYDNEY OMARR

Some fascinating Capricorn persons I've recently met include Charo, Tony Martin, Betty White and Fernando Lamas. Let me know about people you meet and enjoy and their zodiacal signs.

***

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Opportunity exists to greater extent than might be apparent on surface. Key now is to trust yourself. Keep the faith. If you believe in your own principles, others will follow suit. Promotion is due. You will gain recognition.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Good lunar aspect now coincides with power: long range view, ability to transform notions into workable concepts. Older individual does have your best interests at heart. Know it and respond accordingly.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Finish cycle, project which has been draining you financially and emotionally. Stop trying to make something out of nothing. What you seek is obtainable only if you stop hopping yourself down with past errors. You will comprehend.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Lie low. Time is on your side. Permit mate, partner to take initiative. You learn valuable lessons I patient. Judgment, intuition may now be slightly off target. One who is at a distance does want to communicate. Be receptive.

LEO (July 23-Aug 22): Your desires can be fulfilled in ratio to the keeping of recent resolutions. If you abuse privileges, you can expect to pay consequences. If you heed health requirements, you make gains beyond expectations. Act accordingly.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept 22): Creative abilities surge to forefront. Young person play prominent role. Be ready for change, travel, variety of experiences. Gemini, Virgo persons are involved. Don't fight progress. Love is in picture.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Details, fine lines, subtle approaches are featured. It becomes obvious someone is trying to tell you something. Key is to evaluate. You could discover important phrases out of context. Get house in order.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Get in driver's seat. Get feel of where you are going. Sense of direction is featured. Gemini and Virgo individuals could play prominent roles. Status quo changes. You are on the move. Calls and visits are spotlighted.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Accent is on money and how to hold on to it. Taurus, Libra persons could be involved. Check assets, deficits. Tighten budget. Frank discussion with family member should rate high on agenda. Act accordingly.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Cycle is such that you can successfully take initiative. New starts, projects are favored. Personal magnetism soars. Members of opposite sex pays meaningful compliments and they mean what they say.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You can gain co-operation of groups, organizations. You are due for reward based on recent efforts. Capricorn now proves valuable ally. Push forward. One behind scenes will come through on your behalf.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Accent is on how to fulfill desires. Key now is to finish rather than to begin projects. Strive for wider appeal. Popularize concept, product. Reach beyond what appears to be limit. Distribution will improve.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you have delightful sense of humor, could experience weight problem. February and November will be outstanding months for you in 1973. You are inventive, versatile but tend to scatter your energies.

Copyright 1973, Gen. Fea. Corp.

'72 GMC RALLEY STX wagon, V-8, automatic, 12,000 miles $3395

'72 PORSCHE 911T, air, am/fm, loaded, mint condition $9900

'71 BUICK Electra 225, 2 door hardtop, V-8 automatic, loaded with accessories $3895

'70 SAAB Model 99E, standard, white, Excellent condition $1795

'70 FORD Maverick, V-8 standard, 4 speed, green $1495

'69 MGB Roadster, black, wire wheels $1295

'69 TOYOTA Corona, yellow, standard, real clean $1095

'67 PONTIAC Catalina, blue, V-8 automatic, maroon $795

'65 FORD Falcon, 6 standard, white $495

Complete sales, service parts, body dept. and towing.

OPEN EVES. 'till 9.

NORTHAMPTON VOLKSWAGEN

Your Authorized VW Dealer

246 King St., Rte. 5 Northampton

FREE Shuttlebus Service for Amherst Customers

Call 584-8620

Crossword Puzzle

ACROSS
1 Persian hat
4 Armed band
9 Large tub
12 Silkworm
13 Later
14 Girl's name
15 Expels from country
17 Chief artery
19 Top of head
20 The caama
21 Let it stand
23 Vague
27 Brief
29 Roman tyrant
30 A state (abbr.)
31 Abstract being
32 Tint
34 Room in harem
35 Conjunction
36 Command to cat
37 Stage extra (slang)
39 Settled by intervention
42 French priest
43 Knocks
44 Winglike
46 Trumpeter bird
48 Foretell
51 Republican party (init.)
52 Birds' homes
54 Sunburn
55 Dutch town
56 Ground grain
57 Organ of sight

DOWN
1 Gave food to
2 Before
3 Fasteners
4 Separate
5 Frequently
6 Saints (abbr.)
7 Compass point
8 Anything rubbed out (pl.)
9 American bird
10 Emmet
11 Chinese pagoda
16 Grain (pl.)
18 European capital
20 In berl
21 Vapor
22 Taut
24 Growing out of 25 Beneath
26 Portion
28 Eluding
33 Chapeaus
34 Manage
36 Country of Asia
38 Javanese tree
40 Arrange in folds
41 Arrows
45 For fear that
46 Mature
47 Deity
48 Greek letter
49 Merry
50 Compass point
53 Teutonic deity

Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle

Distr. by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Gymnasts In 11th Hour Win

This past Friday afternoon the UMass Gymnastic Team met and defeated a surprisingly strong Syracuse squad. In what proved to be an event-to-event battle, UMass finally pulled a win out in the last two events. Parallel Bars and High Bar saw the Minutemen combine for good event scores to finish the meet 151.30 to 147.50.

In the first three events the UMass squad led in scoring, except for Pommel Horse, but not by much. Crucial scores in this half came specifically from a performer who had a particularly fine day, All-around man Gene Whelan. Gene led the way on Floor Excercise and Pommel Horse. He also added a good backup score of 8.55 to the fine routine of co-capt. Jay Aronstein. Jay earned and richly deserved a 9.3 on Still Rings.

But even with these scores behind them, UMass could only gain a margin of slightly more than one point.

In the second half of the meet, things became tense since the Minutemen had some definite gaps in their lineup.

In Vaulting, top specialist Jay Thomsen was out with an injury, but whose place was admirably filled by sophomore Jack Fabbricante. Jack, in one of his first varsity outings in Vaulting scored a 9.0 to hold the UMass lead. Also holding their own were sophomores Bill Brouillet and Roy Johnson with fine scores of 8.8 and 8.7 respectively.

With only Parallel Bars and High Bar left to compete on, the Minutemen needed some good scoring. But this proved to be no problem. Gene Whelan was still hot from the first three events and filled the need. He led the way on P-bars with an 8.80 and backed up co-capt. Steve Scuderi on High Bar with an 8.30. In addition to Gene's score, Steve achieved a well-earned 9.0 after a questionable week of practice for Steve who was disabled with the flu. Not to be forgotten here was a respectable performance by "Super senior" Doug Salisbury with an 8.45.

Although the meet could have gone either way it did end on a happy note. Of additional significance is the fact that Gene Whelan scored a very respectable 51.55 in the All-around, a first for Gene. Also, following in Gene's footsteps, sophomore Bill Brouillet amassed a total of 47.80 in the All-around, a definite achievement for this performer.

For their next competition, UMass hits the road where they will meet Pittsburgh on Fri., Feb. 2, and Penn State on Sat., Feb. 3. The UMass JV team also goes against the Dartmouth varsity on Sat., Feb. 3 at Dartmouth. It will certainly be a full weekend for UMass Gymnastics.

Civic Center...Continued From Pg. 16

bet the Crusaders will get at least a psychological advantage out of the Civic Center's neutrality clause.

How does Jack Leaman view the experiment by the Athletic Department in the Civic Center issue? "I definitely feel that this will be an opportunity to do two things. First, we'll prove to the powers that we need on campus a new, larger facility to continue our program. Secondly, it will make available more seats immediately for people to see our team play thereby enabling us to bring some of the major basketball teams to our home facility."

Jack went on to add that he has to play the likes of Penn., Providence, West Virginia, and Detroit on the road. He'd like to see them in Amherst. How do you think Friar Roaster Dave Gavitt went national?

Regardless of sentiment, student or administrative, schedules are made years in advance and this one has been on paper for awhile. The concern now is how a 7-6 can rebound from a couple of losses to national powers Providence and Syracuse. Or can they come back? The test in the neutral zone against the 8-10 Crusaders will be a rather stiff one.

Look for trouble from All-New England, All-East center Gene Doyle. If he gets the ball he'll be tough, without it he's a statue. Gene gets help in one corner from fellow captain Jim Schnurr (17 p.p.g. last year) and only mediocre assistance from Mal Moulton in the other corner. And the reason for the team slide, the backcourt where the "King" runs the show.

Probably the most sought after high schooler in the history of Massachusetts, All-American King Gaskins chose the Cross because "the school wanted me as a person, not as a basketball player". So the guy who gunned 2,368 points at Catholic Memorial and led CM teams to 99-7 slate is still gunning at the Auditorium in downtown Worcester. And he'll be great some day but while the "King" deals Coach George Blaney must realize his four man team will suffer...And they have.

But if the King gets out of hand, Jimmy Burke will be there. Al Skinner is as smooth as he's ever been at Massachusetts and Tom Austin has finally peaked. Tom McLaughlin is still unselfish with his shot but he gives the team much more than one could ever expect from a captain. Peter Trow is back home safely after a bout with staleness at Providence, and Rick Pitino, well, I hope you're regular readers, if you're not, ask someone who is...And don't worry about John Murphy, the flu was temporary, but his shot is permanent and Charlie Peters has momentarily lost his.

So this is one the Minutemen badly need, this is one that the students need even more. And if you realize this and your Minutemen adrenalin flows you'll be there. Time is not on your side but concerning the clock the Minutemen should find just enough to work with to exploit a bit of the Syracuse frustration and get on 91 a winner...Time will tell for all of us...

Xerographic Copies Offset Printing

Free collating for your thesis.

Students & Graduate Student's Discounts

Leave your thesis for 72 hours

2nd receive a 20% discount off of our 5' rate.

All work guaranteed.

Copies Unlimited
27 Main St.
Northampton

584-4203 586-2047

GREAT FOR HANGING PICTURES, PRINTS AND POSTERS.

ALSO AVAILABLE IN A ROLL.

A COMPLETE LINE OF SCOTCH BRAND TAPE AVAILABLE

UNIVERSITY STORE

CAMPUS CENTER

Remember the Univ. Store is open Monday nights until 9:00

Grapplers Host Arch-Rival Springfield

By JOHN BOCK

Who is the number one wrestling team in New England? UMass. Who has one of the best records going (6-1)? UMass. And who has the number one threat to all of the above staring them in the face tonight in Boyden Auxiliary Gym? You guessed it, UMass.

Tonight at 8:00 P.M. the defending NEIWA Champs in the persons of Springfield College come to do battle with the Minutemen in the annual barnburner.

Every year for the past four years or so this match has been the most speculated upon match of the season in New England. Last year the then Redmen went down to Springfield and beat the Chiefs on their own mats for the first time ever in dual match competition. (Sad to say SC edged UMass in the New Englands.)

This year the Minutemen carry a fine 6-1 record into the match as Springfield comes in 9-5, so far. The difference in the number of matches wrestled being the fact that Springfield has been in three triangulars and has wrestled right through January.

Personnel-wise the Chiefs are Captained by All-American Stan Sotherden at 150. Sotherden hasn't seen any action since the PennState Nittany Lions crushed the Chiefs 33-6 a few weeks ago. Other outstanding performers are Nick Porillo, defending NEIWA 167 pound Champ, and Billy Metts 1971 New England 118 pound Champ who is wrestling at 126 after a years layoff.

The rest of the lineup is made up of a few solid wrestlers and some questions. 118 will probably see Ed Hartin, a former Massachusetts State Champ, tilt against Co-Captain Dave Amato.

The 126 pound bout will see yet-to-be-beaten Larry Reynolds against Billy Metts. Mike McGlaughlin will have his hands full with Ed Metzger, third in the New Englands last year.

Tony Rome has sucked down to 142 pounds for the match and his most likely opponent will be Mark Sugarmeyer. If not, then it will be Larry Way, a Freshman, and also a former Mass. State Champ. Chris Cadwallader might have the toughest match of the evening if Sotherden shows up; if he doesn't then Rich Munroe will have at with Cad.

At 158 Cliff Blom has pretty much thrown off the effects of an encounter with a full nelson over the weekend. This will undoubtedly by Cliff's toughest match as he faces Nick Porillo. Steve Benson will see a foe he has beaten in pre-season competition if Doug LeRoy wrestles, at 167.

The 177 pound match will pit John Connolly against Peter Kopp and Co-Captain Carl Dambman will be shooting for a win in his first match back as he wrestles at 190. Heavyweight will see either George Ireland or Charlie Klein for the Minutemen and Russ Pollard for the Chiefs.

That's it. The current best in New England against the defending best. It might be close or it might be a runaway. Whatever it still promises to be the best match of the year and the way the team has been working it is almost the ONLY match.

Co-Captain Carl Dambman breaks the UMass record for pins with this pin over his MIT opponent. He shoots for one more tonight against Springfield. (Photo by Kevin Mack)

UMass Boasts Deaf Olympian-Maybe

By JOHN BOCK

There is going to be another Olympic contest this year, and like all Olympics is going to involve athletes from every part of the globe. It is going to be held in Sweden and one member of the USA team is going to be Tom Callaghan, a former member of the University of Massachusetts wrestling team.

Yes, Cal has made the Deaf Olympic wrestling teams at 198 pounds by winning two gold medals at the Olympic Trials held this past summer in North Carolina.

'Teams' and 'medals' are both plural and in Cal's case well deserved because he won not only the Freestyle wrestling competition but also the Greco-Roman trials.

Cal didn't have it easy at the Trials as he arrived five pounds overweight and had to run four miles to lose the weight. In a way this was just what someone would expect Cal to do because at UMass he ran almost as much as some of the track team men and was always in top shape.

His conditioning program paid off because he won both Freestyle and Greco-Roman by pinning all of his opponents after wearing most of them down to the point where they were happy to get off the mat.

Tonight some of the wrestlers and members of Kappa Sigma Fraternity are going to be asking for donations at the door to help defray some of Tom's expenses for the Olympics this coming July 21-28 in Sweden.

The Olympic team that went to Munich thought they had it tough raising money, but for the members of the Deaf Olympic team the work to raise the money is almost as hard as the training they have to go through.

Give Tom a hand tonight when you come to see the UMass-Springfield match. Then his victory in Sweden might also seem a small victory for yourself.

Daily Collegian

SPORTS

Skaters at BU

By BILL BALLOU

Last year when the Redmen headed into Boston for a date with the defending national champion Boston University Terriers, it seemed that it would be a moral victory for UMass if they simply stayed within sight of BU on the scoreboard.

It was, then, a moral victory, as the Redmen dominated play in the early stages and wound up losing 6-4 scoring three late goals to come back from a 6-1 deficit.

There will be no such thing as a moral victory this year. Boston University is a troubled team, and with the loss of a dozen or so of there best players to the pro ranks, they aren't as talented.

But don't think for a minute that they're not a good hockey team. They've got an incredible 9-0 win over Cornell to their credit and with the topsy-turvy way New England hockey has gone this year nobody can sanely predict the score in any game.

However, the Terriers have lots of problems, the biggest and most recent being the disqualification of Dick Decloe and the resulting possibility that BU will have to forfeit 11 wins they racked up while Decloe wa playing.

Decloe's problem, briefly, is that while he was playing Junior A in Canada he had his educational expenses paid for by his team. This is a no-no as far as the ECAC is concerned but Decloe, and BU, thought that he had been cleared to play. They both found out too late that he wasn't.

Anyway, BU is going to have another problem to worry about tonight and that's a fired-up UMass hockey team that will be playing for the third time in five games against Division I competition and has just come off its biggest and best win of the season.

The Minutemen have played Colgate and Providence, both Div. I teams within the pat 10 days and in both games UMass lost by just one goal. The Minutemen could just as easily taken either or both but had trouble finding the ten. So BU is by no means out of their class. Add the facts that you're bound to get up a little more playing a team like BU and that the vast majority of UMass players come from around the Boston area and will be playing in front of parents, relatives and friends and you've got the makings of a real good hockey game.

Game time in BU's Walter Brown Rink on the BU campus is 8:00 PM.

TIDBITS: BU is getting to be a regular farm system for the pros. A list of recent BU grads (and non-grads) playing pro includes: Mike Hyndman (WHA), Ron Anderson (AHL), Bob Gryp (AHL), Pete Thornton (EHL), Bob Brown (EHL), Ric Jordan (EHL), Dan Brady (WHL), Tim Regan (EHL), Guy Burrowes (AHL), John Danby (WHA),.....Pro scouts are popping up at 1sts of UMass games and Pat Keenan and Don Riley would seem to be the most likely seniors they'd be looking at.....UMass has another Div. I game in Boston on Friday night against Northeastern.

Minutemen n' Cross Meet Civic Center

By MARTY KELLEY

Springfield, Mass.–Around the turn of the century, a chaplain suggested the game of basketball to cure prankish ills. With no coach, a small Jesuit school overlooking a small bluff overlooking Interstate 290 commenced interscholastically. Without a varsity game from 1909-1920, the school went on and produced a national championship in the '46-'47 campaign. Success has flooded the modern gate at this Jesuit institution and here tonight UMass will be no stranger to that ethic.

They say the Cage is a ten point cushion. And when their two teams tangle you always could use that edge. But Jack Leaman won't have it tonight when these two quintets square off at the Civic Center at 8:00 p.m. Supposedly and by the record it's a UMass "home game". But the aura and the explosiveness of the Cage that surrounded last year's 93-82 double overtime thriller will be missing. You can

(Continued on P. 15)

Marty Kelley

It's Tough Being A Latent Hypocrite

By MARTY KELLEY

From a Bed of Coals—
The Wrath of Boyden is upon us
. . . . . .

I'd like to say that tonight is the night we've all been waiting for . . . But I doubt it. But although I'd like to tell you what you'll be hearing for the next couple of days, I'm the type of guy who thrives on optimism . . . so check your wallets students, recheck your basketball loyalties, and be hypocrites for a night . . . we've all done it many times before.

But you're going to ask yourself, "why should I be a hypocrite for the stuffed shirts of the athletic department who charge me $30 a year for sport events and now they want me to shell out five dollars to go to a place thirty minutes away with no parking or transportation available". Well, I don't think our athletic brass wants to tap anyone's Blue Wall funds, confuse transportation and really openly impinge upon your life style. They have, however, stolen the Cage for an evening and maybe a ten point cushion against the Cross . . . But there's purpose.

Before we get critical, let's hold the presses . . . I say the Boyden brass deserves a chance. I like what they are trying to do but I question their methods. They've given UMass basketball to the public and if it sells, maybe the public will give us something in return . . . But I doubt that. A Convocation Center is really at this point beyond our fondest dreams . . .

But I say give our Administration a chance. Lee Sandwen did when he initially supported the idea . . . But my bone of contention is please wait. And I guess tonight the dye will be cast. But let me say this for our sojourn to Springfield. It's different and quite idealistic. But will it work . .. Hell, there's only one way to find out and that's try it . . . And that's exactly what they are trying . . . God, for their sake I hope it works.

Alright, students, now how will you react. For myself there's really no problem. I'll hop on the team bus and enjoy the game with a press pass near midcourt. But for the non-media student, it's easy to be apathetic. The reasons are obvious. But believe it or not, I don't want you to think of yourself or the Athletic Department who you feel has really deprived you of an experience that they are really offering to you—a chance to see a game in a socalled "decent" facility.

Hey, I tell yah, I'd go . . . And I supposedly represent the normal student (hmmmm . . .). First of all it's early in the semester. Tuesday isn't a drinking night (well) and although you bitch about transportation, if it were a Jethro Tull concert, you'd get there wouldn't you. So in a way I really don't want to hear your woes about travel. If you want to see UMass basketball at the Civic Center, you'll get there.

How red is your blood students? Concerning the buses that aren't and should have been ready, do you want to be packed in like sardines and shipped off to a game like your old high school days in that not so sensuous Pep Bus . . . Hell no!

Believe me, when you walk into a brand new facility like the Civic Center in Providence, you gaze for a minute in wonderment. Then you're overcome with jealousy. But really take it from someone who has seen half the East Coast with the Redmen-Minuteman sport entourage, it's almost like being on a tour. And as I say, it's all part of the sport experience getting the opportunity to see how the better half of the facility lives.

Well what will I accomplish if I don't go. What you really have to rationalize is the fact that did I want to see this game. If it were at the Cage would I go or not? If you answer yes to the above two questions, maybe I'll see you at the Civic Center. For you see the Boyden experimenters thought and to this hour are sweating thinking that a lot of students wish to answer yes to those questions. Coupled with area enthusiasm, the show should sell some tickets.

Well kids, be good hypocrites and help your local Athletic Department and show up. In the long run you'll be helping yourself . . . Right now that is hard for you to understand but nothing and believe me nothing gets accomplished without trial and error.

So give the Civic Center the chance it deserves, it may be your last . . .

New England's Largest College Daily

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

Weather
On that dark and stormy night, I whispered to her, "Should we wake Tom up?"

Recyclable

VOLUME C, ISSUE 72 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 31, 1973

Fire Destroys Tobin Rooms, Computer

Firemen with oxygen masks enter Tobin Hall to combat a fire that heavily damaged the fifth floor of the newly completed building last night. (MDC Photos by Steve Smith and Pete Manera.)

Smoke is seen near flourescent lights on the fifth floor of Tobin Hall. A computer and many laboratory animals were reportedly destroyed in the fire. Two firemen were treated and released for injuries suffered in the blaze. (MDC Photos by Steve Smith and Pete Manera.)

By MARK VOGLER AND BILL DENSMORE

A fire on the fifth floor of the recently completed Tobin Hall destroyed a suite of offices late last night and early this morning, and caused over an estimated $100,000 in damage.

Town firemen were slightly injured in the blaze, which caused "major heat and smoke damage" to the suite, according to Amherst Fire Chief John T. Doherty.

Also destroyed in the blaze, according to Doherty, was a "relatively small" computer and a number of animal experiments. No further damage details were available. The suite was occupied by a number of Psychology Dept. laboratories.

Fireman Patrick Brock was treated and released at Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton for smoke inhalation, and fireman Daniel Martin was treated and released for a wrist laceration.

At the height of the fire, for which the first alarm was sounded at 11:14 after a janitor in the building noticed smoke, firemen had to wear oxygen masks to enter the building. Doherty said the firemen encountered "heavy smoke and heat conditions."

After a recall of all off-duty personnel was sounded by the department to fight the fire (the equivalent of a second alarm), the blaze was brought under control at 12:02 a.m. With students from the Amherst Auxiliary Fire Dept., the total number of firemen called to the scene was estimated at 65 at one point, with five fire engines.

Several windows on the fifth floor were broken by firemen during the blaze, and a fireman at one point said smoke in the fire area "is so thick you can't see anything."

A false alarm was also reported at Amherst College during the evening.

Doherty said the cause of the fire was undetermined, and was under investigation.

Few Students Show As UMass Downs HC

By MARTY KELLEY

Springfield–Reactions to UMass playing basketball at the Springfield Civic Center varied last night while a crowd of 3,000, mostly alumni, watched the Minutemen defeat the Holy Cross Crusaders, 78-71, in the first of two games scheduled here this season.

Student sentiment revealed before the game indicated that many would not make the thirty mile trip from the Amherst campus. This came true as many students questioned the validity of paying to enter the game and for transportation to it, after already paying a $30 athletic fee.

Some syudents cla

Some students claimed that the "lack of transportation and the fact that they felt ripped off by the sale of tickets were the main reasons for apathy."

One student felt that "if I could get in with my !D, I really wouldn't mind it, but I don't see how people (Athletic Department) expect us to pay for a game like this."

Athletic Director Frank McInerney expressed concern for the lack of students there, but yet he admitted that he really wasn't that surprised.

"I'd have to say that since this is the first time we have explored such a venture, I must admit I am encouraged for the future," said the first year Athletic Director. "I think there are certain positive steps that we have to take before we come back here against Boston College (February 7th)."

McInerney added that transportation is a necessity as well as the presence of the Pep Band which was not in attendance last night. "If the Student Senate does not want to take the responsibility for the buses, then we will for the next time."

Poor driving conditions were directly responsible for the small crowd both student and alumni said several in attendance.

James Trelease, an alumnus of the class of '63, felt that the students owe the alumni at least a couple of games at the Civic Center but no more than three. "After all," said Trelease, "we're the people who keep the University alive with taxes. I don't think it's too much to ask at all for a few games to see here. But I think two is the limit for that's all an average grad would want to see. But some form of viewing the team should be made available for us."

The Civic Center question is paralled directly with scheduling and the type of competition booked for the attractive 8,500 seat arena. Several mentioned last night that better teams besides Holy Cross should be planned as to increase local interest.

Concerning Holy Cross, many admitted that if they knew that King Gaskins, a high school All-American at Catholic Memorial and a frosh standout, was suspended, they never would have come.

Track Coach Ken O'Brien, approached at the Alumni Association cocktail party following the game, commented, "If we are going to play here twice a year why put the students in jeopardy. The games should be scheduled during Christmas break so the students really aren't neglected that much. Also at that time you can stimulate interest in our games here by bringing in top ranked teams perhaps catching them when they are in New York for the ECAC holiday festival or just on vacation."

Other UMass officials such as Bill Lamber, President of the Varsity M Club, Ron Barrett, Courtclub (basketball boosters) President, and Speaker of the House, Dave Bartley expressed delight over the turnout of Alumni.

One Alumnae from Westfield said that this was the first time in 20 years that she had seen a UMass basketball game.

In reaction to the question of whether the students were being cheated out of a portion of their Athletic Fee, a few UMass officials, namely McInerney and O'Brien, offered a different slant to the issue.

Both felt that the students should remember that their $30 goes toward the Athletic "Program" which encompasses much more than simply basketball tickets. They remarked that the Civic Center was a very positive part of their athletic program for which the student money pays.

On The Inside:

•Towing Contract Delayed see page two

•Committee Passes Oath Repeal see page three

•Two Convicted In Watergate see page four

Carlos Montoya, the great flamenco guitarist, thrilled a capacity crowd in Curry Hicks Cage last night. Montoya appeared with the Springfield Symphony Orchestra in the concert sponsored by the Fine Arts Council. (MDC Photo by Pete Manera).

Appeals Delay Tow Contract

By BILL DENSMORE

The awarding of a contract for towing requested by University Security has been held up pending a meeting of the Town of Amherst Zoning Board of Appeals.

The Zoning Board will meet to hear the request of the manager of Plaza Shell on Northampton Road, next to Stop and Shop to change the 1969 permit to allow the service station to store towed cars and park tow trucks. The new permit, if approved by the ZBA would expressly deny "storage of junk vehicular parts, other trucks, trailers, wrecks, cast-off or cannibalized vehicles..."

If the Zoning Board does not approve the manager's request, Amherst Towing, Inc. of Sunderland Road, North Amherst, will get the contract by default.

Amherst Towing held the contract for 1972, and is presently handling towing requests on a temporary basis, according to University Director of Procurement, Francis J. Teahan.

"The contract has been given temporarily to Amherst Towing," Teahan said Friday, but "we're still checking into it."

Plaza Shell currently holds a contract for towing with the Town of Amherst and has leased four 1973 tow trucks in anticipation of receiving the UMass contract. But the company is presently prohibited by town zoning regulations from storing towed vehicles at the gasoline station site.

A check of the Town Clerk's records reveals that the zoning variance request filed by the Shell manager is the sixth to be filed this year. Requests are handled in the order they are received and according to Town Building Inspector Chester Penza, the ZBA "hears probably three or four cases in an evening."

The records check also showed that the three dollar filing fee for the request has not been paid, and consequently a copy has not yet been forwarded to Penza's office.

A meeting of the ZBA has been scheduled for Thursday, February 8th at 7:30 p.m., but the Plaza Shell request is not on the agenda for that meeting. Thus it is unlikely that the parking space could be made legal for towed vehicles at least until the March meeting of the Zoning Board of Appeals, and even then there is expected to be opposition to the request.

One member of the ZBA said last Friday that "there's some merit to not having a proliferation of this kind of activity over the town--every other station becomes a junkyard." Sources in the Town Manager's office have also reported that there have already been several comments from residents about the request.

Plan Cuts Amherst In Five

By DON BISHOP

The town of Amherst's Select Committee on Goals (SCOG) released its long anticipated study on town growth and development Monday night, giving a number of plans and suggestions relating to this potential problem.

The 125-page SCOG report recommends the establishment of five "villages" which would add to the organization and centralization of the town, while complimenting the town center.

This suggestion is apparently one way the Committee sees as moderating the growth and improving the qualitative aspects of the town.

The five so-called "villages" named by the report would be: North Amherst Village, Cushman Village, Hampshire Village, South Amherst Village, and Southeast Amherst Village.

Among the other recommendations the Report makes include: a continued zoning moratorium on apartment complex building and the development of a "public transit system operating between the villages."

As far as projections for peak population is concerned the report does not establish one recommended figure. It did estimate that the town would grow to a resident population of 40,000 over the next 30 years. This is based on the present estimation of Amherst population at 15,000.

The report stated: "Throughout our studies, it was also evident that the Town of Amherst will continue to grow even if the local educational institutions restrict further expansion. If this growth is not in some way controlled and directed better than it presently is, many of the desirable features of Amherst will be lost forever.

"Unplanned growth will also cause the town to constantly operate in a crisis situation relative to development and provision of utilities, transportation...Town residents, rather than directing growth, will be directed by it."

The Committee made its recommendations based on surveys of public opinion, consultations with experts, and reports from all of the town's standing committees.

Part of the public opinion survey was indicated in the considerable support SCOG sees for the acquisition of open space. 91% of the townspeople surveyed responded favorably when asked if they favored land acquisition policies.

The Committee itself was disbanded Monday night and the report now lies in the hands of the selectmen. They will be the ones to decide just what contained in the report should be impleted, and when and how it should be done.

A summary of the report will be drawn up and made available to the public in the near future.

Final Day To Register For Amherst Election

Today is the deadline to register to vote in the Amherst town election February 20th.

There is no longer any six-month residency requirement to register to vote in Amherst but any transfer student, swing-shifter, or other student newly-arrived on campus must present evidence of on-campus residency, which may be obtained from the student's Head of Residence or from the Housing Office in Whitmore Administration Building. For those students who have just moved into an apartment off-campus in Amherst, a lease should suffice as proof of residency.

Students who have not yet registered to vote may do so in the office of the Town Clerk in the Amherst Town Hall during the special registration session today from noon until 10 P.M.

Several election contests of interest to students will be decided in the balloting February 20th. In the race for Selectman, challenger George Scheurer is attempting to unseat two-term incumbent Merle Howes. In the School Committee race, with two seats being contested, incumbent Nathaniel Reed is competing with three other candidates--Frederic Cheyette, Howard Gatslick, and Mary Lou Theilman.

In the battle for Town Meeting positions, a number of students are running as reform candidates for seats in Precincts 2, 3, 5, and 7, setting a new precedent in Amherst town politics.

Tow Firm Lacked Town Contract Specs

By BILL DENSMORE

When the Town of Amherst contracted Plaza Shell to do all the towing for the police department last month, it may have inadvertently signed an agreement with a firm that couldn't initially do the job required by the contract.

According to the manager of Plaza Shell, his firm didn't have enough tow trucks to fulfill the town contract when it was awarded. "We didn't have sufficient (equipment) to cover the contract," he said last Friday.

The only other bidder for the contract was Amherst Towing, Inc. of North Amherst, which had the town's business until this year.

After the contract was awarded to Plaza Shell, the firm bought four 1973 model tow trucks to handle the new business. The firm now has "approximately" the same number of trucks as Amherst Towing, Inc., according to Shell's manager. But, he continued, his vehicles include a more expensive rubber carrying sling which will do "less damage to the automobiles being towed" than the sling used by Amherst Towing.

Amherst Town Manager Allan Torrey, when questioned about the contract last Friday said, "Well, you know it's not a very important contract."

And according to Assistant Town Manager Stephen Shieffer, "If the low bidder didn't have any tow equipment we wouldn't award it to him." Shieffer said that it was "the Town Manager's responsibility" to judge whether or not a bidder can do the job required in a contract.

The facilities (for parking vehicles) that Plaza Shell are using to fulfill the Town contract are not the same as the space the firm would use to park vehicles towed as a result of a proposed contract with the University.

The facilities specified on a bid for a University contract is the subject of a related article in today's Collegian.

According to one reliable source, when trucks leased to Plaza Shell were sent out on their first towing job for the Town, they had to be taken off the road by Town police because they showed no registration plates. The Plaza Shell tow trucks were then towed off the public highway by trucks from Amherst Towing, Inc., according to the source.

Deputy Police Chief Donald Meyer, when queried about the no-plates incident on Monday said, "I'm not going to make any statements relative to that." He also said that service provided by Plaza Shell under the new contract "apparently" has been satisfactry, although there have been few cars towed by the town as yet this year.

All the trucks leased to Plaza Shell now bear license plates.

Poor Richard's Staff

Membership Meeting

Tonight, 7:30

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

The office of the DAILY COLLEGIAN is on the second floor of the Student Union on the campus of the University of Massachusetts, zip code 01002. Telephones: 545-2550 (news); 545 0344 (sports); 545 0731 (business).

Second class postage is paid in Amherst. THE DAILY COLLEGIAN publishes Monday through Friday during the academic year, except during vacation, exam periods or holidays. Accepted for mailing under the authority of an act of March 8, 1879; as amended by an act of June 11, 1943. Subscription rates are $6.00 per semester or $10.00 per year.

Over The Rainbow

Amherst Carriage Shops
233 N. Pleasant St.

Handmade - Pottery,
Silver Jewelry
Belts
Photographs
Copper Ethings

Custom Embroidery
on Workshirts, Jeans

Anything - bring your own or we supply.

Woof?
Bow-wow?
(Photos?)
(Seniors, today?)

SENIOR PHOTOS
Today through Feb. 9

Details — Sign up in Index Office, 2nd floor, Student Union

Free candy with every sitting.

Assistant English professor James H. Matlack, one of the supporters of legislation aimed at abolishing the Massachusetts loyalty oath. (MDC Photo by Bob Callahan).

Stennis Shot, Condition Critical

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. John C. Stennis, D-Miss., was shot during a holdup in front of his Washington home Tuesday night, police said. An aide said the senator's condition is "really serious."

Stennis, 71, was shot a short time after leaving a National Guard reception near the Capitol. He was taken to Walter Reed Army Medical Center with one gunshot wound in the stomach and one in a leg, police said.

Stennis was admitted to the hospital shortly before 8:30 p.m. and was taken to surgery immediately. The hospital said its "first team" of surgeons is treating the senator, but offered no details on the senator's condition.

Police Sgt. Edward Jones said officers have descriptions of Stennis' assailants and have posted a lookout for two persons.

An aide said Stennis was robbed of a small amount of cash and his watch.

Stennis' brown leather briefcase was found lying next to the curb directly in front of his home, a white two-story brick house in a well-to-do northwest Washington neighborhood. His coat was lying on the curb.

Gertrude Sullivan, who lives directly across the street from Stennis' home, said she heard a couple of shots between 7:30 and 8 p.m. She said she went to her front window, opened the curtain and heard some voices but was unable to see anything.

"Just some words were said and that's all," Mrs. Sullivan said. She said she went back to watching television until she heard the police sirens. She went back to her window and saw the senator being loaded into an ambulance.

Stennis, who has been in the Senate since 1947, is chairman of the Senate Armed Services and a strong supporter of the military. He fought for support of the Nixon administration's Vietnam war policy as fiercely as he opposed federal civil-rights legislation.

Another neighbor of Stennis' was telling newsmen that she had seen two men at the scene when she was escorted away by a FBI agent.

Stennis' administrative assistant William Cresswell said Stennis usually drove alone to and from work and parks his car on the street directly in front of his home.

He said he was with the senator at the National Guard reception and that Stennis apparently was going directly home after he left.

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

Editorial Elections

Thursday 7:30 PM

Colonial Lounge

It'll Be A Dark
And Stormy Night

Loyalty Oath Repeal Passes Committee

By MARK VOGLER

BOSTON--A bill filed in December by Rep. James Collins, D-Amherst, and Sen. John Olver, D-Amherst, to abolish the required loyalty oath for Massachusetts state employees won favorable support from the Legislature's Joint Committee on Public Service Tuesday.

The bill's proponents included two University of Massachusetts-Amherst professors, representatives of the American Civil Liberties Union, Massachusetts Society of Professors, American Association of University Professors, American Federation of Teachers, the Labor-University-Community Alliance, and Berkshire Community College.

The repeal effort was opposed by representatives of the Metropolitan Police Patrolman's Union, the American Legion, the Massachusetts Police Association, Disabled American Veterans, and Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Rep. Collins told the committee that no one has ever been prosecuted under the 1949 laws, which was upheld as constitutional by the Supreme Court last year.

According to Collins, "The oath serves no useful purpose and does not speak to the type of patriotism we want to bring forth."

Testimony was given before the Public Service Committee by UMass professors James Matlack and Walter Denny. Matlack argued in favor of abolishing the oath on the grounds that it "demeans true patriotism" and "poses a threat to freedom".

"Loyalty oaths curtail free speech and public criticism which are essential to the full and effective functioning of our political processes. They raise the spectre of test oaths and coerced conformity, running counter to our deepest values and traditions," Matlack said.

"Every despotism in history has such an oath. They have no place in the laws of a free people."

In his testimony, Denny claimed that to uniformly enforce the oath would be expensive and "hardly worth the taxpayer's money." He called the oath "a mockery of patriotism—something that rather cheapens it."

"It's not something that you equate as a symbol alongside the American flag or the National Anthem...it's a symbol of something you get in the mail, something nasty that says: 'sign this or you'll lose your job.' "

Denny said the oath seemed to be used more on the academic community and "looked as if it were used for the purpose of repressing it."

Von Braun Here

Wernher von Braun will talk on "Our Space Program After Apollo" tonight at 8 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom.

The program will include slides and a film. It is sponsored by the Distinguished Visitors Program and is open to the public without charge.

Dr. von Braun now heads the planning effort for future U.S. space missions in the Washington office of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA). During the 1960-70 decade, he was director of NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala.

He began his work in rockets and missiles in his native Germany. When World War II ended, he was technical director of the German Rocket Research Center at Peenemuende. He came to this country in 1945 and became an American citizen in 1955.

Correction

On page 3 of yesterday's Collegian, a headline referred to the deportation of an Iranian student at UMass. The student has been ordered to leave by the Immigration and Naturalization Service, not deported. According to the INS deportation proceedings may be started if the student refuses to leave.

Draft Counseling Continues

University Draft Counseling Services decided at a meeting Monday night that there still is a need for draft counseling even though the Nixon Administration has said the draft has ended. They cited the Selective Service System's continued operation even after the President's power of induction ends in June as a reason for continued services.

The draft counselors also see a need for expanded services at the University. There is a need for military and veterans counseling, legal referral services, student orientated military educational programs, and in general counseling and education to prevent future use of U.S. military force.

There will be a meeting Thursday, February 1, at 7:30 p.m. in Room 802 of the Campus Center for anyone interested in the new service. We will meet to discuss the future of peace orientated counseling on campus and to draw a concrete proposal to submit to the Student Senate for funding. Anyone who is interested is urged to attend.

UMass
Police
5-2121

For the best in VW repairs & service see

D & M SUNOCO Rte. 9, across from Zayre.

Specialists in disc brakes. Road service — 256-6860
Friendly service — We try hard to please!

Senate Lecture Note Program

Antro 102; 104B
Botany 100; 101B(3)
Econ 100 A,B; 103A; 104 (1A,3B)
Food Sci 101
Micro 140
Poli Sci 100 (A,B)
Psych 101A (1A,3); 262 (A,B) 263 (A,B); 270 (A,B) 280A (1); 301B
Soc 101 (2,3)
Soc 256 (2)
Speech 115
Zool 101 (A,B,D); 135; 145; 221

Distribution

1) Student Union, Rm. 318 9:30 a.m. - 4:00 p.m.

2) Southwest, JQA Lobby 11:00 - 4:00 p.m.

TONITE

FAT

Rusty
Nail
Inn

Rte. 1, Saugus
665-1937

In The Nation And The World

Cease-Fire Charges Fly

SAIGON (AP) — Vietnamese on both sides in the war traded accusations of cease-fire violations yesterday as Vice President Spiro T. Agnew met with Saigon's leaders to underscore the Nixon administration's post-war support for South Vietnam.

North Vietnam charged that the United States and South Vietnam also violated the spirit of the Paris cease-fire by hindering Communist delegates arriving in Saigon to work on peacekeeping arrangements.

The International Commission of Control and Supervision, stalled by lack of security and transportation because of the disputes failed to meet an 8 a.m. deadline for getting its seven regional teams in place and operating.

The fighting that marked the beginning of the truce was reported to have subsided in some areas of South Vietnam, including the northern quarter and the central highlands. But the clashes resulted in major troop redeployments and movements in violation of the agreement, thus causing chaos in the key question of territorial control.

The Communist side apparently made more gains than the South Vietnamese in the land grab that preceded the truce with such momentum that it never stopped when the cease-fire became effective at 8 a.m. Sunday.

Without taking sides, the international peacekeeping commission said it "deplored" cease-fire violations and asked its Canadian member to solve the impasse.

Agnew arrived in Saigon shortly after noon on the first leg of a seven-nation Asian tour that includes Cambodia, Thailand, Laos, Singapore, Indonesia and Malaysia.

He said in an arrival statement he is beginning "important consultations" with President Nguyen Van Thieu on postwar relations.

The Paris cease-fire agreement does not contain any provision for withdrawal of the estimated 125,000 North Vietnamese troops in South Vietnam.

But both sides are pledged to reduce their military establishments. Agnew said it is up to Saigon and the Viet Cong to work out an agreement.

The Saigon command accused the Communist side of 737 violations of the cease-fire since it went into effect. As a result the command said, 1,761 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong and 296 South Vietnamese troops have died in the first 48 hours of the truce.

Jury Convicts Two In Watergate Case

WASHINGTON (AP)-Two former officials of President Nixon's re-election committee were convicted yesterday of political espionage of breaking into Democratic headquarters and planting microphones.

The jury of 8 women and 4 men took less than 90 minutes in convicting George D. Gordon Liddy on all six counts he was charged with and James W. McCord Jr., on all eight counts.

The two men took the verdict with a slight smile on their faces. Liddy's arms were folded as he stood before the jury.

The verdict came quickly in light of 16 days of trial that saw a total of 51 witnesses for the prosecution and 11 for the defense.

Liddy and McCord, respectively general counsel and security director for the Committee for the Re-election of the President, were the only two of the seven originally charged to stand trial. The other five pleaded guilty in the early days of the trial.

Sentencing for all seven men by Chief U.S. Judge John J. Sirica will come later after pre-sentencing investigations.

The judge committed Liddy and McCord to jail without bail. They had been free on bond throughout the trial.

McCord was convicted of conspiracy, two counts of second degree burglary, attempting to intercept oral and wire communications, possessing bugging equipment and actually intercepting conversations.

Liddy was convicted on the same counts except for two of possessing bugging and wiretap equipment.

The jury went out at 4:35 p.m. on the 16th day of the trial that stemmed from the bugging and break-in of Democratic party headquarters in the Watergate office building last June 17.

The eight women and four men, sequestered in the federal courthouse since their selection Jan. 9, went immediately into a Spartan room next to the courtroom.

"To each of you I must say that you should decide the case for yourself," U.S. Dist. Judge John J. Sirica said. "You should not surrender your honest convictions...for the mere purpose of returing a verdict."

Since their selection, the jurors have been living on the seventh floor of the U.S. District Court in Washington's Federal Triangle, each in a 9 by 12 room.

Nixon Asks Spending Curbs

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Nixon told Congress today that his proposed curbs on federal spending could make 1973 a great year for the economy, prevent a price explosion and hasten an end to wage-price controls.

In his annual economic report to Congress, Nixon stressed the theme that he did in his fiscal 1974 budget message: Sustained, noninflationary economic growth is not possible without fiscal restraint on Capitol Hill.

"We must develop more reliable and responsible attitudes and methods for dealing with the federal budget, so that it is not perpetually on the margin of an inflationary explosion," Nixon said in the report.

"We must be prepared for the end of wage and price controls, and be willing to show the same courage in taking them off as was shown in imposing them."

He also called for an end to the "restrictive effects of the large number of other economic controls exercised by the federal government, most of them having their origins decades ago, and many of them interfering with productivity and production."

Nixon did not explain what he meant by these controls, although it was presumed to refer to agricultural policies. He gave no clue on when he would end wage-price restraints.

The President said that 1973 economic prospects are bright, with the economy expanding rapidly and unemployment declining. "The problem, as far as can now be foreseen, will be to prevent this expansion from becoming an inflationary boom."

He has asked for a spending ceiling of $268.7 billion in fiscal 1974 and has withheld appropriated funds in the current fiscal year to keep federal spending at $250 billion.

Nixon said 1973 "can be a great year" with reducing unemployment and inflation, leading to a sustained period of growth and full employment and price stability.

"But 1973 will be a great year only if we manage our fiscal affairs prudently and do not increase the increases in federal expenditures that I have proposed," he said.

The 1973 forecasts of Nixon's Council of Economic Advisers, which prepared the report, have for the most part been made public by Treasury Secretary George P. Shultz.

The report said the unemployment rate should drop from the 5.2 per cent at the end of the 1972 to the neighborhood of 4.5 per cent by the end of this year.

The council also said it would be risky to try to achieve a lower jobless rate lower than 4.5 per cent in 1973. A gradual decline in the unemployment rate is important, it said, because too much economic stimulation might rekindle inflation.

The unemployment discussion appeared to represent a small step backward from the consensus definition of full employment, a jobless rate of 4 per cent.

The report said, however, "This does not imply that in the present circumstances 4.5 per cent is necessarily the floor to the unemployment rate."

Economic Indicators Up

WASHINGTON (AP)-The government's index of leading economic indicators, billed by the Nixon administration as harbingers of broad ups and downs in the nation's economy, went up strongly last month, the Commerce Department said yesterday.

"The recent strength in the leading indicators suggests that the U.S. economy will continue to expand rapidly throughout this year," said Dr. Peter C. Manus, the department's acting assistant secretary for economic affairs. "This is consistent with most economic forecasts for 1973."

The indicators have risen at an almost uninterrupted pace since the General Motors strike of late 1970.

But the administration now is worried that the expansion may be going too fast and hopes to scale down some of the economic activity to prevent another inflationary boom such as that which occurred in the late 1960s.

The leading indicators rose by 2.2 per cent in December after a 2.3 per cent rise a month earlier. The department figured that in the final quarter of 1972, the index went up by 4.5 per cent, the best percentage rise since the first quarter of 1971.

The department economists said that the quarterly increase was one of the best of the past 11 years.

The Nixon administration has placed great stock in the leading indicators as a sensitive measure of the economy.

In Brief...

SAIGON (AP)—Lt. John E. Chambers Jr. is going home next week to tell his wife he fired the last American round in the war. He hit a truck—or a tree—from 7,000 feet.

"Well . . ." he said. "I had the ordinance and I figured I might as well expend it on something worthwhile. Yeah, I guess part of it was just exuberance and wanting to fire the last shot . . .

"It was pretty exhilirating to fire it and make it home safely after a year."

Chambers, a forward air controller, fired seven white phosphorus marking rockets minutes before the 8 a.m. cease-fire Sunday. Though Americans were involved to the last minute, his shots may well have been the last.

CHESS PLAYERS

SAT., FEB. 3: 2nd UMass Novice Chess Championship. Open to those who've never played in a rated tournament or won a novice tournament. 5 rounds, no knockouts. Entry fee $1, trophy and U.S. Chess Federation membership to winner. Register 9:00 - 9:30 a.m. in C.C., Room 911.

SUN., FEB. 4: UMass Winter 30-30. Open to all. Each player must make 30 moves within 30 minutes. 5 rounds, no knockouts. No entry fee, no prizes. All players must join Mass. Chess Association ($2.50/year); this includes a subscription to state newsletter, Chess Horizons. Register 9:30 - 10:00 a.m. in C.C., Room 911.

CHESS CLUB: The Campus Center Chess Club meets every Tuesday and Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. somewhere in the Campus Center — check Collegian Notices or C.C. Daily Schedule to find the room. No dues, all welcome.

SPONSORED BY THE CAMPUS CENTER PROGRAM COUNCIL

HEAR "some of my best friends...."

TONITE
AT THE BLUEWALL
9PM - 1AM

Sorority Information Booth

drop

down and talk with us

C.C. Concourse Wed., Jan. 31 - Wed., Feb. 7 10 a.m. - 3 p.m.

A Cambodian soldier carries two wounded peasant children toward an aid station recently after a Communist attack near Romeas, Cambodia. In Cambodia, which is not affected by the Paris agreement and truce scheduled to start on Sunday, the war is expected to continue. (AP)

Peacekeeping Teams Staffed

SAIGON (AP) — International peacekeeping teams were to start out across South Vietnam to check on cease-fire violations Tuesday. But most of the peacekeepers instead lounged in their Saigon barracks wearing bathing suits and shorts in the hot sun.

Wrangling between the Saigon government and the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese delegates to the Joint Military Commission had blocked their way. Neither military commission members nor supervisors from the international control groups got into the countryside they are supposed to police.

As they waited, the informality in the compound of the International Commission of Control and Supervision contrasted sharply with the stern atmosphere in the compound where North Vietnamese and Viet Cong delegates to the four-party Joint Military Commission were housed.

The North Vietnamese and Viet Cong representatives are the first delegates from the warring Communist parties to get official status from the Saigon government and the South Vietnamese have gone to great pains to keep them as far from the public eye as possible.

Their home is Camp Davis, a former U.S. Army billet on the fringes of Tan Son Nhut air base. It is surrounded by a 10-foot cyclone fence topped with three rows of barbed wire. Three rolls of fresh concertina wire are deployed on the ground.

While the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong have been tucked away in a remote corner, the Poles, Hungarians, Indonesians and Canadians on the International Commission of Control and Supervision are living on one of the busiest streets at Tan Son Nhut.

They are a block from the post exchange and across the street from a base heliport. During their idle hours Tuesday many stood on their balconies drinking beer or soda and watching the helicopters come and go.

Congress Seeking Back Powers

WASHINGTON (AP)—Senate hearings on a bill designed to help Congress recapture control of the government purse-strings began Tuesday with accusations by witnesses and senators that President Nixon is abusing his power by impounding appropriations.

But a theme also emphasized by committee members and witnesses was that Congress must reform its own procedures and show greater discipline in holding down spending.

Sen. Sam J. Ervin, Jr., D-N.C., chairman of the Senate Judiciary subcommittee on separation of powers, said "Congress has a solemn responsibility to bring appropriations in harmony with revenues."

Similarly, Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., one of the Government Operations Committee members participating in the hearings, said any recapture of power by Congress "must satisfy the country that it is accompanied by responsibility."

The bill under consideration, sponsored by Ervin and more than 50 other senators, would require the President to notify Congress of any impoundment of appropriated funds. Unless the Senate and the House approved the impoundment within 60 days, it would have to cease.

It is part of a series of moves aimed at overcoming what is widely regarded as the waning power of Congress and the growing power of the executive branch of the government.

Ervin said the issue at the hearings is "whether the current trend toward executive usurpation of legislative power is to continue unabated until we have arrived at a presidential form of government."

Ralph Nader testified that Ervin's bill "falls far short of what is necessary to restore the constitutional balance in the spending process."

Nader objected it would permit the President to impound funds for 60 days without congressional consent and said it might be construed as congressional approval of all past impoundments.

Ervin took issue with him on that, saying passage of the bill would no more approve past impoundments than a law prohibiting murder is approval of past murders.

Morning-After Pill Info Kept Secret

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Food and Drug Administration is keeping secret an advisory panel's recommendation on controversial morning-after birth control pills which are gaining popularity among college girls despite concern that they may cause cancer.

"Premature disclosure of the recommendations would harm rather than aid good consumer protection," said Dr. J. Richard Crout, director of the FDA's Office of Scientific Evaluation.

The agency hopes to reach a final conclusion within the next few weeks and the panel's advice will be released at that time, an FDA spokesman said.

Sources close to the year-long investigation said the Obstetrics and Gynecology Advisory Committee has advised the FDA to recognize and approve postcoital use of the drug, but with new labels warning doctors not to prescribe it for high-risk patients.

Among the synthetic estrogens known to interfere with pregnancy after sexual intercourse, the most widely prescribed because of its relatively low cost is diethylstilbestrol—DES—recently banned from cattle feed and linked to a dramatic increase in rare genital cancer in young women.

The committee held a final meeting Friday to ponder the problem and opened its morning session to hear testimony from a number of scientists and researchers.

DES appears to be remarkably effective in preventing pregnancies, the panel was told, but many questions about its safety remain unanswered.

"In view of the limitations in our knowledge of this area, it would seem advisable to limit the use of DES as a post-coital pill to those women who could provide full assurance as to timing of sexual exposure and who were prepared to undergo interruption of pregnancy in case of failure of contraceptive effect," said Dr. Roy Hertz, noted researcher at New York Medical College.

Regular ingestion leads to "greater than expected frequency of malignancy" in the female genital tract, he said.

Official approval of DES for birth control, he added, "should await more extended clinical trials including properly controlled studies clarifying the issues of safety and effectiveness."

Dr. M. B. Lipsett, a researcher at the Medical Institute of Child and Human Development, said there is no known threshold does below which an estrogen will not cause cancer. But he said the incidence decreases in likelihood as the dosage and frequency drops.

The government is planning carcinogenic studies of estrogens but not DES, said Dr. Richard Blye of MICHD, who said he opposed the committee's general conclusion to include all estrogens in its recommendation to the FDA.

Slayton To Fly Into Space In '75

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP)——The boss of the American astronauts, a three-time space veteran and a rookie will form the U.S. crew for the American-Soviet joint space flight in 1975, it was learned today.

Sources said the American crew will be Donald K. Slayton, the astronaut chief and the only one of the original seven U.S. astronauts who has never flown into space; Thomas P. Stafford, commander of Apollo 10 and a veteran of two earlier space missions, and Vance D. Brand, a civilian astronaut who has never flown into space.

TEN PIN BOWLING

Monday - Saturday
4:30 - 10:30

(Except during league play)

BOYDEN LANES

50c/string

FALL SEMESTER - ISRAEL

Brandeis University/The Jacob Hiatt Institute
Study in Jerusalem/July-December, 1973
(43 students from 22 universities in 1972)

Juniors and Seniors eligible

Four courses/Hebrew not required/Earn 16 credits

Cost: $1850/tuition, room, board
Financial Aid available

Application deadline March 1st
For information write:

The Jacob Hiatt Institute
Brandeis University
Waltham, Massachusetts 02154

SALE! continues at
WEAR HOUSE

Get Your Valentine Gift at

Creation Antiques

Amherst Carriage Shops

jewelry

books

clothing

old valentines

assorted absurdities

Second Semester Has Begun!
Come Out Before It's Too Late!

UMass.
Student Homophile League

Meetings Thursdays at 7:30 p.m.
9th floor Lincoln Campus Center

1st meeting Feb. 1st.

RSO 368 Phone: 545-0154

Student Union No. 413

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

BOARD OF EDITORS

EDITOR IN CHIEF James E. Gold
MANAGING EDITOR Nathan Gorenstein
BUSINESS MANAGER William L. Manburg
EXECUTIVE EDITOR Stephen G. Tripoli
NEWS EDITOR Donald J. Bishop
SPORTS EDITOR William E. Ballou
PHOTO EDITOR Gib Fullerton
FINE ARTS EDITOR Robert Nestl

ASST. MANAGING EDITOR Steve Fine
ADVERTISING MANAGER Jeanne Bauge
ASST. PHOTO EDITOR Alan Chapman
ASST. SPORTS EDITOR Roy Lyons

TODAY'S STAFF

ISSUE EDITOR Bob Scheler
EDITORIAL Steve Tripoli
SPORTS Steve Crowe
DARKROOM Al Chapman, Sue Goldbaum
AD LAYOUT Bill Manburg

Undergraduate newspaper of the University of Massachusetts. The Staff is responsible for its content and no faculty members or administrators read it for accuracy or approval prior to publication.

Unsigned editorials represent the view of this paper. They do not necessarily reflect the views of the faculty, administration, or student body as a whole. Signed editorials, columns, reviews, cartoons, and letters represent the personal views of the authors.

The Collegian subscribes to the Associated Press and the Liberation News Service. Publication of their material does not constitute endorsement.

Whose Interests?

The Athletic Council's experiment of playing a "home" basketball game in Springfield was shown to be a giant step backwards for student interests.

Only an estimated 3,000 persons were able to show up for the game last night in the Civic Center which holds close to 9,000. Only 200 were thought to be UMass students.

The games were planned last year with apparently little thought being given to student interests. The Athletic Department has expressed little concern with how students are expected to make the 30 mile trip for this year's two Springfield basketball games.

Playing "home" games in Springfield serves nicely the interests of the taxpayers, non-student fans from western Massachusetts, alumni, and the legislators. It is also good public relations for the UMass administration.

However, none of those just mentioned have to pay a mandatory $30 Athletic Fee. Students, who must pay the fee, are being shortchanged. They have bought the privilege of struggling for transportation ($) to a game where they could only get in after buying a ticket ($). If held on campus, the game would have been free and much more accessible to students.

"Home" away from home games, if they really must be scheduled that way, should be done so while school is not in session, especially now that there is a five week intersession period. Then maybe the team could even tour the whole state.

Gerry Cataldo

Assignment: Watergate

Last week, on his show "Firing Line", William Buckley interviewed E. Howard Hunt and his cohort Mario Lazo. Mr. Hunt is a former member of the CIA and presently a defendant, who pleaded guilty, in the Watergate bugging case. Mr. Lazo, a former CIA informer and sympathizer, has worked with Mr. Hunt in Cuba, and is a strong advocate of his elevation to sainthood. The subject matter of the show was limited due to the ongoing trial, but for once Buckley curbed his rhetoric and the two guests were allowed to shed some light on the motives and ambitions of the men involved in the Watergate case.

The audience was treated to a review of the Bay of Pigs invasion, as seen through his eyes of the CIA and its friends. It seems that the operation was bungled by the politicians that swept into the White House with the new Kennedy Administration. According to Hunt, the invasion was critically altered by Kennedy with his last minute decision to restrict the number of air assaults preceding the land invasion. This decision, accordingly, left the landing force open to attack by Castro's air force, and resulted in what history terms a fiasco. And so, the Kennedy liberals and their soft approach to Castro became the pet peeve of the CIA, or, at least, of the members in question.

Now, what does all this have to do with the Watergate? Get ready. Kennedy liberals equal McGovern liberals equal another soft line toward Cuba, which would be disastrous at this particular time, because, according to Lazo, Castro is on his way out anyway. Therefore the free world would benefit by a continuance of a tough stand on Cuba, and the free world would be adversely affected if McGovern were elected and a change of policy were to take place. And, naturally, who would be better equipped or more willing to prevent just such a catastrophe from coming about than the CIA veterans of the Bay of Pigs? Sounds fantastic, right? But there's more. It seems that Lazo had acquired knowledge of certain monetary donations to the Democratic campaign that had originated in Cuba, and could be linked with Castro, or his supporters. It gets better all the time.

Throughout the broadcast, Lazo continued to praise the patriotism of Hunt, and repeatedly thanked him for saving the free world from a fate worse than death. He also intimated that the Watergate raiders took the task upon themselves, with no orders from the top, and I might add, with no regard for Constitutional rights and freedoms.

We are in trouble in this country when a group of private citizens, irregardless of previous occupation, take it upon themselves; in the name of God, Country, and apple pie; to play secret agent. And we are in deeper trouble when certain people attempt to condone such actions under the cloak of patriotism. I refuse to believe that we have created a secret police, composed of ex-agents and their cohorts, that roam the countryside seeking subversives. This is not the rule, it is the exception, and it should be viewed with alarm by the people, and dealt with harshly by the courts. As for Howard Hunt, it seems obvious that the guilty plea is an attempt to cloak the facts, and to keep secret the probable involvement of high officials connected with the Nixon re-election committee. Nevertheless, they will most likely get away with the plea, and once again we will be refused the real story, and served the official one. The case has been turned over to the jury, and a verdict will be reached. But guilty or not, the long arm of the law will not have reached out far enough.

Times have certainly changed. Instead of the secret agent swallowing the cyanide pill, he now pleads guilty and goes on a television show. Quite a switch from the spy novels. And speaking of novels perhaps Mr. Hunt can use the title of this column for his next one, hopefully he'll have a long time to work on it.

Gerry Cataldo is a Guest Columnist.

'YES, YOU COULD SAY I'VE NOTICED SOME HOSTILITY IN THE BUREAU . . .'

'NO PORTION OF THE PREVIOUS WAR MAY BE REPEATED WITHOUT THE EXPRESSED WRITTEN CONSENT OF HUMANITY'

Art Buchwald

Oh, What A Lousy War

WASHINGTON–When President Nixon announced the cease-fire in Vietnam last week there was little rejoicing in the land. The trouble is that Vietnam has given all wars a bad name.

Howard Sufferman and a small group of concerned citizens in this country have started a War Anti-Defamation League which hopes to dispel the prejudices against war caused by our adventure in Indochina.

Sufferman told me, "I don't think people should judge all wars by Vietnam. Of course there are always a few rotten ones in any barrel, but the majority of wars are upstanding, patriotic events that most Americans can be proud of."

"What do you think went wrong with this war?" I asked Sufferman.

"For one thing," he replied, "the good guys and the bad guys looked alike. You really can't have a good war when both your enemies and your allies have slanted eyes."

"But the bad guys did wear black pajamas," I pointed out.

"No matter," Sufferman said, "it was hard for Americans watching TV every night to get steamed up about a bunch of little runts who were five feet tall and weighed 65 pounds. What the hell kind of enemy is that?"

"Terrible casting," I agreed.

"I knew the war could never work," Sufferman said, "when no one on Tin Pan Alley wrote a war song to get the blood boiling and the juices flowing."

"It's hard to make anything rhyme with 'protective reaction strike,' " I said.

"And Hollywood let us down miserably," Sufferman added. "In order to have a good war you have to have dozens of motion pictures showing our brave American boys with their backs to the wall wiping out hundreds and hundreds of the ruthless yellow enemy. If you want to know the truth, what we missed more than anything was Errol Flynn. Perhaps if he were alive and we had put him on the Ho Chi Minh Trail with a machine gun and five hand grenades the entire attitude toward Vietnam might have been different."

"We had John Waynes," I reminded Sufferman.

"Americans are more sophisticated now," he replied. "One film on the Green Berets is not enough to sell the people on a war."

"What else went wrong in your opinion?"

"We didn't have rationing," Sufferman said. "The American people like to make sacrifices during a war–they want to be part of it. We had no scrap drives, no blackout curtains, no posters warning the enemy was listening. War is no fun if you don't feel a part of it. Even if the U.S. government didn't need it, they should have asked people to contribute string and tinfoil."

Sufferman continued, "There were so many mistakes I can't even list them all. A good war requires armies to fight for real estate. When the Pentagon decided to make enemy body counts the standard of whether we were winning or not, the American people lost interest. We wanted names of hills and valleys, towns and hamlets that our boys had valiantly fought for. And all they gave us was numbers of enemy killed. The whole thing became a bloody bore."

"Maybe the next war will be better," I said.

"I hope so," Sufferman said. "A couple more lousy ones like Vietnam and you're going to get the American people turned off on war for good."

Copyright 1973, Los Angeles Times.

Ghost Of Christmas Past

Letters To The Editor

The War Is Not Over

To The Editor:

Regardless of whether the Vietnamese War is over or not, the misery of the civilian population within Vietnam continues. And regardless of one's political views, the results of many American bombing raids are shocking. Between April 1972 and October 1972, fifty-six hospitals and clinics were destroyed in part or completely by United States bombs. Among the major hospitals subjected to U.S. air raids were two central health centers: the U.S.S.R. Friendship Hospital and the Vietnam-Czechoslovakia Hospital in Haiphong. More recently on Dec. 22, 1972 the Bach Mai Hospital in Hanoi was razed by B-52's. The hospital complex covered an area of thirty-four acres, yet not one of the thirty buildings now stand. The patients of Bach Mai (formerly 1200 beds) were entirely civilian. All of the medical equipment and supplies were destroyed including 1500 quarts of blood plasma. Needed badly throughout the war zone are essentials such as penicillin, vaccines, and antiseptics.

During the past year, a Cambridge based group, Medical Aid for Indo-China, has been raising funds to fill the health needs of the civilian population. On Tue., Jan. 2, 1973 the Bach Mai Emergency Relief Fund was started, with an announced goal of three million dollars, to rebuild the hospital. During the first week over 300,000 dollars was collected. Now that the bombing has halted, the reconstruction of this and other medical facilities can begin immediately.

The Indo-Chinese people are not our enemies. We can begin to define for ourselves our relationship to them, instead of letting the U.S. government define it with anti-personnel weapons and napalm. Donations of both time and money are needed (time even more than money). All donations are used to purchase medical supplies which are forwarded to Red Cross societies in North Vietnam. To help please contact the Valley Peace Center, 1 Cook Place, Amherst, Mass. 253-3603.

Anthony G. Muncey

Play The Game

To The Editor:

In reference to Richard Dunkelberger's Letter-to-the-Editor in the 1/29/73 issue of the Daily Collegian, I'd like to modify the title of his game to read STUDENT IS THE NIGGER OF UMASS. I was so damned mad this morning that I decided to play your game after all, Richard.

At breakfast, I waited a whole 20 minutes in line only to find the selection and food supply inadequate (which, incidentally is why I had to wait so long in line). So after having a rushed, meager breakfast, I started the long trek to my first class. Instead, however, I found myself following a dangerous obstacle course. My dorm area was hardly cleared out at all, few paths were cleared in the center of campus, and I hate to mention the hazardous little single-file paths leading to and from the Student Union, but I will since I almost broke my neck walking in one of them! And where the hell was the sand or salt on hills, icy areas, or anyplace!? Many of us, me included, stumbled, fell, and slid around trying to walk on pure ice. Furthermore, where was the Physical Plant hiding all the plows yesterday before temperatures dropped making snow removal so difficult? Incidentally, I also resent the way all that equipment is out when we are. Either there is a whole group of sadists running this operation or we're just being ripped off as usual–after all, we only pay tuition and meals on this campus.

We STUDENT NIGGERS could conceivably win this game, after we have the common sense to do it. But then if we did come out on top, the administrators would have to admit that they, in fact, are the real NIGGERS of the game. Right on?...

Beth Schneider

Another D.C. Ripoff

To The Editor:

Another scandal concerning the U. Mass. Dining Commons has now been unearthed. Again Mr. Stoneham has demonstrated his complete indifference to the needs of the student population. Arch-villian Stoneham refuses to realize that the trays with which we transport our food have other, more important uses.

After Monday's snowstorm, Mr. Stoneham's incompetence came to my attention by way of a highly traumatic experience. After eating at The Commons, I procured one of Mr. Stoneham's infamous trays for use as a sled. Charged with excitement, I climbed Orchard Hill and sat on the potential sled. Imagine my consternation when the cursed tray refused to budge. Upon examination I found the bottom actually had ridges running perpendicular to my intended line of travel. My attempt to enjoy the fine day was ruined by the person who had supervised the purchase of those trays.

Since we pay for these trays, they should be bought as multipurpose articles, not just as platters for starchy foods. The callousness of Stoneham is self-evident in this as well as in the many other situations over which his authority reigns. It is simply incredible that this man is allowed to continue in a capacity which affects our lives so completely.

Robert Abugov

Letters To The Editor

As in previous years the MDC will continue to print letters to the editor. The only requirements are that they be typed at sixty spaces, double-spaced and no longer than two pages in length. All letters must be signed and the author's address and telephone number must be included. Letters will be accepted from organizations, but a name and a telephone number must be on them. Please note this change in policy. No letter will be published without this information. Also, no letters will be printed without a signature.

All letters are subject to editing either for content or space according to the judgement of the editors. Also, due to space limitations, we do not guarantee that all letters will be printed.

Editorial Points

ATTENTION ALL WINTER HATERS AND OTHER SANE PEOPLE: There's still Florida.

•••

Well, Patriots fans, as far as everyone is concerned the Pats are now bona fide contenders for the Super Bowl thanks to yesterday's draft.

•••

But don't hold you breath until the World Championship comes.

•••

Lost in the storm: A bus bearing the words Orchard Hill on its destination chart. Last seen in front of the Student Union last night.

Damn The Computer

To The Editor:

I don't know how many times this has been said, but I will briefly mention it again to perhaps drive it a little harder into someone's head.

Everybody knows how exceedingly populated this school is, correct? Then how come the school itself doesn't know how big it is? I've never seen a more badly handled business in my life than that of picking courses for the spring semester.

All I want, personally, are three more lousy credits and I can't find one course that I am remotely interested in that isn't "oversubscribed", "section filled', "section dropped", or "permission of instructor required".

Then I discover to my nausea that thousands of others have the same gripe. Who's to blame around here? The computer, or the people who feed it?

It's bad enough that we have to fight to individually through this overwhelming mass of people, but the least the University can do is give us the room to do just that. Now I can see why people jump off the Southwest towers once in a while.

Jeff Polman

Shoplifting And You

To The Editor:

In the past week upwards of forty University students and other young people appeared in the Hampshire District Court on charges of shoplifting. At least twenty-five complaints were made by the Zayres store in the Hadley complex.

The offense of shoplifting has legally occurred when merchandise has been removed from the store without having been charged out or paid for and also if the merchandise has been placed in a bag or in a pocket or otherwise hidden from view even though it hasn't been removed or brought anywhere near a charge out counter or door.

People who appeared in the District Court received probation and fines or court costs from $25.00 to as much as $200.00. Earlier this year a court sentenced two young women to six months jail, suspended, for shoplifting in the value of about $1.59.

The widespread apparent affection for shoplifting has not had the effects of either reducing prices to the general public nor of closing stores with whom the shoplifters disagree politically, economically or otherwise. Also a significant number of shoplifters have not succeeded in getting away with the theft.

The forty in court were apprehended during only about two weeks of December.

The odds of successful shoplifting are lousy; apprehension is reasonably certain (nearly every store now employs plain clothes detectives); the fines are steep and the effect of conviction records are likely to mess up peoples lives for at least ten years afterwards.

It's beginning to make sense to stop shoplifting for your own sake.

Richard M. Howland
Attorney for Student

Red Alert

To The Editor:

In mid or late January, 1973, the wool growers' lobby will be meeting in Washington to make a major and well-financed push to have the Federal Government reinstate the large-scale poisoning of wildlife on Federal lands. These are the poisons that each year used to kill hundreds of thousands of coyotes and other predators; they are responsible for bringing many species to the very edge of extinction. One of our major campaigns has been to end this "predator control" program; and last year we were largely successful in doing so.

Now, backed by a petition reportedly signed by several western governors, the sheep raisers are attempting to pressure the Administration to cancel the President's Executive Order curtailing the use of poisons; to reverse the Environmental Protection Agency's cancellation on the registration and use of these toxic chemicals; and to bring about the dismissal of Interior Secretary Rogers C.B. Morton and Assistant Secretary Nathaniel Reed, whom they hold responsible for partically halting the slaughter of coyotes, foxes, mountain lions, wolves, and various rare and threatened species, including our national symbol, the eagle. The wool growers are going for broke and may have made a major error in taking such an extreme position; for if they do not succeed their influence hereafter will be greatly reduced. If we win this crucial battle, we may have turned the corner in saving our priceless wildlife heritage.

It is urgent that you immediately telegram or write to President Nixon and express your support for his courageous action on this particular matter. Please urge the President to provide maximum protection to our valuable wildlife, and to reduce as much as possible the trapping and hunting of predators which have largely replaced poisoning on our public lands. It is equally important that copies or a separate letter be sent to the following:

The Honorable Rogers C.B. Morton
Secretary of the Interior
Washington, D.C. 20240

The Honorable William Ruckelshaus
Administrator
U.S. Environmental Protection Agency
Washington, D.C. 20460

Please urge as many of your friends as possible to do the same. While we may disagree with the Administration on other matters, we have an obligation to back up our few "friends" when they go out on a limb for a cause in which we all believe.

This may be our last big fight on this issue, and it is one we must win. There will be no second chances.

Thank you.

Cleveland Amory
President, The Fund for Animals, Inc.

Television Tonight

5:00 JIM AND TAMMY (18)
MISTER ROGERS NEIGHBORHOOD (24) (57)
SUPERMAN (27)
BEVERLY HILLBILLIES (30)
GOMER PYLE (40)
5:30 THE ELECTRIC COMPANY (24) (57)
GOMER PYLE (27)
HOGAN'S HEROES (30)
NEWSBEAT NEWS (40)
6:00 NEWS, WEATHER, SPORTS (3)
12 O'CLOCK HIGH "V for Vendetta." (18)
BIG NEWS (22)
HODGEPODGE LODGE (24) (57)
PETTICOAT JUNCTION (18)
TO TELL THE TRUTH (30)
WILD WILD WEST (40)
6:30 CBS EVENING NEWS WITH WALTER CRONKITE (3)
NBC NIGHTLY NEWS (22) (30)
MAGGIE AND THE BEAUTIFUL MACHINE (24)
THE EARLY SHOW "The Forbidden Street." (27)
BOOK BEAT (27)
6:55 NEWSBEAT NEWS With John Deegan (40)
7:00 WHAT IN THE WORLD "Portugal." (3)
DICK VAN DYKE (18)
BIG NEWS 90 (22)
EVENING AT THE POPS (24)
NEWS EARLY REPORT (30)
ABC EVENING REPORT (8) (40)
LOUIS LYONS NEWS AND COMMENT (57)
7:30 THE NEW PRICE IS RIGHT (3)
PARENT GAME (8)
WACKY WORLD OF JONATHAN WINTERS (18)
WAIT TILL YOUR FATHER GETS HOME "The New Car." (22)
CIRCUS Host Bert Parks. (30)
DRAGNET "The Big Goodbye." (40)
THE REPORTERS (57)
8:00 THE SONNY AND CHER COMEDY HOUR (3)
THE PAUL LYNDE SHOW (8) (40)
THEATRE 1 "Boston Terrier." (18)
ADAM 12 "The Beast." (22) (30)
SPECIAL: VD Blues (57)
8:30 WEDNESDAY MOVIE OF THE WEEK "Snatched." (8) (40)
NBC WEDNESDAY MYSTERY MOVIE "The Naples Beat." (22) (30)
THRILLER (27)
9:00 MEDICAL CENTER (3)
THE 700 CLUB (18)
HEART DISEASE AND ITS TREATMENT (24)
"VD BLUES FOLLOW UP" (57)
9:30 TWILIGHT ZONE (27)
10:00 CANNON (3)
OWEN MARSHALL COUNSELOR AT LAW (8) (40)
SEARCH (22) (30)
THE STATE OF CONNECTICUT (24)
NEWS (27)
MARTIN AGRONSKY EVENING EDITION (57)
10:30 PEYTON PLACE (27)
REALIDADES (57)
10:35 MARTIN AGRONSKY EVENING EDITION (57)
11:00 NEWS, WEATHER, SPORTS (3)
ACTION NEWS (8)
NEWS (8)
NEWS (18)
NEWS, WEATHER, SPORTS (22)
NEWS LATE REPORT (30)
11:30 STARLIGHT MOVIE "The Queen Guards." (3)

D.H. LAWRENCE
WOMEN IN LOVE
ALAN BATES — GLENDA JACKSON
Sat., Feb. 3 - Mahar - 7 - 9 - 11
directed by Ken Russell

W. C. FIELDS
3 SHORTS 7, 8:30, 10
Wed. 31
CCA 50c

Notices

ALCOHOL ANONYMOUS
Meeting every Thurs. at 811 CC, 8 p.m. All persons who have or know about problems concerning a[illegible]lism are invited. Anonymity r[illegible]ted.

C[illegible]S CLUB
[illegible]ight's Chess Club meeting will b[illegible] CC 904, from 7:30 p.m. on.

C[illegible]UTERS
[illegible]cutive Council meets tonight at 5 [illegible] in Rm. 169 CC. If you are in-t[illegible]ed, or even curious, you're li[illegible]d to attend.

[illegible] COURSE
[illegible]e Newman's Thurs. night drug seminar will meet tomorrow at 7:15 p.m. at the Marks Meadow Auditorium in the School of Ed.

DVP PREMIERE
Dr. Wernher von Braun speaking on "Our Space Program After Apollo" illustrated with 35 mm slides and 16 mm film, 8 p.m. SUB--open to public--Long Live Space.

HILLEL
Meeting tonite at 6:00 to pick chairman, start committees, and set dates for semester's events. All interested are invited to drop by the Hillel complex.

ISRAELI DANCING
We have new records!! Tonite 7:30-8:30 beginning instruction, 8:30-9:30 more advanced instruction, 9:30-11:00 free for all in the Cape Cod Lounge.

JAZZ ARRANGING CLASS
First class will meet Mon., Feb. 5, at 5:30-7:30. Pre-requisites: students should read treble and bass clefs and play an instrument. No grade. No credit.

KOSHER CO-OP
Planning meeting tonight at 6:00 in 420 S.U. If you want Kosher meals

(Continued on P. 10)

Walter Matthau Carol Burnett
"Pete 'n' Tillie"
All about love and marriage!
Geraldine Page

Shown Daily at 7:00 & 9:00 - Rated - PG -

LADY SINGS THE BLUES

"DIANA ROSS DELIVERS THE KIND OF PERFORMANCE THAT WINS OSCARS!"
"DIANA ROSS—AHH, DIANA ROSS! SHE DOES A MARVELOUS JOB!"
(R) SHOWN AT 7:00 & 9:30

Campus Cinemas 256-6411 AMHERST-HADLEY LINE
DOLLAR NIGHT!
Every Monday
Everyone $1.00

PETER O'TOOLE
ALASTAIR SIM
ARTHUR LOWE
THE RULING CLASS
"Peter O'Toole is Funny, Distrubing, Devastating". — Time Mag.
"A STYLISH COMEDY THAT IS BRILLIANT AND IMAGINATIVE! A tour de force that makes superlative comic history...Two movie performances by Arthur Lowe and Alastair Sim that make the film worth seeing twice." — REX REED
PG—SHOWN AT 7:00 & 9:30

MDC CLASSIFIED

FOR SALE

PAUL'S OLD TIME FURNITURE, furniture, costumes, curios, all at honest prices. In the heart of downtown Amherst in The Alley 253-3511. tf2/5

64 VW Bus, good motor 36 hp., transmission shot. $75; water bed, frame, heater, liner 3 months old. $50, call Tom 628-3836. tf2/1

1969 VW Bug, fair cond. $650. Call 549-6652 after 5. tf2/1

Med. size portable typewriter, very good condition, Underwood Olivetti, $40. A pr. of cross country skis and poles, $25.00. 665-2830. tf2/2

Brand new down sleeping bag, with carrying bag, $40 or best offer. Call Joanne, 549-6871 after 6.

Double bed, good condition, sm. desk, Oriental rug, couch, 1 Toyota tire, good spare. Call Chuck at 256-6681 after 8. All items reasonable. tf1/31

Lange Comps. ski boots for sale, size 9, with Lange Flo, only used twice. Asking $70. Call 546-5461. tf2/5

Double bed, good condition. Call 549-6821. tf1/31

New Delmonico refrig., 3.5 cu. ft., guarantee, $80. Carolyn, 549-6063. tf2/1

Waterbeds: $18.95, 5-year factory guaranteed, all colors, king & queen sizes. Waterbed heaters $27.50. 546-9141 afternoons & evenings. tf2/2

For sale cheap, must sell this 15 meal ticket to stay in school, (male), $195 or best offer. Call Paul at 253-7550, won't last! 1/31

Nivico SRP — 471E turntable with Shure cartridge. $40 or best offer. Call Charlie at 546-4648. tf2/2

Portable TV, Whonse, 19-inch. New tubes and circuit repair. Cleaned inside and out, ex. picture, $40. Call 532-0473. tf1/31

Meal ticket — 10 meal plan. Call Terry, 546-7158. tf1/31

FOR SALE

We buy and sell used Gibson, Fender, Martin guitars, banjos and amps. Also new guitars at low prices. The Guitar Workshop, North. 586-1796. tf5/11

10 Meal Ticket for sale, call Bill at, 546-6459. tf2/1

Typewriter, sec. model — good condit., $50. Used electric guitar also up for grabs — $80. Call Tom at 253-9863. tf1/31

For Sale: Women's 3-speed bike, Raleigh. Very good condition. Call 549-6321, 6 p.m. tf2/2

10-Day Meal Plan, $200 or best offer. Call 6-9912 during day or 323-4832 after 5 p.m. Ask for Charlene. tf2/5

Konica type IIIA RF camera with case and light meter, $45. Sofa, fair condition, $10. Call 549-6410. tf2/2

Judo outfit for sale, (new) $10. Bob, B3 Drake, Amherst Center, or call 665-4183. tf1/31

Bass cabinets (2) w/ev. Speakers ($150), cab. for 2 speakers (15"), Dynahead (120), Akai X150-D tape deck ($75). Call, 549-6425, Kent. tf2/2

Hoover portable washing machine. One year old. Best offer. 549-6684. tf1/31

Inventory clearance sale, Univox amp to 60% off, 105 RMS Twin Reverb list $480 — now $280. Creative Endeavor, Miles St. Grnfld. 774-2831. tf2/23

Fender Twin Reverb less than 1 yr. old $350. Used Traynor Reverb Guit. Amp $120. Creative Endeavor, Miles St., in Grnfld. 774-2831. tf2/9

1 pr. Lange standards exc. cond. used only one season. Ladies size 5 or 5 1/2, $70 will haggle. 6-5321. tf2/1

Typewriter, Olivetti-Underwood — excellent condition. Like new. $45. (Originally $90.) Call Lita, 549-6647, evenings. tf2/1

Used banjo. Good cond. $45, call 253-5731, Elliot. tf2/2

FOR SALE

Attention: For sale K. size water bed w/liner, heater w/thermo., frame, mat. $59.95. Call Jack 546-8212. tf2/5

1967 Volkswagen Fastback — 50,000 miles, new brakes, good condition overall — Needs minor body work. $800, call Al 367-2058. tf1/31

Lange Pro Ski Boots, used once, cost $150 new, will take best offer. Call Bob at 546-8587. tf2/2

Meal Ticket for sale, 10 Meal Plan cheap, call 546-6370. tf1/31

AUTOS FOR SALE

64 Ford Custom, new snow tires, auto. trans. Must sell by 2 Feb. So only $200. Call 253-5461 eve. tf1-31

68 Pontiac Lemans, 30,000 miles, good mech. cond., needs some body work, 4 speed, $700 or best offer. Call 536-3469, 546-5835. tf1/31

66 Ford std., 8 cyl., studded tires, $325. 549-6371. tf2/1

65 MGB Eng. rbld., 400. 67 Sunbeam Alpine hardtop — 500. 69 Triumph Trailbike — 300. Will dicker. 549-1283. tf1/31

1970 Firebird, trans - AM, Excellent condition, air cond., power windows, tape deck, auto. trans., best offer. Call Roger 549-6554. tf2-2

WANTED

Photographer wants open minded liberal female models part-time, good pay. Write giving details to P. O. Box 122, Granby Mass. 01033. tf2-1

Experienced black belts in Karate. Wanted for sparring practice. Call 546-8031. tf1/31

String bassist, cellists & tuba, etc.! Musicians interested in playing in new music ensemble. 584-9797, 5-5:30 p.m. only. tf1/31

Poetry wanted for possible inclusion in cooperative volume. Includ. stamped envelope. Editor, Box 4444C, Whittier, Calif. 90607. tf2/5

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommate needed to share two bedrm. apt. $85 per month, includes utilities. Ph. 253-9445. tf2/2

Roommate wanted, 24A Nutting Ave., walking distance to campus; completely furnished; cheap, drop by or call 549-6833. tf2/1

Your own upstairs rm., with bath & phone in 2 bdrm. Puffton Apt. 1 or 2 m/f, cathed. ceil., dishwasher. $104 or $40. 549-3554. tf5/1

FOR RENT

Room in private house Montague Ctr. $55/mo. inc. utilities, call Bob 367-2742. tf2/2

Available now, 8 bedroom Colonial in quiet country. Wendell Center. All remodeled. Call 256-8806 days, 253-2162 nites. tf2/2

HELP WANTED

Anyone interested in delivering the Boston Globe in Southwest, please call Cecilia, 6-8409. tf2/2

Energetic mature people at Friendly Ice Cream, NHamp. full/part time. Weekend avail., own trans. necessary, call 584-0556 for appt. tf2/2

Mechanic to repair pin ball machines, call 253-5305 or write Box 51, Amherst. tf2/2

Receptionist-Dental Assistant for Modern Ortho. Office. Experience preferred — not essential. Call 586-0555. tf2/1

Overseas jobs for students — Australia, Europe, S. America, Africa. Most professions, summer or full time, expenses paid, sightseeing. Free information, write, TWR Co., Dept. Q3, 2550 Telegraph Ave., Berkeley, Ca. 94704. tf2-4

DATING SERVICE

The Cupid Company has people who want to meet you! Pick up forms at UMass., or write Cupid Company, P.O. Box 75, Norwood, MA. tf2/6

REFRIGERATORS

Brand new — Made by Delmonico - 5 year guarantee - free delivery - 3 cubic foot $75 - 5 cubic foot $79. Call Gary - 1015. JFK 546-7839.

ENTERTAINMENT

SEE D.H. LAWRENCE'S "WOMEN IN LOVE" WITH ALAN BATES & GLENDA JACKSON AT MAHAR AUD., 7-9-11. DIRECTED BY KEN RUSSELL. tf2/2

Professional DJ, with 1000's of oldies and monster PA. Will entertain for your party or dance. Phone Steve at 467-2842. tf2/2

Sat., Feb. 3, 8-12 p.m., Cance Main Lounge, Clear Sky, 75¢. BYOB. tf2/1

SERVICES

Need help with tax forms? Call 323-7001 for fast, cheap service $3.00 and up. tf2/2

Butch's repair service — No rip off. Special this week: tune-up $10, plus parts for 6 or 8 cyl. for appt. call, Butch at 549-3626. tf2/1

Experienced model will do all types of work for photographers, artists, whatever. Call Diane at 665-4200. 1/31

PERSONAL

BISEXUAL, HOMOSEXUAL. Anyone with questions or wanting general information call 586-2811. Ask for Paul, eve. tf2/2

ROOMMATE WANTED

Fem. roommate wanted, Puffton VII. Approx. $70/mo. Call Beth or Karen, 549-6568. tf1/31

2 bedroom townhouse in Amherst $230/mo., util. incl., $175 reduced summer rate. Available Feb. 1. Call, 253-3254. tf1/31

Attention: Sublet for 2nd semester. Own room w/air cond., 2 closets, tele. furnished, all electric $70/mon. Call Jack 546-8212. tf2/5

TRAVEL

Crimson Travel offers low cost spring vacation trip to Bermuda for more info. call Rich Margli, 253-9096. tf1/31

REWARD

Reward for book, Flower Arranging, 150 illustrated concepts lost 1-24-73, near Durfee Greenhouse 584-2862. tf2/1

RIDE WANTED

Ride needed to Westfield or Vic. Mondays 5:00 - 6:00. $. Call Cathy, 549-6400. tf1/31.

TONIGHT
The English Pub
presents its third
"Bud®"-Fest

"When you say Bud®. . . . you've said it all!"

COME ON DOWN
• See the Bud Man in person
• Door Prizes
• Entertainment
• 25¢ Buds®
• No Cover
• 9:00 til closing

THE KING OF BARS presents THE KING OF BEERS

Budweiser®

Notices (cont.)

(Continued from P. 8)

you must attend.

NATIONAL SKI PATROL
Meeting Thurs, Feb. 1, 6:30, Rm. 162 CC.

PEOPLE SELLING AT TABLES IN CC
Sign up today for your table next week.

PI SIGMA ALPHA
Second meeting Thurs., Feb. 1, at 7:00 p.m. CC 174-176. All political Science Association members please attend.

PRACTICUM IN CHILD CREATED TELEVISION
First meeting Thurs., Feb. 1, at 10:00 a.m. at School of Ed Media Center. If you registered for this course this meeting is extremely important.

SEXISM IN EDUCATION
The women's caucus will be offering a series of presentations on issues of Sexism in Education--open to all students, teachers and other interested parties. Course offerings on Wed., 4:00-6:30. 1st class Feb. 7. For info., call 5-1565.

SOUTHWEST ASSEMBLY
Meeting tonite, 8 p.m. in back of Hampden Student Center--elections. Any S.W. resident is eligible. Call 5-1552.

SPECTRUM
If interested in working on the general interest magazine of the university, drop by the office (2nd fl. S.U.) any afternoon.

USED BOOK EXCHANGE SALE
The Business Club will sponsor a book sale on the lower level of SBA through Fri., Feb. 2 from 9-5. Business and business related books.

STRATEGY GAME CLUB
The first meeting this semester will be tonight in CC 165 from 6 pm to closing. Bring a game. All new members are welcome.

WILDLIFE: SOCIETY
First semester meeting tonight, 7:00 p.m., Rm. 202 Holdsworth. New members welcome. Come and help plan activities.

PROGRAM COUNCIL
Mandatory meeting of Program Council members Wed. at 6:30 p.m. 801 CC. Be there.

ART 104
C core - 100 openings, drawing and design labs for non-majors with 1 lecture a week. Contact Jim Wozniak at Casiac Office or come to class.

LOST
To the person who took my green army talket from the Hatch on Tues., Jan. 30, I've got your coat and glasses. Call Neal at 5-0845.

Peace Corps Meeting

The first meeting for students, seniors and graduates interested in joining the Peace Corps will be in Thompson Hall 104 tomorrow at 7:30 P.M. Two films will be shown "Hope and Harvest" and "Do you speak Agriculture". The showing will be followed by a question and answer period. The program for future weekly meetings, literature about the Peace Corps and application forms will be available at the meeting.

I-93 Partly Open

BOSTON (AP)—A three-mile, multi-million dollar extension of Interstate 93 through Somerville into Boston will finally be opened for limited use on Feb. 6, the state Department of Public Works said yesterday.

The spur, which has been finished since last fall, has remained closed, because officials feared it would funnel large number of cars into sections of downtown boston unequipped to handle the traffic.

Careers For Women

WHAT CAN WE DO: Alternative Careers for Women, a workshop for one evening, will be held February 5 at 7 p.m. in room 163 of the Campus Center. Billed as an informal exchange with working women, this workshop was designed to expose undergraduate women to different professional-like fields that may interest them.

There will be half a dozen speakers who will briefly explain what it is they do and why women should be encouraged to enter these fields. Then for the greater part of the evening the women will talk together informally. The idea is for the students directly to contact the women whose career they are especially interested in, ask questions, receive personal attention.

Some of the careers represented will be writer-editor, doctor, lawyer, journalist, agency administrator, women's center director. All women who have something to contribute to the discussions are welcome; any women with questions about careers are urged to attend.

The workshop is sponsored by the Student Government Association and is organized by Janet Pearlman. Anyone with any specific questions can contact her at 549-6795. Please come, and bring a friend.

SCI-week
Feb. 5th to 9th

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

by SYDNEY OMARR

Libra persons often are dominated by emotions. Logic takes second place many times when Libra attempts to make a decision. However, the Libra intuition is sharply honed and decisions are more often correct than otherwise.

***

ARIES (March 21-April 19): One you respect pays meaningful compliment. Aim toward goal. Don't sell yourself short. You are given more responsibility. Rewards are greater as result. Older individual figures prominently. Heed voice of experience.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You now can complete project, assignment. Aries person is likely to be involved. Seek better means of distribution. Write, publish and advertise. Get message across. You will be provided with necessary material, information.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Obtain hint from Taurus message. Strive for greater independence. New project is likely to succeed. Bring forth creative abilities. Let others know you do have style of your own. Lead rather than imitate.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Caution should be your hallmark; take time to accumulate information. Base actions on facts, not impulse. Be analytical. Aquarian wants to aid. Know it and accept. Heighten sense of public relations.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You may be in mood to celebrate. Stick to principles. Potential now is greater than you might imagine. Expand horizons. Health, vitality make comeback. You will know it and be happy. Accept social invitation.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You can break through maze of restrictions, confusion. Key now is to utilize natural ability to perceive and analyze. What appears insurmountable is merely a healthy challenge. Look at it in that manner and you succeed.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Change occurs in domestic area. What appeared settled comes up again for discussion. Gemini, Virgo may be involved. Obtain estimates. Do some double checking, especially where basic costs are concerned.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Family members visit, write, leave messages. Strive for greater understanding of problem besetting loved one. Don't cast first stone. Taurus, Libra persons might figure prominently. Be versatile without scattering forces.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Check flow of money. Don't fall into trap of "catch up." Means don't repeat financial mistakes. Pisces person can offer constructive guidance if you are receptive. Examine offers and don't jump at first one.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Opportunity for gain is highlighted. One you thought indifferent shows you that past efforts, favors will be repaid. You feel appreciated—financial and emotional security are fortified. Get started toward goal.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Study Capricorn message. You have chance to broaden spectrum of interests, appeal. Aries person could play significant role. Dynamic approach helps you overcome secret doubts. Exude confidence. Don't wait to be told—do what must be done.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): New contact could spark creative, romantic interest. Welcome chance to express yourself. Look to future instead of brooding about past. Leo individual could be involved. Your own style spells fulfillment.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you recently went through domestic adjustment or change of residence. You now will go through period of self-recognition. You learn what it is you desire, where you want to go and how to arrive at destination. What appears a setback boomerangs in your favor, with October highlighted as a most significant month for you in 1973.

Copyright 1973, Gen. Fea. Corp.

Crossword Puzzle

ACROSS
1 Mix
5 Barracuda
9 Cry like cow
12 City in New York
13 Man's nickname
14 Irritate
15 Cooled lava
16 Ireland
18 Parent (colloq.)
20 Symbol for niton
22 Drop
24 Lure
27 On the ocean
29 Athletic group
31 Nahoor sheep
32 Killed
34 Face of watch
36 Note of scale
37 Seasoned
39 Impelled onward
41 Guido's low note
42 Sow
44 Sting
45 Corded cloth
47 Loved one
49 Baker's products
50 Paradise
52 Haul
54 Nova Scotia (abbr.)
55 Small child
57 Roman road
59 Symbol for tellurium
61 Meadow
63 Sharpen
65 River in Germany
67 Everyone
68 Urges on
69 Broad

DOWN
1 Music: as written
2 Enraptured
3 Maiden loved by Zeus
4 Grain
5 European herring
6 Skinned
7 Latin conjunction
8 Spread for drying
9 Fabulous king
10 Conjunction
11 Stamp of approval
17 Supposing that
19 Hebrew month
21 River duck
23 Deposited
25 Concerted 26 Blemishes
27 Guarantee
28 River islands
30 Planet
33 Want
35 Flaccid
38 Act
40 Conceited
43 Challenging
46 Part of flower
48 Evaluates
51 Negative
53 Earth goddess
56 Definite article
58 Quarrel
60 Before
61 Note of scale
62 Spanish article
64 King of Bashan
66 Roman gods

Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle

Distr. by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

THE ROISTER DOISTERS
present
ARTHUR MILLER'S THE CRUCIBLE
February 1, 2, 3, 4
8:30
Admission $2,
$1.50 with UM ID
Bowker Auditorium
Reservations
545-2149

Skiers Victorious At Middlebury

By MDC STAFF

A young, spirited UMass Ski Team, fresh from a month long training camp at Haystack Mt. in Vermont, dominated the Osborn Division of the New England Intercollege Ski Conference (NEISC) in its first outing at the Middlebury Snow Bowl in Middlebury, Vermont on Saturday, January 27th. The sun was high in the sky and the hard packed snow underfoot was ideal for slalom racing. Hard packed icy snow is not much good for recreation skiing, but it gives every slalom racer a more, nearly even chance to win the race. Two rather tight, difficult courses were set on the Allen trail, which has steep interesting terrain. Each racer had to ski both courses successfully to count for his team. Each of the ten teams in the Osborn Division skied a six man varsity team on both courses and the best four times counted for the team. Each of the ten teams could also ski a four man "B" team on the two courses.

UMass entered only eight men because two of the ten on the Ski Team are currently injured. Steve Tonelli, a very talented freshman, sprained an ankle in the fourth week of the training camp and junior Phil McKeague injured his ankle and has not been on his skis since the first day of training camp.

The survivors of a bitter cold month of training on hard icy snow at Haystack showed the competition how to handle slalom. Co-captain Kurt Syer (also co-captain of the soccer team) skiing first, put two hard driving runs together to tie for second place with a total two-run time of 81.7. Co-captain Dave Rutter, skiing third for UMass, did his usual competent job and finished 11th with an 85.6. Dick McWade, last year's outstanding freshman skiing second, was first on the hill among 100 racers in his first run. In his second run, going all out, he missed a gate, ran back to get it and still finished a fantastic 4th overall with an 81.8. Dave Ferris '74, skiing fourth, put two good runs together and finished 12th right behind teammate Rutter in the order of finish with an 85.6. This really wrapped up the race. In a ten college race like this one, if you have four men in the top twenty you usually have the race in the bag and UMass did. But the ski racing lesson continued. Ed Ahearn, a sharp freshman slalom ace, skied fifth for UMass and was 44th in the run order. The hard snow held up, and in spite of alot of talk about the impossibility of winning if you are not in the top twenty running in a ski race, Ed Ahearn exploded this myth by winning the race with a two run time of 81.4. Tim Tague, another freshman, and like McWade another converted cross country ski racer, joined McWade by finishing right behind him in fifth place with a combined time of 82.9 seconds.

Skiing a chopped-up rutty course in 7th place for UMass and 64th place overall, Bill Nebesky (another freshman) finished 14th with an 87.4. Larry Peck '75 skied 8th for UMass. on bib 74, skiing last because of a broken thumb. With his hand in a cast covered by a sock, and with his ski pole taped on, Larry socked it to the opposition by finishing 8th with an 84.1.

Counting the best four in the top six UMass finished first with a team time of 327.8 seconds, BC was second with a 341.7, Northeastern was third with a 361.0, Tufts was fourth with a 362.8. Other teams in the order of finish were: Amherst, B.U., A.I.C., Bently, UConn, and Princeton. In the first ski meet the Minutemen posted a 9-0 win loss record.

Co-captain Kurt Syer "pours it on" to tie with Bob Morrow of N.U. for second place in the first slalom race of the season at Middlebury Snow Bowl.

Ed Ahearn, skiing in 44th position, steps up to get out of the deep ruts in his slalom win at Middlebury. No more will people say "You have to be in the top seed to win a slalom." (Photos by Dave Ferris)

On Sunday, NEISC held its first Giant Slalom race of the 1973 season for the same ten colleges who were in Saturday's slalom race. The course was again set on the Allen trail starting as high up as snow could be located. Gates are father apart in G.S. and turns have a longer radius so there is a lower potential for disaster for each skier. Andy Wernick of Tufts won the race with a two run time of 89.4. Dick McWade was second with a 90.9. Mark Brown of Amherst was third with a 91.2, Ed Ahearn was 6th with a 91.5. Kurt Syer was 9th, Tim Tague was 11th. These four men gave UMass a total team time of 369.0, Amherst was second with a 379.3. Northeastern was third with a 381.7. B.U. was 4th, Tufts and BC tied for 5th, UConn was 7th, A.I.C. 8th, Bently 9th, and Princeton was 10th.

Larry Peck, still in his cast, skied 16th, Dave Rutter finished 22, Dave Ferris finished 37 among the 92 racers on the hill, and Bill Nebesky, after an excellent first run, lost a ski on the second run.

After placing all 8 men among the top 14 finishers in the slalom and winning the giant slalom by a giant ten seconds; and after posting an 18 to 0 win-loss ratio on the first weekend, it looks like a great year for the UMass Ski Team. If you see a dazed man with a silly grin frozen on his face on campus it may prove to be Coach Bill MacConnell who will claim that the magnificent snow of Monday was not part of the Ski Team Victory Celebration.

Patriots Pick Three In Round I

By MDC STAFF

The New England Patriots made three quick first round thrusts in the National Football League draft.

With two of the first 11 choices, the Patriots grabbed Alabama's John Hannah, a mammoth blocking guard, and Rose Bowl star Sam Cunningham, an outstanding running back for Southern California's national champions.

Then, in a sudden, unexpected move, the Patriots traded their top running back, Carl Garrett, to the Chicago Bears for still another first round pick. They tabbed wide receiver and kick returned Darryl Stingley of Purdue as the Bears' 19th choice.

Here are the players selected in the first round of Tuesday's National Football league player draft: 1, Houston, John Matuszak, DT, Tampa. 2, Baltimore, from New Orleans, Bert Jones, QB, Louisiana State. 3, Philadelphia, Jerry Sisemore, OT, Texas. 4, New England, John Hannah, OG, Alabama. 5, St. Louis, Dave Butz, DT, Purdue. 6, Philadelphia, from San Diego, Charles Young, TE, Southern California. 7, Buffalo, Paul Seymour, OT, Michigan. 8, Chicago, Wally Chambers, DE, Eastern Kentucky. 9, Denver, Otis Armstrong, RB, Purdue. 10, Baltimore, Joe Ehrmann, DT, Syracuse. 11, New England, from Los Angeles, Sam Cunningham, RB, Southern California. 12, Minnesota, Chuck Foreman, RB, Miami, Fla. 13, New York Jets, 14, Houston, from Atlanta, George Amundson, RB, Iowa State. 15, Cincinnati, Isaac Curtis, WR, San Diego State. 17 Detroit, from Kansas City, through Chicago, Ernest Price, DE, Texas A&I. 18, San Francisco, Mike Holmes, DB, Texas Southern. 19, New England, from Detroit, through Chicago, Darryl Stingley, WR, Purdue. 20, Dallas, BillyJoe DuPree, TE, Michigan State. 21, Green Bay, Barry Smith, WR, Florida State. 22, Cleveland, Pete Adams, OT, Southern California. 23, Oakland, Ray Guy, P-PK-DB, Southern Mississippi. 24, Pittsburgh, James Thomas, DB, Florida State. 25, San Diego, from Washington, through Baltimore, Johnny Rodgers, WR, Nebraska. 26, Buffalo, from Miami, Joe DeLamielleure, OG, Michigan State.

Alternative Careers for Women
What can we do?
Feb. 5 | 7 p.m.
163 | C.C.
an informal exchange with working women

The Whvy Experience
94point7on FM

phases restaurant
bernardston, massachusetts
tel. (413) 648-9161
"When you are sincerely pleased, you are nourished."
(Ralph Waldo Emerson)
dinner-cocktails
from 5:30 p.m. weekdays, from 4:00 p.m. on Sundays, closed Mondays reached from interstate 91, exit 28, and route 10, via bald mountain road, and huckle hill road

SIMS - UMASS Presents

HADLEY BOOK SHOP
Route #9
(Next to "Old Weird Harold's")
ANNOUNCES
New Management — "Red" Dwyer
New Hours — Open Evenings till 9:00 p.m.
New Prices — 50% "Get Acquainted Sale"
A COMPLETE BOOK SERVICE

ENGINEERING IS the professional art of applying science to the optimum conversion of natural resources to the benefit of man."
Stanford School of Engineering's wide-ranging graduate programs offer qualified men and women exciting avenues to rewarding, satisfying, professional careers
The Stanford School of Engineering is searching for graduate students from among qualified majors in engineering, mathematics, and the sciences
A representative from the school will be on campus to discuss Stanford's ten engineering departments and interdisciplinary programs, research opportunities, the financial assistance available, and other aspects of engineering at Stanford
■ February 1, 1973
Make arrangements to meet him through
■ Career Planning & Placement Service
SCHOOL OF ENGINEERING
Stanford University

Grapplers Edged In Thriller, 20-18

CLOSE BUT NO banana. John Connolly cradle's his man for points but doesn't get the pin. He got it seconds later and it put UMass into the match against Springfield. (Photo by Peter Manera).

By JOHN BOCK

How many people have taken bets lately? I'm sure that almost everybody bet on Miami to win the Super Bowl (Super Dud). And then there were those, I am sure, that bet on Frazier to retain his title.

Well, folks, if you want a sure-fire bet to bolster your confidence then bet on Springfield College to win the New England Intercollegiate College Division Tournament.

They proved to be this sure-fire bet last night as they edged the UMass Minutemen 20-18 before the largest crowd to ever view a wrestling match at UMass.

The standing room only audience saw the Chiefs take a commanding 17-6 lead with only three bouts to go, get pinned in two of the last three and be down a point, and then come from behind in the heavyweight to win it.

Dave Amato captured one of his elusive dreams as he finally beat a Springfield wrestler. Amato beat Ed Hartin 3-1 to get the Minutemen off to a good start.

Larry Reynolds is still feeling the affects of the injury to his sternum as evidenced by his 1-5 defeat at the hands of Vic Buehler. Larry was in obvious pain as he found it hard to fend off Buehler's attacks.

Mike McGlaughlin wrestled his best match of the season but ended up on the losing side, 4-3. Ed Metzger is one of Springfield's better wrestlers, but after he caught Mike on an arm drag and picked up four points he laid on the mat and just watched the clock run out as McGlaughlin tried every way to turn him, completely pommeled him and not receive any points at all for his stalling.

Tony Rome was a breath of fresh air at 142 as he wiped up Larry Way, 10-4. The match was all Rome after Tony's first takedown. The 150 pound bout went SC's way to the tune of 11-1 as Chris Cadwallader got caught on his back a couple of times.

Cliff Blom put up a valiant fight at 158 but found out that Nick Porillo isn't the defending NEIWA Champ because he doesn't know how to wrestle. Porillo really put the squeeze on Blom on the way to his 14-1 decision, but failed to pin him.

At 167 pounds the evening's most unexplainable match occurred as the Chief's Doug LeRoy beat Steve Benson 11-2. Steve had handled LeRoy in earlier meetings and is definitely more talented, but just couldn't seem to put it together.

Things really started to get interesting at 1:77. The Minutemen were behind 17-6 and John Connolly was being counted on to do it. And he did. He decked Springfield's Peter Kopp in 3:37 and put the Minutemen back in the match 17-12.

And then came Carl. Carl Dambman, besides being Co-Captain and two-time New England Champ, is the best pressure wrestler around. When you need the win or the pin, he comes through. And he did once more as he pinned Jim Benard in 3:45 and brought UMass into the lead 18-17.

But maybe the pressure was really on Heavyweight George Ireland. He hadn't wrestled since late in December and he had water on the elbows in the meantime. He was doing fine and then made one mistake that cost him the bout and UMass the match as he lost 6-3 to Tim Smith.

The Minutemen JV's strangely (and happily) enough edged the Springfield JV's 20-18 in a match that was also won in the Heavyweight bout. Recording impressive wins for UMass were Doug LeMire, Al Elmont, Jim Jordan, and Charlie Klein.

Cagers Struggle To Beat Cross, 78-71, In 'New Home'

By FRANK ANTOSIEWICZ

Before an older (alumni-type) crowd in the Civic Center, rather than the student hordes in the Cage, the UMass cagers sluggisly rolled over the Holy Cross Crusaders, 78-71.

Lanky and bloodied (a bloodied nose with 6 minutes to go) 6'9 senior Tom Austin made the most of his first start of the year by pouring in 7 of 10 tries from the floor and 4 of 4 free throw attempts for 18 points.

The man with the anti-gravity moves, Al Skinner put together another fine evening of basketball. The small (6'4) forward from West Hempstead, N.Y., popped in 23 points along with grabbing 16 rebounds.

The Somerville sophomore, Bill Endicott, while enjoying playing in the new facility sunk 14 markers, two of which bordered the famed ABA three point line. The sometime point man but mostly the back door guard on the UMass 1-3-1 defense combined it with a sticky defense.

Also, deserving praise was Captain Tom McLaughlin, who was relegated to the role of reliever for Austin. McLaughlin came off the bench to spark the Minutemen into a seemingly commanding lead of 14 early in the second half.

The contest was performed before a comparatively small crowd of 2500, most of whom were either alumni or other type basketball followers. Coach Leaman said afterwards, "a great crowd, but not OUR crowd (meaning that there was only a small student contingent on hand)".

The turnovers which Leaman disliked intensely during the Syracuse loss were still present, but the Minutemen were able to come through with the big play when it was needed.

The game definitely was not a home game and the lack of a home crowd definitely hampered the UMass play. Holy Cross did not measure up to the likes of Syracuse or Providence, but the explosion needed for a route never did occur.

The trio of Skinner, Austin and Endicott combined for 33 of 38 points in the first half. Just when the cagers seemed like they would run away with it, the pesty Crusaders would come back. An eight point lead (36-28) with three minutes to go in the half, subsided to only a 38-34 halftime edge.

The start of the second stanza, appeared to be the expected runaway as the reliever McLaughlin got the Minutemen running to a 14 point advantage. The Bronx bomber started by hooking his soon-to-be-patented hook from underneath. The 1-3-1 full court trap worked to perfection for the matter of moments and Skinner snatched the ball twice and Jim Burke once for that wanted comfortable lead.

The threesome of Gene Doyle, Malcolm Moulton and Jim Schnurr brought the Crusaders back to within one (58-57) with less than seven minutes to go, but the UMass hoopsters were not to be denied in their debut at the Civic Center. Skinner came through to key the final spurt and Austin, called "Hawk" by his teammates, swooped down to bat away the remaining two Cross attempts in the last thirty seconds.

The freshman star, King Gaskins, was suspended before the game and did not play for Holy Cross. He had been averaging 15 points a game.

THE SCORE:

	FG	FT	PTS
UMass
Skinner	10	3	23
Austin	7	4	18
Endicott	6	2	14
McLaughlin	4	2	10
Murphy	2	1	5
Peters	2	0	4
Trow	1	0	2
Burke	0	2	2
Pilino	0	0	0
	32	14	78
Holy Cross
Doyle	11	2	24
Schnurr	7	3	17
Moulton	4	5	13
Hollander	3	0	6
Deleaver	2	2	4
Grentz	1	1	3
Halsey	1	0	2
	29	13	71

Charlie Peters taps one up in last night's Civic Center contest between UMass and Holy Cross. Teammate Tom McLaughlin waits underneath for a rebound as Crusaders Gene Doyle (44), Malcolm Moulton (50) and Bruce Grentz (14) look on. The Minutemen, missing the friendly atmosphere of a real home court advantage, had a tougher time of it than expected. (Photo by Gib Fullerton).

Daily Collegian

SPORTS

Notices

Intramural Basketball—There will be an important meeting for IM basketball managers Thursday night, Feb. 1 at 7:45 in room 251 Boyden.

•••

Yesterday's sportshead was Greg Duarte.

BU Bombs Skaters 7-2

By BILL BALLOU

Boston, Mass.—Picture, if you can, London during the Blitz.

Picture Nicaragua after the earthquake.

Picture a 60-minute power play.

Put all the pictures together and you might get a pretty good idea of just how decisive BU's 7-2 win over UMass was last night.

The game, played at BU's Walter Brown Rink, was never a contest. The defending national champion Terriers jumped off to a 3-1 lead and just kept pumping shots at UMass goalie "Chic" Rheault the rest of the game until they had their seven.

Shots on goal totals describe the whole thing pretty well. UMass could manage just ten shots on BU goalie Joe Robillard all night (they had only one shot in the entire third period) while BU bombarded Rheault with 62. Rheault was spectacular at times and, in the end, he was the only thing between BU and double figures. Robillard, on the other hand, set a BU record for fewest saves in a game with his eight. The previous record had been ten.

BU line of Ray Cournoyea, Steve Dolloff, and Dave Wisener, was the heavy artillery in the attack. Cournoyea had four goals and an assist for five points, Dolloff five assists, and Wisener two goals and three assists. The line as a whole, accounted for six of the seven BU goals. Add to this the seven assists and it was a 15-point night for that trio.

The other BU goal was the game winner and it was scored by Ken Kuzyk after the Terriers fooled the UMass defense on a three-on-one break.

The Minutemen literally weren't the same team they were against St. Anselm's, as they were missing Bob Shilalie (measles) and Jim Coleman (foot injury) and had a couple of players on the ice who weren't 100% because of illness.

The only good news for UMass came on goals by Lonnie Avery and Pat Keenan. Avery's came early in the first period and tied the game at 1-1 while Keenan's came in the second period making it 4-2. It kept his scoring streak alive at 17 games but both goals amounted to just a drop in the bucket.

Tonight had best be forgotten as a total wash-out for UMass because the Minutemen haven't looked this bad in a long, long time. The only bright spots were Keenan's goal to keep alive his streak and the incredible goal-keeping of Rheault. The junior from South Boston has been brilliant for three straight games.

The win gave BU a 16-4 slate (subject to the resolution of the Decloe mess) while UMass dips to 7-5-1 overall. The loss doesn't affect their Division II slate of 6-2-1.

SCORING SUMMARY

First Period

1 Cournoyea (Dolloff, Wisener)	(BU)	00:40
2 Avery (Harris, Keenan)	(UM)	8:17
3 Cournoyea (Dolloff, Wisener)	(BU)	10:23
4 Kuzyk (Robbins, O'Neil)	(BU)	11:28

Penalties: (UM) Muse 8:33

Second Period

5 Cournoyea (Wisener)	(BU)	7:52
6 Keenan (Avery)	(UM)	11:22
7 Wisener (Dolloff)	(BU)	13:39
8 Cournoyea (Dolloff)	(BU)	17:24

Penalties: (BU) Dolloff 11:15; (UM) Rheault 12:20.

Third Period

9 Wisener (Dolloff, Cournoyea)	(BU)	3:51

Penalties (UM) Muse 3:06; (BU) Wisener 9:08; (UM) Connors 14:25; (UM) Lowe 15:30; (UM) Rheault 17:31; (BU) Gryp 19:51.

Shots on Goal: Boston University 62, UMass 10.

New England's Largest College Daily

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

Weather

...And she whispers, "Before dawn, this will be the darkest and stormiest night."

Recyclable

VOLUME C, ISSUE 73 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 1, 1973

In regard to the space race, Dr. von Braun believes that since the Soviets were behind, and since they did not want to place second behind the U.S., they dropped out. Any other reason given for this is "a lot of sour grapes talk." See story on page three. (MDC Photo by Steve Smith)

Trustees Knock Sargent's Plan For Education

By DON BISHOP

Boston—The UMass Board of Trustees yesterday condemned the Governor's proposed reorganization of state education as being a plan "without substantial merit."

This statement came as part of a prepared text delivered by Trustee Chairman Joseph Healey and endorsed by the full board at their regular monthly meeting.

It was the first official UMass attack of the plan; which will be up for debate and approval from the state legislature in the coming weeks.

The educational reorganizational plan was announced two weeks ago by State Secretary of Educational and Cultural Affairs, Joseph Cronin. It would reorganize state education into two statewide boards and five regional boards.

One statewide board would take care of education through the elementary and the secondary grades; the other would oversee higher education for state residents.

As regards the proposed regional division of the state, Healey said, "We question the division of the state into five new parts. To interpose another political subdivision and another layer of bureaucracy for whatever purpose seems to us to make genuine participation more, and not less, difficult."

Proposed changes in the structure of the University came under fire also. "We also express our great concern over the way in which the report proposes to dismember the University of Massachusetts . . . To sort the three campuses around like building blocks is to disregard the ties of tradition and the clear evidence of shared strength and joint progress."

"As Trustees, we are open to recommendations, reforms or reorganization. We are not open to making our educational institutions the laboratories for large scale experimentation conducted in the name of economy and efficiency."

Healey continued, "We were not a party to the deliberations that produced the plan. However, it seems clear that the report does not acknowledge, and could well reverse, the substantial progress the Commonwealth has made in educational affairs in the last ten years."

The entire statement won quick concurrence of the Board, as well as the support of President Wood and the chancellors of the three UMass campuses.

(Continued on P. 2)

Hogan Resigns As Senate Speaker

By STEVE FINE

John Hogan resigned last night as Speaker of the Student Senate. He attributed his action among other things to the "petty politics which dominate the Senate; the failure of the Senate to get into new areas; and the Senate's failure to take stands on particular issues."

Bob Chiller, Treasurer of the Senate, who temporarily assumed Hogan's responsibilities as speaker, proposed that the position could be filled by him. But SGA President Larry Ladd questioned if Chiller could handle the responsibilities of being both Treasurer and Speaker, while at the same time looking for a job after he graduated.

The motion was then made that the Senate get this matter out of the way as soon as possible. Since there was a lot of business to be covered. It was proposed to have nominations this week, and elections next week, with the speaker elect immediately assuming his duties after elections.

This motion was passed.

The people nominated for the job from the floor, were Senator's Roberta LaPorte, David Booker, Nick Apostola and Wesley Rasmussen.

In other business the Senate considered the budget rationales of the Cinema Club, the Student Automotive Workshop the English Department Undergraduate Council, the Belchertown Volunteers, the Amateur Radio Association, and the Student Workshop on Activities Problem (S.W.A.P.)

Thw S.W.A.P. rationale was debated heavily. It was first defeated on a vote of 26-17 but was passed on a motion to reconsider 21-7. President Ladd, in the first vote, spoke of S.W.A.P., as "a Fantasytrip with a compact structure like UMass."

Ladd said that most of the administrators who go to the conference understand the problems of Students. "Most of them live vicarously through the Students who do attend," he said.

He added, however, that the people who make the laws and have the real power, could never understand the problems of students in the gay atmosphere which the conference was conducted. "The only way a trustee is going to understand the problems of students is through going to live in Hamlin House and see how students live."

Chiller agreed, emphasizing the many stories he had heard about faculty or administrators being drunk.

When the motion was reconsidered, many more spoke in favor of S.W.A.P.

A particular emotional speech was given by Cindy McGrath, a student and not a member of the Senate. "I learned more that weekend than in the whole year I worked on Orchard Hill," she said. "To take this opportunity away from ordinary students on this

(Continued on P. 3)

On The Inside:

•CC Survey Continues see page two

•Tobin Clean Up Continues see page three

•Kissinger To Hanoi see page four

•Stennis In Serious Conditon see page five

CC Survey In Progress

By CINDY GONET

Due to the financial plight of the Campus Center, the Campus Center Board of Governors has enlisted the aid of Arthur D. Little Inc., a consulting firm, in the hopes of lessening the financial burden placed upon the student.

To accomplish its task of increasing the revenue producing capacity of the Center, the firm has introduced a survey of students, faculty, and other university employees. This survey is designed to determine the attitudes toward the present use of the Center, and reactions to potential changes or additions to the facilities.

The School of Business Administration will be assisting with the survey of approximately 450 students, from Feb. 5 to 16. The students who will be interviewed personally are hoped to cooperate and give the best possible representation of their attitudes and feelings.

A random selection of about 400 faculty and other university employees will receive a questionnaire in the mail.

Last Fall, when the Campus Center Board of Governors first came into existence, it was decided to attempt to combat the seemingly inherent money-losing operations of the Campus Center. Within 2 days of the meeting of the Board, plans were initiated for contracting the Arthur D. Little consulting firm.

With a $35,000 fee for operation, the firm began surveying the situation of the Center on Jan. 19. The purpose of the study is threefold:

Look at the present operations and assess how cost effectively they are being performed and recommend where improvements can be made; project the financial performance for these services into the future to determine the extent to which they will cover operating expenses and debt service; examine the feasibility of new revenue-producing services for the Center for increasing revenues. At this time, on the list for things to be accomplished, the Little firm has completed the first goal on the agenda. Ray Gilmartin, a representative for the firm, told MDC that the three areas of study, the retail store management, the volume food service, and hotel management have been closely scrutinized.

Gilmartin said there is a great deal of potential in revenue producing endeavors in the Center. He went on to say that a "new production line" would probably be more profitable to the Bookstore; the 28 week/year business affects the food service most; and the location of the hotel probably had something to do with the attraction or distraction of conferences.

By March 1, an oral report will be presented to the Governing Board on the firm's activities. On March 5 a written presentation will be given.

Trustee John Healey. (MDC Photo by Steve Smith)

...Trustees Rap Sargent

(Continued from P. 1)

In other business at yesterday's meeting, the Trustees voted to accept guidelines for the investment of the UMass endowment fund, detailed in Tuesday's Collegian. They also granted a 5¢ per hour increase in the rates at the Campus Center Garage from 15¢ to 20¢ an hour and approved a $3 per year Fine Arts fee for graduate students.

In a motion of appreciation of service, the Trustees accepted a citation in notice of the retirement of Dean of Women Helen Curtis.

Chancellor Bromery, in his remarks to the Board, announced that the Amherst campus is developing a program to help handicapped persons, in particular disabled Vietnam veterans, take full advantage of the educational opportunities afforded by this campus.

The program will be primarily aimed at providing academic counseling services and removing physical obstacles encountered by handicapped people on campus.

Bromery also announced the appointment of Barry Averil as Director of Health Services and the changing of the name of the UMass Department of Security to that of the Department of Public Safety.

'Housemouse' Aids Commuters

By EDWARD FOGARTY

The Housing Committee of the Commuter Assembly met last night in room 162 of the Campus Center to discuss the publication of a forthcoming newsletter. The newsletter is to be published on Feb. 15, and will be called "The Housemouse."

The first issue will contain listings of local and state building and sanitation codes. A questionnaire entitled 'Is your House a Slum' will be included, and the questions will be taken from the Public Health Department. Additional pages will include articles on energy crises, and an editorial policy by the Housing Committee. Local candidates for selectman will submit letters stating their position of housing in Amherst.

"It is hoped," said committee member David Brewin, "that the newsletter will become a forum for tenants and landlords to exchange opinions and debate."

"The Housemouse" will be distributed at eight points. In Northampton, both Lizzot's and Wally's newsstands will carry the newsletter. In Amherst, Augie's Newsstand, Louis' Food Market, and Watroba's Food Store will be used as distribution points. On campus, "The Housemouse" will be distributed next to the Collegian in the Student Union Lobby. An additional sight in Hadley is yet to be chosen.

The Housing Committee plans to publish the newsletter once a month for the semester on the 15th of each month. Three special editions are planned for the months of June, September, and January. These 'specials' will contain apartment listings and further information of apartment conditions for tenants looking for apartments.

Other topics discussed by the Housing Committee were the possible use of a vacated North Amherst School as temporary housing for apartment seekers. The temporary housing would be a place to sleep for two nights while looking for an apartment in the Amherst area.

Common Bible To Be Published

NEW YORK (AP)—A common Bible, the long-cherished dream of the Christian unity movement, is now complete. To be published in the United States this spring, it has approval of Protestant, Roman Catholic and Eastern Orthodox leaders in this country, in Europe and Asia.

It is the result of "vast collaboration," Pope Paul VI said a few days ago when presented with a copy of Rome.

Ever since the 16th century breakup of the church, contrasting versions of the Bible have been a major cause of edginess among the separate branches of the faith, particularly among ordinary members.

"They use a different Bible," went the usual expression of the presumably impenetrable wall of division, with little awareness how slightly the Bibles really differed.

But increasingly in recent times, that wall has been breached with joint Bible research, joint commentaries and joint regional editions of Scripture, a sequence culminating now with the broad-scale issuance of the new mutually approved volume.

Its cover reads, "Revised Standard Version Common Bible."

An international ecumenical group, the RSV Bible Committee, now headed by the Rev. Dr. Herbert G. May, of Ohio's Oberlin College, has worked out the presentation and format of the new Bible.

It consists of the RSV Old Testament, a translation produced by an inter-Protestant committee in 1952, a 1971 revised edition of the RSV New Testament, and seven intermediary books, known as "Deuterocanonical" by Catholics and as the "Apocrypha" by Protestants.

Seven publishing companies have been licensed to print the volume, which came out Jan. 21 in Great Britain, and is to be issued in this country April 2.

Although the basic translating was done 20 years ago by the National Council's inter-Protestant group, it now also represents Catholic and Orthodox scholars, and the texts now have across-the-board endorsement, including seven midsection books previously omitted in some cases.

These books, a cause of controversy as far back as the 4th century, have been a main difference about the Bible since the 16th century Protestant Reformation led by Martin Luther, although they constitute only a tiny fraction of the Bible.

While the Protestant reformers excluded the books from the "canon" of inspired Scripture, they nevertheless were included in Protestant Bibles of that era in between the 39 Old Testament books and the 27 New Testament books.

They also originally were included in the King James version of the Bible of 1611, long the principal Protestant version until production of the RSV. However, commercial publishers subsequently dropped the books from modern editions to save paper.

The books, meanwhile, remained in Catholic Bibles as parts of the Old Testament, although they had not been included in the Jewish canon of the Scripture. Catholics called the books

Students Needed As Plaintiffs

Eric Walgren, for the Amherst Tea Party, issued an emergency call yesterday for new student plaintiffs to represent the 3,000 local student voters in a class action to enfranchise all resident students for town elections.

Tomorrow at Federal Court in Boston, Walgren will challenge the legality of the town primary election held on January 19 during the winter closing of the University and Colleges in Amherst. The complaint claims that the town has "effectively disenfranchised" 3,000 resident student voters.

However, the one student plaintiff discovered during the vacation has dropped out, jeopardizing the life of the case.

According to Walgren, any student who is a registered voter in Amherst, living in a dorm or off-campus, is qualified to be a plaintiff. Walgren said, "No experience necessary. A person who was locked out of his/her dorm is preferable but others are needed."

Walgren said the trip to Boston is optional but the student must sign an affidavit. He also needs 25 affidavits from non-plaintiffs who were unable to vote. Leave a message before 9 p.m. today at 253-3006 or 253-2780.

WAF Requirements Stiff

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP)—Women who want to join the Air Force face tougher requirements—including more education and cleaner criminal records—than their male counterparts, according to testimony of an Air Force officer

The differences were outlined in a deposition by Lt. Col James W. Ward, who said he worked in the Air Force's Personnel Policy Division setting rules that govern admission of women to the service.

Ward's testimony was in a case brought by two women—Susan Stewart of Millbury and Christina Callahan of Worcester—who charge they were denied admission to the Air Force because of their sex.

His testimony was taken last month by Burton Chandler, a Worcester lawyer representing the two women. Chandler released the 132-page text of the deposition Wednesday. Ward is stationed at the Pentagon.

In the deposition, sworn testimony taken before the trial, Ward outlined these differences in Air Force admission standards:

—Women must submit a picture of themselves with their application, but men do not have to.

—Women are required to have a high school degree, but men are not.

—Women enlisted personnel cannot qualify for dependency benefits if they are married.

—Previously married women are not allowed in the Air Force.

—Women are told they are not "among the most qualified group" if they are rejected, but men are told the specific reason.

Parking Policy

UMass snow emergency is far from over, according to Director of Public Safety David Johnston.

Johnson, who is asking the UMass community to drive as few cars as possible onto campus, said that while the campus police are doing everything possible to eliminate traffic tie-ups, they are unavoidable due to the conditions of the roads.

Johnston, who suggests car pools or walking said it is still illegal to park in commuter or administrative lots between 1 a.m. and 7 a.m. Johnston said any cars in those lots at illegal times will be towed.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

The office of the DAILY COLLEGIAN is on the second floor of the Student Union on the campus of the University of Massachusetts, zip code 01002. Telephones: 545-2510 (news); 545-0344 (sports); 545-0731 (business).

Second class postage is paid in Amherst. THE DAILY COLLEGIAN publishes Monday through Friday during the academic year, except during vacation, exam periods or holidays. Accepted for mailing under the authority of an act of March 8, 1879, as amended by an act of June 11, 1943. Subscription rates are $6.00 per semester or $10.00 per year.

Cheese Gift Shop
103 No. Pleasant St.
Your shop of fine Wine and Cheese

Lectures
Wed. 7th
Thurs. 8th

FIND KALIKI KAI

Von Braun Cites Space Role

By MARK VOGLER

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration announced Tuesday America's crew for the US-Soviet spaceship docking scheduled for July 1975.

Wednesay, Dr. Wernher von Braun, head of NASA's planning efforts for future space flights, gave a slide show, giving a concise analysis of the future bi-country space flight mission while analyzing the future of the American space program for the 2,000 in the Student Union Ballroom.

During the afternoon press conference, Dr. von Braun said that while the nation's space program budget had been cut back to $3 billion, "there is still enough money left to continue a respectable and meaningful program."

According to von Braun, "It is necessary for the United States to be a leader in this program. It is essential for the future of this country to play a leading role in space exploration."

In regard to the budget cuts of the space program in recent years, he said that it was "obvious that the funds were relegated to something more purposeful than space flight."

"It would be foolish to say that the space program takes priority over anything else. And NASA was ready to accept that judgement."

von Braun said that approximately $40 billion had been spent on the American space program within the past 14 years. In view of this fact, he said that it had paid off handsomely.

Dr. von Braun said that there would be a man on Mars within the next 20 years. "Putting a man on Mars isn't a technical problem, but rather one of national resolve."

"If the president were to say: 'Put a man on Mars', this could be answered with reasonable assurance," he said.

To prepare for such a venture, von Braun said it would be necessary to "know what to expect on Mars" and "to examine interesting spots on the planet."

In regard to the space race between America and tue Soviet Union, von Braun said "it's pretty obvious that we'll come in a winner."

"Up until '67, during the Apollo flights of 8, 9, and 10, the Soviets indeed did race us to the moon. Their program was aimed at this. A few major setbacks in their program; and they decided not to run any more."

"It was easy for them to veer off. They claimed it was more economic to use unmanned space equipment. That's a lot of sour grapes talk, no question about it. They haven't abandoned their space program, they've only given up coming in second place."

He added that while the Russians had tailed off in their manned space race, they had "clearly not abandoned ship." "They're still very much involved in space exploration."

In a short talk before the slide presentation, the Deputy Associate Administrator for NASA called Apollo 17 the highlight of any space program, "anywhere".

He briefly surmised how much it took to get each of the 12 American astronauts on the moon.

"It takes a massive effort which includes 400,000 people and employs 20,000 prime and sub contractors. It takes lots of people to put this program together.

"Anyone could have fouled up along the way, and the whole project could be botched up. So the credit really must go to each of the 400,000 people who make it work."

...Patrol Cars Ambushed

(Continued from P. 5)

BLA members Woodie Green and Anthony White a week ago in a bar in the Bushwick section of Brooklyn.

The two victims attempted to shoot it out with police, who wanted Green for questioning in the ambush murders a year ago of Patrolmen Rocco Laurie, white, and Gregory Foster, black, on Manhattan's lower East Side. White had escaped jail, while awaiting trial for wounding a policeman.

In apparent reprisal, Patrolman Carlo Imperato, 28, and his brother, Vincent, 32, were fired upon Thursday night while on squad car patrol in the Brownsville slums of Brooklyn. Their wounds were not serious. Then, well before dawn Sunday, Patrolmen Michael O'Reilly, 37, and his partner, Roy R. Follins, stopped their radio patrol car in the St. Albans section of Queens.

"We were stopped at a light," O'Reilly recalled, "and I heard noises like firecrackers. I looked up and saw a man up the block at a gas station 20 or 30 feet away, firing what looked to me like an automatic rifle. "My partner and I hit the floor. Pollins looked up and saw another perpetrator on the other side of the street firing a shotgun. I didn't see him. I was hit in the upper back, and Pollins has a scalp wound on the top of his head.

"Altogether, there were about 40 to 50 shots from the automatic rifle, and the car's window was demolished. I got off one shot as the guy climbed into a gray car at the gas station."

The aftermath of the Tobin Hall fire: A burned out $80,000 computer and with it, valuable research destroyed. Fire was believed to have originated in this area on Tuesday night. The cause and actual source are still unknown. (MDC Photo by Alan Chapman)

Clean Up Continues After Tobin Fire

By MARK VOGLER

Janitors and maintenance crews continued a massive clean-up job Wednesday afternoon in the aftermath of a Tuesday evening fire in recently completed Tobin Hall which caused damage estimated at $100-150,000—including a computer valued at over $80,000.

It was also learned that a few dozen rats and over 200 mice were also lost in the blaze. The value of these experimental animals could not be estimated by members of the UMass Psychology Department, since they had been used by graduate students in research work.

Charles Clifton, an associate professor of psychology who is staffed in the building, said Wednesday that over 15 graduate students had been adversely affected by the recent mishap.

"The worst thing is that several of the graduate students were doing dissertation research in the area and were also utilizing the computer for their projects."

He added that these students could be delayed for many months since much of their research could not be replaced.

Meanwhile, the middle corridor of the fifth floor of Tobin Hall—where the fire had been contained Tuesday—was roped off with a University police officer restraining people from entering the heavily damaged area. Only teachers and grad students who wished to gain admittance to their offices, were allowed in the blocked off area.

Collegian Staff

Election TONIGHT

Of

New Board Of Editors

7:30

Colonial Lounge

Important—Come

...And The Senate Carries On

(Continued from P. 1)

campus would prove your insensitivity."

Denise Magnell, Senate Communications Coordinator, said that she had been to 3 S.W.A.P's and the only offense she had seen by it was that everyone who had applied to the conference was not accepted.

All of the other budgets were passed except the English Department Undergraduate Council. This organization was defeated on the grounds that it was an academic organization that was exclusively designed for English Majors.

The Senate also decided to unfreeze the monies for the Draft Counseling Center, since it had adopted a motion earlier specifying that when the draft law ran out, the counseling center's money would be frozen.

Gil Salk, head of the center, said that the center was still needed because the draft had not legally ended. He said that there had only been an executive decision to end it, and this could be reversed at any time. "The selective service is still functioning and there will continue to be lotteries, physicals and appeals," he stated.

Larry Ladd also spoke on the new Trustee Policy toward the University's endowment fund. "The guidelines now follow things like investing in a company that advocates international law, public health, consumer protection, equal employment, and protection of the environment.

Exhibition
of - by - for Creativity

The Whyy Experience
94point7on FM

HELP WANTED
Student
Chambermaids
to work Mon., Wed., Fri. or Tues., and Thurs., plus alt. weekends. Shifts are 9-1, 1-5, 9-5. Must work min. of 8 hrs. per week. Apply in C.C., Room 819.

FINISH YOUR DEGREE
IN BRADFORD / London.
Major in Urban Studies beginning in your Junior year. Complete your bachelor's in only one year including study in London with trips to the Continent.
Apply now for June '73 - August '74 program.
Limited enrollment — Coeducational.
Write: Urban Studies Admission, Bradford College, Bradford, Mass. 01830 (near Boston)

In The Nation And The World

Kissinger To Go To Hanoi

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon said Wednesday he is sending Henry Kissinger to Hanoi next week to discuss postwar financial aid for North Vietnam and disclosed he personally will meet this spring with South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu.

Holding his first news conference in nearly four months, the chief executive said the intricate agreement signed Saturday in Paris can bring peace "in Indochina for a very long period of time."

But he said the once-warring parties need "incentives to peace." And he cast the Indochina-wide reconstruction program as one incentive, calling it "a potential investment in peace."

With the postwar aid, Nixon said, the North Vietnamese "will have a tendency to turn inward to the works of peace rather than turning outward to the works of war."

Officials said Kissinger will stress Nixon's view that the postwar aid can begin only after the Vietnam cease-fire is fully observed.

The visit to Hanoi Feb. 10-13 will open "vitally important...direct communication" with top North Vietnamese leaders, Nixon said.

Kissinger's mission as the first ranking American official to reach Hanoi in more than a decade was announced by the White House about an hour before Nixon appeared in the Executive Mansion's news briefing room. Nixon announced he will meet with Thieu at the Western White House in San Clemente, Calif., at a "mutually convenient" time in the spring.

Fielding reporters' questions for 36 minutes, the President also:

—Reiterated that he will not grant amnesty to those who "chose to desert their country" rather than serve in Vietnam.

—Bitterly chastised critics in the media and intellectual circles, declaring he had achieved peace with honor although "I know it gags some of you to write that phrase..."

—Said he would not personally welcome U.S. prisoners of war back to American soil because the POWs deserve privacy and a rapid return to their families and "we should not grandstand it; we should not exploit it."

—Reported he is placing European problems "on the front burner" but he would make no overseas trips during the first half of this year."

—Accused Congress of failing to be responsible on money matters and said he would exercise his "absolutely clear...constitutional right" to withhold appropriated funds to avoid a tax increase.

—Laughed that he "would be out of my mind" to endorse anyone now for the 1976 presidential race, but repeated his high praise for former Treasury Secretary John Connally.

—Said he hoped the wounding of Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., in a robbery Tuesday night would spur Congress to adopt legislation containing a precise definition to keep cheap handguns out of the hands of criminals.

The aftermath of the Vietnam war overshadowed question on domestic issues in the President's first news conference since Oct. 5. Besides discussing Kissinger's trip, his own meeting with Thieu and his hopes for a permanent peace, Nixon said he had received every assurance that China will release two American fliers held since their planes were shot down in the mid-1960s. He said, "We have every reason to believe" the fliers will be freed "as the POW situation is worked out in Vietnam."

The aviators have been identified as Navy Lt. Cmdr. Robert Flynn and Air Force Maj. Philip Smith.

A third American--John Downey--also is held in China but Nixon said his is a different case because "Downey involves a CIA agent."

Nixon said Kissinger, who negotiated the Vietnam peace accord, will discuss with top North Vietnamese leaders "the current status of compliance with the peace agreement" and the "matter of the reconstruction program for all of Indochina."

Nixon would not put a price tag on the reconstruction program, saying he had to consult with congressional leaders first. But earlier reports focused on a figure of $7.5 billion with one-third of that going to North Vietnam.

"Many congressmen and senators and many of the American people are not keen on helping any of the countries in that area," Nixon said.

But he added:

"As far as I am concerned, whether it is with the North or the South or with other countries in the area, I look upon this as a potential investment in peace..."

The President did not elaborate on the purpose of his planned meeting with Thieu, but it clearly is designed to publicly display American support for South Vietnam in the postwar period.

Richardson Says Vietnam To Stabilize

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Defense Elliot L. Richardson Wednesday predicted the shaky cease-fire in Vietnam will evolve into "a pretty stable situation" by next week.

"The situation generally seems to be moving in an encouraging direction" with hostilities being reduced day-by-day, Richardson told newsmen in his second day on the job.

Richardson, who formerly headed the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, will allow some reductions in the new Pentagon budget for fiscal 1974.

"I don't want to hold out the prospect that the cessation of hostilities in South Vietnam will have a massive impact on our budget requests, but certainly we do need to review them in the light of the situation," he said.

One area of savings will be in closing unneeded military bases, which Richardson said he expects to order following a budget review. He gave no estimate of how large a cutback was in the offing.

Pentagon spending plans for the new fiscal year beginning July 1 call for outlays of $79 billion, slightly below the record $79.9 billion by the Defense Department in 1945, the last year of World War II.

The new budget--the first peacetime spending plan in 12 years--went to Congress Monday, the day before Richardson moved over to the Pentagon to replace Melvin R. Laird.

The new secretary was relaxed and sipped coffee in his first meeting with Pentagon newsmen.

He said he anticipates "considerable amount of pressure" from Congress to trim the budget as the U.S. withdraws from Vietnam.

Although acknowledging there probably was room in the budget for some cuts, he cautioned that this was not the time for "massive reductions in our combat capabilities."

The United States, he reasoned, cannot reduce world tensions if it unilaterally disarms and leaves a vacuum for others to exploit.

In assessing the Vietnam situation, he attributed the continued fighting to "a counter action of surges by both sides" as they jockeyed for position just before and after the cease-fire became effective Saturday.

No. Viet Attacks Along DMZ

SAIGON (AP) — Powerful North Vietnamese forces launched new attacks along the demilitarized zone Wednesday in a violation of the still-unsupervised cease-fire, field reports said.

The fresh fighting came as the peace agreement passed its fourth day of continuing but declining violations and officials disclosed plans for more U.S. meetings with both Vietnams to prepare for postwar relations.

President Nixon said he will hold a summit meeting with President Nguyen Van Thieu and also announced he is dispatching Henry A. Kissinger to Hanoi to open postwar communications with the North Vietnamese and discuss reconstruction.

Vice President Spiro T. Agnew wound up two days of conferences in Saigon with Thieu and other top South Vietnamese officials on postwar technical and financial aid to South Vietnam. He is leaving Thursday for Cambodia, his second stop on a seven-nation Asian tour that also will take him to Thailand, Laos, Singapore, Indonesia and Malaysia.

The International Commission of Control and Supervision, already behind schedule in getting observer teams into the field, sent delegates to meet with the four-party Joint Military Commission, another peacekeeping group, to obtain transportation, communications and security for regional operations. The military commission has been stalled by arguing between Saigon and the Viet Cong and the absence of the top Viet Cong delegate, informants reported.

Battlefield reports reaching Saigon said North Vietnamese troops overran South Vietnamese marine positions re-established just before the cease-fire as a new eastern anchor on the northern defense line at the mouth of the Cua Viet estuary, four miles below the demilitarized zone. About 90 marines were reported killed, wounded or missing.

Despite the heavy fighting along the demilitarized zone, the Saigon command reported alleged cease-fire violations dropped overall in South Vietnam by one-third to little more than 200 during the last 24 hours.

North Vietnam's Foreign Ministry repeated its claim that the Vietnamese Communists have "completely honored" all terms of the Vietnam peace agreement, and again accused the South Vietnamese of breaking the cease-fire.

The field reports that the North Vietnamese had initiated the attacks along the demilitarized zone came from allied sources. There was no way to check their accuracy since the international supervisory body consisting of observers from Poland, Hungary, Canada and Indonesia was not in place.

The new Secretary of Defense, Elliot L. Richardson, said in Washington the fighting is subsiding day by day, and within a week or 10 days he expects "a pretty stable situation." He attributed the continued fighting to "a counter-action of surges by both sides" as they moved for position.

Nixon will meet Thieu sometime this spring at his home in San Clemente, Calif. He said Kissinger will visit Hanoi Feb. 10-13. South Vietnamese officials in Saigon said Thieu would meet Nixon sometime in March, but they gave no specific date.

Thieu is faced with growing domestic problems, including the uncertain cease-fire, future negotiations with the Viet Cong on new elections and his own fate in the new political shape of a postwar South Vietnam.

The South Vietnamse sources said the summit meeting was part of a deal to persuade Thieu to accept the Paris peace agreement even though he had reservations.

The official North Vietnamse Communist party newspaper Nhan Dan said postwar developments depend on how well the Paris peace agreement is adhered to, particularly with respect to the Viet Cong's Provisional Revolutionary Government.

Top Men Resign

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon Wednesday accepted the resignation of the two top officials of the Office of Economic Opportunity, a poverty aid organization he is planning to dismantle.

They are OEO Director Phillip V. Sanchez, who was the top ranking administration official of Mexican American origin and OEO Deputy Director Wesley L. Hjornevik.

At the same time, Nixon announced that another OEO official 32-year-old Howard J. Phillips of Danvers, Mass., would take over as acting director of OEO.

He has been with OEO since December 1970. He previously served on the President's Council on Youth Opportunity and ran unsuccessfully for Congress from Massachusetts' sixth district.

The White House said Sanchez would remain in the Nixon administration "in another important position" but what it is was not announced.

Hjornevik, who has been deputy OEO director since December 1969 and previously was an associate director of NASA, plans to return to private life.

Pro-AEC Woman Favored As Chairman

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dixy Lee Ray, who says the Atomic Energy Commission has a "bad guy" reputation it doesn't deserve, is reportedly President Nixon's choice to take over as chairman of the agency.

Dr. Ray, a 58-year-old marine biologist from Tacoma, Wash., who was named to the five-member commission by Nixon last summer, will replace James R. Schlesinger as chairman, congressional sources revealed Tuesday.

Schlesinger has been named director of the Central Intelligence Agency.

Dr. Ray formerly was director of Seattle's Pacific Science Center and an associate professor of zoology at the University of Washington.

SALE! continues at
WEAR-HOUSE

Concert Committee presents
James Montgomery Band
Feb. 3 8:30
S.U.B. $1.50 at door
Special Guests: SAGEWORTH

SCI - week
SIMS 5th - 9th

Stennis OK In View Of Surgery

WASHINGTON (AP)-Sen. John C. Stennis, D-Mass., who was shot twice during a robbery, was reported still in very serious condition yesterday but doing excellently in view of the extensive wounds and subsequent surgery.

Stennis, 71, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee and a powerful member of Congress, was shot in the chest and thigh by two young men who accosted him outside his Washington home Tuesday night.

A spokesman at Walter Reed Army Medical Center, where Stennis was taken, told an afternoon briefing that Stennis is "conscious, responsive and well oriented to his surroundings."

Asked if the senator's life is in danger, Maj. Frank Garland said, "Any person who is very seriously ill faces this danger. This is certainly true in the senator's case."

Garland said Stennis was "doing excellently in view of his extensive wounds and the subsequent surgery." However, Garland said, Stennis' condition was "still very serious...and the prognosis is guarded."

He said Stennis was being given intravenous fluids, and had multiple blood transfusions but was no longer receiving blood. Also he said, the senator was receiving antibiotic therapy and was on a pulmonary respirator.

Stennis's son, John Hampton Stennis, 37, a lawyer and member of the Mississippi state legislature, told newsmen earlier: "We're very encouraged."

"At this time, doctors assure us there is no damage to the heart, brain, spine or nervous system...His spirit is good. His determination to be back to his job as soon as he can is all it could be. Of course, we knew that will be some days ahead," he said.

As for family reaction to the shooting, young Stennis said: "Our feeling is not one of bitterness. We feel shock, dismay, a feeling of the senselessness of the act, bewilderment. Why was he shot after giving them the billfold?"

The "very serious" condition for Stennis indicates the least favorable rating in the hospital's terminology.

Among visitors to the hospital Wednesday morning were Sens. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., John Tunney, D-Calif., James Allen, D-Ala., Sargent Shriver, the 1972 Democratic vice presidential candidate, and Lt. Gov. William Winter of Mississippi.

The hospital spokesman said Stennis' vital signs were stable, referring to heart beat, blood pressure and respiration.

He described the wound in the thigh as a flesh wound. The other bullet, he said, entered Stennis' left side "in the vicinity of the lower rib cage and followed a general downward path. It passed through the mid-portion of the stomach, then through the pancreas which lies behind the stomach. In its passage the bullet damaged a major vein which empties blood from the intestinal tract. The bullet then passed through the first portion of the right flank.

"Its presence creates no problem," the spokesman said.

Stennis was returning to his home in Northwest Washington after attending a reception when the robbery occurred.

NY Patrol Cars Ambushed

NEW YORK (AP)—In the Bronx, a police car pulls a cab driver to the curb for a routine check. A few feet behind, an unmarked car comes to a halt, until the uniformed patrolman's check is complete. Then both cars move on.

In the unmarked car are two plain-clothes cops, one of many such teams assigned citywide to ride backup to their uniformed comrades.

The reasons for the extraordinary precautions are posted on the visors of the unmarked cars—pictures of six young blacks, one a woman, who are wanted in the ambush wounding of four policemen within a week. All six are said to be members of a terrorist revolutionary group, the Black Liberation Army.

"The attacks on the force, planned as ambush, make the crime crisis in the city greater than before," said Mayor John V. Lindsay, in ordering a $13-million-a-year speedup in the training of police recruits.

Lindsay wants 315 cops added to the current force of 29,500, and 2,500 civilian workers trained to relieve uniformed police for active duty.

From another source came a plea of beef up police firepower. President Robert McKiernan of the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association, wants shotguns made standard equipment in every police car, to augment the regular .38-caliber police revolver. Under his plan, every cop on the force would be given training in the use of a shotgun.

"We have a guerrilla war in New York City today," McKiernan said, "and the Police Department should be taking the necessary steps to meet this challenge before any more policemen are attacked."

Detective Chief Louis Cottell said the Black Liberation Army grew out of the Black Panther party. The BLA has about 100 members and is held responsible for the earlier ambush murders of at least four New York City patrolmen.

Cottell said of the six wanted BLA members:

"These are six persons of a close-knit group who travel to various cities throughout the country, but are based in New York. They have engaged in bank robberies to finance their activities."

Bernice Jones, an East Coast spokesman for the Panthers, told a news conference at her Harlem headquarters: "At this time there is no link between the Black Panther party and the Black Liberation Army, and there probably never will be." As for the attacks on police, Miss Jones added: "The Black Panther party endorses the liberation of oppressed people. I endorse any means necessary. If police are an obstacle to the liberation of black people, then they, like any obstacle, must be removed.

"If this is an act of administering justice, we endorse it. If it is an act of random violence, this is anarchic and we cannot endorse it. We are a disciplined organization.

Miss Jones was reminded that some of the BLA's targets have been black cops—a fact which has led authorities to discount the shootings as racially motivated.

"Police are police," was her reply.

However, Police Commissioner Patrick V. Murphy said many black citizens have expressed shock over the shootings of police officers, and have cooperated in the vast manhunt for the six wanted BLA members.

The latest ambushes were believed linked to the deaths of

(Continued on P. 3)

Crib Deaths Still Occur Despite Curbs

WASHINGTON (AP)—The mother found her 11-month-old son hanging from the side of his crib. His body had slipped through the crib slats but his head was too big to go through. He was dead from strangulation.

A limited survey by the Food and Drug Administration which turned up this incident, has determined that such accidents are still occurring, nearly three years after the now defunct National Commission on Product Safety urged that cribs be redesigned to eliminate the possibility of strangulation.

The FDA found that 15 per cent of the cribs covered in one of its surveys did not measure up to a manufacturers' voluntary standard prompted by the commission's disclosures.

The FDA says it is at work on federal regulations aimed at preventing crib strangulations. "We have a policy of permissiveness of the worst sort," said Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., who received the FDA report on its crib safety efforts. Percy is one of the chief cosponsors of a bill to create an independent consumer protection agency to ride herd on regulators.

The National Commission on Product Safety in 1970 labeled cribs as one of the nation's 16 most dangerous products. It estimated 200 children die every year from accidents associated with defective crib design.

FDA Commissioner Charles C. Edwards said in a letter to Percy that the figure is questionable since it is a nationwide projection based on figures from Dade County, Fla., alone. Edwards said an FDA search of coroners' reports and other sources for 1971 turned up 23 infant deaths from strangulation due to crib design.

An FDA official said in a separate interview that the search was limited to 14 states, not including populous New York and California. The official said coroners' death reports often don't mention cribs as cause of death.

Edwards said the survey of crib manufacturers to determine adherence to the voluntary standards set by the industry covered 14 companies which account for nearly all of the nation's crib production. Imported cribs were not included.

Eighty-five per cent had slat spacing of 3 1/4 inches or less, the industry standard. None of the cribs had space larger than 3 1/2 inches, Edward said. The FDA did not identify the cribs which did not meet the industry standard.

"We are of the opinion that a strangulation with slats 3 1/4 inches or less spacing is highly improbably," said Edwards. Edwards said the government will offer no required standards for crib design until it completes a study which consists of taking babies' physical measurements.

Studies Can Aid Pentagon Trial

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The Pentagon papers trial judge ordered the government Tuesday to give the defense 11 studies, previously withheld from the judge, which he said could help the defendants "in the impeachment of witnesses."

U.S. District Court Judge Matt Byrne made his ruling after probing for nearly two weeks to find out if the government-concealed studies were "exculpatory," helpful to defendants Daniel Ellsberg and Anthony Russo.

Byrne revealed that in the past two weeks the government prosecutor, Asst. U.S. Atty. David Nissen, has given him 37 separate analyses of the Pentagon papers, many of which were supposed to have been turned over last spring.

Meanwhile, the defense said it would move on Wednesday for "sanctions" against the government for withholding data they said is "crucial" to the defense. They also said they expect to move for dismissal of the indictment.

Defense attorney Leonard Weinglass claimed that testimony has shown Nissen had the studies since January 1972, but didn't show them to the judge until this month. Nissen has said he didn't consider the studies as being covered by the judge's order of last spring.

The judge's ruling gave the defense written government assessments that eight of the 18 Pentagon papers volumes, plus a report on the 1954 Geneva conference and part of one of the four "secret negotiations volumes" would have had no adverse effect on national defense if they were released in 1969.

In Brief...

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Calif. (AP) — The reason his mother married a cannibal chieftain in Indonesia was to gain material for a book on primitive customs, says the son of explorer Wyn Sargent.

"My mom knows what she's doing," J. Sargent, 17, said Tuesday. "Mom is writing a book. It's all about customs and things. And the best way to get the material...."

DETROIT (AP) — An autopsy--delayed some 2,000 years--will be performed Thursday by Wayne State University scientists.

Undergoing the belated surgery will be the mummified remains of an Egyptian who died about the time of Christ's birth.

Scientists hope the autopsy will provide clues to the diseases which afflict modern man.

NORTHFIELD, Minn. (AP) — Bob Carel is a Northfield businessman who installs burglar alarm systems and sells televisions on the side.

Monday he removed part of the alarm on his store so he could install it in a client's store.

Carel came to his shop Tuesday and found that burglars had kicked in his unprotected back door and stolen two color TV sets.

OPEN HOUSE
PHI MU DELTA
FRAT/SOR PARK
FRIDAY, FEB. 2
8:00 - ?
6th KEG FREE

Let's have our senior portrait taken.
Maybe we can have it taken this way.

Senior Photos Today thru Feb. 9.
Free Candy
Details — Sign up at Index Office, 2nd Floor Student Union

BLUEWALL COFFEEHOUSE
THUR., FEB. 1
featuring
MIKE CATALDO
9PM - 1AM

Sargent Appoints Contributor Judge

BOSTON (AP)——One of Gov. Francis W. Sargent's pending judicial appointees is an officer of a Boston pharmacy reportedly under investigation by the state, a former officer of a company which has had state contracts and a contributor to Sargent's last campaign.

Arthur Sherman, appointed by Sargent to become a justice of the Third District Court of East Middlesex at an annual salary of $25,000, gave $500 to Sargent's 1970 campaign, records at the State House show.

Sherman is also a director of the River Park Pharmacy, Inc., of Boston, a firm which the Worcester Telegram reports is under investigation by the state auditor's office and the Department of Welfare's fraud squad.

The president and treasurer of the pharmacy is Albert Sherman, Arthur's brother. He gave $1,000 to Sargent's 1970 campaign, the records show.

The pharmacy was reported by the Worcester newspaper to be one of two such businesses being investigated last year by the state auditor's office as part of a statwide check on drug billings within the welfare department. The newspaper reported that "back-up" papers on the audit have been impounded.

Arthur Sherman currently is a special justice on the same court to which Sargent has appointed him to a regular justice. He received that appointment from Sargent last year, and now needs only confirmation by the Governor's Council to become a regular justice.

Arthur Sherman also was one of the original officers of a Wilmington electronics Incorporated in 1969, Solid State listed Arthur Sherman as its clerk and listed his Boston law office as its address.

On papers filed with the secretary of state's office on May 3, 1971, Sherman's name was typewritten in as clerk, but was inked out at some point and the name of attorney Summer Woodrow was substituted.

On May 10, 1971, Woodrow was among the company's officers signing a $91,404 contract with the state to install an emergency motorist call box system on Route 495.

Solid State was the only bidder on the contract. According to Henry Lundquist, a Department of Public Works spokesman, Solid State the only firm in the state capable of meeting the specifications drawn up by the department for the call boxes.

The project with the call boxes is an experimental one which is designed to test a new "self contained" emergency communications system on public highways.

Last year the legislature set aside $2 million from a $509 million highway bond issue for similar call boxes. Since Solid State is still the only known manufacturer of the type of call box called for, they could receive the subsequent contracts as well.

The motorist aid call box system was inaugurated Aug. 26, 1971, with Sargent leading a group of highway safety people in marking the event.

One legislator said; "I think there's a real question as to whether the governor should be doing a product endorsement for what is a private company."

The system paid for with both federal and state funds consists of 34 roadside call boxes on Route 495 between Route 2 in Littleton and Route 3 in Chelmsford.

There are four buttons on each call box—for fire, police ambulance and auto service. All are called into the state police barracks in Concord.

That has caused some friction between state and local police in the area, according to one police official. He estimated the boxes generate 15 to 20 calls a day, many of which are referred by state police to local police.

But the major problem, he said, was that system installed by Solid State "is not necessarily the best piece of equipment for the job." He said there is no voice communication with the system, merely the signal caused by the pressing of one of the four buttons.

Police cars answer all of the calls except those for auto service which are referred directly to towing companies.

Police have sent cruisers speeding to the scene of a call only to find a confused motorist wanting directions to a town. Without voice communications, the police official, it is impossible to determine what the calls are about.

It is also impossible to know when responding to fire emergency call whether a fire extinguisher would do the job or whether it's a three alarm blaze.

Interstate Route 93 and Route 3 have a telephone hook-up system, rather than the self starting units, Lundquist said, but those might not be suitable in more isolated areas.

By legislative mandate, some type of citizen call box system will be extended along Route 495, Interstate Route 91 and throughout the state, as far as the $2 million will last, he added.

What type of system is to be used on those roads is still in the planning stages.

Nixon Claims Right To Impound Funds

WASHINGTON (AP)-President Nixon said Wednesday the American taxpayer already is overburdened and the president has a right to impound funds if the spending would mean higher taxes.

The constitutional right to impound, or refuse to spend, funds appropriated by Congress is clear, he said.

Nixon spoke out at a news conference, when he was asked to respond to critics who say that his impoundment of funds abrogates power or authority that the constitution gave to Congress.

Claiming that Congress represents the general interest of the nation and that the interest "whether it be rich or poor or old, is don't break the family budget by raising the taxes or raising prices."

Therefore, the President said, "I will not spend money if the Congress overspends, and I will not be for programs that will raise the taxes and put a bigger burden on the already overburdened American taxpayer."

The impoundment issue has stirred up Congress.

At a Senate Judiciary subcommittee Wednesday, Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, said if Nixon refuses to execute the laws, the tools available to Congress to enforce its will are "crude at best."

Sen. Bill Brock, R-Ten., said Congress had only itself to blame for the impoundment problem. Congress is good at passing the buck, he said, adding that appropriations voted last year would have broken the public debt ceiling if Nixon had not refused to spend all the money.

Sen. Sam J. Ervin, Jr., D-N.C., author of a bill to bar impoundments for more than 60 days without the concurrence of Congress, said a cooperative effort by the president and Congress is necessary "if we are going to put the financial house of the federal government in order."

On other legislative matters, at his news conference:

—Nixon, who did not consult Congress on most of his major war decisions, said Congress will have to support any effort for peacetime reconstruction in Indochina as "an investment in peace."

—On executive privilege, the protection of administration officials from disclosing presidential confidences in testifying before Congress, Nixon said he did not want to abuse the privilege and that his general attitude "is to be as liberal as possible" in making his people available as congressional witnesses.

"We are not going to use executive privilege as a shield for conversations that might be embarrassing to us, but that really don't deserve executive privilege," the President promised.

He said each situation would have to be handled on a case-by-case basis at the White House.

—On gun controls, Nixon said he hopes that the wounding of Sen. John Stennis by holdup men in Washington would help to get the necessary congressional support for passage of legislation to deal with "the Saturday Night specials," small handguns that are easily obtainable. Nixon said a formula had to be found which keep guns out of the hands of criminals, but not impinge on the rights of those who want guns for hunting or other legitimate purposes.

Lake Placid Lacking As Olympic Host

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP)-Lake Placid, the only U.S. contender for the site of 1976 Winter Olympic Games, needs "a minimum" of $5.5 million from the state and $15.5 million from the federal government to host the games, the Rev. Bernard J. Fell, a local booster, said Wednesday.

At the same time, a spokesman for Gov. Nelson Rockefeller said the governor stands by his Jan. 2 telegram to Clifford Buck, president of the United States Olympic Committee, USOC, in which the governor reaffirmed his support of Lake Placid.

In the telegram, Rockefeller said he could not commit the state "to a specific dollar amount," but would "recommend to the legislature the necessary funds for required improvements to the facilities of the State Department of Environmental Conservation.

"In addition, the state stands ready to work with the involved local governments on their proposal for the development of an Olympic village with a continuing use," Rockefeller said.

The USOC was polling the 60 members of its board of directors on whether to recommend Lake Placid as the American bidder for the 1976 games to the International Olympic Committee. Roy Kennedy, publicity director for Lake Placid, said he expected a decision by Wednesday.

Other areas seeking the winter games are Innsbruck, Austria; Finland and Chamonix, France.

As for federal funds, Rev. Mr. Fell said Lake Placid is only asking for the $15.5 million Congress appropriated for Denver before that city dropped out of site competition.

Rev. Mr. Fell, chairman of Lake Placid's provisional Olympic organizing committee, said he was satisfied with the governor's reaffirmation of his Jan. 2 telegram. He added, however, that it was up to the USOC to judge whether Lake Placid had sufficient financial backing.

Memorial Set-up

JERUSALEM (AP)-Willi Daume, president of the West German Olympic Committee, is in Jerusalem to discuss a memorial to 11 Israeli athletes slain by Arab terrorists at the Munich Games last summer.

Daume met briefly Wednesday with Deputy Premier Yigal Allen to offer monetary aid for a memorial sports arena the Israeli Olympic Committee plans to erect.

Daume said the Bonn government already had donated $1 million to the families of the dead athletes and that a new sports stadium was "better than a memorial sculpture."

After his arrival Tuesday, Daume visited the graves of five of the victims near Tel Aviv. He was ccompanied by German Ambassador Jesco Von Puttkamer and two Israeli Olympic officials.

Chinese Prisoner CIA Agent

WASHINGTON (AP)-John T. Downey of New Britain, who has been a prisoner in Communist China since 1952, was identified Wednesday by President Nixon as an agent for the Central Intelligence Agency.

Nixon's comment, made during an unscheduled news conference, was the first official acknowledgement that Downey was connected with the CIA.

The President said, "We have every reason to believe" two American fliers captured by the Chinese during the Vietnam War will be released as the prisoner of war problem is worked out in Vietnam.

But, he said Downey's case, which dates from the Korean War, is different from those of Air Force Maj. Philip E. Smith and Navy Lt. Robert J. Flynn.

Nixon said there were no assurances Downey's sentence would be commuted.

On October 30, 1952, Downey and Richard Fecteau of Lynn, Mass., were passengers on a military flight from Seoul, Korea to Japan. Both were listed as civilian employes of the U.S. Army, but the Chinese said the plane was shot down over China and Downey and Fecteau were accused of being spies.

Room To Move
Drop-In Center
5-0400, 5-0401

REGISTER NOW!
State Conference
on HIGHER EDUCATION
Feb. 9 - 11
at Student Senate Office

Make arrangements NOW for Spring Vacation
in BERMUDA trips from under $200
Contact Paul Sheldon
546-9077

With the graves of Arlington National Cemetery stretching out behind, a Washington newspaper lies against an unmarked headstone proclaiming that Peace has come at last to Vietnam. (AP)

Kennedy Pushes Mass Transit

WASHINGTON (AP)—U.S. Sens. Lowell P. Weicker Jr., R-Conn., and Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., launched a campaign Wednesday to give the nation's largest cities and the state access to the federal Highway Trust Fund for the purpose of improving mass transit systems.

Weicker and Kennedy introduced legislation that would make available $2.75 billion in funds not earmarked for interstate high construction. The money would be usable for mass rail and bus transit programs.

Another $3.25 billion in the trust fund set aside for interstate road projects would not be affected by the proposal. "Our transportation system has become an indifferent, inefficient, destructive and deadly beast of national burden,:; Weicker said. "It goes where the spirit of speculation moves it, and it's driven by the wheels of vested interest."

Kennedy said the time has come to change the Highway Trust Fund from "a federal conduit for concrete into a sensible mechanism to finance transportation solutions . . ."

The two lawmakers said the object of their proposal was to give each state need flexibility in utilizing highway funds to aid areas where buses, railroads or subways pose a more viable solution to transportation problems than highways.

The Kennedy-Weicker bill would make half of the $2.75 billion available directly to major cities which adopt a comprehensive transportation plan in coordination with a statewide transit master plan. Both plans would require the approval of the Secretary of Transportation.

The remainder of the money would be spent at the direction of the governors of the various states to carry out the state's established transportation programs.

In addition, the senators' plan would give the Secretary of Transportation authority to use a portion of the trust fund monies for emergency implementation of the Clean Air Act of 1971. A portion of the act deals with efforts to reduce air pollution from internal combustion engines.

"Our failure to examine the concrete dreams has produced federally financed highways that are laden with air pollution to such an extent that our health authorities may not allow us to drive on them," Kennedy said.

A companion bill to the Weicker-Kennedy measure was introduced in the House by U.S. Rep. Edward P. Boland, D-Mass.

Texas Hair Goes To High Court

WASHINGTON (AP) — A state junior college in Texas, noting that high schools may order haircuts while colleges may not under court order, has asked the Supreme Court to settle the issue.

Tyler Junior College wants to reverse a decision of the U.S. Circuit Court at New Orleans in a haircut case that involved all 15 of its judges.

In a 9 to 6 decision, the majority said, "the adult's right to wear his hair as he chooses supercedes the state's right to intrude. The place where the line of permissible hair style regulation is drawn is between the high school door and the college gate."

The high court–over the strong objection of Justice William O. Douglas–has refused to entangle itself in school regulation of hair styles.

Perhaps with this in mind, lawyers for the junior college noted in their position Tuesday that "it might be said that the Supreme Court has far more important questions presented to it..."

But, as the school sees it, the issue was no less than the basic right of administrators to make rules for the operation of their institution.

The rule in question was a stringent one when three students, Joe R. Lansdale, Paul Harden and L.H. Hutcheson, Jr., went to court in the summer of 1970. The rule prohibited beards, provided that sideburns not get below the upper lip and kept collars well below the hairline.

It was necessary, Tyler Junior College maintained, to foster student appearance that was conducive to student education.

The junior college asked the Supreme Court to hear the case, and the justices are expected to act on the request before their summer recess.

Planned Coyote Bounty Killed In Maine House

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — A controversial proposal to place a $50 bounty on Eastern Coyotes died in the Maine House Wednesday when representatives went along with an unfavorable recommendation from a majority of the Fisheries and Wildlife Committee.

On a 73-55 vote, lawmakers accepted the "ought not to pass" report from 10 committee members. Two members of the panel endorsed passage of the county as proposed by Rep. Roswell E. Dyar, R-Strong.

The bounty had been opposed strongly by conservationists.

During a brief debate, Dyar said the opposition raised at a public hearing last week "was a farce."

In addition, the veteran lawmaker claimed his bill had been "attacked by a biased press.

"The public has been harrassed by misinformation and outright lies."

Dyar said the coyote is invading Maine and "raising havoc with the deer, fox, partridge, and everything that lives in our Northern Maine woods."

The wildlife committee's House chairman, Rep. Herschel L. Good, R-Westfield, said the coyote doesn't do as much harm as the domestic dog, and nobody would favor a bounty on dogs.

The bounty bill will appear on the Senate calendar Thursday, where it could be revived by acceptance of the minority report.

The coyote question was one of two fish and game issues which stirred debate during Wednesday morning's brief House session.

On a 96-43 roll call, representatives rejected a proposal to require a $3 special stamp of persons hunting pheasants. The money would go towards the state's special pheasant stocking program.

Bills introduced in the House Wednesday included proposals to:

—Create a Bureau of Indian Police within the Indian affairs department to handle law enforcement on the state's three reservations.

—Require municipalities to be responsible for the disposal of all waste from septic tanks or cesspools.

—Authorize the sale of alcoholic beverages at the new Agusuta Civic Center.

Fire
5-2111

BLUEWALL COFFEEHOUSE
Anyone can play!
call Flo or Karen
546-7393

HAMPDEN GAMES ROOM

If you can't find a good reason to come over to the Hampden Games Room, let us suggest a few.
Take a study break
Treat yourself to an inexpensive night out
Enjoy yourself alone or with friends
Meet new people
We have a wild assortment of Pinball machines and pool tables.
The Hampden Games Room is located in the Lobby of Hampden Commons and is open from 9 am to Midnight daily.

The Big Y
LIQUOR SUPERMARKETS
SPRINGFIELD FAIRVIEW · NORTHAMPTON

RED LION — 80 PROOF 4/5 Quart — BLENDED WHISKEY $3.59
RED LION 80 PROOF VODKA 4/5 QT. $2.99
OLD BOHEMIAN BEER Case of 24 12 Oz. N.R. Bottles $2.99
ANDRE CHAMPAGNE COLD DUCK 12 alc by Vol Fifth $1.79
HARWOOD — 80 PROOF CANADIAN WHISKEY Full Quart $4.99
BLATZ PREMIUM BEER 12 Oz N.R Bottles 6 Pak 89c

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

BOARD OF EDITORS

EDITOR IN CHIEF James E. Gold
MANAGING EDITOR Nathan Gorenstein
BUSINESS MANAGER William L. Manburg
EXECUTIVE EDITOR Stephen G. Tripoli
NEWS EDITOR Donald J. Bishop
SPORTS EDITOR William E. Ballou
PHOTO EDITOR Gib Fullerton
FINE ARTS EDITOR Robert Nesti

ASST. MANAGING EDITOR Steve Fine
ADVERTISING MANAGER Jeanne Bauge
ASST. PHOTO EDITOR Alan Chapman
ASST. SPORTS EDITOR Roy Lyons

TODAY'S STAFF

ISSUE EDITOR Mary Vorderer
NIGHT STAFF Gail McDonnell, Susan Shepard, Karen Lynch
EDITORIAL Steve Tripoli
SPORTS Bill Ballou
DARKROOM Steve Smith, Steve Quigley, Mark Maleski
AD LAYOUT Nadine Gray

Undergraduate newspaper of the University of Massachusetts. The Staff is responsible for its content and no faculty members or administrators read it for accuracy or approval prior to publication.

Unsigned editorials represent the view of this paper. They do not necessarily reflect the views of the faculty, administration, or student body as a whole. Signed editorials, columns, reviews, cartoons, and letters represent the personal views of the authors.

The Collegian subscribes to the Associated Press and the Liberation News Service. Publication of their material does not constitute endorsement.

Battle Stations!

Joseph P. Healey and the UMass Board of Trustees opened the first round of official attacks on the reorganization plan presented January 23 by the state's Secretary of Educational and Cultural Affairs Joseph Cronin.

In a prepared statement at yesterday's Trustees' meeting, Chairman Healey stated, "we find this plan to be of no substantial merit." Healey also said that the Trustees were not "a party to the deliberations that produced that plan", the past ten years of educational progress could be reversed by its implementation, a new layer of bureaucracy will be borne out of the state's division into five parts, and the dismemberment of UMass disregards "clear evidence of shared strength".

Of course, with the UMass dismemberment, the Trustees statement against reorganization came as no surprise. But, Healey also went beyond that and all but called it unnecessary. "There is real opportunity for statewide vision, planning, and leadership within the general framework which already exists." This is the point to play up to the legislature, who must approve the funding of Governor Sargent's state reorganization plans before they become law.

If UMass, or anyone, can show the legislature how statewide planning for the future educational needs of Massachusetts can work within the already existing bureaucracy, then the Governor's plans could be put to rest at an early date.

'. . . THE WHOLE TRUTH AND NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH, SO HELP ME G-GOSH . . . I CAN'T RECALL HIS NAME!'

Ed Bryant

Good Morning

I couldn't decide whether to feel like a prophet or a traitor. Accidentally, I had discovered a whole new part of the day, and it was a beautiful experience. My first impulse was to tell my friends that I had stumbled over something really beautiful, something called morning. Morning glory seeds, I would tell them, were named after it. Perhaps they wouldn't understand, but I could show them.

I gave up on the idea; they'd laugh at me. All of my friends knew what morning was. Morning is when school superintendents used to make them get up to go to school. Morning is when summer job bosses make you get up. Morning is when, even before you've started your day, your mother, who works for them, informs you that you're already late.

Who is the dreadful soul who sold morning to the anally retentive ethically Protestant schedule-loving inhumans who say and think things like, "the average American is like a small child?" Who gave these people the right to spread their gray flannel karma all over the sunrise? Amherst has ten sunset lovers for every person who digs the sunrise. Most of my friends have only heard of the sunrise once. They all think the sunrise is a bit actor they saw in The Phantom Tollbooth.

Why is morning in such poor repute among those of us who are, in the words of Abbie Hoffman and Richard Nixon, the hope for America in the future? Bob Dylan had a whole album entitled New Morning. Cat Stevens had what I think was a song which was also about morning, and even the kid from the suburbs, in making his play for Sugar Magnolia, mentions the idea of walking in the morning sunshine. None of these guys have to work for a living, which is essentially the problem with morning. Ray Stevens (God forbid) probably stated it most honestly: "Up in the morning at the crack of dawn, just a cup of coffee to go to work on." For most people, morning is a drag, an abomination, an unsatisfactory alternative to lobotomy or earthquake.

To like morning in its present condition requires a lack of sympathy and a perverse sense of pleasure. One can't like Spiro Agnew because he talks funny without weighing in various other considerations such as the shoddy job he did as PTA President and the fact that his daughter uses drugs. Is this man a good father? Similarly, to enjoy morning for its freshness and its runrise without considering all the unfortunate fuckers who have to go to work, through all that traffic, or packed like sardines on various subways, is an insensitive decision.

Morning can be saved, unlike Agnew. What's done is done, the facts ar in; he couldn't handle the PTA. We'll forget Agnew. Morning not only can be saved, it must be saved.

Why? Because morning (meaning the time from sunrise until the time we get up) represents one of the best parts of the day. Without morning, there could be no Saturday morning cartoons. If there were no morning, one couldn't drive 24 hours a day in mad pursuit of whatever lies beyond. Without morning I might never have been born. (I was born just in time to get to work at eight o'clock.) We need morning.

How can it be saved? The answer lies, as most answers do, in investigating origins. I happen to know how the decision was reached to make mornings a bummer. As usual, there were shady dealings in high places.

President Calvin Coolidge was President at the time when there were no laws governing morning. People didn't have to read their tickers in the morning, although they did. As long as one bought or sold one hundred shares of anything, the government left you alone. One day Milton Berle came in to see Federal Communications Commissioner Jon "Vaste Wasteland And That Ain't Half Of It" Edwards, a Northampton crony of Coolidge. Berle had appeared for Coolidge at a campaign benefit the previous year, and Edwards owed him a favor. Berle wanted Edwards to get Coolidge to muscle Congress into passing a law requiring Americans to go to work at eight o'clock, or nimb o'clock if they were registered Republicans. Berle wanted to make sure Americans would be at home in the evening, thus insuring him a big audience as soon as television was invented. Coolidge, a believer in laissez-faire, balked, until one day when Felix The Cat came to see him at the White House, and quietly informed the President, that if he didn't pass the law, the mice of America would be given the go-ahead from the cats to do what they would. Coolidge was a member of an obscure religious sect known as the Republicans, who identified with elephants for some mystical reason, and who were therefore afraid of mice. The law was passed quietly. In return, Milton Berle made a settlement with Dean Martin, and Sacco and Vanzetti lost.

Isn't it a bit foolish to continue this tradition? Calvin Coolidge isn't President, he's a bridge. And Milton Berle is off the air. The time to act is now.

Don't go to work tomorrow morning. Show up when you feel like it. Work isn't sacred. Morning is. Hoa binh.

Ed Bryant is an MDC Editorial Columnist.

Matt Tackeff

Beyond The Cease-fire

Whither Vietnam? Or, to put it in less scholarly jargon: What's in store for Southeast Asia? The key to a realistic assessment of the possibilities and trends after the signing of the Ceasefire Agreements cannot be arrived at unless the view of Vietnam as an isolated conflict is discarded. The proponents of this view hold that this conflict is a struggle between the forces of revolutionary Nationalism and Foreign (i.e. Chinese, Japanese, French, and now American) Imperialism. This view has been an ideal Trojan Horse for the gullible, particularly those who use it to rationalize their advocacy of unilateral American withdrawal. Rather than being merely an isolated struggle, the wars waged in Indochina have, from their outset during World War II, been an integral part of a worldwide Protracted Conflict.

The theory behind this Protracted Conflict, apart from being a historical phenomenon, is the underlying concept of Communist strategy in the Twentieth Century. The Communist movement presided over by tacticians as brilliant as Lenin, as diabolical as Stalin, and as colorful as Fidel, Ho, and Mao, has perpetually relied upon a long-range strategy of attrition in pursuit of its allegedly "inevitable" goal of international hegemony. Indochina, in the past decade or so, has been the focal point of this conflict, but international circumstances may impel the strategists of Leninism to shift the front of the conflict away from Southeast Asia.

From the Communist vantage point, this phase of the conflict has had stakes far more crucial than mere territorial aggrandizement in Vietnam. A victory by the Communist armies in Vietnam would not only jeopardize the future of the other "dominoes" in Southeast Asia (Laos, Cambodia, and Thailand), but would also constitute a devastating subversion of the vital morale of many of America's most important allies. And it would also provide a strategic vindication of the tactics of peripheral (sometimes referred to as "national liberation") conflicts, the wars of proxy waged by the Communist powers in order to weaken the Western powers without having to confront them directly.

This phase of the conflict, however, has been drawn on inconclusively for too long. The resolve of the American leadership has apparently withstood the gruelling breadth of the conflict as tenaciously as it has responded to the massive Offensives launched by the Communist forces in 1968 and 1972. Despite the lack of a conclusive outcome, both the conflict. In America, the domestic political opposition, despite the landslide repudiation in the November elections, remains a potential force against the indefinite continuation of a full-scale American committment. In the Soviet Union, its Satellites, and Red China, where political opposition is suppressed by effective totalitarianism, the burden and costs of supplying the North Vietnamese war effort provide the most decisive argument in favor of shifting the front out of Southeast Asia. And the North Vietnamese and Vietcong, although retaining the long standing fervor for "revolutionary" conquest, recognize that the devastating effects of U.S. power have seriously curtailed their war making capacity, and that the position of President Thieu in South Vietnam is substantially more secure than it was when he took power in 1967.

Will the quest for Communist domination of Indochina continue? Can it continue? For the major Communist powers to continue to supply the war effort in that area of the world would seriously undermine their ability to acquire vitally needed technological and economic assistance from the Capitalist West. Without access to American technology, which in most respects is vastly superior to that produced by their totalitarian economy, the Communist powers would fall hopelessly behind in economic, and ultimately military power. The strategy of "Peaceful Coexistance", which is nothing more than a temporary expedient to be pursued under favorable circumstances, may very well force the Communists to sacrifice their strategy of armed subversion in underdeveloped nations.

Although the shooting may stop, the war goes on. The tactics may be different, such as political subversion in the more vulnerable Democratic regimes, such as France, Chile, Italy and India, or there may be a resumption of the strategy of war by proxy, such as in the Middle East. The optimism of some, and the rhetoric of others, may induce a debilitating euphoria in those who believe in Peace, true Peace, is indeed at hand.

Matt Tackeff is an MDC Editorial Columnist.

'DON'T WORRY—IF THE JURY IS AS APATHETIC ABOUT IT AS THE VOTERS WERE, WE'RE IN THE CLEAR!'

Editorial Points

Brevity may be the soul of wit, and Boston Globe Editorial Points may all be one-liners, but at least we are as witty as they are soulful.

•••

Whittier California has been carefully surveyed and considered. The only thing on the East Coast it compares to is Norwood.

•••

Now that the hockey season is over . . .

•••

Everyone knows who Billy Graham is, but most of you probably don't know who Bill Graham is. We shall attempt to explain.

•••

Bill Graham makes more money, has longer hair, and is well thought of by the people who work with him. Bill Graham is hated by most everyone.

•••

There's a difference however. If Bill Graham says that Buddy Holly and Jimi Hendrix are playing in his theater next week, you can buy tickets. Billy Graham only has to negotiate with one superstar, and he can't get him to perform.

•••

Also, Billy Graham doesn't people there's sex in heaven. Bill Graham believes people screw people wherever they are.

•••

The University of Massachusetts, led by Bod Wood, is soon going to have its own TV show. Sort of like the 21" classroom. Now let's see, twenty-one square inches at nine dollars a cubic foot, that's . . .

Letters To The Editor

Selectman Race

To The Editor:

I think there is something important going on in this Community that I want to make sure people know about.

It's rent Control. It's a child care center. It's stopping the ecological rape of the Conn. River and Amherst's fields. It's a Mass Transit system between Northampton and Amherst. It's safe ride stickers and hitchhiking stations. It's getting rid of the traffic problems in and around town. Those are some of the issues in the election on February 20, 1973.

Maybe local politics is more relevant to your life than you realize. At least I think that the people who are involved in this election want to make it so.

There are students, tenants, teachers, mothers, and a librarian (all non exclusive sets) . . . people trying to do something for Amherst and you. They are running for Town Meeting and it is the first time in Amherst that there has ever been a real contest for these seats.

George Scheurer who is a special grad. student in Public Health is running for Selectman. I think he is much more relevant to our interests than the incumbent, Merl Howes.

George was chairman of GI's for Peace in El Paso, Texas and worked with Senator McGovern's office to expose stockade conditions at the Fort Bliss Stockade. In El Paso, Tex. he was also chairman of United Servicemen of Alaska and participated in operation Dewey Canyon 3 in Washington. He helped organize the first demonstration at Westover Air Force Base.

The incumbent selectman Merl Howes in contrast voted against a resolution which called for an end to the bombing and signing of the Peace Treaty. Merl also has stated a number of times that he is against such things as zero population growth because, "It is not the American way."

Once the proposed Amherst Fields housing project is done Amherst will have increased its population by one third (from this project alone) and will be pouring 400,000 gallons per day of untreated sewage into the Conn. River. Merl thought he shouldn't stop this project because it would mean overturning one of the appointive boards. The Board of Selectmen need only one more vote to halt his project and George has stated that he will provide it, because of its ecological importance.

What I am trying to say is that local politics is very relevant to the quality of life we all share. How about making your life relevant to politics by voting on February 20, 1973.

Eric Brewer
Univ. Park Apts.

Snow Removal

To The Editor:

It's been a few days since the snow stopped. The parking spaces, (which serve one car per day) are somewhat plowed. But the thoroughfares (which handle tens of thousands of cars per day) look like a skier's dream.

While sliding and waiting my way to work this morning, I saw four trucks with snow-plows raised on high. In two cases the traffic was stopped, and I had a chance to jump out of my car and talk with the driver.

In both cases, I asked why he didn't lower his blade and plow his way to wherever he was going. The first driver replied, "That's not my problem!" The second said, "I don't give a fuck!"

This type of candor was lacking in the Physical Plant Office. The man second in command of plowing told me that crews had been working around the clock. Yet when I left the campus at 1:30 A.M. yesterday, I saw no one. He just didn't know when the streets would be plowed, but he did sympathize with me. His car had been dented when he left work yesterday. "Goddam no-fault insurance!"

Perhaps we should follow the lead of the Nixon administration, which is counting on an early Spring to resolve the energy crisis. So, down on your knees, residents of Mass U. Don't complain. Make the world safe for mediocrity! Take another coffee break, look toward heaven, and PRAY FOR SPRING!

Jock Gunter
School of Ed.

Westfield Center

To The Editor:

WESTFIELD LIVES ON.

The state of Massachusetts has experienced a significant change in official policy concerning the treatment of Juvenile Delinquents.

A number of training schools have been closed, hopefully, for good. Groups such as the Massachusetts Childrens' Lobby are pressing to have judicial labelling of juveniles relaxed thereby preventing relatively minor offenders from suffering the negative influence of institutionalization.

Massachusetts is a progressive state and certainly the developments in the area of juvenile corrections assert that fact.

The University of Massachusetts, through the J.O.E. program, has played an integral part in this progressive movements. However, as the problem diminishes in size and intensity so does public interest.

It is a fact of life that the wheel that squeaks gets the oil. Roughly one year ago there was a great deal of concern about juvenile correction and treatment. Possibly this awareness on the part of the community was due to the high incidence of drug use among the young? Now the focus of public concern has turned to other problem areas, but Westfield lives on. Juveniles are still being classified by the courts and sent to detention centers for further placement. The number of these juveniles has decreased and the placements they face have been greatly improved. The fact remains that juveniles are incarcerated in places like Westfield for indeterminate periods of time. Some of the kids have been in Westfield more than a year. These people watched their peers being fussed and fretted over a short time ago. Now they simply endure the routine and wonder how they lost the status of a celebrity.

The J.O.E. program needs volunteers to visit Westfield detention center. We provide a regularly scheduled bus on Monday or Wednesday evenings. In addition we have people driving down at various times during the week. They would be happy to take you along.

Come to RSO 122 in the Campus Center and find out what you can do to help. Juvenile treatment in this state has taken the first few steps of a long journey. Help us keep moving. The kids at Westfield need you now more than ever.

Groundhog Sounds Off

sometimes i dont know why i associate with them theyre so overbearing sometimes with their instant analysis of stale news that has been happening over and over again and they have walter cronkite say if henry kissinger sees le duc tho before the election therell be six more weeks of war but that isnt really even so bad as the rest of them pious hypocrites who think its so bad for their sons to die for their country their country while its ok to kill vietnam ese people dont they die for their country i mean if the expression means anything and im not at all sure it does pompous assholes like the one who thinks hes the blackmansfriend until he meets a nigger thats smarter than him and then he wants to get rid of them as quick as he can and that silly little fool who costs so much money renting an office at nine bucks a foot while tas are starving in europe theyre all silly who do they give each other power over each other when theyre all fuckups especially them dogooders whose idea of reeform consists of meetings meetings readings readings and further discussion if theyre so allfired ready to help the indigenous poor or whatever the sociology of the semantics is then why dont they skip one day at the jollybull and send the money to bangladesh or nicuragua and slip it to the papers what a noble gesture they made in giving up their pastrami on ryes for the day theyd be the envy of all the other imageconscious liberals that haunt places like this maybe even a chance to be NPC coordinator of tedkennedys next campaign go headtohead with mayordaley on the buffalo plank all them liberals wondering how to be wishywashy without phosphates and whetherornot they can get another two years before theyhave to publish another book publishing a paininaass but itsa good life writing letters to the times and liberals are the best of the lot actually its the good burghers i dont like theyre dummies they gripe allatime bout how theyre gettin screwed n they think the war is being paid for by cbs or something now they come to me just like they do each year offering me money if ill go out and look at my shadow theres an old groundhog proverb which says that anybody who sees his own shadow is february is looking at his own asshole

"My body is 67, but my hands are 20."....Carlos Montoya. (MDC Photo by Steve Smith)

Trouble Brews In No. Ireland

(AP) — Mobs in two Northern Ireland towns smashed and looted shops and burned vehicles late Tuesday. It was the first anniversary of the deaths of 13 Roman Catholics slain by British troops during a civil rights demonstration in Londonderry.

Troops fired rubber bullets at the rioters in Newry and Strabane, both near Northern Ireland's border with the Irish Republic.

The rioting followed demonstrations in both towns commemorating the Londonderry clash, which Northern Ireland's Catholics call "bloody Sunday." Hundreds of Catholic children in Belfast boycotted schools Tuesday to mark the date.

In Belfast, police found the body early Wednesday of a man with a hood pulled over his head, a common way of identifying a victim of revenge in the war between Catholics and Protestants.

AEC Still At It

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. atomic weaponeers are working on a versatile new type of hydrogen bomb--a kind of triple-use weapon called the FUFO--it was learned today.

An experimental model has already been successfuly tested at the Nevada proving grounds.

Its technical name is "Full-Fuzing Option Bomb," meaning that it would be an air-dropped weapon having built-in characteristics to be detonated either in the air, on the earth's surface, or by delayed action after first penetrating the ground.

How it would be fired would be at the option of the bombardier.

But it would be, in effect, a three-in-one weapon-replacing in a single device three different weapons which must now be carried by the global-ranging Strategic Air Command for three different purposes.

The top Atomic Energy Commission weapons official told The Associated Press that while operational weapons of the new type have not yet been made, AEC weaponeers are confident they can produce them if the Defense Department orders them, and if production is deemed "in the national interest."

It would be designed to replace old hardware of the three-variety kind in America's B52 and F111 bombers of the Strategic Air Command.

And, said Major Gen. Edward Giller, chief of the AEC's Division of Military Application, the weapon would thus give greater operational flexibility to the bombers--depending upon the particular needs of a given military situation--and also allow reduction in the nation's nuclear stockpile.

Giller stressed, however, that such three-way weapons, if eventually placed in the bombers, would not change the firepower of the craft.

That is, a given bomb would have the same explosive wallop as an older one of the same nuclear components.

First clue that America is working on such a weapon came in a terse, part-of-a-sentence reference to it in the AEC's annual report to Congress.

But Gen. Giller amplified on it in response to a newsman's questions.

Join Peace Corps

The first meeting for students, seniors and graduates interested in joining the Peace Corps will be in Thompson Hall 104 on Thursday February 1 at 7:30 p.m. Two films will be shown "Hope and Harvest" and "Do you speak Agriculture". The showing will be followed by a question and answer period. The program for future weekly meetings, literature about the Peace Corps and application forms will be available at the meeting.

Boltwood Helps Others

There are people from the valley spending time with some of the residents at Belchertown State School. The Boltwood- Belchertown project is one of the programs set up to help volunteers at the state school. Last semester the project had several programs reaching a number of areas.

The programs basically have two aims: to help the residents enjoy life a little more than they previously had, and maybe, encompassed by friendship, help them to learn some skills. From last semester's efforts, it was learned that being a friend a couple of hours a week was doing a lot for some of the residents.

This semester, again, the project is offering a variety of supervised programs. We are in the midst of an extensive evaluation, in a hope that we will be better able to meet the expectations of volunteers and supervisors. There is room in many of the programs for interested people.

The program supervisors will be in rooms 911-915 of the Campus Center on Thursday, February 1, to discuss their programs.

Single Taxpayer Speaks

WASHINGTON (AP) — At age 76, Vivian Kellems is back pounding the halls of Congress for relief of the single taxpayer.

She appeared Wednesday at a news conference where Sens. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., and Robert Packwood, R-Ore., proposed elimination of differences in single and married tax rates.

Since 1969, she has withheld from payment the portion of her income tax which she thinks the Internal Revenue Service wants to take simply because she's single.

In a complicated series of court fights, she has also filed claim for $100,000 she says the government owes her for some taxes paid from 1948 to 1969.

Committee chairman Wilbur Mills of Arkansas has not listed single taxpayer reform among a number of tax changes to be considered at hearings starting next week.

At the news conference, Packwood noted that higher tax rates for single people is based on the idea that everyone should get married.

Noting there are six million more single girls than single men in America, Miss Kellems said:

"How can they get married even if they want to?"

Ribicoff said he was sure Miss Kellems, once the owner of a profitable electrical parts plant in Connecticut, had had plenty of chances to marry.

All University Undergraduate Men Who Are Interested In Learning About The Fraternity System Are Invited To An Open Rush To Meet And Talk With The

Brothers of Beta Kappa Phi on Monday, February 5th

at 401 North Pleasant St.

from 9:00 to 10:00 p.m.

for any more information call Brian at 545-2164

We feel that our fraternity is an excellent example of individuals working together while enjoying the best of college life. Base your opinions on your own observations. An hour is a very short period of time to spend. A college career is a very long time to waste.

YOUTH WELL SPENT

appearing at the

RIVERVIEW

Thursday

Feb. 1

9:00 → 1:00

Cover $1.00

ENJOY AN ENCHANTING POLYNESIAN EVENING

KALIHI KAI

NATIVE ENTERTAINMENT

Now Appearing

PRINCE LIAFAU

with Dancers from the Islands in Our Exotic Polynesian Lounge

OPEN
11:30 a.m. to 2:00 a.m.
Luncheon Special — 11:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

Happy Hour 4-7
Lounge 4 to 1

Great Chinese - Polynesian Cuisine
Lunch 11:00 a.m. - 4:30 p.m.
Dinner 4:30 p.m. - 2:00 a.m.

TRY OUR FAMOUS PU PU PLATTER SERVED IN NATIVE STYLE WITH FLAMING HIBACHI

COCKTAILS
EXOTIC TROPICAL TREATS
OLD FAVORITES
FINE LIQUORS WINE, BEER.

NOW OPEN

ROUTE 9 (BELCHERTOWN RD.) AMHERST
For Reservations or Takeout Call 256-8336

LBJ Interview To Be Aired Tonight

NEW YORK (AP) — The CBS Television network is broadcasting tonight the final interview any reporter had with former President Lyndon B. Johnson before Johnson's death last month at 64.

You should watch it, but don't expect startling revelations. It's not that kind of interview nor was it intended to be.

It's just a quiet hour's visit with a weary, much-maligned man as he talks about what he considered his greatest accomplishment as president--progress in equal rights for all Americans.

And he comes across as an unexpectedly soft-spoken, reflective man, not as the jut-jawed, easily-caricatured Johnson who led this country through five of its most turbulent years.

Entitled "LBJ: The Last Interview," the program was filmed at the LBJ ranch in Texas 10 days before the former president died of a heart attack.

His interview with Walter Cronkite was conducted in guest quarters called the Cedar House. The whole thing took less than two hours, interrupted only when Johnson suffered an attack of angina pectoris.

He stepped outside briefly to take a nitroglycerine tablet that eased the pain, then returned and insisted on continuing the interview, according to the show's producer, Burton Benjamin.

The completed program contains film clips of Johnson's major civil rights addresses, among them his famous 1965 speech to Congress that included the black rallying cry: "We shall overcome!"

Cronkite noted that many say Johnson, in his zeal to do something for the blacks and underprivileged of this country, "promised so much and the delivery was difficult."

"Do you think that you overpromised?" he asked.

Johnson's stubborn pride showed in his first answer: "No, I don't know what we promised. We had certain goals and we made certain recommendations...but I'm unaware of a lot of promises we had made that weren't fulfilled."

Cronkite rephrased the question, putting it in the context of "the promise of a better life."

Johnson backed in the answer. He first credited his administration's accomplishments in civil rights, medical care and education to the groundwork laid 20 years earlier by President Harry S. Truman.

"I just happened to be the catalyst," he said in part. He finally acknowledged that "a great many people did say we went too far and we went too fast. And we well might have, but the country was long overdue."

Female Discriminated In Job Market

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women are as segregated by occupation today as they were 30 years ago, President Nixon's Council of Economic Advisers reports.

The council found that with few exceptions, women are still stuck in low-paying jobs and encounter discrimination when they seek more lucrative careers. Its first report on the economic status of women was released Tuesday.

More fact-finding and discussion of the government's role in helping women improve their situation is needed, the council said.

The council cited examples of job prejudice against women: "some clients reject women lawyers, some customers reject automobile saleswomen, and some workers reject women bosses."

It said employers often exaggerate the risk of a woman's job instability or her potential unacceptability to his clientele, and they screen her out of advanced training and advanced positions.

"The representation of women in positions of responsibility is striking," the report said.

The CEA said many income and job differences stem from assumptions by both men and women that a woman's place is in the home and her job comes second.

The council said women remain as segregated from men by occupation as they were 30 years ago.

Tape Untangled

The attention of all students who survived Registration is invited to sharing in the deliberations of the Student Affairs Blue Ribbon Committee on Red Tape. This Committee has been established with a view to simplifying and removing procedural barriers to better delivery of student service wherever possible.

Since its establishment, significant accomplishments have been made (rumors to the contrary notwithstanding) but much more undoubtedly needs to be done.

The Committee's interests do not pertain only to Student Affairs initiated matters as they may affect students but to any procedures, forms, requirements, etc. that may exist which need not; or, at least, which should be reviewed and eliminated or restructured.

Committee members include Robert N. Brooks, Asst. Dean of Students; W. Daniel Fitzpatrick, Assoc. Dean of Students; Ralph D. Jones, Registrar; Simon V. Keochakian, Asst. Director of the Counseling Center; and Lynn E. Santner, Acting Director of Financial Aid.

Brennan In Labor

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate today confirmed, 81-3, President Nixon's nomination of Peter J. Brennan, a New York labor leader in the construction field, to be Secretary of Labor.

Four of Nixon's six new Cabinet selections now have won Senate approval.

Emergency/Trouble Phone Numbers

EMERGENCY/TROUBLE NUMBERS (Please clip and save)

The following offices and telephones are staffed 24 hours a day, 7 days a week:

	From Room and Non-Pay Phones	From Pay Phones
Univ. Police	5-2121	545-2121
Fire	5-2111	545-2111
Med. (Inf.)	5-2671	545-2671
Phy. Plant	5-0600	545-0600
Univ. Switchboard	0	545-0111
Student Info.	5-1515	545-1515
Off-Campus Op.	9-0	0

UMass Police 5-2121

THE ROISTER DOISTERS

present

ARTHUR MILLER'S THE CRUCIBLE

February 1, 2, 3, 4

8:30

Admission $2,

$1.50 with UM ID

Bowker Auditorium

Reservations

545-2149

DISTRIBUTOR OF KAPPY'S PRODUCTS

KING STREET LIQUORS KING STREET LIQUORS KING STREET LIQUORS

Kappy's Rare Blended Whiskey
40% straight whiskey 60% G.N.S.
$3.99 4/5 qt. $4.89 qt.
90 PROOF

Kappy's Light & Mild Whiskey
30% straight whiskey (4 yrs. old) 70% G.N.S.
$3.59 4/5 qt. $4.49 qt.
80 PROOF

KING STREET LIQUORS KING STREET LIQUORS KING STREET LIQUORS

Antique Bourbon Whiskey
100% Kentucky Whiskey (6 yrs. old)
$4.49 4/5 qt. $9.99 1/2 gal.
86 PROOF

Windsor Canadian Whiskey
100% imported from Canada
$4.49 4/5 qt. $9.99 1/2 gal.
80 PROOF

KING STREET LIQUORS KING STREET LIQUORS KING STREET LIQUORS

Haig Blended Scotch Whiskey
100% imported from Scotland
$5.89 4/5 qt. $13.39 1/2 gal.
86 PROOF

Kappy's Vodka or Gin
100% G.N.S. 80 PROOF
$3.29 4/5 qt. $7.99 1/2 gal.

KING STREET LIQUORS KING STREET LIQUORS KING STREET LIQUORS

Almaden Mountain Wines
12-1/2% alc. by volume
Sauterne-Chablis-Claret
$3.29 1/2 gallon $5.69 gallon

Donelli or Riunite Lambrusco
8-9% alc. by volume
$1.69 4/5 qt. $3.29 48-54 oz.

KING STREET LIQUORS

338 King Street Northampton, Mass.

Professor Frank Umholz, left, and Professor F. R. Erskine Crossley try a handshake with two mechanical hand mockups.

Hands Reach Out

Some look like an armored gauntlet for a three-fingered knight; others resemble the tentacles of a science fiction monster.

They are mechanical hands designed by School of Engineering students at the UMass in Amherst. Some day, such a hand may reach out from a NASA space shuttle craft and expedite repairs on a malfunctioning satellite.

NASA calls them "remote control manipulators". The design work at UMass is being done under a contract from NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., by Dr. F.R. Erskine Crossley, UMass professor of mechanical engineering. "Our contract with NASA is to produce a terminal device for a 35-foot mechancial arm," Crossley explained. "We were asked to develop concepts for at least three different models–general purpose devices with more capabilities than the traditional clamp or sugar tongs type."

Crossley turned the initial design problem over to the senior mechanical engineering design class of Associate Professor Frank Umholtz and the 15-member class spent the past semester on the project. They split up into teams, put in a lot of extra time and effort and came up with five models, all of them a variation of a three-fingered hand, but all different in the way they work.

The student phase of the project is now complete, Crossley said, and the contract is in its final phase–incorporating the student ideas into a finished working model. "Between now and April we have to have a prototype ready for testing by NASA," he explained.

The students contributed some interesting ideas, particularly in the way the fingers bend, the UMass engineer added. The student designs have already been shipped to Huntsville and checked by NASA officials. "Some of the designs definitely interested the people there," Crossley said.

Completion of the prototype in April will end the UMass contract; further UMass involvement will depend on future NASA decision, Crossley said.

Seminar Offered

This undergraduate seminar will involve the student in models and current practices in evaluation of community mental health programs, educational curriculum and programs, instructional materials and other evaluative research projects. Lectures and material will enable participants to pursue data gathering, reduction and analysis of their own data in appropriate field experiences.

Required readings: American Education Research Association Monograph Series on Curriculum Evaluation; selected journal articles in publications such as: Review of Educational Research, Journal of Educational Research, Experimental and Quasi-Experimental Designs for Research, Campbell & Stanley; Scriven articles.

Field experience: Participation in the evaluation of an on-going campus project such as the integrated day program, teacher improvement, Year for Action, living-learning centers, or an approved evaluative research experience of the student's own design will be a major part of the course's requirements.

For additional information, call Dr. Hemmer at 545-0333.

School Of Ed. Offers Group Dynamics Course

The Center for Human Relations at the School of Education is offering a course in group dynamics for undergraduates, Titled "Educ ———, Laboratory in Applied Group Dynamics". Advanced Doctoral students under the supervision of Center staff members Donald Carew and Pete Sherrard will serve as trainers.

This course is primarily intended to be a laboratory training experience which will focus on personal growth and group development. The major part of the classroom time will be devoted to T-Group sessions which will provide an opportunity for each participant to: develop a greater insight into himself and his personal value system and an awareness of his impact on other people; increase his sensitivity to the feelings of others and his understanding of the behavior of others and how this affects him; examine and experience the forces that operate in a group as well as his own effectiveness in assuming roles that are needed in building and maintaining a group; and relate the small group experiences to the process of change, motivation, leadership, organization and larger social systems. Outside reading and theory and skill sessions in class, hopefully will contribute to an understanding of group dynamics theory and practice as well as to individual development.

The course will meet for six weeks, beginning Feb. 13 through March 22 on Tues. and Thurs. from 4-6:30. The first two sessions will be for orientation and information sharing with the lab meeting for the remaining five. A number of openings are available and can be registered for in Rm. 121 at the School of Education.

If you would like more information concerning the nature of the course, call the Center (5-0915). Sign up for Educ. 386. The School of Education lex. #0305, and it carries 150 modules (1 1/2 university credits) of credit.

D. H. Lawrence's

"WOMEN IN LOVE"

with

Alan Bates • Glenda Jackson

Sat., Feb. 3

Mahar Auditorium

7 - 9:15 - 11:30

directed by Ken Russell

PENNY NITE

at the

Rusty Nail Inn

with

Cuckoos Nest

Rte. 47

Sunderland

665-4937

Come my Little Chickadees

W.C. Fields Film Festival

NOW thru FEB. 11

Continuous Film Showing

We're bringing back W.C. Fields' best on our own Silver Screen! Continuous showings from noon till closing at The Ground Round.

Special Libations

THE SILENT MOVIE MARTINI
(so little Vermouth it's not even a whisper!)

Plus pitchers of WADDLED WALLABYS
(tomato juice with a kick like a kangaroo) . . .
OUR GANG PUNCH! . . . or your favorite BREW.

Featured Foods

MY LITTLE CHICKADEE SPECIAL $2.45
Chicken fried to a golden brown, french fries, salad . . . and a glass of wine or mug of beer. *

THE DOUBLE FEATURE $1.85
Full ½-pound of tender, broiled Ground Round, toasted bun . . . with french fries and cole slaw plus mug of beer or glass of wine. *

When you're hungry for good food and thirsty for a good time

* Beer - 12 oz.
Wine - 6 oz.

1625 Memorial Dr.
Chicopee

25 Park Ave.
W. Springfield

The Ground Round

Notices

ATTENTION NURSING MAJORS
There will be a short meeting for all nursing majors Thurs. at 7 p.m. in Morrill Conference Rm.

AUDITIONS
Musical comedy Company. Auditions Feb. 5 and 7. Sign up for appointment in 417 Machmer. Scripts on reserve in 401 Machmer.

BELCHERTOWN VOLUNTEERS
Two buses will leave in front of Whitmore at 12:45 and return by 3:45. Please come. They need your help. Everyone is welcome.

BLUEGRASS
Bluegrass Musicians; anyone interested in jamming once a week or so contact Tom 218 Hamlin, 545-2642 or leave message.

BOLTWOOD BELCHERTOWN PROJECT
Recruitment meeting for all interested in doing volunteer work at Belchertown State School will be held tonight at 7:00 in 911 CC.

COMMUTERS
Three vacancies need filling in Comm. Assem. Exec. Nomination papers at R.S.O. first fl. CC for election on Feb. 15, 1973.

CONCERT COMMITTEE
impt meeting tonight at 8 in rms. 811 815. Also Booking Comm. will be meeting at 7:30. New members always welcome.

DIVINE LIGHT CLUB
Meeting for Divine Light Club, public invited to hear about Gurn Maharaj Ji. Rm. 805 CC, 7:30.

FENCING CLUB
First meeting tonight in Rm. 8 WoPe. All members, old and new are welcome.

KUNG FU CLUB
Chinese self-defense. Advanced students meet tonight 7:30 p.m., Worcester Rm., S.U. Beginners are welcome. Meeting for beginners will be Fri., 7:30 p.m. at Worcester.

NORTHAMPTON VOLUNTEERS
We start today 6:30 at Hasbrouck Lab and 6:35 at Paterson House. Will return by 9:30. Bus will be provided. All members please show up.

PHISIGMA OPEN HOUSE
Phi Sigma 358 No. Pleasant. Beer and mixed drinks, Fri. Feb. 2, 8-? Come on down, have a good time.

OUTING CLUB
All equipment must be returned by tonight between 6 and 7 p.m. or overdue charges will start Fri.

PEOPLE SELLIN AT TABLES IN CC
Sign up today for your table next week.

PSYCH 392B INTERPERSONAL EXISTENCE
This course is overenrolled. If you haven't taken the prerequisite courses and or are not a senior, you will probably be dropped. Sorry.

STUDENT HOMOPHILE LEAGUE
Meeting tonight, 7:30 p.m. 9th fl. CC. New members welcome.

UNDERGRADUATES
Introduction to Urban Ed (Ed. 257) still has openings in all sections. Intro is a Foundations of Ed alternative, and all undergraduates are eligible. Please apply at the section you wish to attend.

URBAN ED UNDERGRADS
Portfolios for Intro to Urban Ed and Survival Strategies may be picked up in Rm. 222-A, School of Ed, between 9:00 and 12 noon, and 1:00-4:00 daily.

WTOY MEMBERS
Meeting Mon. night at 8 p.m. Feb. 5 for all active members who wish to retain their active status. All members and officers must attend. Meeting will be in office.

LOST
2 tens folded together and 3 ones—money. If somebody knows what happened to it please call collect 774-2943—that was all I had for books.

I lost my little black faculty notebook that has a bus schedule and 5 college bus tickets in it. Please return to 302 Pierpont or lost and found.

Two keys on a chain with a plastic VW and drivers license belonging to Jess Hales. Call 6-5990.

I beg you to return the three ECE books taken from the bookstore. I have no money. Please put them back. Please.

Woman's square faced Swiss watch goldbands, blue speckled background, black leather strap—vicinity O.H. or Mahar. Call Lisa, 546-6875.

Girl's light blue wallet with gold decoration on front. In vicinity of Hicks, Bartlett, possibly Thompson. Please call 546-6663.

1 pair of Kastinger Ski boots in #2 lot—please call Bill, 546-9310. Need them badly before the snow melts!

FOUND
Wed. a.m. outside Morrill—silver bracelet with 7 small roses. Call 253-5291.

Oliver Ames High School ring found. Call 665-3815 after 5 p.m.

2 keys on a string. Found Tues. behind Herter Hall. Call Carl 6-8965 or come to 403 Washington.

Television Tonight

5:00 JIM AND TAMMY (18)
MISTER ROGERS NEIGHBORHOOD (24) (57)
SUPERMAN (27)
THE BEVERLY HILLBILLIES (30)
GOMER PYLE (40)
5:30 HOGAN'S HEROES (22)
THE ELECTRIC COMPANY (24) (57)
GOMER PYLE (27)
HOGAN'S HEROES (30)
NEWSBEAT NEWS (40)
5:55 WHAT'S HAPPENING (3)
6:00 NEWS, WEATHER, SPORTS (3)
12 O'CLOCK HIGH (38)
BIG NEWS 99 (22)
ZOOM (24) (57)
PETTICOAT JUNCTION (27)
TO TELL THE TRUTH (30)
WILD WILD WEST (40)
6:30 CBS EVENING NEWS WITH WALTER CRONKITE (3)
NBC NIGHTLY NEWS (22) (30)
FRENCH CHEF (24)
THE EARLY SHOW "The Sad Horse" (27)
MAKING THINGS GROW (57)
6:55 NEWSBEAT NEWS WITH JOHN DEEGAN (40)
7:00 NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC SOCIETY SPECIAL (3)
DICK VAN DYKE (18)
BIG NEWS 99 (22)
SOUL (24)
NEWS EARLY REPORT (30)
ABC EVENING NEWS (6) (40)
LOUIS LYONS NEWS AND COMMENT (57)
7:30 YOU ASKED FOR IT (8)
BOSTON BRUINS HOCKEY (18)
THRILLSEEKERS WITH CHUCK CONNORS (22)
WAIT TILL YOUR FATHER GETS HOME (30)
DRAGNET "The Big Clan" (40)
THE REPORTERS (57)
8:00 THE WALTONS (3)
MOD SQUAD (8) (40)
THE FLIP WILSON SHOW (22) (30)
THE ADVOCATES (24) (57)
SKI WITH BILL HOFFMAN (27)
8:30 THRILLER (27)
9:00 CBS NEWS SPECIAL (3)
KUNG FU (8) (40)
IRONSIDE (22) (30)
AN AMERICAN FAMILY (24) (57)
9:30 TWILIGHT ZONE (27)
10:00 CBS REPORTS (3)
THE STREETS OF SAN FRANCISCO (8) (40)
THE 700 CLUB (18)
THE DEAN MARTIN SHOW (22) (30)
THE STATE OF CONNECTICUT (24)
NEWS (27)
MARTIN AGRONSKY EVENING EDITION (57)
10:30 PEYTON PLACE (27)
THIRTY MINUTES WITH (57)
11:00 NEWS, WEATHER, SPORTS (3)
ACTION NEWS (8)
THE BIT NEWS (22)
NEWS LATE REPORT (30)
NEWSBEAT NEWS (40)
11:05 JANAKI (24)
11:30 STARLIGHT MOVIE "Holiday for Lovers" (3)
THE TONIGHT SHOW starring Johnny Carson (22) (30)
ABC WIDE WORLD OF ENTERTAINMENT (8) (40)

Accelerator Closing

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — The Cambridge Electron Accelerator is going out of business, the victim of increasing technology and decreasing federal money.

CEA's director, Karl Strauch, told his staff Tuesday that the new federal budget provides only enough money to shut the accelerator down.

The accelerator, operated jointly by Harvard University and Massachusetts Institute of Technology, was a pioneer research tool in high-energy physics. When it opened 11 years ago, it cost $12 million.

The proposed budget, Strauch said, calls for turning CEA's research in colliding beams of high energy particles over to more advanced facilities at Stanford University.

CEA has 88 full-time workers, Strauch said, and Harvard and MIT will help find jobs for them.

TEN PIN BOWLING

Monday - Saturday
4:30 - 10:30

(Except during league play)

BOYDEN LANES

50c/string

MDC CLASSIFIED

FOR SALE

ADC-303AX speakers, best buy — Consumers Report - 1971, lists $220, my price $140. You save $80. Please call 549-0047 after 6 p.m. tf2/2

Judo robe: Barely used, men's medium, $8.00 or best offer. Call Eliot at 256-6828. tf2/2

Meal tickets for sale. One female, one male or female. Call 6-5921 or 6-5922. tf2/6

Two 15 Meal Plan, m. and f., best offer, cheap! Call Pat, 546-8220. tf2/6

A 2-cubic refrig., $45. Call 253-5064. tf2/2

FM car stereo w/speakers. Call 546-4640. tf2/5

*Stereo — audio electronics *Best buys on name brand stereo equipment. Call Greg, 546-6648. tf2/9

I have to sell my 10-Meal Plan ticket. Please — quick call Kathi, 6-6336. Will negotiate price. tf2/1

Pr. Dynamic Lange Slalom, Solomon bindings, 207cm., excell. cond., used 1 month. $100 or best offer. Call 253-7787 after 6. tf2/5

1 pr. Dynamic skis, VR17 team racing, model 220 CM DH. Valued over $300, $125 with bindings. Call 546-9030. tf2/1

Pr. Rossignol Strato Marker bindings, 207cm., excell. cond., used 2 months. $100 or best offer. 253-7787 after 6. tf2-5

PAUL'S OLD TIME FURNITURE, furniture, costumes, curios, all at honest prices. In the heart of downtown Amherst in The Alley 253-3511. tf2/5

64 VW Bus, good motor 36 hp., transmission shot. $75; water bed, frame, heater, liner 3 months old. $50, call Tom 628-3836. tf2/1

1969 VW Bug, fair cond. $650. Call 549-6652 after 5. tf2/1

Med. size portable typewriter, very good condition, Underwood Olivetti. $40. A pr. of cross country skis and poles, $25.00. 665-2830. tf2/2

Brand new down sleeping bag, with carrying bag. $40 or best offer. Call lounge, 549-0871 after 6. tf2/5

Lange Comps. ski boots for sale, size 9, with Lange Flo, only used twice. Asking $70. Call 546-5461. tf2/5

New Delmonico refrig., 3.5 cu. ft., guarantee, $60. Carolyn, 549-0063. tf2/1

Waterbeds: $18.95, 5-year factory guaranteed, all colors, king & queen sizes. Waterbed heaters $27.50. 546-9141 afternoons & evenings. tf2/2

FOR SALE

Nivico SRP — 471E turntable with Shure cartridge. $40 or best offer. Call Charlie at 546-1618. tf2/2

We buy and sell used Gibson, Fender, Martin guitars, banjos and amps. Also new guitars at low prices. The Guitar Workshop, North. 586-1706. tf5/11

10 Meal Ticket for sale, call Bill at, 546-6450. tf2/1

For Sale: Women's 3-speed bike, Raleigh. Very good condition. Call 549-6321, 6 p.m. tf2/2

10-Day Meal Plan, $200 or best offer. Call 6-6912 during day or 323-4832 after 5 p.m. Ask for Charlene. tf2/5

Konica type IIIA RF camera with case and light meter, $45. Sofa, fair condition, $10. Call 549-6410. tf2/2

Bass cabinets (2) w/ev. Speakers ($150), cab. for 3 speakers (15"), Dyna head (120), Akai X150-D tape deck ($75). Call, 549-6425, Kent. tf2/2

Inventory clearance sale, Univox amp to 40% off, 105 RMS Twin Reverb list $400 — now $280. Creative Endeavor, Miles St. Grnfld. 774-2831. tf2/23

Fender Twin Reverb less than 1 yr. old $350. Used Traynor Reverb Guit. Amp $120. Creative Endeavor, Miles St., in Grnfld. 774-2831. tf2/9

1 pr. Lange standards exc. cond. used only one season. Ladies size 5 or 5 1/2, $70 will haggle, 6-5321. tf2/1

Typewriter, Olivetti-Underwood — excellent condition. Like new. $45. (Originally $90.) Call Lisa, 549-0647, evenings. tf2/1

Used banjo. Good cond. $45. call 253-5731, Elliot. tf2/2.

Attention: For sale K. size water bed w/liner, heater w/thermo., frame, mat. $59.95. Call Jack 546-8212. tf2/5

Lange Pro Ski Boots, used once, cost $150 new, will take best offer. Call Bob at 546-8597. tf2/2

PERSONAL

BISEXUAL, HOMOSEXUAL. Anyone with questions or wanting general information call 586-2811. Ask for Paul, eve. tf2/2

Aline — Hope to see you in September! We all miss our favorite hypochondriac. Love from 3rd floor Chadbourne and friends. tf2/1

Kathy, we talked Tuesday outside Campus Center. Like to see you again. Can we meet? Call me nights, 583-2651, Conrad. tf2/5

TRAVEL

N.Y. — Frankfurt, $139 rnd. trip. Open return, wkly. flights. For info. & schedule, write, German Overseas Tours, Box 535, Brattleboro, VT., 05301. tf2/2

AUTOS FOR SALE

66 Ford std., 6 cyl., studded tires, $325. 549-6321. tf2/1

1970 Firebird, trans - AM, Excellent condition, air cond., power windows, tape deck, auto. trans., best offer. Call Roger 549-6554. tf2-2

65 Chevy, V-8, very good condition, call Rich, 256-6879. Keep trying. $295. tf2/6

For sale, 1967 Mustang. Rebuilt engine, V-8, 289, 4 speed, new tires, needs some body work. Asking $550.00. Phone 256-6384. tf2/2

67 Ford Cortina. Excel. cond., 4 speed, radio, great handling, 20 miles per gallon. Have replaced many parts. 256-0011, Miles. tf2/6

'55 Oldsmobile, V-8, automatic trans., good tires, only 60,000 miles, always starts, best offer. Call 256-8453. tf2/5

Peugeot, 66 wagon, new rebuilt engine, excellent condition, best offer. Call 584-6015. tf2/7

1972 VW Super Bug, radial tires. Must sell. 549182. tf2/6

Mercedes 220SE, burgundy, fuel injec., 1300. 549-6417 — year, 1965. tf2/7

WANTED

Photographer wants open minded liberal female models part-time, good pay. Write giving details to P. O. Box 122, Granby, Mass. 01033. tf2-1

Adolescent Psych: Grinder, Thornburg Astron; Dynamic Astronomy by Dixon, 2 copies of each. Call 6-6432. tf2/2

Writer needs prolific cartoonist for profitable partnership. No cash, split sales 50-50. Call Paul at 256-6119 after 5 p.m. tf2/2

Poetry wanted for possible inclusion in cooperative volume. Includ. stamped envelope. Editor, Box 4446C, Whittier, Calif. 90607. tf2

FOR RENT

Room in private house Montague Ctr. $55/mo. inc. utilities, call Bob 367-2762. tf2/2

Available now, 8 bedroom Colonial in quiet country. Wendell Center. All remodeled. Call 256-8896 days, 253-2162 nites. tf2/2

HELP WANTED

6 people needed for 6 evenings in Feb. Earn between $120-$220 for working just 3 hrs./evening. Car and phone necessary. Call 586-1634. tf2/7

S.W. student needs sec'y. help. 5-10 hours weekly. Shorthand & typing nec. Call Paul after 7:00 p.m. at 6-8828. tf2/5

Anyone interested in delivering the Boston Globe in Southwest, please call Cecilia, 6-6409. tf2/2.

Energetic mature people at Friendly Ice Cream, NHamp. full/part time. Weekend avail. own trans. necessary, call 584-0555 for appt. tf2/2

Mechanic to repair pin ball machines, call 253-3305 or write Box 51, Amherst. tf2/2

Receptionist-Dental Assistant for Modern Ortho. Office. Experience preferred — not essential. Call 586-0555. tf2/1

Overseas jobs for students — Australia, Europe, S. America, Africa. Most professions, summer or full time, expenses paid, sightseeing. Free information, write, TWR Co., Dept. Q3, 2550 Telegraph Ave., Berkeley, Ca. 94704. tf2-6

DATING SERVICE

The Cupid Company has people who want to meet you! Pick up forms at UMass., or write Cupid Company, P.O. Box 75, Norwood, MA. tf2/6

REFRIGERATORS

Brand new — Made by Delmonico - 5 year guarantee - free delivery - 3 cubic foot $75 - 5 cubic foot $79. Call Gary - 1615. JFK 546-7830. tf2/5

ENTERTAINMENT

SEE D.H. LAWRENCE'S "WOMEN IN LOVE" WITH ALAN BATES & GLENDA JACKSON AT MAHAR AUD., 7-9:15. DIRECTED BY KEN RUSSELL. tf2/2

Professional DJ, with 1000's of oldies and monster PA. Will entertain for your party or dance. Phone Steve at 467-2842. tf2/2

Sat., Feb. 3, 8-12 p.m., Cance Main Lounge. Clear Sky. 75¢. BYOB. tf2/1

SERVICES

Need help with tax forms? Call 323-7601 for fast, cheap service $3.00 and up. tf2/2

Butch's repair service — No rip off. Special this week: tune-up $10, plus parts for 6 or 8 cyl. for appt. call, Butch at 549-3626. tf2/1

BETTER DATES. REALLY WORTH CHECKING INTO! SEND FOR FREE QUESTIONNAIRE: MATCH, THE FIVE COLLEGE DATING SERVICE, BOX 759, AMHERST. tf2/7

REWARD

Reward for book, Flower Arranging, 150 illustrated concepts lost 1-24-73, near Durfee Greenhouse 584-2862. tf2/1

ROOM WANTED

Female grad student seeks own room in house/apt. Preferably near campus. Please call 253-7982 evenings. Thanks. tf2/2

RIDERS WANTED

To Montreal Feb. 5, return Feb. 7. Call Steve, 6-7583, room for three, share gas/exp. tf2/2

ROOMMATE WANTED

M. roommate needed to share a room in Puffton Village. $50. Call Ashok, 549-0715. tf2/2

Attention: Sublet for 2nd semester. Own room w/air cond., 2 closets, tele, furnished, all electric $70/mon. Call Jack 546-8212. tf2/5

Roommate needed to share two bedrm. apt. $85 per month, includes utilities. Ph. 253-9445. tf2/2

Roommate wanted, 24A Nutting Ave., walking distance to campus; completely furnished; cheap, drop by or call 549-6833. tf2/1

Your own upstairs rm., with bath & phone in 2 bdrm. Puffton Apt. 1 or 2 m/f, walled cell, dishwasher. $104 or $90, 549-[illegible] tf2-1

VITA Offers Tax Assistance

The Volunteer Income Tax Assistance Program (VITA) will be offering free tax assistance to all students and staff of the University. As stated in an earlier article VITA will be offering free tax assistance to low income areas in Springfield, Northampton, Holyoke and Amherst areas. The program will assist all students at the University in filling out his/her income tax forms--the 1040A or the 1040 forms with their supporting tax schedules, as well as the Massachusetts state tax forms and their supporting schedules.

From today until April 16th, VITA will maintain an office for this free tax service in the Suffolk Room on the main floor of the Student Union. The people who will be involved in assisting the students will be on duty from 9 a.m.-9 p.m., Monday through Thursday and Friday 9 a.m.-5 p.m. Commuting students as well as residents can bring in their necessary information to have their tax forms filled out by the VITA volunteer.

Also on the same date, VITA will begin in the residential areas on campus. These people will be in the areas for one or more weeks to serve the people that live within these areas. Offices will be set up in coordination with the area director's office and signs will be posted in the various areas to inform people interested in the service where the office will be. These offices will be open from 2 p.m.-10 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 1 p.m.-5 p.m. on Friday.

As of this date, VITA has set up the following schedule of dates for the residential areas on campus:

Southwest - January 10-February 16

Orchard Hill - February 19-February 23

Northeast (Quad) - February 26-March 2

Sylvan - March 5-March 9

Central - March 12-March 16

Orchard Hill - March 19-March 23

Central - April 2- April 6

Sylvan - April 9 - April 13

If there is a large demand for the VITA Program in these areas, the group will return to the various residential areas to continue the tax program. Questions concerning the VITA Program can be answered through the Center for Outreach office -- 5-2021.

'72 GMC RALLEY STX wagon, V-8, automatic, 12,000 miles $3395

'72 PORSCHE 911T, air, am/fm, loaded, mint condition $9900

'71 BUICK Electra 225, 2 door hardtop, V-8 automatic, loaded with accessories $3895

'70 SAAB Model 99E, standard, white, Excellent condition $1795

'70 FORD Maverick, V-8 standard, 4 speed, green $1495

'69 MGB Roadster, black, wire wheels $1295

'69 TOYOTA Corona, yellow, standard, real clean $1095

'67 PONTIAC Catalina, blue, V-8 automatic, maroon $795

'65 FORD Falcon, 6 standard, white $495

Complete sales, service parts, body dept. and towing.

OPEN EVES. 'till 9.

NORTHAMPTON VOLKSWAGEN

Your Authorized VW Dealer

246 King St., Rte. 5 Northampton

FREE Shuttlebus Service for Amherst Customers

Call 584-8620

Bishop Cites Abortion Ruling

Bishop Christopher J. Weldon, Bishop of Springfield and UMass trustee said that the decision of the Supreme Court on abortion during the first three months of pregnancy was sadly lacking in wisdom that 'we' expect from the body. He also stated that the decision is harmful to the country.

The Bishop claimed that this decision changes in no way God's law with regard to people's moral obligations in life. He said that God's law will continue to be operative and binding with regard to people's moral obligations in life. He added that God's law will continue to be operative and binding with regard to the physical, psychological and spiritual aspects of an abortion.

He concluded by saying that the Court in trying to deal with the civil side of this question has put in serious danger the moral and spiritual values which we need as individuals and as a nation.

SW Courses Open

The following three-credit courses being offered by Southwest Residential College are still open. Registration for these courses is being held at the Office of Academic Affairs, John Adams Lobby (545-2803) until February 6.

Center for Racial Understanding Courses:

SW 291 T Institutional Racism* - By arrangement - E. Goldman.

SW 292B Educational Black Psychology - TH 1:25-3:50 Melville Lounge - B. Winfield.

Southwest Women's Center Courses

SW 291V Law and Feminism - Tu 7:30-10:00 SWWC - J. Sternick.

SW291S Russian Lit-Fem. Viewpoint - W 7:30-10:00 SWWC - L. Peterson.

SW 291W Feminist Writing Seminar - M 1:25-4:00 SWWC - G. LeTourneau/A. Townley.

SW/GB 291 U Women and the Law* - First Meeting Th Feb. 1 SBA 312 7:00 p.m., thereafter W 7:00-9:30 SWWC - C. Potter.

International Studies and Communications Courses

SW 291 I Latin Amer. Civ. - Tu 7:00-9:30, JQA 19L - S. Thompson.

SW 291 Z Afric. Cult & Black Amer. - Tu, Th, 4:00-5:15 JQA 19L-M. Tjitendero.

Non-Program Related Courses

SW 291 D Racism and Popular Culture - Sec. 1 Tu 2:30-5:00 JQA 5L, Sec. 2 Th 2:30-5:00 Mack 1 - J. Trubisz.

SW 291 E Anti-Negro Thought 20th Cent. - Th 7:30-10:00 Mack 2 - J. Rossbach.

SW 291J Univ. from Black Perspective - Th 6:30-9:00 Melv L. - J. Parrish.

SW 291L River Ecology* - M & F 10:10-11:00 a.m. and W 10:10-1:00 p.m., Flint - R. Coler.

SW 291 M Military Establishment - W 7:00-9:30 p.m. Mack 2 - T. Dalton.

SW 291 R How Can I Learn at Univ. - Tu 7:00-9:30 JQA 9th Fl. Apt. - P. Chanin/A. Davis.

SW 291 Y Black Ritual - 1st meeting 1/30/73 7:00 Malcolm X Rm. Berkshire D.C. - A. Lindsay.

SW 292 A Ideological Pollution - W 7:00-9:30 Mack 2 - P. Chandler.

SW 291 Q Black Women in Prisons - Th 7:00-9:30 Mack 3 fl. L. - J. Ramos

*By permission of instructor.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

By SYDNEY OMARR

Aquarius is difficult to pin down--these are the persons willing to see ahead, to plan for the unexpected and who delight in surprises. These are the gregarious individuals, much interested in astrology and unorthodox subjects. Aquarius truly believes in the "impossible dream."

***

ARIES (March 21-April 19): What you think is out-of-reach may be closer than is apparent. Taurus, Libra persons are featured. Family member aids in unobtrusive manner. Don't permit pride to create controversy. Be receptive. Make conciliatory gesture.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Lunar aspect now coincides with long-distance communication, a greater understanding of why you are here. Perceive actual needs. Separate facts from fantasy. Perfect techniques. Secret is confided. Be discreet.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Emotions dominate. Feelings are strong. Opposite sex may be involved. Older individual may pose temporary problem. Strive to comprehend without abandoning basic principles. Financial gain is a definite possibility.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Maintain low profile. Finish rather than begin projects. Accent is on partnership, marriage, legal agreement. Aries appears to be in picture. You may be called on to explain views. Do so in forthright, calm manner.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Accent on health, employment, how you relate to peers. Be independent without being arrogant. Strive for originality without being careless. Your sense of showmanship can be successfully utilized. Romance is also in picture.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Spotlight is on using knowledge to advantage. Rise above the petty. Teach and learn. Young person looks to you as example. Fulfill responsibility. Changes of favorable nature are due. Obtain hint from Leo message.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Restlessness is apt to affect those close to you, especially family members. Don't blame others for indecision. Key now is to outline desires. Then go through process of elimination. Be selective. What you need is attainable.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Obtain valid hint from Libra message. Be willing to experiment without risking basic security. Means refuse to give up something for nothing. Know difference between real desire and mere whim. Leo and Aquarius figure prominently.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Accent is on change which can add to possessions, financial security. Gemini, Virgo persons probably will be in picture. Use of written word can prove to be of special advantage. Commit ideas to paper.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Significant progress can be made, especially if you entertain at home. Stick with what you know. Don't wander too far afield. Genuine bargain is available. You could be selected for exciting mission.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Much of what you do is apt to occur behind the scenes. Clandestine meeting could be on agenda. Be quiet within. Don't volunteer information. It is necessary now to be discreet. Pisces is very much in picture.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Involvement with Aquarius is indicated. New alliances are formed. Chance acquaintance could develop into friendship. By accepting responsibility, you multiply opportunities for advancement.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are independent, at times domineering. You possess charm, wit and you are creative. You usually have much to do with persons born under Leo. March and December should be outstanding months for you in 1973.

Copyright 1973, Gen. Fea. Corp.

Crossword Puzzle

ACROSS

1 Sum up
4 Young salmon
8 "Lohengrin" heroine
12 Falsehood
13 Great Lake
14 Dispel
15 Climb
17 Preposition
19 Spanish article
20 Coin
21 Writing implement
22 Girl's name
23 Greatly pleased
24 Evergreen tree
25 Dregs
26 Worthless leaving
27 Mountain pass
28 Three-toed sloths
29 Road (abbr.)
30 Introductory performance
32 College degree (abbr.)
34 Body of water
35 Peer Gynt's mother
36 Strike
37 Quarrel
39 Exist
40 Healthy
41 Shallow vessel
42 Abstract being
43 Dance
44 Conjunction
45 Sea eagle
46 Expert
48 Former Russian ruler
50 Mountains of Europe
52 Greek letter
53 Lampreys
54 Fat of swine
55 Medal for bravery (abbr.)

DOWN

1 A state (abbr.)
2 Dissension
3 Fairly good
4 Shut up
5 Skill
6 A state (abbr.)
7 Allude
8 Be mistaken
9 Behold!
10 Dressed skin
11 Book of maps
16 Goal
18 Preposition
21 Concrete supports
22 Roman bronze
23 Preposition
24 Enemy
25 Falsehood
27 Sob
28 Fruit drink
30 Stroke
31 Employ
32 Soldiers quarters
33 Devoured
34 Prohibit
36 Stopped
37 Freshet
38 Out of date
39 Cancel
40 Possesses
42 Teutonic deity
43 Hairless
45 Bitter vetch
46 Deface
47 Male sheep
49 Man's nickname
51 Sun god

Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle

Distr. by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Earle Barroll

There's No Place Like Home

By EARLE BARROLL

I didn't attend the basketball game Tuesday night at the Springfield Civic Center. It was a personal symbolic protest against what I felt was a "stolen" game from the Cage and the UMass campus. I fully understand that weather conditions "may" (but I doubt it) have kept the student population from what it was expected (with fingers crossed) to be. I'm also the first one to believe that UMass basketball needs big time competition, in a hurry.

But, I cannot buy the reasons that were elicited earlier in the season for making this excursion. The athletic department tells us that (1) the game was to spread UMass basketball beyond the UMass community (2) it was the start of hopefully fostering the groundwork for a new complex on this campus and (3) to show Springfield that UMass could draw and thus Michigan, Jacksonville and the like are just around the corner.

Maybe the must in Curry Hicks Cage hasn't been in season yet. Maybe Orr Rick hasn't sprung a leak yet. Maybe the hockey team practice bus hasn't had a flat yet. Maybe a basketball recruit was putting us all on when he said that the Cage was not in the same class with West Virginia's plush 14,000 seat arena.

If this isn't enough proof that UMass needs a complex and we have to trek 25 miles to Springfield to accomplish this for the athletic whigs, then Warren Spahn was right-handed, Julius Erving couldn't dunk, Mark Spitz couldn't swim and Miami wasn't 17-0.

If our sports publicity office would pump out a constant flow of literature on UMass basketball and hockey and other sports outside of football (and then again this must be suspect for why weren't Steve Schubert and Paul Metallo in any of the post-season all-star games) then "spreading the word" couldn't have to be a major priority, especially within a 25 miles radius.

It is also a fact that Holy Cross and Boston College will not draw as well as a national power such as an Oral Roberts, an Oklahoma City, or a Marquette, at least in Springfield. Track coach Ken O'Brien proposed a bright idea when he suggested that UMass could schedule these teams or their like during the winter tourney season when they're in New York Holiday Festival and next year at Providence for the new sight of the Quaker City Tournament. Many national powers also take eastern swings and again the possibility arises out of this.

Consider the following: It is awful sad to hear an alumnus of UMass, James Trelease, who is also a distinguished cartoonist for the Springfield Daily News comment, "They owe it to us. After all we're the people who keep the University alive with taxes." It is likewise sad to call the game a success when 300 students show up and then hear applaudits for the Alumni response. Who pays the 30 smackers? When does the Alumni arise to the occasion to call for us to "owe" them a game or two?

Where were the buses? Somewhere between the time when Lee Sandwen, then Student Government president, OK'ed transportation for students to Springfield at a meeting with the athletic heads and coach Jack Leaman, communication went completely out of wack.

Why was it called a "home" game? Why did the athletic department have to take, of all teams, Holy Cross and Boston College out of the Cage. If they think that the home court advantage is a myth, they're awful naive. You wonder where student concern lies when something of this nature takes place. Maybe they missed the UMass-B.C. football game when more than 20,000 packed Alumni Stadium. Of course, it had nothing to do with the Eagles. Just like the Cage wouldn't be filled for the Eagles this time.

For the sake of Jack Leaman and his basketball team, not for those who set this "Alumni-get-together" up, maybe there will be transportation come next Wednesday. Maybe the athletic department will defray the costs of student transportation, tickets, one or the other or both. Hopefully as Leaman said in his office yesterday "perhaps the athletic department can set it up so we can have the students at one corner of the Civic Center as was the case at our first trip to the N.I.T."

And for Dick Page, (Sports Information Director) who constantly haranges me with a now boring: "You students always find something wrong, but never have something in its place". And just for the general interest of complex freaks, try this idea on getting the initiative underway:

Why doesn't UMass use its best resources? Why can't Julius Erving, Greg Landry and Milt Morin combine efforts along with Jack Leaman, Dick MacPherson, Jack Canniff and athletic director Frank McInerney and travel to Beacon Hill sometime in the spring and just break the groundwork with the legislature for inquiries into the feasibility and financing of a new center. The speaker of the house of representatives is only David Bartley, who played basketball for UMass in the mid-50's. Perhaps this could get things moving, instead of the almost standstill, at least as far as the public is concerned, tactics of the Boyden Brass.

Top that.

BILLY HARRIS (18) is shown here taking a pass from Pat Keenan against St. Anselm's. Harris scored just an instant later, to give UMass a 3-1 lead. The Minutemen are idle until Saturday night when they head into Boston against another Division I game. This time the opponent is Northeastern, who UMass has beaten twice in the last two years, both in overtime. The Minutemen have yet to beat a Div. I team this season. (MDC Photo by Alan Chapman)

Women Swimmers Second In Meet

By JANIS AHMADJIAN

Vermont is known for its good skiing. Its University is also known for its strong girls' swim team.

The UMass Women's Swim Team traveled for three long hours up to the north country Saturday to place second in a Triangular Swim Meet. Final score stood: UVM 106, UMass 52, Middlebury 48.

Freshman Mary Ellen Dash was lead scorer for the Minutewomen Swimmers placing first in the 200 Individual Medley, 100 Butterfly, and 400 Freestyle.

Second high point scorer was Laurie Seluk who won second places in the 50 Backstroke, 100 Backstroke, and third in the 200 IM.

Both Dash and Seluk grabbed second place in the 200 Medley Relay.

Other high point scorers for UMass were Breaststroker Cathy Abramson, Freestyler Kathe German, Ilene Handler - Breaststroke and Freestyle, and Mary Beth Stanne - Butterfly.

Saturday the team travels to Albany, N.Y., to take part in the Albany Invitational Meet. They're bringing swimmers who have practiced hard and are psyched to win.

Springfield College pays a visit to UMass territory this Tuesday, February 6 at 7:00 p.m. for the first home meet of the semester. They boast a team that sends many of its swimmers to the National each year.

A Day In The Life Of Orr Rink

By MIKE BROPHY

With all the talk going on nowadays about whether or not UMass needs their own rink and a new basketball facility, it is time the students found out exactly what a day at Orr Rink at Amherst College actually consists of.

On weekdays the Amherst High Hockey team opens the activity with daily practice from 6:30 to 7:30. They are forced to use this early time because UMass and Amherst College practice in the afternoon and various other groups rent out the ice in the evenings.

At 8:00 the UMass hockey class comes out on the ice and does not leave until 9:30. This is a Phys. Ed. activity class and there are two sections to the class. One section meets on Monday and Wednesday while the other meets on Tuesday and Thursday. Students are required to pay a $30 lab fee so as to pay for the ice time.

At 10:00 the ice is relegated to the Amherst College Community for use until 2:00. During this time Amherst Phys Ed classes are conducted and free skating is available to students and faculty. At 4:00 in comes Coach McCabe and his team from Amherst which uses their own rink until they surrender it to UMass at six. The JV and varsity teams split up the practice time as they see fit and are off the ice by 7:45 so the next groups can come on. The rink is locked up at approximately 11:00 each night barring a late rental group. According to Amherst Athletic Director Ben McCabe, "The rink could be run all night if we felt it should be. There is a great market for ice in this town."

So you can see that on the average day, UMass uses the facility that does not belong to them for at least three and one-half hours and sometimes four. And that is not even starting to count the games that are held down there on the two levels. Of the operational hours of the rink on a given day, UMass will use about 1/4 of the time available.

During a UMass hockey game thousands come to the rink and yet only two thousand can be allowed inside and of that 600 must remain standing as there are only 1400 seats. It has been estimated at times that up to six thousand students would venture out on a cold night to watch a UM-UVM hockey game.

All of those students could and would be seated if the people of the Commonwealth will wake up and realize the need of such a facility for their state university.

Rams Draft Track Star Milburn

By HUBERT MIZELL
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Rod Milburn, Olympic gold medalist and world record-holder in the 110-meter hurdles, was drafted Wednesday as a pro football player.

The Los Angeles Rams made the Southern La. University speedster their 13th pick as the National Football League draft rumbled into the talent-thin late rounds.

Willie McGee, co-holder of the world 100-yard dash record of 9.1 seconds, had gone earlier--in the fifth round to San Diego--as the NFL clubs began taking some personal gambles.

UCLA's great quarter-mile runner, John Smith, was plucked by the Dallas Cowboys in the 13th round. Houston tabbed quarter-mile flash Edesel Garrison of Southern Cal in the fifth, but he had also starred as a wide receiver for the football Trojans.

"Milburn played high school football," explained Don Klosterman, assistant to the president of the Rams. "He says he wants to try pro football. Anybody with that kind of speed who's also put together physically should have a chance."

Milburn stuck to track at Southern.

Mike Rae, who quarterbacked Southern California to the national collegiate championship, was not high on the pros' lists and went in the eighth round to Oakland.

Two other well-known collegiate quarterbacks, John Hufnagel of Penn State and Eddie McAshan of Georgia Tech, were picked even later. Hufnagel was taken on the 14th round by Denver and McAshan was chosen on the 17th round by New England.

Buffalo gave a black quarterback from Grambling, Jimmy Harris, a chance at the No. 1 job two years ago and he didn't make it. The Bills drafted Matt Reed, a 6-foot-5 black quarterback, from Grambling in the 10th round Wednesday.

Bonnie Sloan, 6-feet-5 and 262 pounds, was a sensational defensive tackle at Austin Peay despite being a deaf mute and he was picked in the 10th round by the St. Louis Cardinals.

Plunkett Goes Under Knife

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — Quarterback Jim Plunkett of the New England Patriots will undergo knee surgery Thursday at Stanford University Hospital, the National Football League club announced Wednesday.

The Patriots said that Plunkett, a former Stanford All-American, had been given permission to have the surgery near his home on the West Coast.

Plunkett, the 1970 Heisman Trophy winner, was a sensation with the Patriots as a rookie in 1971, but was clobbered often as the team fell apart last fall, finishing with a 3-11 record.

UMass Women Gymnasts: (back row, left to right) Anne Vexler, Gail Hannon, Co-Capt. Margie Combs, Gail McCarthy, Alicia Goode, Thanne Poth, and Vicki Dubin. (front row) Co-Capt. Betsy East, Heidi Armstrong, Jeannine Burger, Marion Kulick, and Candy Gross.

Women Gymnasts Set To Open

By MDC STAFF

As they await the start of the upcoming season, members of the Women's Gym team are very optimistic about their chances for Eastern Regional supremacy. Having just completed two successful exhibitions, one in Maine and one in Conn., the team is on its way to proving itself as the most talented ever to wear a UMass leotard. Last season the Minutewomen finished fourth in the US and this season they are seeking a superior performance.

This weekend the team travels to Trenton State (N.J.) for their first encounter. The line-up of competitors for this meet may be termed a "mixed bag." Almost all members of the team will compete in at least one event in an attempt to determine just how ready they are. Coach Virginia Evans will be testing both her rookies and the veterans against a perennial weak Trenton team. The meet will begin at 11:30 a.m. Saturday.

This year the varsity will host only four meets and the junior varsity two. The varsity schedule is:

Feb. 3	Trenton State	Away	11:30
Feb. 10	Penn St. & Clarion	Away	2:00
Feb. 17	Montreal	Home	7:30
Feb. 23	Westchester	Home	7:30
March 3	Springfield	Home	7:30
March 10	Towson State	Home	1:30
March 17	So. Conn.	Away	1:30
March 30-31	Eastern Championships-Temple Univ.

*ALL HOME meets are to be held in Boyden Auxiliary Gym unless stated otherwise in the Collegian.

The junior varsity schedule is:

Feb. 6	Springfield J.V.	Home	7:30
Feb. 14	No. Eastern & Salem	Away	7:00
Feb. 24	Keene State	Away	12:30
Feb. 28	Westfield State	Home	7:00

ALL HOME meets are in Boyden Auxiliary Gym.

The four home meets for the varsity are against the strongest opponents and are a must for any gymnastic enthusiasts. One of the visiting teams is Springfield College, the defending Eastern Regional Champion and National Champion.

Notice

INTRA MURALS

Wrestling and squash entries will be accepted up until 5 p.m. Monday, February 5, in the IM office at 215 Boyden. PROPERLY COMPLETED HEALTH CLEARANCE FORMS ARE REQUIRED OF ALL PARTICIPANTS FOR BOTH ACTIVITIES AND MUST ACCOMPANY ENTRIES.

Lake Placid To Try

NEW YORK (AP)—Lake Placid was unanimously recommended by the officers of the U.S. Olympic Committee to replace Salt Lake City as this country's representative to host the 1976 Winter Games, USOC President Clifford Buck announced Wednesday night.

Buck said the USOC took the action after receiving a telegram Wednesday morning from Lake Placid Mayor Robert J. Peacock stating the New York community wanted the Games.

Salt Lake City had officially withdrawn Tuesday night.

Buck said that he cabled the International Olympic Committee stating that the USOC "certifies Lake Placid's competency to originate and stage the Games," if "the Lake Placid Committee obtains the necessary federal funds."

Lake Placid representatives will appear before the IOC executive committee in Lausanne, Switzerland, to present their case Feb. 3-4.

The Rev. Bernard J. Fell, a Lake Placid booster, said Lake Placid needs a minimum of $5.5 million from the state and $15.5 million from the federal government to host the games.

Women Hoopsters Open With Win

By MDC STAFF

The UMass Women's Varsity and Junior Varsity basketball teams opened their official season Tuesday afternoon at UConn. Both teams came away with a big win; the JV with 44 to 24 on the score board, and the varsity with 56 to 38. High scorer for JV was Terry Pudlo with 10 points, and for varsity, Beth Fay with 18 followed closely by Jen Edminster with 17 points.

Coach Jane Farr expects the next 8 days to be the real test. Games are scheduled with Central Connecticut today, Southern Connecticut Saturday, Northeastern Monday, and Springfield on Thursday. Three out of the four games will prove to be the toughest contests all season. With 3 wins in this stretch, the UMass team will be on its way to the Northeast Regional tournament and success here would bring the team to the Nationals.

Looking back, Coach Farr says that this year's squad has a much better attitude than last years, "They have more confidence in themselves...more speed." She says that the team is more mature this year in that over half the squad played on the varsity last year, and that experience will be valuable, especially in the close games.

In regard to Tuesday's season opener, Miss Farr gave credit to Beth Fay, besides being high scorer, "Beth played a good overall game. Her outside shot was on target when we needed it and she led the fast break very effectively. Pat Glispin and Jen Edminster did a nice job on rebounding. In the JV game, Ann Foley did an excellent job, Terry Pudlo's outside shooting gave us the lead during the first half. The defense on the whole was good, forcing a lot of turnovers."

This afternoon's game against Central Connecticut will be played at home with the varsity starting at 4:30 and the JV following. Coach Farr says that Central's team likes to press. "They aren't too tall, but they have some outside shooters that we'll have to watch."

The team roster is as follows: Varsity - Co-captains Beth Fay and Marilyn Ritz. Jeannie Abrahamson, Donna Cowdry, Charlene Crowly, Jen Edminster, Pat Glispin, Pat Mello, Mitch Miller, Chris Molonea, Vicki Pagel, Joanne Smith, and Sharon Underhill. JV - Sue McNamara, Captain, Gail Barnes, Margaret Brown, Gretchen Buttenhus, Debbie Daniels, Kathie Dowd, Mary Dowling, Ann Foley, Karen Fruzzetti, Lorraine Harvey, Joan Kissell, Micky Locke, Patti McLear, Terry Pudlo, Mary Shea, Debi Stoll, Carol Sullivan, and Pat Wietecha.

Hoopsters At Home

By FRANK ANTOSIEWICZ

Snow, freezing temperatures and now Black Bears from Maine invade Amherst. This time though the "home game" is at the friendly confines of the Cage, rather than twenty miles down the beaten path.

Providence, Syracuse and Holy Cross have already been played and now it is back to Yankee Conference action. UMass stands at 2-2 in the Conference and cannot afford another Yan Con loss, as they already trail the 4-0 Uconn Huskies and 3-1 Boston University Terriers.

The rare Thursday game will feature the leading scorer in New England in the person of Peter Gavett who happens to be the only Senior on the Black Bear squad and is averaging over 25 points per game, along with 10 rebounds.

6'7 Gavett has been combining with 6'6 Freshman Bob Warner (16 points, 13 rebounds) in leading the Orono gang to a respectable 7-4 (3-3 YanCon) record. Victims include Rhode Island (76-69), Vermont (72-67), and New Hampshire (70-65), while conquerors include Rhody (86-64), BU (78-70), Bates (54-53) and Vermont (73-64).

Other starters are 6'7 freshman Steve Conley (i pts. 6 rebs) along with two small guards who are not known for their shooting ability. 5'9 John Morrison and 5'11 Tony Hamlin will concentrate on feeding the big men.

Though the team on paper should be no match for the Minutemen, the Black Bears are a young, aggressive team which will not be fat from hibernation and will be up for a Yankee Conference foe.

The Minutemen will once again be led by the 6'4 leaper from West Hampstead, NY, Al Skinner, who at forward is now making it a habit to average double figures in both rebounds and points each game. The stats for Skinner now read 14.6 pts. and 9.6 rebounds (not bad for a former guard). Defensively, Skinner is also shining as a board sweeper and pass snatcher.

Yesterday's sports head, Tom Austin finally is breaking into the starting five. The 6'9 senior, known more for his relief appearances, notched 18 markers in his initial start to start the crowd mumbling (Where was he when . . .?).

Finishing the frontcourt, is 6'7 bruiser Charley Peters. The senior from Topsfield has been starting most of the season and receives very little credit for his performances. Peters is the man seen sliding across the floor after a loose ball or elbowing his way underneath for that tough rebound. Let it suffice to say that Charlie hustles his way up and down the floor, even though it means being in the corner of the refs eye and usually being the first to foul out.

In the backcourt will probably be the duo of Rick Pitino, who has the distinction of being the only starter to not score in the last two games and Bill Endicott, the man counted on to shoot over the zone defense. To compensate for his non scoring, Pitino has been the ball handler looking for the open man with the easy shot. He has been content to increase the scoring percentage of his mates.

Gametime at the Cage is 8:00 for the 8-6 Minutemen, while the prelim begins at 6:00. The opponent for the J-Vs will be Rockwood Academy, former home of Michigan's Henry Wilmore.

Bill Ballou 'Good Scouts'

The first paragraph of the most recent Springfield Kings press release reads like this:

"The management and players of the Springfield Kings Hockey Club are proud to announce that they have made plans to join in the celebration of National Scouting Week–the first full week of February."

It goes on to explain that the Kings are holding two "Scout Nights" in which scouts can get in at half-price.

Well, Thank You Kings.

I congratulate you on your scouting spirit and I think it's just wonderful the way you've held so many promotions this year where so many people could get in at a reduced price. Why, you've had every "night" imaginable. The only thing missing has been "Stitches night".

But I wonder, Kings, why you have suddenly become such big brothers to Springfield Hockey fans. I wonder why this is the first year you've gone in big for such promotions. Could it be that this is your first year in the new Civic Center and you're not drawing for beans? It seems that in the old Coliseum, when you used to sell out the majority of your games, promotions were few and far between. Was your conscience bothering you, or could it have been your pocketbook?

The Kings aren't the only culprits though. In pro sports the darker the black in, the less "civic-minded" a club gets. Oh, they're all great at hitting you with these great promotions when there are empty seats, but as the empty seats disappear, so do the reduced price tickets.

I suppose it's all part of a grand scheme dreamed up by PR men and business managers to get people to come and watch a plastic imitation of sport while they grab you by the jugular vein and just wait till the day when quality returns and they can drain you of your financial blood.

Now Jim Slattery, the Kings PR man, is not to blame, nor is any PR man. They've got jobs to do and the way he's been turning out promotions, Slattery's been working overtime. But how about letting the Boy Scouts see a winner? How about letting youth hockey programs in to see someone worth imitating, instead of the Podunk Pirates?

How about the Bruins? Any promotions? Not a chance. The Patriots, as bas as they are? Nope, they're sold out, too. The Celts? You bet. They always have done a good job in the promotion field while presenting a team that's a pleasure to watch almost every time they play. But not even the Celts can bring themselves to having "NBA Guide Night" when someone like the Knicks are in. Of course, the Celts don't sell out except when the Knicks, Bucks, Lakers, etc., are in.

The Red Sox are the best of anyone in Boston about promotions. They've always got plenty of good ones and they're not shy about letting someone in to see a top-notch team. Even at their regular prices the Sox are the best sports buy in town. It's no wonder that the BoSox are consistently near the top of the American League attendance standings. Of course, the Sox don't sell out every night either.

As long as pro sports is a business it'll be run like a department store with come-ons to get people in while press releases extol the virtues of the enlightened management that dreams up these schemes.

It is, however, sad that they can commend the Boy Scouts one year when they're averaging 3000 and forget about them when they're averaging 7500. Maybe the Boy Scouts are to blame.

Maybe some night someone like the NHL will have "Fan's Night". What they'll do is take all the players in the league, reduce them to just six teams, and charge the same prices as they did when the NHL was only a six-team league. One problem though, you'll have to hold a lottery to see who gets the tickets.

Daily Collegian

SPORTS

Metallo Drafted

UMass running back Paul Metallo was drafted yesterday in the second day of the NFL college draft by the Kansas City Chiefs.

Metallo, a native of Pittsfield, was chosen on the 13th round. The Collegian will have more details tomorrow.

New England's Largest College Daily

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

Weather

It's been a dark and stormy night, and it's not quite over, yet.

Recyclable

VOLUME C, ISSUE 74 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 1973

Low Budget Forces Swingshift Chop

Brrr...cold, oh, so very cold. Immense drifts of snow challenge even the hardiest of winter wayfarers. And have you tried to look across to the other side? Clear, sharp, well-defined images have blurred. Oh, to be home...to enjoy the warmth of the glowing fireplace...to enjoy the solitude of winter. (MDC Photo by Alan Chapman)

By BRIAN COYNE

Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs, Robert W. Gage, said yesterday that the swing-shift program for freshmen was being discontinued this year for "budgetary reasons".

Dr. Gage said that the shortening of the summer session to six weeks would have left the swing-shift students with enough time to complete only two courses and would, therefore, have placed them at an unfair disadvantage. Also, he said, it would be economically unsound for the students since they would have to pay the same amount to take two courses as they would to take four.

Session Lasted 12 Weeks

In recent years when the summer session lasted twelve weeks, the students were able to take four courses and return to school in Feburary only three credits behind the other freshmen.

The swing-shift program was instituted four years ago in an effort to offset the usual attrition rate of first semester freshmen.

Students who had the credentials for acceptance but were not admitted for lack of space would attend the summer session, return home for the fall semester and reenter the University for the spring semester to take the place of freshmen who dropped out. The number of students in the program each year was about three hundred.

Budget Cuts Force Elimination

The University budget cuts last year forced the elimination of six weeks from the summer schedule. The University could not afford to remain open for the full twelve-week summer session.

Although the number of swing-shift students contained a slightly higher percentage of marginal students, their performance level, according to Gage, was equal to that of the freshmen entering in September.

Size Stays Same

The size of the freshmen class will remain at the figure 3600. However, the number of applications for admittance has gone down, resulting in a freshmen class that will be "less selective" than in previous years, Gage said.

He added that the decision to cancel the program was made jointly by Vice-Chancellors Gage, Thomas B. Campion and Robert L. Gluckstern.

He also said that the University would continue to accept students as transfers and on a deferred admission basis. This means that students will simply enter the University for spring semester a half-year behind schedule.

Reinstatement Possible

The swing-shift program could be reinstated, Dr. Gage said, if the monetary resources for lengthening the summer session are made available and if enough people indicate a willingness to go to school during the summer.

Last summer, after planning for 2500 students to be admitted to the session, a total of 3300 attended. These included 700 swing-shift freshmen. The session lasted eight weeks.

The average credit load last summer was three courses.

Dr. Gage (file photo) yesterday announced that the swing-shift program will be discontinued this year due to lack of funds in the budget. The freshman class size will remain at 3600, he said.

On The Inside:

•Collins Lauds Shield Bill — see page two

•Free Buses To BC Game — see page three •Pollution Curbs Strengthened — see page four

•W. Germans Debate Sex Laws — see page five

•Gasoline Shortage Predicted — see page six

Representative James Collins, D-Amherst, will hold office hours for University of Massachusetts students this morning in room 801 of the Campus Center from 9 to 11. (MDC Photo by Steve Schuster)

Collins Lauds Shield Bill

By MARK VOGLER

State Rep. James Collins, D-2nd Hampshire District, says that he considers the bill he filed last month regarding reporter's privileges and protection of news sources to be one of the strongest shield bills currently awaiting action in the state legislature.

Collins and the American Liberties Civil Liberties Union are co-signers to a bill, which if enacted, will allow the press to keep their news sources confidential on the state level.

"In order to keep government honest and make sure that people know what's going on in the government—and that their interests remain important, it is essential that we have a strong and free press," Collins said.

"Therefore, I've initiated legislation so that news can't be covered up in public view . . . such as murder, armed robbery, and other similar crimes . .. but in general terms, so a newsman can accurately present what is happening."

Collins said he believes that the bill is in the best interests of the public since "it won't discourage people from soliciting vital information to reporters for fear of being identified." Since the reporter would also be protected, Collins said he could better serve the public.

Commenting on the present way the Department of Justice and executive agencies are treating the newspapers and other media, Collins said it was an attempt to "silence criticism and will as a result, if not counteracted on the state level, destroy free press which is a safeguard of other basic freedoms."

"The present situation of newsmen is a very serious threat to our country," the representative stated.

The bill Collins has filed is an amendment to Massachusetts General Law chapter 233, inserted after section 201 and provides as follows:

"Section 20J (1) Except as provided in subsection (2) no person engaged in the activity or who performs the function of collecting, writing or editing news for publication shall be adjudged in contempt by any court or other body having contempt powers for refusing or failing to disclose the source of any news coming into possession in the course of such activity or function or the content of any such news which has not been published.

"(2) The privilege conferred by subsection (1) shall not apply with respect to the content of any news if the court or other body having contempt powers finds that the official body or agency seeking disclosure has demonstrated: (a) probable cause to believe that the person has information which is clearly relevant to a specific probable violation of any of the felonies set forth in subsection (4), and (b) that the information sought cannot be obtained by alternative means.

"(3) As used in this section the following terms shall have the following meanings:

"News" shall mean written, oral or pictoral information or communication concerning local, national or worldwide events or other matters of public concern or public interest or effecting the public welfare.

"Person" shall mean natural person, corporation, trust or unincorporated association.

"(4) The felonies referred to in subsection (2) shall be limited to murder, manslaughter, arson, forcible rape, kidnapping, robbery, burglary, assault and battery to commit murder, to collect a loan, or with a dangerous weapon, extortion, bribery, or perjury."

Bromery Pledges UMass Help For Handicapped

At a meeting in Boston Wednesday of the Board of Trustees, Chancellor Randolph W. Bromery announced that UMass is developing a program to help handicapped persons—particularly disabled Vietnam veterans—take full advantage of educational opportunities on the Amherst campus.

Dr. Bromery said, "Although some parts of the program are still in the planning stages, we want to go on record with a commitment to the handicapped in the Commonwealth. We want the disabled Vietnam veterans and other handicapped to consider this campus when making college plans."

The program for the handicapped is being developed by a committee representing several cooperating UMass-Amherst departments: the University Health Service, the Office of Admissions, the Physical Plant Department, and the Office of Veterans Affairs. Marc Gelinas of Health Services is the new committee head replacing Michael Cann, of Health Services, presently on sabbatical leave. The committee is under the overall direction of Dr. Robert W. Gage, Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs.

The two essential parts of the program—developing academic and counseling support services for the handicapped; and removing physical barriers for handicapped to gain mobility on the campus—have begun and will continue to be expanded.

The academic and counseling support services will include: a special tutoring program through the Office of Veterans Affairs; counseling by Mrs. Judith Sharpe, R.N., University Health Services; special scheduling where necessary; and the cooperation of off-campus agencies that work with the handicapped such as Massachusetts Rehabilitation Commission, Massachusetts Commission for the Blind, and Massachusetts Commission for the Deaf.

The initial stages of academic services planning undertaken by Art Shelley, student coordinator for veterans affairs, include developing means to identify potential students among the handicapped (particularly disabled Vietnam veterans). Mr. Shelley may be contacted at 239 Whitmore Administration Building, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Mass. 01002, telephone: 645-0803.

Mrs. Judith Sharpe, R.N., of Health Services, has volunteered to give counseling to the handicapped. Handicapped students often have special needs in the areas of mobility, accessibility of classes and dormitories, class scheduling and nutrition. They may also require special counseling and support in their contacts with off-campus agencies on whose assistance they depend.

The removal of the physical barriers on the UMass-Amherst campus has been underway since 1967. Today all but a few major academic buildings and residences can accommodate handicapped persons. Through modifications in existing buildings and design changes in new ones, the handicapped now have access to most of the campus. Outside, special parking areas have been provided and ramps have been built at most of the curb barriers.

Leaders in the effort for the handicapped at UMass-Amherst have been Miss Marie Desmond, student, staff member, and cerebral palsy victim; and Mr. William Lambert, University landscape architect. Miss Desmond has compiled a directory of all physical hazards and helps to the handicapped such as which buildings are accessible to wheelchairs, which have elevators, and the location of adapted lavatories. Mr. Lambert has been vital in the removal of physical barriers through work with the Physical Plant Department.

Collegian Election Recesses

By MDC Staff

Stephen G. Tripoli was elected the new Editor-in-Chief of the Collegian last night in an election that was recessed for lack of a quorum after more than four hours, with three positions still undecided.

Robert L. Scheier was elected Managing Editor, and Gilbert Fullerton was elected Business Manager of the paper by the over 80 staff members attending.

Left undecided until the resumption of the election Monday night were the posts of News Editor, Executive Editor, and Sports Editor. The new editors begin their duties with the Monday election of the paper.

Still in the running for Executive (editorial) Editor after two ballots were Jerry Lazar and Earle Barroll. Candidates for news editor are Mark Vogler, Cindy Gonet, Hugh Owen, but nominations are expected from the floor.

Running for sports editor are Marty Kelly and Stephen Crowe.

Tripoli defeated three other candidates—Scheier, William C. Ballou, and Donald Glickstein. Candidates for the top position proposed making the paper more open to Third World (black, Spanish-speaking, and Chicano) people and women, and to various production changes.

The elections were recessed after 11 p.m. when not enough staff members were present to constitute a quorum.

LBJ On Racial Problems

NEW YORK (AP)—In his last interview, former President Lyndon B. Johnson said that America's racial problem can't be solved unless people acknowledge that whites and blacks are still not treated equally.

"One stands in an elevated position with all the advantages this country gives him and the other stands down in the rut, neglected and overlooked, and enjoyed second-rate facilities and housing, and jobs, and schools and health, and everything else, during our entire governmental existence," Johnson said.

Student Internship Applications

Applications are now available for the Internship in Student Development. The goal of this program is to offer a group of upperclass men the opportunity to take part in a unique learning experience. The selected interns will play a major role in facilitating and developing the Psych. 190 course, for the academic year 1973-74. The internship focus is on the freshmen class. Applications and internship descriptions are available in area dorms, at heads-of-residence, or may be picked up at the Counseling Center, room 243 Whitmore Building. Applications are due February 9, 1973. (Date subject to change.)

Correction

THE COLLEGIAN wishes to correct an error which appeared on page two of Wednesday's edition in a story entitled, "Appeals Delay Tow Contract". A three dollar filing fee for a zoning appeal request was reported as not paid. In fact, the fee has been paid, but the proper notation was missing from the request on file at the Town Clerk's office. The COLLEGIAN regrets this error.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

The office of the DAILY COLLEGIAN is on the second floor of the Student Union on the campus of the University of Massachusetts, zip code 01002. Telephones: 545-2550 (news); 545-0344 (sports); 545-0731 (business).

Second-class postage PP paid in Amherst. THE DAILY COLLEGIAN publishes Monday through Friday during the academic year, except during vacation, exam periods or holidays. Accepted for mailing under the authority of an act of March 6, 1879; as amended by an act of June 11, 1943. Subscription rates are $6.00 per semester or $10.00 per year.

HELP WANTED
Student Chambermaids
to work Mon., Wed., Fri. or Tues., and Thurs., plus alt. weekends. Shifts are 9-1, 1-5, 9-5. Must work min. of 8 hrs. per week. Apply in C.C., Room 819.

Jolly Bull
Rte. 9, Hadley
584-2769

SCI week
SIMS 5th - 9th

ERIC'S
GIANT SUBS
(formerly Gourmet Shop)
featuring
"Meal Size Subs"
Rte. 9, Amherst
253-9521

'Homemaker Of Tomorrow' Wears Pants Of The Family

SUTTON, N.H. (AP) — Another bastion of female chauvinism has fallen.

The 1973 Betty Crocker Homemaker of Tomorrow at Kearsarge Regional High School here is also the second-best rebounder on the school's basketball team.

James L. Foley, of New London, a 6-foot, 4-inch, 200-pound senior, won the award and has qualified for state and national honors in the first year the contest has been open to males.

Foley, 18, scored highest in a written examination on knowledge and attitude taken by about 20 seniors at the school last December.

Three of the contestants were male, he said.

"I took it sort of as a joke," Foley said, "although I've always been interested in cooking."

He is enrolled in a gourmet cooking class in the school's Home Economics Department.

The test contained questions on marriage and child relations, in addition to cooking, he said.

In addition to playing basketball, Foley belongs to the school chess club, the curriculum committee and the track team. He throws the shot-put and javelin for track.

He's even been named to Who's Who in American High Schools for the past two years.

Foley said his favorite dishes are French pepper steak and a French vegetable dish called ratatouille.

If he wins the state award in New Hampshire, he will receive a $1,500 college scholarship, and become eligible for a $5,000 scholarship awarded to the winner of the national contest in April.

Asked if it was worth the heckling from his classmates, Foley commented:

"I could use the money. I don't care where it comes from."

Free Buses To UMass-BC Game

By FRANK ANTOSIEWICZ

Free buses will be provided, according to Assistant Athletic Director Bob O'Connell, for Wednesday's basketball game at the Springfield Civic Center.

O'Connell said that an agreement had been reached with the Western Mass busline to allow students who have purchased game tickets to have a free ride to and from the Civic Center. He went on to state that the number of buses would be determined by the number of ticket sales and that buying a ticket to the Boston College-UMass game would entitle a student to receive the ride free upon presentation of the ticket to the bus driver.

Starting at 6:00, the buses will leave for the Civic Center as soon as they are filled. Times, as well as places, of departure will be announced early next week in an ad in the Collegian. O'Connell said that he was assured by the busline that "10-20 buses would be no problem."

The late departure times, he said, were due to the "dealing with the problem of general exodus (commuters and staff) from campus."

Student tickets sell for $1, $2 and $3 and will allow the free ride to and from the Civic Center.

In regard to the two upcoming UMass hockey games in Springfield, O'Connell said, "I see no reason why this same arrangement cannot be worked out for the hockey games."

Basketball Coach Jack Leaman was pleased to hear about the buses. He said, "I'm all for that. I hope we have a large number of students along with the pep band. If we get the older crowd again, we should get 7,000 and that is what we are gunning for."

The lack of student attendance at the Holy Cross game was cited by both O'Connell and Leaman as being not in the team's interest and both were optimistic that the free buses would draw more students.

ATTENTION

ALL Collegian staffers—
Due to a constitutional question, the elections for the new Board of Editors were not completed.

The positions of Executive Editor, Sports Editor, and News Editor are not yet filled.

The elections will be completed Monday night at 7:00 pm in the Collegian office.

IT IS IMPORTANT THAT YOU ATTEND

Kissinger Wants 'Move Toward Peace'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Presidential adviser Henry A. Kissinger said Thursday the chances for a lasting Vietnam peace depend on the attitudes of China and the Soviet Union as well as the Vietnamese people.

"All countries, including ourselves, have to ask" what is at stake in deciding their policy in Vietnam, Kissinger said, adding there is no agreement with Moscow and Peking but he expects the two big Communist powers to be restrained.

Kissinger was interviewed in his White House office by CBS diplomatic correspondent Marvin Kalb in his first full-scale question-and-answer session with a single American broadcast reporter.

The biggest task to be accomplished now in Vietnam, Kissinger said, "is to move a generation that has known nothing but war toward" peace.

"I don't trust the goodwill" of the Vietnam parties, he said, but added that a variety of conditions indicate a real opportunity for a lasting settlement.

The terms of the agreement "are firm and specific" and couldn't be any tighter, he said. In addition, Kissinger stated, there is no reason to assume Hanoi can accumulate enough arms in the next two or three years to launch a major offensive.

In the meantime, the South Vietnamese have been provided with sufficient equipment to handle any foreseeable violation of the cease-fire.

But in any event, a true end to the fighting "depends in part on the Vietnamese and in part" on outside forces, said Kissinger, who negotiated the Vietnam cease-fire. He said he thinks China and the Soviet Union will act responsibly.

When Kalb asked the presidential adviser about the American commitment to the Saigon government, Kissinger answered that any future military assistance is defined by the terms of the agreement and in relation to the military situation.

As to South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu's statement that he would not ask for reintroduction of American ground troops if fighting broke out, but would expect U.S. air power, Kissinger said: "It is legally correct that we have the right to do so...it depends on the extent of the challenge, the nature of the threat."

But he emphasized it would be unwise for any responsible American official to "provide a checklist" of what the United States might or might not do.

Kalb, who has a relatively close relationship with Kissinger and is writing a book about him, questioned him on the decision to carpet-bomb North Vietnam last December.

Summer In Europe

Thinking of spending the summer in Europe? Maybe you would be interested in the English Department's Oxford Summer Seminar. The application deadline is February 23. Brochures and information can be obtained from the English Office in room 160, Bartlett Hall.

Student Government Conference

All participants of the Student Government Conference scheduled for this Saturday and Sunday (February 3-4) will be receiving their workshop schedules today.

Student Senators will find their schedules in their mailboxes in the Senate office.

The introduction will begin at 1 p.m. on Saturday in the 163 Complex (1st floor) of the Campus Center.

All participants will please keep their workshop schedules with them throughout the entire weekend's activities.

MDC
NEWS HOTLINE
5-2550

Exhibition
Starting Monday C.C. 177

FALL SEMESTER - ISRAEL
Brandeis University/The Jacob Hiatt Institute
Study in Jerusalem/July-December, 1973
(43 students from 22 universities in 1972)
Juniors and Seniors eligible
Four courses/Hebrew not required/Earn 16 credits
Cost: $1850/tuition, room, board
Financial Aid available
Application deadline March 1st
For information write:
The Jacob Hiatt Institute
Brandeis University
Waltham, Massachusetts 02154

NOTICE!
TO
COMMUTERS & NON-BOARD PLAN HOLDERS
The University Food Services Department is now offering three Five Meal Ticket Plans.
#1 5 Meal Breakfast Ticket @ $4.50
#2 5 Meal Lunch Ticket @ $6.72
#3 5 Meal Dinner Ticket @ $9.25
These time and money-saving plans may be redeemed at any time during the semester at any dining commons on Campus
Now available at the Main Office of Worcester Dining Commons

In The Nation And The World

Viet Peace Commissions Crank Up

SAIGON (AP)—Fighting ebbed across South Vietnam Thursday amid glimmers of hope that peacekeeping commissions were finally on their way toward policing the frail cease-fire.

Another 70 North Vietnamese delegates to the four-party Joint Military Commission were to arrive in Saigon during the next few days. Sunday was reported as the target date for the Communist representatives to be deployed to seven regional field headquarters.

The timetable for the start of field operations by the Joint Military Commission hinges on agreement among its four members, the United States, North and South Vietnam and the Viet Cong. American commission members are in place, drawn for the most part from U.S. advisory teams already operating in the region.

Bogged Down

The commission itself has been bogged down by diplomatic haggling and charges of cease-fire violations and has been meeting only at the deputy chief level.

But the way was cleared for the first meeting of the four chief delegates with Thursday's arrival in Saigon of Lt. Gen. Tran Van Tra, the head of the Viet Cong delegation.

U.S. helicopter crewmen picked up the Viet Cong general and 28 other delegates in the Communist district stronghold of Loc Ninh, near the Cambodian border 75 miles north of Saigon. Tra's return to Saigon came five years almost to the day after he led the 1968 Tet offensive against Saigon. Tra, a 55-year-old Southerner, is deputy military commander of the Communist' Central Office for South Vietnam.

Seven American helicopters marked with white stripes to signify they are supporting the Joint Military Commission returned the Viet Cong delegates to Tan Son Nhut air base under unusually heavy security.

They were housed in Camp Davis, a former U.S. Signal Corps installation on the Tan Son Nhut base.

Tra's absence has prevented the military commission from carrying out its responsibilities, including preparing for prisoner exchanges and assuring the security of the International Commission of Control and Supervision.

The international body, made up of representatives from Canada, Indonesia, Hungary and Poland, says it has been unable to begin field operations because the military commission has not provided the required security and support. The agreement called for international field teams to be operational as of last Tuesday.

The military commission also has responsibility for agreeing on the spots where prisoners will be exchanged and insuring the safety of personnel engaged in the reception of the POWs.

Violations Claimed

The Saigon command claimed that 188 more cease-fire violations by the Communist side in the past 24 hours pushed the total number to 1,134 since the truce officially began at 8 a.m. Sunday.

South Vietnamese military headquarters claimed that 2,777 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong have been killed since the deadline for halt in hostilities. South Vietnamese losses were reported as 491 soldiers killed, 1,977 wounded and 180 missing.

Saigon military spokesmen said Communist-led forces seized 213 hamlets across South Vietnam during a cease-fire land grab but that government troops regained control of 177 of them.

The Communist side, in radio broadcasts, accused the Saigon government of committing hundreds of cease-fire violations.

The U.S. Command closed out its weekly casualty summaries, listing 45,941 American servicemen killed in action in Indochina between Jan. 1, 1961, and the start of the cease-fire Sunday.

In addition, 10,303 American servicemen died from nonhostile causes, 300,635 were wounded on the battlefield and 1,811 were captured or are missing in action, the summary said.

The summary did not include one American who died and five others who were wounded after the truce began. It said four U.S. servicemen were killed in action last week and four were missing or captured, all within the two days immediately preceding the cease-fire.

The South Vietnamese military command did not issue an official weekly casualty summary Thursday for the first time in months. There was no immediate explanation.

Senate Passes Vetoed Bill

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate passed a $593 million rivers and harbors bill Thursday in its first action on a series of bills vetoed by President Nixon last October as too costly.

The bill was sent to the House by a 68 to 14 roll call vote, 13 votes more than the two-thirds needed to override a second veto.

Voting against the bill were 12 Republicans and two Democrats. Final passage last year was unanimous.

The river and harbor bill would authorize future appropriations for 34 flood control, navigation and beach erosion projects.

Chairman Jennings Randolph, D-W. Va., of the Senate Public Works Committee called it the most modest public works omnibus authorization bill since 1948.

In his vote message after Congress adjourned last fall, President Nixon said the measure contained projects never approved by the executive branch, and it also would limit the authority of the president to change criteria for measuring the feasibility of water resource projects.

The President's Water Resources Council had recommended that criteria standards include a factor based on commercial interest rates. This factor could disqualify some marginal projects on the basis of the ratio between costs and benefits.

Court Strengthens Pollution Curbs

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal appeals court has required nationwide compliance with clean-air standards by mid-1975, wiping out the two-year delays previously granted 18 states.

The court allowed for eventual reinstatement of the extensions if carefully justified, but it insisted on "interim measures of control" going at least part way toward the full standards.

That seemed to mean many urban areas would have to impose some transportation controls to reduce smog, while working toward a more complete clean-up.

The decision was won late Wednesday by the Natural Resources Defense Council, a citizen environment group, in a lawsuit against the U.S Environmental Protection Agency.

David Hawkins, NRDC lawyer, said Thursday the threat of transportation controls might spark some public "backlash" against the environment movement; he said he was urging EPA to counteract that tendency with a public education campaign.

An EPA spokesman said the agency was still studying the court order but would probably comply with it, rather than appeal to the Supreme Court.

Under the Clean Air Act of 1970, EPA Administrator William D. Ruckelshaus established nationwide air quality standards to be implemented by the states by May 31, 1975.

On May 31, 1972, Ruckelshaus approved some state plans, but granted two-year extensions for the achievement of parts of the plans of 18 states.

Thirteen of them were among a larger list of states required to submit transportation control plans; the other five had problems controlling air pollution from factories or other stationary sources.

The transportation control plans were due by this coming Feb. 15.

The court order pushed back that submission deadline to April 15; gave Ruckelshaus another two months to approve or disapprove the plans; and provided two more months in which he must promulgate substitute plans for those which are missing or disapproved.

The court also ordered Ruckelshaus to rescind all of the two-year extensions and to require that all plans aim for achieving air quality standards 'in no case later than May 31, 1975."

Ruckelshaus could grant new extensions, the court said, only if:

—The state has submitted a plan for meeting the 1975 deadline.

—The state shows that one or more pollution sources cannot comply with the plan.

—The state has tried alternatives but still cannot meet the deadline.

—Pollution sources which are able to comply are held to the 1975 deadline.

—The state imposes "interim measures of control...as are reasonable under the circumstances" on the sources which cannot fully comply.

In Brief...

House May Change Studded Tire Ban

BOSTON (AP)—The Massachusetts House Thursday gave initial approval to a bill that would allow emergency lifting of the warm-weather ban on use of studded snow tires.

Studded tires are now forbidden between May 1 and Nov. 1. But the bill, filed by House Speaker David M. Bartley, would allow their use during that period if the registrar of motor vehicles finds "premature winter conditions dictate."

Meade Sworn In As DPU Commissioner

BOSTON (AP)—Robert L. Meade of Boston was sworn in Thursday as a commissioner in the Department of Public Utilities.

Lt. Gov. Donald R. Dwight administered the oath of office.

In making the appointment last month, Gov. Francis W. Sargent designated Meade to be chairman of the commission.

Consumer Protection Office in Fall River

BOSTON (AP)—A new branch of the Consumer Protection branch of the attorney general's office was opened in Fall River Thursday by Atty. Gen. Robert H. Quinn.

Quinn previously opened consumer protection branches in New Bedford, Framingham, Lawrence, Roxbury, Hyannis, Springfield and Pittsfield.

Edward J. Krol, chief investigator at the New Bedford office is to train Vista volunteers to man the new office in Fall River.

Carpenter Named MDC Police Superintendent

BOSTON (AP) — The appointment of Laurence J. Carpenter, 49, of Woburn, as superintendent of the Metropolitan District Police has been announced by MDC Commissioner John W. Sears.

Carpenter has been deputy superintendent. He succeeds William J. McCarthy of Malden, who retired last year.

Carpenter is attending the FBI National Academy in Quantico, Va., for a three-month course in police administration.

The MDC has a force of 631 men.

Stennis' Condition 'Guarded'

WASHINGTON (AP)-Sen. John C. Stennis, who was shot twice during a street robbery near his Washington home, was reported showing definite improvement Thursday at Walter Reed Army Medical Center.

Maj. Frank Garland, a spokesman for the hospital, said the 71-year-old Mississippi Democratic senator had been removed from the surgical recovery room and had been taken to a private room in the intensive care suite. Stennis no longer requires the need of a respirator to aid his breathing, Garland said.

Garland said the chairman of the powerful Senate Armed Services Committee is able to speak, is alert and conversant.

"He has had another visit from his son today and met with a member of his office staff," Garland said.

The hospital spokesman said Stennis' vital signs continued to be good but the senator still was listed in very serious condition and the prognosis still was considered guarded.

MEXICAN FOOD
LACOCINA (AT QUICKSILVER)
Tacos, Burritos, Enchiladas,
Tostados, Chalupas, Frijoles
Mexican Combination Dinners — $1.00

I would like to know more about
THE MISS HAMPSHIRE COUNTY SCHOLARSHIP PAGEANT
An Official Miss America Preliminary
Name
Address
City
Telephone
Contact
NORTHAMPTON KIWANIS CLUB
c/o Hotel Northampton
36 King St., Northampton
584-3100

KA-LA
WHEN YOU SHIFT INTO REVERSE?
Two things you can do about it: (1) have it serviced immediately while a minor adjustment can correct it; or (2) put it off until it becomes a serious and expensive problem.
This is the way we've built our business on your confidence in us . . . by helping you avoid major troubles when we can.
United Transmission Exchange Inc.
389 King Street
Northampton, Mass.
584-6790

MAKING PENGUIN EGGS–Enlisted volunteers at a Ft. Lee, Va., training school learn to make penguin eggs as part of their training to become personal aides to Army generals. A penguin egg is made by taking a hard-boiled egg and placing slices of olive on the sides and top. (AP)

Germans Debate Sex Laws

BONN, Germany (AP) — West German lawmakers are debating a package of legal reforms that would liberalize outdated sex laws but crack down on television violence to protect minors.

Provisions of the bill include lowering the permissible age limit for homosexual acts between consenting males from 21 to 18, permitting the now restricted sale of pornography and lifting an outright ban on such activities as wife-swapping.

The government bill, which was referred to a parliamentary committee Thursday after an opening debate in the lower house, reflects considerable changes in moral attitudes since existing sex laws were drafted up to a century ago.

One of the main targets for reform in the bill, which seeks to protect "the freedom of the individual to sexual determination" and "the unhindered sexual development of the young person," is a paragraph in the 1871 panel code banning procuring in any form.

The provision is so widely defined that it can be used to prosecute wife-swappers in their own homes, even though it has not prevented officially outlawed prostitution from flourishing in practice.

The amendment would still permit prosecution of pimps and brothel owners.

Another provision would permit pornography to be published and sold to anyone over 18, with the exception of films and literature dealing with sadism, bestiality and child molesting.

Another proposal aimed mainly at protecting children from exposure to TV violence would punish "glorification" of brutality in communications media with heavy fines or as much as a year's imprisonment.

As in the United States, there has been much controversy in West Germany as to the possible effects on children of gory knifings, shootings and other mayhem which are standard fare in TV shows broadcast here.

Pentagon Chauffeurs Generals, Civilians

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon each workday chauffeurs 52 generals and top civilian assistants from their homes to work, a practice that Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., says should be drastically curtailed.

"I think it's outrageous," said Hamilton. "Far too many officials are being chauffeured around."

Hamilton noted that the State Department provides chauffeurs and autos for only six of its members, none of whom are at the assistant secretary level. The Pentagon, by comparison, drives 22 assistant secretaries from their homes to work and back again.

According to Deputy Asst. Defense Secretary D. O. Cooke, the 52 eligible for the free rides include Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, the former Selective Service head who is now a special assistant to the President for manpower and mobilization; Robert Berry, Army general counsel; and Carl Walske, chairman of the military liaison committee to the Atomic Energy Commission.

The Pentagon Motor Pool operates on a 24-hour basis and has 45 sedans available for official transportation from 7:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., 22 sedans from 4 p.m. to midnight and 11 sedans from midnight to 7:30 a.m., Cooke said in a letter to Hamilton.

In addition, the Army and Air Force maintain a total of 42 helicopters which can be used to transport key personnel, Cooke stated. The primary mission of the helicopters is to evacuate key personnel in the event of an emergency, he added.

Declaring that "other departments don't do it," Hamilton said he hoped the Pentagon would on its own initiative reduce the number of persons eligible for rides from their homes to work.

He said he has written the House Armed Services Committee to complain about the matter. If nothing happens, he said, he would prepare legislation to pare the list.

Drug Abuse Feared For Children Overseas

WASHINGTON (AP)-A conflict has broken out in the State Department over the seriousness of drug abuse by children of American diplomats and other U.S. officials overseas.

The controversy centers on a special mission now in Southeast Asia in connection with drug use by dependents of U.S. officials.

Dr Frank K. Johnson, head of the Drug Abuse Prevention Working Group that was scheduled to arrive Thursday in Indonesia, said his mission was primarily educational-one of research and study.

"There aren't any real problems now," he said. The working group will be checking into the reasons why the situation seems so stable in order to use this experience in the future, he added.

"That's the attitude of somebody with his head in the sand," according to another department official. "There have been increasing reports from all over the world about our kids using drugs."

This source, who asked not to be identified, said some areas of Southeast Asia are particularly troublesome; he mentioned Bangkok where there was a drug-related death in December involving an American dependent.

But "we hear of problems in Europe, too," the official continued, saying that wherever there are enough Americans to have a school there seems to be trouble with drugs.

Ex-Cons Paid Damages

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — A federal judge ordered the head of Virginia's penal system Thursday to pay $21,265 in damages to three former prisoners who, the judge said, were subjected to cruel and unusual punishment at the state penitentiary here.

U.S. District Court Judge Robert R. Merhige, Jr., directed that the damages be paid personally by W.K. Cunningham, director of the state Division of Corrections.

Cunningham said he would appeal but declined further comment on the ruling.

In the ruling, Merhige said Cunningham had personal knowledge of and sometimes promoted through "affirmative action" the unconstitutional mistreatment of the former penitentiary inmates.

The judge said some practices at the penitentiary "were of such a shocking nature that no reasonable man could have believed that they were constitutional."

He cited bread-and-water diets, arbitrary use of tear gas, long periods of solitary confinement, "placing prisoners naked in a hot, roach-infested cell," and "taping, chaining or handcuffing inmates to cell bars."

These practices, Merhige said, "violate the lowest standards of dececeny and are even more odious when it is considered that they were approved and implemented by one of the state's highest officials in charge of rehabilitation."

Merhige awarded the largest damages--$15,303--to Robert J. Landman, who served 10 years of a 16-year term for armed robbery before he was discharged from the penitentiary in 1970.

LeRoy Mason, paroled in 1972 after serving seven years of a 30-year term for armed robbery, was awarded $3,605, and Thomas C. Wansley, Jr., who served 10 years of a life sentence for rape before Merhige ordered his release on bond earlier this month, was awarded $2,357.

Landman, 51, now is a consultant on penal conditions in Washington, and Mason, 33, produces a television show in Richmond. Wansley, 26, is awaiting a decision by the state whether to try him a third time on charges of rape.

The three originally had sued for $750,000, and that suit had led to a 1971 opinion by Merhige directing sweeping prison reform in the state. Among other things, that ruling stressed hearings must be granted inmates before maximum security confinement and called for an end to some of the conditions mentioned in Thursday's decision.

Ex-Communist Guerrilla Fears Viet Cong Squads

CAN THO, Vietnam (AP) — Eight years a prisoner, Dang Van Hai is now free to go home. Fear keeps him locked up–he is afraid that punishment squads from the Viet Cong will kill him. Hai was once a Viet Cong guerrilla.

"I don't know what to do," he says. "I want to go home, but I'm afraid. I'm afraid to leave here."

"Here" is a compound of the government's Chieu Hoi or Open Arms program - aimed for years at wooing men over from the enemy.

Hai is among 50 men here who are eligible for immediate release but who are loathe to leave the compound.

Hai was brought here during the week from Phu Quoc Island Prison for release, along with more than 2,000 other former Viet Cong. By Thursday most had left the Chieu Hoi compound for home.

According to Hai and others still at the compound, scores of former Viet Cong released in the last few days plan to rejoin enemy ranks as soon as they return to their provinces, and harrass those who do not.

Two former Viet Cong in a group of 200 released here Wednesday were beaten, clubbed and stoned by a group of prison mates as they waited for transportation home. They are being treated at a hospital.

Hai, 31, said hard-core Viet Cong planned reprisals against all who allowed themselves to be won over to the government side. He said punishment squads of from 100 to 150 men have been formed under ex-Viet Cong officers and lower-level leaders.

Infirmary
(In An Emergency)
(54) 5-2671

SALE! continues at
WEAR-HOUSE

TODAY YOU MAY SIGN UP — NEXT WEEK
Your Picture Will Be Taken
Senior Portraits
This is not the part of your body which will appear in your portrait - probably.
Details — Sign up for appointment at Index office 2nd floor Student Union.

Alternative Careers for Women
What can we do?
Feb. 5 | 7 p.m.
163 | C.C.
an informal exchange with working women

Your walls are burning and your towers are turning, I gotta leave you here and get down to the sea somehow.

—Jackson Browne

(MDC Photo by Kevin Mack)

Gasoline Shortages Predicted For Summer

WASHINGTON (AP)—An independent oil marketer predicted Thursday that this winter's home fuel shortages will become the gasoline shortages next summer.

John G. Buckley of Boston said while warmer weather may ease the home fuel oil shortage, "it is obvious that at that time there will be another shortage—this time a massive one that will dwarf last summer's."

At the very least, Buckley told the Senate Interior Committee, gas prices will rise because big refiners can't make enough to meet the huge demands of vacationing Americans.

Buckley, chairman of the Fuel oil Committee of the National Oil Jobbers Council, represents independent home fuel oil wholesalers and strings of independent gasoline stations.

Buckley cautioned that if a fresh and sustained cold wave in the East should develop or if one or two major refineries should unexpectedly close "a real crisis could still develop."

He called for a year's extension of the lifting by President Nixon and restrictions on imports of foreign-produced heating oil. The temporary opening to unrestricted oil trade from abroad ends May 1.

Pressed about whether he sees actual gasoline shortages, Buckley said at a minimum independent gas station owners would have trouble staying supplied. Gas prices will rise, significantly, he said.

Committee Chairman Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., said the Nixon administration assured Americans last fall that sufficient heating oil supplies were available.

Court Ruling Can Cut Abortion Cost

BOSTON (AP)—The cost of abortions can be cut in half because the Supreme Court's abortion ruling has eliminated once necessary psychological testing of patients, hospital administrators say.

But in some states, the cost, though lower, will have to be borne by the woman and not her insurance plan.

When the court ruled that abortion during the first three months of pregnancy is strictly a matter between doctor and patient, it eliminated rules in many states that a psychiatrist must be brought in to make sure that the woman is mentally fit for the operation.

Doing away with this red tape, or safeguard, depending on the point of view, drastically cuts down the time needed to prepare a woman for an abortion and reduces it to a quick, simple operation.

But the court ruling also means that many abortions will be performed when they aren't medically essential for a woman's well being, and some Blue Cross-Blue Shield plans say they cannot pay for them.

An abortion during the first three months of pregnancy—when it's easiest—now costs about $300 at Peter Bent Brigham Hospital in Boston.

But by eliminating the psychological testing and keeping operating rooms open on Saturdays, that cost should be reduced to about $150, according to the hospital's director, Dr. William Hassan.

At Boston Hospital for Women, the city's most active abortion facility, officials say the price will be reduced from $350 to $250.

And, according to the director of the women's hospital, James H. Staten, abortion clinics will probably be opening that will perform the operations more cheaply. Cheapest of all, he said, may be abortions performed in physicians' offices.

Staten said his hospital would make no attempt to compete with the prices of clinics and individual doctors.

"The actual abortion procedure is not time consuming," said Staten.

"We can double our capacity by not requiring psychological evaluation and psychological counseling.

"Patients before had to take psychological tests, and the tests had to be scored," Staten said. "Often this took a week, and it tied up a lot of people. Now we are able to cut through that, and it doesn't take nearly as long."

Boston Hospital for Women performed about 1,000 abortions under Massachusetts' restrictive abortion law last year. And it expects to do about 2,000 this year.

Hassan said the psychological testing was intended to "determine whether psycholigically and sociologically the patient was prepared to have an abortion."

An internist and gynecologist might decide that a woman needed an abortion, he said, and the psychiatrist was brought in to serve as "a neutral third party."

Many hospitals employed three-member boards of doctors to authorize abortions.

What relief the patient gets in paying for the abortion will depend on where she lives.

In Massachusetts, for instance, Blue Cross-Blue Shield will pay only for abortions determined by doctors to be medically necessary. Abortion simply as a means of birth control is considered elective surgery and not covered.

"We can't pay for anything that isn't medically necessary," said Fred Chapman, a Blue Cross vice president.

However, the New Hampshire-Vermont Blue Cross-Blue Shield said it would pay for all legal abortions.

Any abortion performed in "an accredited institution and . . . by a licensed physician" is covered, said Dr. Walter Butterick Jr., a Blue Cross vice president.

The Maine Blue Cross-Blue Shield said in Portland that the Supreme Court decision would not affect its policy. The organization has provided and will continue to provide benefits "for all legal operations performed by a duly licensed physician in a duly licensed hospital," it said.

A prepared statement from the service's headquarters also said that if a Maine member eligible for maternity care goes to New York for a legal abortion she will receive benefits.

"Under much more limited circumstances spelled out in the Maine law, certain abortions have been legal in Maine and these too have been covered by Blue Cross and Blue Shield," the statement continued. "This is not a new benefit and we do not expect there will be any change in our policy."

Mass. Taxes Collected

BOSTON (AP)—Massachusetts tax collections through December continued at a record high pace, according to the latest monthly report from the Department of Corporations and Taxation.

The total collected in the first half of the fiscal year was $909 million—$185 million above the figure for the corresponding period in 1971.

Tax yields were higher in all but one category, led by the personal income tax which brought in $427.9 million through December this fiscal year as against $289.4 million for the same six months of the prior year.

Miller's

The Crucible

Bowker

Feb. 2, 3, 4

8:30 p.m.

Sirloin TIPS

How to get good grades... at the supermarket!

When you're buying steak, the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) grade stamp can help tell you what you're getting.

USDA PRIME: The elite in beef. Consistently tender and juicy.

USDA CHOICE: High quality, less fat, lower price. More produced than any other grade ...and Mr. Steak is the country's largest buyer of Choice portion-controlled beef. Loin and rib portions that Mr. Steak uses are especially tender.

USDA GOOD: Thrifty. Acceptable quality, little fat. Lacks juiciness but relatively tender when properly prepared.

USDA STNDRD: Mild in flavor and lacks juiciness.

USDA COMRCL: Commercial. Requires slow cooking with moist heat. Not as tender as higher grades.

USDA UTILITY: Economical but lacks natural tenderness and juiciness. Needs long slow cooking with moist heat.

Mr. Steak earns straight A's in steak quality... by buying only prime and choice meat, aging it without chemicals, cooking it superbly and serving it graciously. Try us today...and go to the head of the class!

261 King Street
NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
584-5958

Fri. & Sat. 'til 10 p.m.
Sun. thru Thurs. 'til 9 p.m.

COCKTAILS SERVED

Mr. Steak
AMERICA'S STEAK EXPERT

Study Cites Drug Agency Rivalry

WASHINGTON (AP) — Roy L. Ash, President Nixon's new budget director, is heading a government task force studying ways to end reported rivalry and lack of coordination among federal agencies that enforce drug-abuse laws.

The task force, established without fanfare, was one of the first projects given Ash after his appointment as chief of the Office of Management and Budget, according to knowledgeable White House sources. It has no deadline for completion of its work.

Charges that federal drug-abuse efforts are beset by lack of coordination and agency rivalry have come from several quarters in recent years.

For example, a private, previously unpublicized study sharply critical of federal drug-abuse programs claims they are marked by "an unusual degree of wasteful duplication, a chronic lack of coordination and a near absence of communication among agencies about related projects."

The 1972 study, commissioned by the American Bar Association and the foundation-supported Drug Abuse Council, was circulated among government officials and others working in the drug-abuse field, but never released to the public. A copy was obtained by The Associated Press.

The study, which the ABA and the council say they have neither "adopted nor endorsed", claims that "friction, confusion and jealousies have arisen" between the Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs in the Justice Department and agents of the Bureau of Customs in the Treasury Department.

Customs and BNDD are the two major narcotics law enforcement agencies.

The recent private study, conducted by 18 law students and a professor, said that despite a presidential directive attempting to define areas of responsibility "greater efforts are needed."

Drug abuse programs would receive $719 million for the fiscal year beginning next July 1, according to the budget President Nixon sent to Congress on Monday. That total is nearly five times higher than the amount budgeted three years ago.

Hope For Laos POWs Fades

WASHINGTON (AP)-North Vietnam gave the United States Thursday the names of seven American servicemen, a civilian pilot and two missionaries-one of them a Canadian-who were listed as captured in Laos.

The new lists left in grave doubt the fate of 308 servicemen and four civilians previously listed by U.S. officials as either prisoners or missing in Laos.

Some veterans of the air war over Laos have said privately they thought as many as 65 to 70 U.S. fliers might have been captured there in nearly nine years of American bombing raids against the Ho Chi Minh trail network.

Pentagon spokesman Jerry W. Friedheim refused to speculate on whether the North Vietnamese and their Pathet Lao allies might be deliberately holding back more names because U.S. warplanes have continued to bomb the trail and other targets in Laos after the Vietnam cease-fire began last Saturday.

Friedheim said he could not go beyond an official statement that "the U.S. government will continue its efforts to account for all U.S. military personnel who have been carried by the United States as captured and missing."

The seven servicemen's names furnished by the North Vietnamese in Paris after five days of U.S. prodding are: Lt. Col. Walter M. Stischer, Maj. Edward W. Leonard Jr., Maj. Norbert A. Gotner, Capt. Stephen G. Long, Capt. Jack M. Butcher and Capt. Charles F. Riess, all in the Air Force, and Navy Lt. Henry J. Bedinger.

Stischer, Long and Bedinger previously were carried as prisoners and the other four as missing in action, the Pentagon said.

The State Department identified the civilians listed as Ernest Cary Brace, 41, captured May 21, 1965; Samuel Allen Mattix and Lloyd Dudley Oppel, both 20, and both captured last Oct. 28.

Brace was said to be a civilian pilot employed by Bird & Son, a charter airline that operated under U.S. government contract.

Mattix, of Centralia, Wash., and Oppel, of Courtenay, B.C., were working for the Christian Missions in Many Lands in the little town of Kengkok in southern Laos. Communist-led troops entered the undefended town at dawn and took the two young men away. Two American missionary women were killed, and nine others working for the mission narrowly escaped.

Television Tonight

5:00 JIM AND TAMMY (18)
MISTER ROGERS NEIGHBORHOOD (24) (57)
SUPERMAN (27)
THE BEVERLY HILLBILLIES (30)
GOMER PYLE (40)
5:30 HOGANS HEROES (22) (30)
THE ELECTRIC COMPANY (24) (57)
GOMER PYLE (27)
NEWSBEAT NEWS (40)
5:55 WHAT'S HAPPENING (3)
6:00 NEWS, WEATHER, SPORTS (3)
12 O'CLOCK HIGH (18)
BIG NEWS 90 (22)
HODGEPODGE LODGE (24) (57)
PETTICOAT JUNCTION (27)
TO TELL THE TRUTH (30)
WILD WILD WEST (40)
6:30 CBS EVENING NEWS (3)
WORLD PRESS (24)
NBC NIGHTLY NEWS (22) (30)
THE EARLY SHOW "Plainsman and The Lady" (27)
ELLIOT NORTON REVIEWS (57)
6:55 NEWSBEAT NEWS WITH JOHN DEGAN (40)
7:00 YOUNG DR. KILDARE (3)
BIG NEWS 90 (22)
FREE FOR ALL (24)
NEWS EARLY REPORT (30)
ABC EVENING NEWS (8) (40)
LOUIS LYONS NEWS AND COMMENT (57)
7:30 WHAT'S HAPPENING (3)
LASSIE "Horsenappers" (8)
LET'S MAKE A DEAL (22)
WALL STREET WEEK (24)
THE HOLLYWOOD SQUARES (30)
NANNY AND THE PROFESSOR (8) (40)
THE REPORTERS (57)
8:00 MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING (3)
THE BRADY BUNCH (8) (40)
PROFESSIONAL RACING (18)
SANFORD AND SON (22) (30)
WASHINGTON WEEK IN REVIEW (24) (57)
8:30 THE PARTRIDGE FAMILY (8) (40)
SPORTS CHALLENGE (18)
THE LITTLE PEOPLE (22) (30)
EYE TO EYE (24)
THRILLER (27)
WALL STREET WEEK (57)
9:00 ROOM 222 (8) (40)
CIRCLE OF FEAR "The Night of the Toad" (22) (30)
THE HEIFETZ CONCERT (24)
EVENING AT THE POPS Ferrante and Teicher (57)
9:30 THE ODD COUPLE (8) (40)
TWILIGHT ZONE (27)
10:00 LOVE AMERICAN STYLE (8) (40)
THE BOBBY DARIN SHOW (22) (30)
THE STATE OF CONNECTICUT (24)
NEWS (27)
MARTIN AGRONSKY EVENING EDITION (57)
10:30 PEYTON PLACE (27)
MASTERPIECE THEATER "Tom Brown School Days" (57)
10:35 MARTIN AGRONSKY EVENING EDITION (24)
11:00 NEWS: WEATHER: SPORTS (3)
ACTION NEWS (8)
NEWS (18)
NEWS, WEATHER, SPORTS (22)
NEWS LATE REPORT (30)
NEWSBEAT NEWS (40)
11:05 JANAKI (24)
11:30 FRIDAY SPECTACULAR "The Story on Page One" (3)
ABC WIDE WORLD OF ENTERTAINMENT (8) (40)
1:00 MIDNIGHT SPECIAL (22) (30)
LOCAL NEWS HEADLINES (8)

Last night in Bowker Auditorium the opening performance of The Crucible, Arthur Miller's drama of a Salem witchcraft trial was successfully given. The presentation is being sponsored by the Roister Doisters and will be performed on Feb. 2, 3, & 4 at 8:30. Admission is $2 or $1.50 with UMass ID and reservations can be made by calling 545-2149 or at the Bowker box office. (Photos by Alan Chapman)

YOU DON'T HAVE TO BE A TEACHER TO JOIN TEACHER CORPS!

— Help children from low-income families get a better education.

— Earn $90.00 a week plus free tuition and teacher certification while completing college or obtaining a Master's degree during a two-year period beginning Summer, 1973.

— Become involved in solving some of the problems of the inner city.

— You must have at least two years of college credit towards a degree from an accredited college, and be an American citizen or hold American citizenship.

Teacher Corps especially seeks qualified applicants who are themselves members of minority or low-income groups. Blacks, Indians, Mexican-Americans and other minorities are encouraged to apply; however, all who wish to work with children from low-income families are needed.

There are Teacher Corps projects thoughout the United States.

For further information, application, and brochure, call (202) 737-7868, or return the coupon below to:

Mrs. Marian V. Coombs, Director
Teacher Corps Howard University
P.O. Box 834
Washington, D.C. 20001

NAME_____
ADDRESS_____
CITY_____ STATE_____ ZIP CODE_____

lectures and seminars Next Week —

OPEN HOUSE
PHI MU DELTA
FRAT/SOR PARK
FRIDAY, FEB. 2
8:00 - ?
6th KEG FREE

REGISTER NOW!
State Conference
on HIGHER EDUCATION
Feb. 9 - 11
at Student Senate Office

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

BOARD OF EDITORS

EDITOR IN CHIEF James E. Gold
MANAGING EDITOR Nathan Gorenstein
BUSINESS MANAGER William L. Manburg
EXECUTIVE EDITOR Stephen G. Tripoli
NEWS EDITOR Donald J. Bishop
SPORTS EDITOR William E. Ballou
PHOTO EDITOR Gib Fullerton
FINE ARTS EDITOR Robert Nesti

ASST. MANAGING EDITOR Steve Fine
ADVERTISING MANAGER Jeanne Bauge
ASST. PHOTO EDITOR Alan Chapman
ASST. SPORTS EDITOR Roy Lyons

TODAY'S STAFF

ISSUE EDITOR Steve Ferrara
EDITORIAL Steve Tripoli
DARKROOM Kevin Mack, Bill Beggs
AD LAYOUT Jeanne Bauge

Undergraduate newspaper of the University of Massachusetts. The Staff is responsible for its content and no faculty members or administrators read it for accuracy or approval prior to publication.

Unsigned editorials represent the view of this paper. They do not necessarily reflect the views of the faculty, administration, or student body as a whole. Signed editorials, columns, reviews, cartoons, and letters represent the personal views of the authors.

The Collegian subscribes to the Associated Press and the Liberation News Service. Publication of their material does not constitute endorsement.

Snow-Basketball

We must all remember the storm of Sunday night and Monday morning. However, we did not think that three and four days later we would have to keep walking through its remnants.

Driving conditions on most campus roads as of last night (before the rain) still included slippery spots of slushy snow a few inches deep. Walking across campus on the packed and hardened snow causes one to risk his or her life, or at least a sprained ankle.

Whereas more freezing rain and snow is expected over this weekend, we call on the road plowers and sidewalk shovelers, who must have had a hard working week, to complete the digout before we get buried again.

***

We understand that the Athletic Department will run free buses to the UMass-Boston College basketball game to be held at the Springfield Civic Center Wednesday. We laud their efforts to try to make their experiment work.

However, if only 3000 are induced to go to Springfield from this campus, and if only two-thirds of them want to take the free bus, then 25-30 buses will be needed. We still can't see how holding games in Springfield during a week of classes benefits the students, who pay a mandatory fee of $30 to support the team. Home games during class weeks should be played in the Cage (unless some other suitable place is built on campus). Student interests should be foremost in Athletic Department planning.

If the Athletic Department wants alumni and taxpayers to have greater access to the team, it should take them on tour of the state during vacation periods. Then big games could be scheduled in Boston, Worcester and Springfield. Thus even greater access to see the Minutemen would be granted than if Springfield Civic Center was overly depended upon.

'THE AIR BAGS SURVIVED... BUT THE DUMMIES DIED'

Reid Fishman

Don't Get Fooled Again

A few years ago, Richard Nixon (otherwise known as "Tricky Dick") released his proposal for the national budget for the upcoming year. Among other things, his suggestions included: (a) the elimination of various committees including one dealing with education, (b) sharp reductions in money going to various projects, among those being farm aid and subsidy programs, and funds to correct water pollution.

These eliminations and reductions seem somewhat ridiculous, but even more ridiculous are some of the alternate plans Mr. Nixon has for the funds. Among those alternate plans, one in particular appears to be the most absurd of all. Our beloved president would like to allocate 34 million dollars to the building of a "laser bomb". This bomb would be more compact and more powerful than even the hydrogen bomb (if you can imagine that).

It appears somewhat peculiar and bewildering that a nation that has just recently concluded a peace agreement would set about the task of building the most powerful bomb in the history of the world. It even seems more peculiar that this same nation, which currently has the power to destroy the world more than ten times, would have the urge to do any more damage. However, this is not so peculiar when one considers who the leader of this nation is.

Mr. Nixon has been saying for years that you don't end domestic problems by throwing money at them. To the contrary, can you end war by throwing bombs at it? If you can, then why don't we allocate all our money to bombs so as to bring about an end to war? If you can't then why don't we stop building bombs and concentrate on ending domestic problems such as hunger, poverty, racism and sexism (four issues that are often tossed around and rarely concentrated on).

If we are to be content with the Nixon budget then we are to bolster warfare and hatred. If we are to go along with Nixon's plans then we are to go along with internal strife. If we are to be complacent about Nixon's policies then we are to be complacent about the very water we drink.

Let's not be content to allow democracy to go down the drain. Let's not be complacent about life itself. Let's not go along with Richard Nixon!

America made a mistake by electing Richard Nixon as its leader. America made a greater mistake by re-electing him. America will make the greatest mistake by following him.

Reid Fishman is an MDC Editorial Columnist.

Bill Manburg

Parting Suggestions

By BILL MANBURG

After serving one year on the Collegian, here are some of my suggestions for the University.

For President Wood, I suggest he get in touch with the Committee to re-elect the President to hire men to bug Governor Sargent's office. I suggest a device that causes bells and lights to go off when University, budget, reorganization and office space is mentioned.

For Chancellor Bromery, business cards and a recorded message, stating for problems contact the vice-chancellors to eliminate bureaucratic red tape. Otherwise no comment.

For Vice-Chancellor Gage, a presceiption book to cure all the problems from the Campus Center and from running student affairs.

For Vice-Chancellor Campion, Jack Anderson's assistant to uncover waste and misuse of funds on the campus, before it appears in the Collegian.

For Provost Gluckstern, a language without the words merit increase, tenure, and classes cancelled.

For students with offices on the eighth floor of the Campus Center, eight story tall students, so they wouldn't have to look down all the time.

For the Student Senate more money, more power and a full-time photographer.

For WMUA a news department and replays of all the sport broadcasts for enshrinement in the broadcasting hall of fame.

For the Athletic Department, a basketball team to play home games in the Cage.

For the Campus Center management, cryptographers from the CIA to send budget messages secretly through the Campus Center Governing Board.

For dieters, a meal ticket good anytime at all dining commons.

For the Collegian more money, more paid positions and a full-time lawyer.

Bill Manburg is outgoing Business Manager of the Collegian.

Bizarre Conduct

By ERIC WALGREN

Let me review the bizarre conduct of the Amherst Board of Selectmen that has led me to make a Federal case out of the 1973 Amherst election pocedures. Upon announcing my candidacy for Selectperson, I found myself staring at a huge hole in the electoral body, namely the student voters equalling some 30% of the Town's registered voters would be on Winter Vacation and generally absent during the town primary election (so-called a "caucus") set for Jan. 19, 1973.

Believing young people to be the heart of my constituency I petitioned the Board of Selectpeople to move the election dates ahead to provde for student voting. Morally they knew they had not a leg to stand on. The members of the Board readily agreed that "We just forgot about the College Calendar when we set the 1973 dates."

In reality they had put the students quite out of their minds. (The Board members are uniformly shy and unresourceful, liberal in word but status quo in deed. As my story unfolds you will feel the modest quality of these public servants.)

The Board knows something about the potency of the young vote already voting in small cities from coast to coast–Berkeley, Ann Arbor and Cambridge. They know something of the Tea Party Platform for radical conservation locally. And they are afraid of a great commotion upon the locomotion of young people out here in the sticks. Already in small town Cotati, Calif. (Sonoma State,) a union of students with townspeople over 55 had voted the middle-aged power structure out of office.

On December 11, 1972 at their regular meeting, the Board was faced squarely with the "gut" righteousness of the full participation by resident student voters in Amherst town elections. But the Board dodged: They relied on a legal memorandum from special town counsel Monsein contending that the Board had no authority to change the dates.

I shot holes in the flimsy memorandum and the Board Hedged: They voted unanimously to change the dates to enfranchise the students "if it was legal to do so." They would seek new counsel.

Special town counsel Dakin (who was town Moderator for years) agreed with my own memorandum which cited state statute and town resolution that the Board had clear legal authority to set and change the election date.

On December 18, at their regular meeting, the Board squirmed: Having exhausted poor excuses by 1:00 A.M., they voted 4 to 1 to change the election dates so enfranchising the students. (justice will prevail!)

During the day of December 19 the Town Manager released to the press a third set of dates, preferred by Daking, also enfranchising the students. But by evening the Board met in emergency session to vote unanimously to re-disenfranchise the momentarily enfranchised students by re-establishing the old election dates. They offered as one excuse that five Town Meeting Members had made travel reservations that would conflict with the new Town Meeting date and so inconvenience them.

For a legal excuse they ventured (on the advise of Dakin) that their new dates were defective because 31 days did not intervene between the primary date and the general election date. The controlling statute in fact specifies that the primary be held "at least 31 days prior to" the general election. This means that only 30 days need to intervene between the two dates. Thus the Board's "technicality" was a pathetic legal error.

The truth was that each Board member publicly acknowledged receiving numerous phone calls from older voters voicing hostility to the student vote. Rather than "knuckling under" to the petitioner Walgren and the students, the Board elected to buckle under peer-constituency pressure.

It all makes perfect sense to the shy amateur politicians comprising the local Board of Selectmen. I emphasize that these people have "white hearts and empty heads." They bear no malice and they harbor no special interest in real estate. The Board, across the board, are simply incapable of doing an innovative righteous act in the face of controversy, however much they may believe in the principle involved.

Eric Walgren is a Guest Columnist.

WHY IT HAPPENED • See Page Thirteen

Poor Richard's

volume two, number fourteen february 2, 1973

Carl Garrett was favored, injured, suspended, reinstated, and traded. In that order.

Part One: Seeds Of Disaster

The Worst Team In Town

by Ed Bryant

Nowhere else in the United States is there a sports media force equal to that of New England. Press secretaries in Kansas City and Anaheim dread the arrival of the Red Sox for a three game series, since almos. forty writers travel with the team. Nor are there many cities in which interest in sports is as great as in New England, where routine sports news frequently can be found on Page One of local newspapers. In an area so enamoured of sports, where high school games fill the Boston Garden, it is no wonder that Boston and New England want that most prestigious team, a National Football League team.

NFL by-laws being what they are, it is impossible for New England to get a new franchise, and thus for a number of years an attempt has been made to make a major league football team out of the New England Patriots. The Patriots were one of the weaker teams in the American Football League in its last years, and in their first year in the NFL compiled the worst record of any team. Obviously changes were in order. John Mazur, who had finished the 1970 season as interim coach, was given a one-year contract to continue as Coach, but General Manager George Sauer was fired, and a new General Manager, Upton Bell, was hired to make the Patriots a major league operation. He was bucking long odds.

Upton Bell seemed to be the man. Only thirty-three years old, he was the youngest GM in football, and he was the scion of one of the First Families of Football. His father had been Commissioner of the National Football League, a legendary figure. Bell had previously been employed finding football players for the Baltimore Colts. In January of 1971, Baltimore was the champion of all football. Hope was everywhere.

The hope doubled in January when the Patriots drafted Heisman Trophy winner Jim Plunkett. Plunkett was going to be a great quarterback, the Bobby Orr in shoulder pads to lead the Patriots out of the wilderness. A new era had begun.

Wheeling and dealing, then dealing again, Bell br[illegible]t 160 players to the team during th[illegible]mer and season of 1971. Among his [illegible]quisitions were Steve Kiner, a linebacker with great potential, Julius Adams, a defensive lineman, and Randy Vataha, a college teammate of Plunkett's who caught fifty-two passes during the season. During

(Continued on P. 12)

Aardvarks

Hands All Empty

It takes less time to publish a newspaper than it does to publish a magazine. Poor Richard's did not appear last Friday because it would have been impossible to have an edition ready on time. Public response to our absence was so underwhelming that the editors were sorely tempted to make it two weeks in a row, but one young and idealistic staffer insisted the students had a right to know what would be happening this weekend. He was quickly garroted, but not before his remark was overheard by too many people. Poor Richard's thus appears, although with four fewer pages than usual. We hope and pray that by next week, our staff will be back on the job en masse, and we can resume more widespread coverage.

The war in VietNam goes on, as it will, but at last the United States has withdrawn its wearisome presence. VietNamese nationalism will soon emerge victorious, and if VietNamese nationalism is also VietNamese communism, at least intelligent capitalists will note that when the people of VietNam began their quest for national sovereignty, Karl Marx was hundreds of years away from birth. VietNam is the subject of a major book reviewed elsewhere in this issue.

Maurice J. Tobin was a protege of James Michael Curley, until it was convenient for Tobin to double-cross The Mayor in the best tradition of Boston Politics. Tobin went on to become Governor, Secretary of Labor, the Mystic River Bridge, and most recently a psychology building at the University of Massachusetts. Mo Tobin was a good politician, but in death he is no match for the equally dead Curley, who had many well-earned friends in the construction business. Curley had his revenge the other night when Tobin Hall went up in flames. Although the investigation will cover it up, the fire was Curley's way of saying thank you to Massachusetts for naming a building after all sorts of crooks but forgetting the most charming rascal of them all, himself.

Bob Orr has found himself the right girl. He became engaged at Christmas. Bob had just this season graduated the position of #1 bachelor on the Bruins, with the marriage of "Ace" "Where Have You Gone' Garnet Bailey and Derek "I've Gone To Philadelphia" Sanderson's defection to the WHA. Orr was reluctant to go back to being #2, and when the rumors started that Sanderson was coming back to Boston, Orr went down to K-K-K-Katy's and married the first girl who bought him a drink.

Whether it's Orr's heart or his knee we don't know, but the Bruins have lately been playing like the Patriots; perhaps the low point came against the New York Islanders, the worst team in the history of hockey. After spotting the Islanders a 5 goal lead, the B's went on to lose it 9-7. Forbes Kennedy is rumored to be shopping for a new stick, and Bob Brick was seen last week after another Bruins loss reading the section in the NHL Rule Book governing the skates worn by goalies. Figure skates are all right, if he can stop the puck. Cheevers didn't have much hair either.

Turning to less serious matters, Richard Nixon danced with the young people at one of his Inaugurals. It was an emotional experience; we found ourselves rooting for Nixon, who is socially awkward, to come off well in his little speech, while loathing to death all those long-haired kids in tuxedos who seemed to be shouting "Four More Proms." Nixon had the saving virtue that night of appearing human in his frailty. The kids, on the other hand, were assholes, quite simply.

Henry Kissinger on the same night won sympathy, for enduring a conversation with Barbara Walters. This newswoman, who herself made news last year for some reason that escapes me, is terrible. She is competent, I suppose, but she is an awful person. The best way to describe her is Jacqueline Suzann with a high school diploma. When a woman replaces Walter Cronkite, I hope to God it is Sarah Ann Shaw or Cassie Mackin, anyone but Barbara Walters. Anyone who can make me like Kissinger has to be something special.

Poor Richard's is going on record that the first air pollution state to take care of its problems will be California, simply because California has the most to gain and the most to lose if it does or doesn't. California must have been beautiful before 1950; what's left of it is still strikingly pretty.

Spring semesters are traditionally harder semesters than those in the fall. We suggest you finish your work for the semester early, or you'll never do it. Later.

Poor Richard's

volume two, number thirteen

Co-edited by Bob Nesti and Ken Sulin

This week's staff:

Faye Halpern, Ed Bryant, Brian Dailey, Howard Bloom, Steve Ferber, Galen Tinder, Steve Smith

Poor Richard's is the weekly magazine of the MDC. Contributions and comments may be delivered to the MDC office

Et Tu?

Who is responsible for our part in Vietnam? The radical politics of the late Sixties blamed the system, the moderates blamed Right-winged paranoia, the conservatives blamed the appeasement policies of the Cold War thaw, and so on. The turbulence in America during the late Sixties was part of the recognition that we were committing heinous crimes against Vietnam and the apathy that followed was part of the realization that the guilt was our own. David Halberstam's book "The Best And The Brightest" places the responsibility back to the golden days of Jack Kennedy and Camelot. Galen Tinder explores this encompassing subject on pages thirteen.

Don Juan Returns

Also, on page fifteen, a review of Carlos Castaneda's newest book, "Journey to Ixtlan." The book departs a bit from his previous efforts in that it explores other realities without the use of the various drugs discussed in in his previous works. The journey reported is one which encompasses both the physical and psychic aspects of travel in the bizarre world of Castaneda's master, don Juan.

And So Does Jean

Film programs are an elusive lot. Ever look at the Five College Calendar on a Tuesday and learn you missed your favorite movie the previous night? We hope to help you with such problems and this week publish a list of films to be shown by different groups on campus this semester. Want to see "Singing' In The Rain," The Damned, All About Eve, The Conformist, The Devils, The Lady Vanished, Way Down East, Meet Me In St. Louis, The Sorrow And The Pity, A Streetcar Named Desire, and The Lady From Shanghai? Or see Jean Harlow, Joan Crawford, Mae Murray, Gene Kelly, Cary Grant, Bette Davis, Katherine Hepburn, Charles Chaplin, Orson Welles, Vanessa Redgrave, Julie Christie, Myrna Loy or Marlene Dietrich on the screen again? Look inside.

The Cease-Fire Accords And Beyond

by Bernard Gwertzman

WASHINGTON—The cease-fire agreement between Hanoi and Washington, which President Nixon has said will "end the war and bring peace with honor in Vietnam and Southeast Asia," will be signed in Paris Saturday and go into effect that evening.

Following is an assessment, in question and answer form, of the agreement and the current situation in Southeast Asia:

Q. What does the agreement add up to?

A. In essence, it provides for a halt in the Vietnam fighting on Saturday, and for the withdrawal of the remaining 23,700-man American force and the release of about 600 American prisoners, both within 60 days. A host of provisions have been agreed upon to carry out these moves and an intricate political machinery has been established to bring about a reconciliation of the Communist and anti-Communist Vietnamese.

Q. What about the prisoners? Does the release of the approximately 600 American prisoners have anything to do with the release of the thousands of political prisoners in South Vietnamese jails?

A. No. the North Vietnamese at one point in the negotiations apparently sought such a linkage, but the final agreement provides for the release of American prisoners over a 60-day period parallel only with the withdrawal of American forces. The release of Vietnamese civilian prisoners will be negotiated between the Vietcong and Saigon over a 90-day period. It is believed, however, that Washington will use its influence on Saigon to release at least some of these prisoners.

Q. Will American civilian workers remain in South Vietnam and how many?

A. Economic advisers and noncombat civilian military technicians may remain, such as aviation mechanics. Some estimates have ranged as high as 5,000 to 10,000 men.

Q. Will the military aspects be carried out as scheduled? That is, will a cease-fire actually go into effect, and will the troops and prisoners come home?

A. All signs suggest that the cease-fire will last at least for a few months and there seems no reason to doubt that the Americans will be leaving South Vietnam.

Q. What about the political provisions? Can the Vietcong and the Saigon Government actually resolve their differences?

A. Leading Washington experts on Vietnam have been debating those questions in recent days. Some believe it is out of the question to expect any reconciliation. Others believe that both sides, at least at first, will make a major show of amity, so that if the truce collapses, the other side will be blamed.

Q. The United States and North Vietnam have been holding negotiations for nearly five years. How did the agreement come about, and why now?

A. Basically, the agreement came about because both Washington and Hanoi decided that more was to be gained from a negotiated settlement than from continuing the war and pressing for demands that were unacceptable to the other side. As a result, both sides made significant concessions, which opened the door to an eventual settlement. In addition, there were other factors, such as recognition of the military stalemate, pressure from other world powers, and a growing fatigue with the war in both countries.

Q. What concessions were made by the two sides?

A. The chief American concession was the decision in October, 1970, by Mr. Nixon to drop the long-standing American demand for the withdrawal of North Vietnamese troops from South Vietnam at the same time American forces were pulled out. Hanoi's chief concession came last October in Paris when Le Duc Tho informed Henry A. Kissinger that North Vietnam was no longer insisting on the creation of a coalition government, including Communists, before a cease-fire in South Vietnam.

Q. What was the significance of those moves?

A. By ending its insistence on a mutual withdrawal of forces, Washington signaled Hanoi that it was willing to accept a settlement in which the Vietcong, protected by North Vietnamese troops, would be able to claim part of South Vietnam for itself. Last October, North Vietnam acknowledged that it would no longer hold out for an agreement in which the future government of South Vietnam would be settled ahead of time in a way favorable to the Communists. In other words, both sides were accepting an accord with no guarantee for the future.

Q. What about other factors, such as the influence of other powers

A. Both Washington and Hanoi were under pressure from other countries to end the Vietnam war. Adminstration officials here believe that both the Soviet Union and China exerted their influence to persuade Hanoi to switch the war from the military to the political field and relax the tensions in the area. Likewise, as the result of the settlement, Washington expects to improve its ties with Peking and Moscow, which had been somewhat strained—particularly in Peking's case—by their support for Hanoi. American relations with some allies had also been damaged by the war and may now be repaired.

Q. Does this mean that Peking and Moscow will now join with Washington in "keeping the peace" in Indochina?

A. Mr. Nixon would certainly like some kind of tacit understanding from the two Communist powers to limit arms shipments into the area, but it is probably too early to tell if this will happen. Neither Moscow nor Peking in the past has wanted to appear to be letting Hanoi down. And North Vietnam undoubtedly will be making requests for military equipment to replenish what was lost in the heavy fighting last year.

Q. Hanoi said the agreement was "a victory" for its side; Mr. Nixon said the accord meets all his goals, and President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam, who publicly opposed an agreement, says it is to his advantage in some respects. Who actually benefits the most from the agreement?

A. The main achievement of the negotiators was in securing an agreement that was ambiguous enough for each side to find grounds to assert that it got what it wanted.

Q. Such as?

A. The agreement provides for example, the recognition of the demilitarized zone, along the border of the two Vietnams, as a temporary dividing line. This satisfies Hanoi's claim that Vietnam should be unified, presumably under Hanoi's direction. But the accord also says that unity can be achieved only by political means, not military, and since Saigon will not agree to unity with Hanoi, the "temporary" demilitarized zone could turn out to be permanent.

Q. But what if a Communist Government took power in saigon and chose unification with Hanoi? Is this possible? What would the United States do?

A. Under agreement, it is theoretically possible for elections to be held and for the Vietcong supporters to ride to power, but since Mr. Thieu's army controls the cities and most other populated areas, the chances that Communists would win an election seem remote. What is more likely is a period of political maneuvering and subversion of established organizations by Vietcong agents, seeking to put in power a "neutralist" group that would be open to Communists takeover. The American view at the moment is that the agreement gives Mr. Thieu and other anti-Communists a good chance of surviving, and if they can't do it, they have no justification for seeking American military intervention.

Q. What about the agreement? Could it have been achieved four years ago, when Mr. Nixon first took office?

A. Not in its present form. At that time, Hanoi was pressing very hard for political concessions that would give it power, in return for the release of American prisoners and an end to the fighting.

Q. Why did Hanoi make its apparent compromise offer in October, which led to the nine-point draft agreement?

A. No one here seems to know with certainty. But the guessing at the White House is that the "dove" faction in the Hanoi Politburo prevailed with the argument that a military stalemate had developed, and that Mr. Nixon would be easy to deal with on the eve of the elections last November.

Q. Why did not the United States actually sign the nine-point draft by Oct. 31?

A. Mr. Kissinger said that certain modifications were needed to remove any possible ambiguities.

Q. Is the agreement that was made public yesterday much different from the October draft?

A. Its basic provisions are the same, but it does contain some alterations that Mr. Kissinger says were "substantially" what he sought in October. Le Duc Tho, Hanoi's negotiator, said that the government was "basically the same" as that reached in October.

Q. Assuming that Mr. Kissinger is accurate, why did it take three months to negotiate only modifications?

A. There are two different interpretations: one from Washington and the other from Hanoi. The United States says that after Mr. Nixon sought modifications, the "hawks" in Hanoi probably suspected a trick and ordered Mr. Tho to delay signing any agreement and to argue strongly against any proposals made by the United States. Hanoi says that Washington, acting for Mr. Thieu, sought language which would have worked to the advantage of Saigon and against the Vietcong.

In any event, with mutual recriminations, the talks broke down on Dec. 13, and Mr. Nixon ordered heavy bombing of Hanoi and Haiphong from Dec. 18 to 29. The talks resumed on Jan. 8 and a settlement was quickly achieved.

Q. This chronology could suggest that the bombing led to Hanoi's virtual capitulation and the quick negotiation of an agreement. Is that, in fact, what has happened?

A. It is hard to tell from the information available. Mr. Kissinger himself declined, at his conference, to draw such a conclusion, but other Administration officials believe that Mr. Nixon's show of strength did convince Hanoi that it would gain nothing by holding out.

What is missing from the story is a detailed analysis of what proposals were on the negotiating table before Dec. 13, when the talks broke down, and when the talks resumed on Jan. 8. It has not been disclosed, for example, if the United States softened its position in January, or otherwise compromised in a way that accelerated an accord.

Q. Are there any policing mechanisms in the agreement to make sure that it is carried out?

A. The accord sets up three commissions, including a 1,160-man force of Canadians, Hungarians, Indonesians and Poles, to observe that the provisions are carried out.

Q. But what happens if violations are found?

A. The violators can be publicly identified, but there are no punitive provisions in the agreement. Obviously, it can only remain in effect so long as it meets the interests of the various parties.

Q. What if, after a while, Hanoi violates the accord and sends men and supplies to the South? Will the war start all over again?

A. It is possible, and Mr. Nixon said this was "a fragile" agreement. The United States, however, is hoping that Saigon will be better able this time to defend itself from the North and will not need to turn to the United States again. Also, there is an expectation that Russia and China will discourage Hanoi from taking such a course of action.

Q. Does Washington have any direct influence on Hanoi as the result of this agreement?

A. At least indirectly, it does. For instance, Hanoi is aware that the United States will maintain air bases in Thailand and naval and air forces off the coast aboard Seventh Fleet ships. In case of an all-out Hanoi attack against South Vietnam, Mr. Nixon might order air attacks against the north.

"Bell Missed A Ten Yard Field Goal..."

(Continued from P. 9)

that season, the Patriots, winners of only two games the previous season, won six, including upset victories over Oakland, Miami, and Baltimore, all perennial playoff teams. Plunkett was named Rookie of the Year. All was well on the playing field.

Off the field, however, things were not so good. Bell had assumed, when he was hired, that he would be allowed to choose his own head coach. This logical assumption did not take into account the meddling of Billy Sullivan, the team's President who got his start in football as PR man for former Boston College and Notre Dame coach Frank Leahy. Sullivan reserved the right to name the coach, and he and his puppet board of directors renamed Mazur, a former Notre Dame quarterback under Leahy, as coach. Upton Bell spent the next ten months denying that he didn't want John Mazur as coach, but the hordes of New England sports writers ignored him and continue to print the truth. Sullivan's meddling made life difficult for both men. Mazur, with his one year contract, had to produce a winner in 1972. Bell, with his job seemingly secure, had to think of the long range while constantly answering charges that he was subverting John Mazur.

In late July, the Patriots came to Amherst. Several promising new players were on hand, including defensive end Jim White, defensive tackle Rich Cash, receiver Tom Reynolds, cornerback Ron Bolton, runningbacks John Tarver and Josh Ashton. Patriot veterans Jim Nance, Ron Sellers, and Mike Taliaferro, all of whom had asked to be traded, were still Patriots when training camp began, although Taliaferro, who had not played at all in 1971, was excused from reporting.

From the beginning, the training camp was full of evidence to the trained eye that things were falling apart. There was trouble between John Mazur, a former Marine, and some of the players who were what is known in football as "free spirits." "Free spirit" is intoned so as to seem twice as condemnatory as hippie or freak, and to be known as a fascist asshole is a lot better idea than being known as a free spirit. Daryl Johnson, a talented cornerback returning from an injury, was such a man. So was Steve Kiner, the talented young linebacker who had been labeled by Upton Bell as "A potential superstar." Both missed practice and were traded away for no return. If Bell objected to Mazur's dicta in these cases he kept it to himself, but hidebound John Mazur, under pressure to produce a winner, gave away two of his best players, replacing them with inexperienced rookies. Carl Garrett, who also had a habit of missing practice, was a personal favorite of Mazur's, as well as one of the most talented players at his position in football. He was not given away.

After a two-four preseason, the Patriots began their regular season in September. The starting offensive line from the previous season was intact, Montler-St. Jean-Morris-Hagen-Neville, with a new tight end, veteran Bob Windsor, who had been obtained from San Francisco. Reggie Rucker, a preseason standout, was at wide receiver along with Randy Vataha, the 1971 sensation. In the backfield behind Plunkett were Carl Garrett and Bob Gladieux. Nance and Sellers, both starters the year before, were gone, Sellers in exchange for Dallas' third draft choice (he had been a #1 himself), and Nance was just gone, having failed to make the Philadelphia Eagles.

Rick Harris nails Joe Namath. Pats were 26th in sacks in 1972.

On defense, the Patriots had a front four of Dennis Wirgoski, Dave Rowe, Julius Adams, and Rich Cash. Surrounding veteran middle linebacker Jim Cheyunski were rookies Ron Kadziel and Dick Blanchard. Behind them were Larry Carwell and rookie Honor Jackson at cornerback, Clarence Scott at strong safety, and veteran Rick Harris at free safety

Their first game opponents were the Cincinnati Bengals, a team which had won seven games the year before. Pats' fans were hoping for a victory, but what they received was something else.

After being completely outplayed for half the game, the Pats Larry Carwell blocked a field goal and went for a touchdown, thus giving the team an undeserved halftime lead of 7-6. Cincinnati had run and passed all over the Patriots, whose defense was weak. Flare passes into the linebacker's zones were good for seven yards each time. Running into the Patriots line was worth five yards a crack.

The Pats continued to play lousy defense in the second half, and the offense, which in the first half had confined itself to simple failure, continued to fail but made mistakes in addition. The final score was 31-7, but it wasn't as close as that.

This atrocious performance was followed by a curious game in which the Patriots played poorly and still won. The Atlanta Falcons dominated the game until they had a 20-7 lead through three quarters. The Pats offense put together two drives for touchdowns, putting them ahead 21-20. If the defense could hold Atlanta out of field goal range, the game would be won. The defense barely managed to keep Atlanta out of the endzone, and with ten seconds left, Bill Bell of Atlanta obligingly missed a ten yard field goal, giving the Pats an undeserved win.

Missed field goals started to seem thematic a week later when the Patriots played their best game of the season. Their opponents, the Washington Redskins, were the second best team in football, but they can't seem to beat AFC Eastern Division Teams. Over a 13-4 season, three of their losses were to Miami, Buffalo, and New England. The two teams played about evenly for most of the game, with the Pats holding a slim 24-21 lead. What followed was a splendid example of just how crazy George Allen is. On a fourth-and-three from the Patriots thirty yard line, Curt Knight attempted a field goal from the 37. It was good, but there was a penalty on the play against the Patriots. Allen chose the first down over the field goal, and the game which had been tied 24-24 was now 24-21 again. For three plays the Patriots stopped the somewhat erractic passing of Bill Kilmer, at which point Knight came back on to try again from the 32. He missed.

All the Patriots had to do was use up some time and the game was won. They couldn't get a first down, and were forced to punt. Standing on the five yard line, Pat Studstill kicked the ball, but it was blocked by two Redskins. The ball bounced behind Studstill, racing through the endzone with the Redskins in hot pursuit. Bill Malinchak fell on the ball inches beyond the endzone. Instead of a touchdown, the Redskins had a safety and 2 points. The Patriots won 24-23, and sported a 2-1 record despite a points for-pointsagainst record of 52-74.

Next week: Apocalypse

OPEN HOUSE

Phi Sigma

358 North Pleasant St.
(corner of Fearing & North Pleasant St.)

Friday, Feb. 2

8 - ?

BEER & MIXED DRINKS

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
ACADEMY OF MUSIC
NORTHAMPTON

NOW — 7:00 & 9:30

"A BRILLIANT FILM-STUNNING!" —Judith Crist, New York

PETER O'TOOLE
ALASTAIR SIM
ARTHUR LOWE

THE RULING CLASS

Monday & Tuesday
BALCONY SEATS $1.

TOP OF THE CAMPUS RESTAURANT

This Friday and Saturday
Eve. 9 - 1 p.m.

PENDRIFT

Dinner from 5:30 - 9:30 p.m.

20% Disc. to U.Mass. Students and their guests.

D. H. LAWRENCE'S

"WOMEN IN LOVE"

with

Alan Bates • Glenda Jackson

SAT., FEB. 3

MAHAR AUDITORIUM

7 - 9:15 - 11:30

directed by Ken Russell

Vietnam

The Chronicle Of A National Tragedy

by Galen Tinder

The Best And The Brightest by David Halberstam, Random House, 1972, 665pg., $10.

The Best and the Brightest is a highly interesting and important book about the men, the attitudes, and the decisions responsible for propelling the United States into the Vietnam war. Halberstam begins his lengthy but very readable account with the Kennedy Administration. It is the cabinet members and advisors with whom Kennedy surrounded himself and who, in the author's eyes, bear the primary responsibility for Vietnam, after whom the book is titled. It is an ironical but not at all facetious title for they were the best and the brightest. They were, by and large, brilliant men. Not profound or particularly wise men, but brilliant ones. Halberstam gives detailed and often fascinating biographical sketches of all these men.

Robert McNamara, Secretary of Defense under Kennedy and then Johnson, was something of an intellectual. He went from Berkeley as an undergraduate to Harvard Business School where his proficiency in accounting control made him an immediate standout. After his graduation he stayed at Harvard to teach accounting until World War II during which he was a statistics control expert for the Air Force. Several years after the war McNamara and six of his collegues went to Ford Motor Company in order to attempt to save it from financial ruin. They were successful and McNamara eventually became president of the company, shortly afterwhich he was tapped by Kennedy. McNamara had a brilliant, computer-like mind which could digest an immense number of seemingly unrelated facts and regurgitate them in the form of a cohesive and unified system. McNamara was, above all, the supreme quantifier, the man who could systemize anything. He had a curiously cold and passionless capacity to concentrate all his energy and drive on whatever he was doing at a particular moment and was, during the early and middle sixties, one of the main architects of the war.

One of the most influential men in Washington during the Kennedy and Johnson years was MacGeorge Bundy, National Assistant to the President for National Security Affairs. Bundy did his preparatory work at Groton after which he went to Yale as an undergraduate and then Harvard as a prestigious Junior Fellow. Shortly after World War II Bundy returned to Harvard to teach in the government department but was soon made Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences. Bundy was the operational man; he could always tell one how to get something done but was not good at judging whether it should be done. Since men naturally tend to try to move the focus of action toward the area in which their strengths lie Bundy would, when it came to Vietnam, always be in favor of doing something, of taking some kind of assertive action.

There were others of course. Dean Rusk, Rhodes Scholar and Secretary of State, Maxwell Taylor, Kennedy's military advisor and the most respected general then in uniform, Walt Rostow, Bundy's influential deputy, and a host of lesser State and Defense department figures.

These were flashing, impressive minds which, when combined in one administration, glittered formadibly and self-confidently and engendered a feeling of anticipation and excitement in the country. The muddled old minds of the previous Republican administration were gone. The country had a young new president who had intellect, style, and courage, and who had surrounded himself with the most awsome array of intellectual might Washington had every seen. These were men who could truly get the country moving again. They were liberal and humanitarian men but not soft ones. No, there was nothing at all soft about John F. Kennedy or the men around him. These were hard-headed realists who knew that there was no problem which would not evaporate when attacked with massive doses of rationality.

At the beginning of the 1960s it seemed impossible for America to move in any direction but forward. It had proven its moral fibre and military might to the world during the war and the Communist witch-hunting of the fifties, while leaving a bad taste in the mouths of many, was in the past, an unfortunate footnote to American history best forgotten as soon as possible. It was, however, more than a mere footnote. McCarthyism would leave its tinge on the sixties, a tinge which, among other factors, would lead the country into Vietnam.

For all its freshness the Kennedy Administration was still enamoured with the cold war policies of the last decade and was a firm believer in the doctrine of containment. Thus when Vietnam began to surface as a problem in the early months of 1961 it was approached from the perspective of archaic policies which had lost their compatability with reality. The Vietcong were regarded as simply one more manifestiation of the efforts of a monolithic Communist conglomerate to take over the world rather than as an essentially local movement, the definitive characteristic of which was its nationalistic fervor and not its Communistic affiliations. It was also believed that the U.S. could cut the North Vietnamese effort at the roots by a limited application of force. When these two erroneous beliefs were added to the assumption that the United States had the right to intervene in the internal affairs of another nation the Kennedy Administration had a political paradigm from which American involvement in Vietnam was a logical consequence.

One of the turning points in the United States' policy in Vietnam came in late 1961 at a time when Kennedy was receiving a good deal of pressure from some of his advisors and the military to step up the level of assistance being given to the South Vietnamese. Kennedy, however, was somewhat more cautious than the men around him, and decided to send a fact-finding group to Vietnam to provide him with an independent assessment of what, if anything, was needed to keep the South Vietnamese on their feet. However by choosing Rostow and Taylor to head the mission Kennedy in effect pre-determined its outcome for the former was a prime believer in the efficacy of military force and the latter had long been an advocate of counterinsurgency. Thus it was no surprise that the Rostow-Taylor report not only called for an increase in U.S. advisory and support personnel but the commitment of 8,000 combat troops and more if necessary.

Because of his own reservations Kennedy approved the increase in advisory and support personnel but held the line on the introduction of combat forces. At the time Kennedy's decision appeared to be a cautious one but in retrospect it can be seen as the crucial first link in a chain of events and decisions which would draw the United States into a war which it could not possibly win. While Kennedy had seemingly denied the military what it wanted, which was more troops, he had in fact, without realizing it, let it get its foot in the door. The highest and most influential U.S. officials in Vietnam would be military men and it would be the military which would control the quantity and quality of information flowing from the jungles and swamps of Southeast Asia to the velvet carpeted corridors of power in Washington D.C. That the only channels through which Vietnamese reality could be communicated to Washington were controlled by the military was of immense importance because the military, like the other cumbersome and unwieldy bureaucratic morrasses supposedly under executive control, has interests of its own which it attempts to further to as large a degree as possible.

The primary interest of the military is that of conducting war and this deeply colored what the U.S. Command in Saigon, led by General Paul Harkins, a man of second-rate intelligence and third-rate expertise on Vietnam, reported to Washington. While the war was going extremely badly, Harkins would report that it was going well, that great progress was being made. While the hopelessly inept South Vietnamese army was being beaten in battle again and again, Harkins would tell Washington that with a little U.S. training and advise, it would easily become a first-rate army. If the military had reported the situation in Vietnam as pessemistically as it deserved to be reported it is very possible that the Kennedy Administration would have balked at escalating the level of aid being given to South Vietnam, because it would have seen in an instant that drastic steps would have to be taken in order to save it from disaster. But as it was, the dishonesty of the military led the Kennedy administration to believe that an unmanagable situation was in fact managable. When the military asked Kennedy for just a slight increase in the amount of aid being given to the South it would do so on the pretext that things were going so well in Vietnam, that the North Vietnamese would crumble under the slightest increase of force. As the war progressed year after year the rationale for escalation was always cast in the language of optimism and never that of pessemism. One of the main factors then, which would lead the United States into assuming a larger role in Vietn g the first two years of the Kennedy Administration would be the blatent misrepresentation of the political and military realities of Vietnam on the part of the military.

Lyndon Johnson is shown, at left above, as a confident, young 57. Four years of bombing Vietnam into the Stone Age, above middle, left him in 1968 old and grey at 60. At right, he is shown in 1972, age sixty-four. Three months later he was dead.

Vietnam Chronicle (cont.)

Kennedy's increase in the number of advisory and support personnel in Vietnam did not change the shape of the war at all. As the military situation grew worse the reporting of the military grew more optimistic. By 1963 there was a genuine reality gap between the situation in Vietnam and what the Administration believed to be the situation in Vietnam. While Washington was under the impression that the ARVN was in firm control of its own territories, nothing could be further from the case. The Vietcong had, in fact, invaded and occupied significant sectors of South Vietnam. While Washington believed that the Vietcong were staggering around on their last legs nothing could have been further from the truth. The Vietcong were always superior to the South Vietnamese army in training, discipline, courage, and sheer motivation. Lastly, though Washington thought that the South Vietnamese government was stable this was far from the case. Diem was a dictator who was feared and hated by most of the peasants. The South Vietnamese army was constantly putting itself at odds with the local populations by running sweeping raids through the hamlets and stealing property.

By the middle of 1963 however, cracks in the walls of military reporting began to appear and Kennedy slowly became aware of how critical the situation in Vietnam was. Kennedy did not learn the truth from the high officials in Vietnam but from two other sources, first, lower echelon officials alarmed over the falsehoods they saw in official reports and secondly, the press, which would stream into the country during the next couple of years and serve as a major source of enlightenment for much of Washington. It did not take long for experienced and tenacious reporters to see that the situation in Vietnam was far worse than most people realized.

During the middle months of 1963 Kennedy received a good deal of pressure from the military and some of his advisors to increase the level of aid being given to South Vietnam. The President, still wary of becoming stuck in an unwinnable war, sent McNamara and Taylor to Vietnam to appraise the situation. Upon return they reported that although Deim was becoming increasingly untenable and should be replaced, the basic war effort was going well. The military situation was looking better every week and the Americans could expect to be out, lock, stock, and barrel, by 1965. Among other things the report emphasized that "The security of South Vietnam remains vital to United States security. For this reason, we adhere to the overriding objective of denying this country to Communism and of suppressing the Vietcong insurgency as promptly as possible." The report was dated October, 1963.

On November 1 the Diem regime was overthrown by a military led, but popularly supported, coup and for a few weeks Vietnamese generals sent in accurate reports on how badly the war was going and on what an alarming amount of South Vietnam was under Vietcong domination. The American ambassador to South Vietnam, Kenry Cabot Lodge was staggered by the pessemism of these reports and on November 22 flew to the United States to inform President Kennedy of how much worse the war was going than anyone in Washington had known. But Lodge never got to see Kennedy for shortly after his plane touched down in San Francisco Lyndon Johnson became the 36th President of the United States.

The question of whether Kennedy would have gotten the U.S. involved in a full scale war in Vietnam is one which no one can answer. What is clear, in Halberstam's eyes, is that Kennedy shares Johnson's burden of responsibility. While he had personal doubts about the wisdom of becoming involved in Southeast Asia he kept these doubts private and in public payed homage to the domino theory and the doctrine of containment. Furthermore, of the fact that Kennedy began the spiral of escalation in Vietnam there can be no doubt. When he assumed office in 1961 the United States had about 3,000 men in Vietnam; when he died there were 16,900. Kennedy pushed the U.S. committment in Vietnam beyond the flash point, beyond the point at which it could gracefully be withdrawn. Although Kennedy was in part victimized by the military and the gun-ho attitude of his top advisors it must be remembered that he had hand-picked all the men with whom he surrounded himself and thus bore the ultimate responsibility for their own disasterous errors.

By early in 1964 it was clear to everyone that the war was not going well and that if the South Vietnamese were to be kept on their feet the United States would be forced to adopt a more agressive posture toward North Vietnam. Johnson, while attempting to keep the issue of the war out of the public eye, nonetheless instructed McNamara to make a study of the possible effects of bombing as a means of both uplifting the dibilitated morale of the South Vietnamese and paralysing Hanoi's war effort. Although McNamara did not recommend bombing the President told the Joint Chiefs of Staff (who were loud and powerful advocates of bombing) to go ahead and investigate and plan possible bombing operations for future use.

One of the factors which must be taken into account, if one wishes to understand the decision making process which led this country into the Vietnam war, is the personality of Lyndon Johnson. Johnson was an imperious man with a seemingly unlimited supply of earthy energy. His language was salty and frequently profane; he once called Diem the Winston Churchill of our times and when a reporter asked him whether he was really serious he replied, "Shit, he's the only boy we got out there". Subtlety, whether intellectual, personal, or political, was not Johnson's strong suit. Just as he overwhelmed everyone and everything with the force of his personality his natural inclination, when confronted with a problem such as Vietnam, was to use some kind of force. Johnson could very well have been a great president had he not gotten bogged down in Vietnam. If, during the critical months in 1964 and 1965, we had had a president who did not rely so heavily on force as a solution to problems, it is possible that the United States might have managed to steer clear of actual military involvement in Vietnam. While a forceful man, Johnson was not one who took criticism well. He insisted on being surrounded by men who agreed with him and in 1964 purged the State Department of several major Vietnam policy dissenters. As public opposition to his policies grew he became bitter and resentful. He would, during the last four years of his administration, launch vicious and unreasonable diatribes against members of his staff. Just as Vietnam would erode the moral purpose of a potentially great nation so it would the moral purpose of a potentially great President.

While Lyndon Johnson was being elected as an obstensible peace candidate, as a man who would tend to America's domestic needs, Vietnam reached the crisis stage. During the presidential campaign against Goldwater Johnson virtually ignored Vietnam, but after he won the election he found the South Vietnamese on the verge of imminent collapse. If the U.S. did not take very firm measures it would "lose" Vietnam as it had once "lost" China. At this point the U.S. was faced with three possible courses of action. First, it could just pull out. Secondly, it could bomb the North. Thirdly, it could send in ground troops. The first alternative was unthinkable, for the U.S. would then be admitting defeat. John McNaughton, a high State Department official said, in a revealing comment made in late 1964, that the rationale for staying in Vietnam was 10% to give the South Vietnamese a better life, 20% to keep the South from falling into the hands of the Communists, and 70% to avoid a humiliating American defeat. Since the third alternative, that of sending in troops, was too radical and sudden for Johnson to accept at the time, bombing seemed to be the only course of action available. While Johnson himself was not enthusiastic about the bombing the men around him were; Rostow and McNamara in particular felt that if we bombed the North its war effort would collapse and the U.S. would be out in six months at the most. This attitude

R U Snowbound???

Tired of "hoofing it" from one place to another??

Let us solve your parking problems at the Campus Center Garage.

For just $15.00 a month

you can secure a private space.

Perhaps you'd like to split the cost and share with a friend?

If you're spending 3½ hrs. or more on campus, we'll be happy to tell you about our sixth-level tickets and how you can SAVE. at the Campus Center garage.

Call 549-6000 and ask for Pat.

"...the best on Vietnam currently in print."

represented an overestimatization of the effectiveness of bombing in general and a gross misunderstanding of the North Vietnamese in particular. The bombing adherents in the Johnson Administration were looking at the North Vietnamese as an industrial nation carrying on a run-of-the-mill war against its neighbor. First, while North Vietnam has some industry it is not an industrial, but an agricultural nation, and is therefore not as vulnerable to saturation bombing as most other countries. Secondly, the North is motivated by intense passions of nationalism and ideology; the notion that it would just surrender upon being bombed was ridiculous; if anything, the bombing strengthened its determination.

Not surprisingly the decision to bomb was made incrementally. When the Vietcong attacked an American barracks and killed seven men Johnson had the perfect excuse for beginning limited retaliatory raids on the North. After he made the decision to begin these raids he went on nation-wide television and told the American people that, "We love Peace. We shall do all we can in order to preserve it for ourselves and mankind. But we love liberty the more and we shall take up any challenge, we shall answer any threat. We shall pay any price to make certain that freedom shall not perish from this earth." The date was February 8th, 1965. Five days later it was decided to mount a sustained bombing campaign on North Vietnam. While the bombing was done in order to prevent the necessity of committing combat troops to Vietnam it in fact had the effect of making such a commitment easier. Nine days after the sustained boming of the North began General Westmoreland requested two U.S. Marine Corps for Vietnam in order to provide the Airforce bases with security against enemy attack. It was a modest request and it was granted. Thus the first troops were slipped into Vietnam for the purpose of protecting the airplanes which were bombing the North in order to prevent the necessity of sending in troops. Later, one prime rationale for sending in more troops was that they were needed to protect the sparse units already there protecting the airfields.

As was the case with the bombing, the decision to commit combat troops was made by incrementalism. At first Westmoreland only requested security troops, knowing that Johnson would balk if he requested actual combat troops. But when the time came the fact that there were already security troops in Vietnam would make the decision to send combat troops easier.

By March of 1965 it was clear that the bombing had failed to bring Hanoi to its knees and Johnson began to receive an increasing amount of pressure from all sides to send in combat troops. The Joint Chiefs of Staff, the military command in Saigon, and his own national security advisors, all favored the introduction of troops; the only questions were how many should be sent, what kind should be sent, and what exactly should they be used for.

In the third week of April a meeting was held among high administration officials in Honolulu at which time it was decided to commit 40,000 more Americans to Vietnam, including two Army brigades and three tactical fighter squadrons. In all this would bring the level of U.S. men in Vietnam up to 82,000. By introducing these troops into the war (which were at first only to prevent the Vietcong from seizing territory in the South) the Johnson Administration hoped first, to show the enemy that it was serious, and secondly, to crush the Vietcong effort. A number of Johnson's top advisors believed that the North Vietnamese would fall apart in less than six months.

But once again the United States had miscalculated and during the next two months the war got worse and worse; the South Vietnamese troops were being soundly beaten again and again. On June 7 Westmoreland requested 200,000 more troops and a month later Lyndon Johnson approved the request.

* * *

It is here that Halberstam ends his account and when one finishes his book one is left with a firm grasp of an important period of our history, the repercussions of which will be felt for many decades. While The Best and the Brightest is in large part a historical study it is at the same time more than that. It is also the study of personalities and of the relationship between decisions and the personalities of the decision makers. It is the study of men who, for all their brilliance, were trapped between their own intellectual limitations and their moral arrogance and insensitivity.

Vietnam can be understood and viewed in many different ways, as a series of technical policy errors, as a gigantic military miscalculation, or as the logical outcome of the post-World War II cold war era. Vietnam was all of these things but at the same time it was much more. Beyond everything else it was a monumental moral tragedy. It resulted from a deep moral failure on the part of the American people and the public officials it elected.

I doubt that The Best and the Brightest will prove to be the definitive book on Vietnam. For one thing Halberstam is too much the journalist and not enough the scholar and philosopher. Secondly, his book follows too closely upon the heels of the events it describes. It is impossible for Halberstam to gauge the long range effects which Vietnam will have on our country since these effects may not be evident for several decades. Nonetheless The Best and the Brightest is an excellent book and with little doubt the best on Vietnam currently in print.

Third Round For Don Juan

by Ed Smith

Journey to Ixtlan
by Carlos Castoneda

Prior to delving into the actual content of "Journey to Ixtlan," a few words of background on Carlos Castaneda and the events which led to the writing of this book and his two previous ones are probably called for. While doing graduate work in anthropology at the University of California at Los Angeles, Castaneda became interested in the use of peyote by certain tribes of Indians in the southwest portion of this country and in Mexico. While on a field trip in southern Arizona, Castaneda was introduced, by a friend, to an old Yagui indian by the name of don Juan. Castaneda visited don Juan at his home in Mexico many times attempting to get from the old man some information about peyote and other medicinal and hallucinogenic plants used by the Indians. Don Juan was reluctant to discuss that topic, but they became good friends nevertheless. The story might have ended here, had the old indian not decided to take on Casteneda as his apprentice and lead him on the path to becoming a man of knowledge.

Castaneda's first two books, "The Teachings of Don Juan", and "A Separate Reality", deal with Castaneda's apprenticeship in the realm of drugs. He experimented with peyote, jimson weed and psilocybic mushrooms. The process was highly ritualized and bears no resemblance whatsoever to most drug use among young people in this country. Castaneda's experiences are often terrifying, but as well profound and provided him, it would seem, with some valuable insight into his own existence. Both of these books provide interesting reading and while certainly not prerequisites, they do heighten one's understanding of "Journey to Ixtlan."

Probably the most essential and important difference between "Journey to Ixtlan" and the two previous works is the fact that this book does not concern the use of drugs whatsoever. Rather it explores a much more mysterious aspect of "reality" and existence. By this I mean that, when one is dealing with durgs, rationalizations can be made for otherwise unexplainable occurences simply by saying the drugs somehow unbalance your mind and produce things which don't really exist. However, when one encounters equally bizarre happenings outside a drug experience one begins to seriously question basic assumptions about what is and is not real.

We come then to the most prominent aspect of the world into which Don Juan ushered Castaneda. "Reality" assumes in that world manifold meanings. Things that one can see and touch are no longer absoluted, rather existence fluctuates, apparently dependent upon one's state of mind and independent powers which act upon it.

Although the book differs in some respects from the preceding volumes, as well it bears some very basic similarities. To a large extent it concerns the same time period, from 1960 to approximately 1965. The last section deals with Castaneda's last visit to Don Juan, which took place in 1971. Castaneda explains in the beginning of his volume that many of his experiences with Don Juan were not associated with drugs, but when they occurred he considered them less important than those occasions on which he ingested various pschotropic plants. He has come now though to recognize these experiences as the result, the culmination of those reality altering drug encounters. The way in which I understand the situation is that through drugs he was able to "see" what the other realities were, for the purpose of recognizing them when he achieved them independently of an artificial catalyst.

Don Juan's philosophy of life sounds very familiar, almost hauntingly so, as it is passed on to us by Castaneda. It is difficult to pin down where you've heard some of these things before, but somehow you know you have. Three aspects of it which were fairly fresh to my mind, seem to provide a fair outline of where don Juan is headed. The first is the concept of equality of life. Don Juan goes further than saying all men are equal, but rather asserts that all life is equal. A man and a plant, neither is better than the other. Possibly you see now what I mean by familiarity with this line of thought. Discarding one's personal history is another point don Juan is constantly stressing to Castaneda. He feels that having a detailed personal history weakens a man and makes him too vulnerable to attack. The past then, of one's own personal life, must not be a controlling factor in one's own personal life, must not be a controlling factor in one's present existence. The third factor is one which appears strongly in all three books, the idea of the warrior. A man who is always alert, impetuous and at the same time cautious.

This is a picture then of the world into which Carlos Castaneda entered thirteen years ago. Most men, it would seem, would be enveloped in a short time by the immense power which don Juan had and knew about. They would either be overwhelmed and stay with don Juan like an obedient dog or be terrified and flee. Castaneda though has stayed relatively firm in his purpose to learn from don Juan, but not be awed by him. Throughout his writings his attitude remains somewhat skeptical, examining each occurence with a practiced eye. His rationalizations are at times almost comical; one can feel his befuddlement at some truly amazing occurence. It is certainly for the reader's benefit that the author retains a somewhat objective stance, for otherwise the book could easily have degenerated into a meaningless, laudatory statement of faith.

The form Castaneda employs is a chronological recounting of the events, synopsized from his field notes. With all the inherent problems of this style, it is pulled off quite well. The writing is generally articulate and to the point, though at times it wanders a bit aimlessly, though nevertheless eventually returning to the situation at hand. Aside from writing technique and the like, the final question seems to be whether or not this document has any worth, that is, why should one read it? What inherent value does it have that you should spend your time persuing it? I could probably come up with a few reasons and the publishers, I'm sure if you wrote them, could come up with innumerable persuasive and impelling reasons why your life is merely an empty, plastic shell until you've read this book. However, as I know, this type of procrastination often has thoughts other than the book itself in mind. I think the best reason is the one which don Juan gives to Castaneda in the course of a discussion they were having. Don Juan said in reply to Castaneda's skepticism about other states of reality:

" 'Why should the world be only as you think it is? Who gave you the authority to say so.' "

Catch These Titles

The following is a listing of the films offered by the three major film series this coming semester. For times and places of films consult upcoming issues of this publication.

The Amherst Film Co-op has scheduled the following films for their second series. They offer a splendid membership plan where you can see all the films for $6.00 ($5.00 if you reside in Southwest.) Contact the Co-op for further details.

2/4 Foreign Correspondent
2/6 The Merry Widow
2/10 Derby
2/11 Strangers on a Train
2/14 Lady From Shanghai
2/17 Bedazzled
2/18 Spellbound
2/25 Lifeboat
2/27 Singin' in the Rain
3/4 Shadow of a Doubt
3/11 North by Northwest
3/13 Mr. Arkadin
3/17 Some Like It Hot
3/18 Bringing Up Baby
3/20 The Jungle Freaks
4/3 And Then There Were None
4/8 Animation night: Disney, Pintoff, etc.
4/14 The Conformist
4/17 Children of Paradise
4/21 The Big Sleep
4/22 Trouble in Paradise
4/24 That Man From Rio

Gene Kelly in Singing in the Rain

5/1 How Green Was My Valley
5/6 Exit Smiling
5/8 Sunrise
5/12 Msr. Verdoux
5/15 Force of Evil

The Program Council Schedule through March:

2/4 McCabe and Mrs. Miller
2/8 Minnie and Moskowitz
2/11 The Omega Man
2/15 Gimme Shelter
2/18 The Light at the Edge of the World
2/22 Let It Be
2/23, 2/24 The French Connection
2/24, 2/25 The Sorrow and the Pity
3/1 Play Misty for Me
3/4 Duck You Sucker
3/8 Giver Her the Moon and King of Hearts
3/11 The Devils
3/12 Klute
3/15 Prime Cut
3/16 Shorts from the Second Annual N.Y. Erotic Film Festival
3/18 Camelot
3/12 Valdez Is Coming

These titles subject to change and admission varies according to films

University Film Studies Series (Tuesday evenings)

2/6 Way Down East
2/12 Tumbleweeds
2/20 The Last Laugh and The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari
2/27 All Quiet On The Western Front
3/6 Holiday
3/13 The Lady Vanishes
3/20 Triumph Of The Will; The River; Night and Fog
4/3 The Best Years of Our Lives
4/9 The Virgin Spring
4/17 Ashes and Diamonds
4/24 Umbrellas of Cherbourg
5/1 Petulia

The Program Council Directors Series is planning a new Female Star Series. The films will feature stars of the Thirties and Forties and will be a program of double bills. Tentative titles will include: The Devil Is A Woman, The Awful Truth, Bombshell, Alice Adams, The Women, The Merry Widow, The Gay Divorce, Mildred Pierce, The Heiress, On The Town, Meet Me In St. Louis, The Great Ziegfeld, All About Eve, The Philadelphia Story, Twentieth Century, The Lady Eve, Body and Soul, and A Streetcar Named Desire. The Directors Series will conclude with two films of Luchino Visconti, The Damned and Death and Venice, and two films of Sam Peckinpah, Straw Dogs and The Wild Bunch. For details on times and dates for all the above films consult this magazine on Fridays or pick up a Five College Calendar at the scheduling desk at the Campus Center. We will hope to inform you of the numerous other film series being held on other campuses, but the details now of them are quite sketchy.

The Mystique Of Bergman

by Faye Halpern

Cries and Whispers

Written and Directed by Ingmar Bergman; Director of Photography, Sven Nykvist; With Harriet Andersson, Kari Sylwan, Ingrid Thulin, and Liv Ullman.

The National Society of Film Critics has named Ingmar Bergman best screenplay writer of the year for his current Cries and Whispers--and not without reason. Bergman's new film is an astute magnification of the painful realities and disillusionment that so often peak when people with shared memories return together to the place of their past.

The setting of Cries and Whispers is a Swedish manor, approximately turn of the century. Within one of the many red chambers of the house Agnes, a middle-aged spinster, is dying a slow and painful death. Her married sisters, Karin and Maria, have come to care for her, and for a short time the illusion of sisterly devotion fills the house. The illusion soon dissipates, however, and we become aware that the house, and all of its residents are plagued by hate, and hurt, and dreams of impossible reconciliations.

The cries and whispers of the house are revealed in short, dream-like sequences, whose reality we doubt, but whose implications we cannot deny. We see Karin (who appears to be the oldest sister) cut her genitals with a shard of glass, enter the bedroom of the diplomat-husband whom she hates, and tontemptuously smear the blood about her lips. We see Maria, the beautiful, superficial, and self-absorbed younger sister engage in an affair with Agnes' doctor, and drive her husband to an attempt at suicide.

The most impossible, and most revealing, scene involves the re-awakening of Agnes, whose death occurred earlier in the story. Agnes cries out for the unrestrained affection of her sisters, but Karin and Maria are repulsed by the dead woman. While we are aware that this episode is a dream, and that Anna, Agnes' maid, is the dreamer, we sense that Agnes' pleas for intimacy are real--and not simply the product of her devoted Anna's imagination.

Bergman's method of leading us in and out of reality is reminiscent of techniques he used in Persona. Customary transitional cues are revised. Instead of using the fade or dissolve to signal the commencement of a dream-like state, Bergman uses a close-up portrait followed by a straight cut. Rather than dimming the lighting or overexposing these sequences, Bergman uses realistic lighting. He intentionally adds to our confusion by inserting the voice of a narrator to introduce these sequences. The narrator's presence seems to imply that the events we are about to see actually happened--but the improbable scenes that we witness indicate otherwise.

The storytelling technique of Cries and Whispers is its only relevant link to Persona. In fact, the great master's approach in his latest film is almost at odds with his previous achievements. Unlike Elisabeth Vogler, the actress who withdraws from society and refuses to speak in Persona, the motives of the characters in Cries and Whispers are never in doubt. As a result, Bergman's protagonists lack complexity, and their story reads somewhat like a scandal sheet expose.

Another possible source of annoyance for Germaniacs is the phenomenal amount of publicity that has plagued Liv Ullman, her daughter Lin, and the film itself. One is only too aware that the walls of each room are painted red because Bergman has recently said that red is the color of the soul, and that Maria's daughter, who appears in the film for but a minute, is actually the daughter of Bergman and Ullman. And it may take you a while to forget that the beautiful Maria of the movie is the "beautiful Liv Ullman" of the press, but rest assured that you cannot fail to get involved because Liv Ullman as Maria, Harriet Andersson and Ingrid Thulin as Agnes and Karin, and Kary Sylwan as their maid, Anna, are excellent in their roles.

The reappearance of Harriet Andersson in a Bergman film after such a long absence is both disturbing and impressive. Miss Andersson has aged considerably and enacts her death scenes with alarming authenticity. Ingrid Thulin, another member of Bergman's old troupe, plays the part of the self-hating wife of a diplomat with appropriate degrees of tough-minded dignity and neurosis.

One of the most impressive contributors to the film is the director of photography, Sven Nykvist, who, like Bergman, has received a citation for his work on the movie. Mr. Nykvist's cinematography is dramatic and compelling. The lovely muted tones of The Passion of Anna have been replaced with rich contrasts. The photography is much like that of Bergman's Gothic period, but more subtle, and, of course, in color.

1/2 HALF PRICE SALE THIS WEEKEND
• SHIRTS
• KNIT TOPS
• BELTS → FROM $1.98
CLIMAX
ACROSS FROM THE POLICE STATION

Newman is . . .
People meeting people —
Meet people at the Newman
Meeting Sunday at 8:00 p.m.
Newman can be . . .
Almost anything you want it to be — come and find out.

FAT is TONITE
★ ★ ★
Saturday Rush
Sunday J'st Dandy
at the
Rusty Nail Inn
Rte. 17, Sunderland
665-1937

The Place That Made Amherst Famous
DRAKE RESTAURANT 'TIL 2 a.m.
VILLAGE INN
Rathskeller
NEW FIRST FLOOR LOUNGE
40 International Beers
ART ANDREWS, PIANO DAILY 5-7 p.m.
85 Amity St., Amherst
Tel. 253-2548

If you can fit into a co-ed atmosphere, you could be definite ΣAM material
SIGMA ALPHA MU
387 No. Pleasant St.
Informal Rush
7:00 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 4

Films

The Best Since "The Graduate"

by Bob Nesti

The Heartbreak Kid
Written by Neil Simon, from an idea of Bruce Jay Friedman; directed by Elaine May; with Charles Grodin, Jeannie Berlin, Cybill Shepherd, and Eddie Albert.

The Heartbreak Kid is the best American social comedy since The Graduate, a film it resembles in tone and spirit. Elaine May, like her former comedy partner Mike Nichols (The Graduate), imbues this film with an unaffected perspective on the mechanics of humanbehavior. It's a comic strip with the balloon's erased. The characters are vaguely drawn exteriors of particular social millieus and the situations are terse and simple. We get the particulars of the plot but little of the dramatic reverberations which would undercut our affection for this story of mistaken romance. Lenny, a New York sportsgear salesman, meets Lila, whose something of the soul of Long Island, at a dating bar. After a hasty courtship they marry and drive to Miami Beach for their honeymoon. En route Lenny begins to have doubts about Lila. These are confirmed when she scorches herself silly poolside at their Miami hotel. While she rests he goes to the beach and meets Kelly, a beautiful, - rich girl from the Midwest vacationing with her parents. She flirts and he skirts his wife with a series of hair-brain stories finally ending with his decision to leave Lila for Kelly. The three day old marriage is resolved with so little tact that Lenny alienates everyone, especially Kelly's domineering father; but upon the settlement Lenny settles in Minnesota empatically hoping to snare Kelly.

The situations and characters skirt superficiallity and invite cynicism. You grimace at what Otto Preminger would have done with this material--that'd been heartbreak. Where Elaine May succeeds is in playing even the most maleovent scenes with affection and wonder making the film light and innocent with disconcerning implications. We have learned to sympathise with those who love in movies--it's characteristic of the great Hollywood swindle which blinds us to the faults of characters in films, and Elaine May makes good use of it here. Lenny, by his own admittance, is a "schmuck," but we feel a great deal of affection for him. He never slips into a bitter, pushy caricature of the energetic young man on the make (the kind Richard Benjamin has played too often). He's amiable when our good sense tells us to repel him. We should feel the anger of Kelly's father toward the young man's flippant, self-possessed behavior; but we don't. The film ends with Lenny's blank-faced stare as he sentimentally hums "Close To You," the song clearly linked to Lila. The stare, though, also links him to The Graduate's Benjamin Braddock--it's the same expression we saw on that young man's face after he rescued Elaine Robinson and sat in the back of the bus. It's an awareness that the romance is over once the goal is achieved. One realizes quickly that Lila was never right for Lenny right from the start, at its conclusion you feel neither was Kelly. The morale at the film's center presents a curious irony: it's a romantic fantasy hammering home the futility of living one's fantasies. The old happy ending made cynical with a final twist of black humor.

Despite the bitter morale The Heartbreak Kid exhibits little rancor toward Lenny. In a sense he's the only character with a clear and seemingly pure purpose. His faults are ordinary and there's something truly extraordinary about his determination and manipulation of situations. He brings out the bad boy in us--fulfills dreams we would find impossible to carry off. He embodies the innocent spunk associated with the great American success story. Lenny plays dirty and comes off clean. It's terribly old-fashioned and an attribute to feel nostalgic toward. Lenny's an unabashed romantic in a time when the romantic tradition is considered an outmoded. Lila, Kelly, and her parents are lacklustre and a bit corrupted by their complacency. Lenny completely baffles them.

The film sets Lenny up as a hero because he perceives with disgust the world of Miami Beach and our good sense is more disgusted with the bizarre, tacky transients at this resort than with the human and funny behavior of this mixed-up kid. Miami Beach looks like outtakes from a Fellini film; the city celebrates tackiness in all its salient forms and Elaine May has a cool eye for the absurd details. She doles on the ordinary American as a grotesque component in the dead end of the American dream and suggests Lenny's fear of it. Lila is clearly identified with this world--she's a middle-aged frump at twenty two. It's Kelly who offers escape. (You wonder why this girl is there in the first place, she and her parents would probably feel more at ease at nearby Palm Beach.) Part of the uneasiness of this comedy comes with the social undercurrents it plays upon. Like The Graduate, it has a curious set of villains class-defined and strikes a responsive chord with the young because it is primarily a story of alienation and escape.

Neil Simon wrote the script from an idea by Bruce Jay Friendman; it's his most likeable to date. His scripts have always been too brittle, the rancor too clever, the pace too frenzied. Simon's a funny man, but on the screen his humor is forced in a theatrical manner. You sense his person in every character--as if he masturbates his wisecracks. His characters complement each other with assembly-lined professionalism. Also his films have always been technically and aesthetically homely. They glare and intimidate you into liking or leaving. The Odd Couple wasn't even funny trash and Plaza Suite convinced me that Simon better invest those fabled royalty checks before someone calls his bluff.

The Heartbreak Kid changes all this--it's a most responsive and involving experience. The pace is leisurely, the direction uncluttered and the emphasis is no longer on the playwright's trenchant wit. Elaine May stages scenes superbly; her sense of humor never slips into sentimentality. Even in the most uneasy scene, where Lenny attempts to break off his marriage with Lila at a plush restaurant, you are cold to her predictament and keen on the absurdity of the situation. The immediate involvement leads you to realize that she will eventually get over the experience, but she may not make it to the lady's room in time to save being embarrassed. The uneasiness comes with feeling guilt for not being too concerned with the implications of Lenny's actions. Later in the film Lenny has a triumphant mo over three befuddled jocks and this catches you off guard because Lenny never seemed to have any control over any situation and here this schmiel acts with savage grace and wit. These absurd moments underline the prevailing romantic themes and they balance the bitterness and ferocity latent in the material.

The story's practically a predictable trifle; Elaine May stylish wit transforms it into something extra special. She wisely underplays Simon's wisecracks and plays important moments simply. There's one extraordinary long take where Lenny explains his fantastic plans to Kelly's parents and you literally feel you are eavesdropping from the next table.

The performances have a splendid sense of sponteneaty. Charles Grodin is ingratiatingly sly as Lenny.

It's the same sort of role as launched the career of Dustin Hoffman, except where he elicited your pity through acting like a wounded puppy, Grodon wiles you into respect. Cybill Shepherd has a natural sense to her role of the cool, manipulative dreamgirl, but the best performances in The Heartbreak Kid come from Eddie Albert and Jeannie Berlin. As Kelly's father Albert turns a single, stern expression into a comic performance to treasure. He's a perfect foil for Lila and fills her void once she has left the film. As Lila Jeannie Berlin fully deserves the three major screenacting awards she has received as best supporting actress. She's given a completely unsympathetically drawn character, but Ms. Berlin makes it bit touching and seductively wacky. She draws you to the center of the film and makes you aware of the vulnerability of living which is what The Heartbreak Kid portrays with original wit and feeling.

Eddie Albert, Charles Grodin, and Cybil Shepherd in The Heartbreak Kid.

FEATHERBED
FRI. FEB 2 - BLUE WALL 9PM-1AM

Clear Sky
Feb. 3 - Sat.
8-12 p.m.
Cance M.L.
75¢
B.Y.O.B.

Movie Calendar

SUN., FEB. 4
McCabe and Mrs. Miller
7 & 9:30 S.U.B. $1.00

THURS., FEB. 8
Minnie and Moskowitz
7 & 9:30 S.U.B. 50¢

SUN., FEB. 11
The Omega Man
7 & 9:30 S.U.B. $1.00

THURS., FEB. 15
Gimme Shelter
7 & 9:00 S.U.B. 50¢

"FLASH GORDON" before each feature

The Agony And The Ecstasy

by Steve Smith

In such an appealing setting, with its decor fit for the occasion, the University of Massachusetts Fine Arts Council sponsored an evening of music featuring the Springfield Symphony Orchestra and special guest Carlos Montoya.

Marred only by the continuous buzzing of the lights, and the lack of any acoustical quality in the Cage, the concert began with Carom by Robert Stern of the University Music Department. The expected flair soon passed. Maybe it was the composition, maybe it was the Cage, maybe it was too soon after a Dining Common meal, but no, it was Montoya, or more to the point, lack of Montoya.

Mr. Gutter is an excellent conductor. His record as a student of music and his conducting background will both back this up. The majority of the people, however, did not come to see Mr. Gutter nor the Springfield Symphony. They came to see Mr. Flamenco, Carlos Montoya.

The orchestra played well, although not as well as they have in previous performances. But they knew too that they were second billing this evening. They knew too that the audience was being polite. They knew too that the evening belonged to Montoya.

After three pieces, all eyes turned to their programs, and then to the door. The Cage then echoed like its original intent, a cheering crowd at a basketball game, with the super star coming on to the court. Number one for the Umies, Mr. Montoya.

He loves it. He grins ear to ear and waves his guitar to the cheering fans, as he proceeds to his position on the court. "My God, I didn't know he was that old." "It's the Godfather" shouted some of the anticipating spectators upon first glance.

The first piece, made for guitar and orchestra is Montoy'as own composition, Suite Flamenca. The orchestra is mellow, Montoya is harsh...clash. Regardless, the audience loved it. Intermission. Carlos returns for four or five solo flamenco pieces. The crowd goes crazy and Montoya returns for another bow, but no more flamenco. Exit. The high of the audience begins to decline. Super star is gone, the second string is on again. The team is so far ahead, why not leave now and beat the mad rush for the exits. Masses exit.

Carlos Montoya is a gentle old man of 67. He speaks broken English and therefor his wife does most of the talking. She, however, remained for the rest of the concert. Mr. Montoya entertained twenty to thirty students on conclusion of his performance. Some brought paper for autographs, some practiced their Spanish, others asked questions and others stared in a silent awe.

"Bad" was his term for the acoustics, but "excellent" was his term for the audience. "The young people, they make the best audience. The old people, they came in and...(Montoya made a gesture with his head of an old man falling asleep)..." "The young people, they can feel the music in their heads."

One person asked him how it is that he goes so fast, to which he replied: "I don't know, my hands just do it." After a few seconds of thought, he mentioned "practice, after years and years, my hands just play very fast. My body is 67, but my hands are 20. My mind, she is 20 too."

Some people were disappointed, some thought Montoya should have played more, some didn't like the orchestra background, some complained continually about the Cage and some came to see the Springfield Symphony and Montoya, saw Montoya and the Springfield Symphony and left content. Montoya did.

Carlos Montoya, left; his much-traveled guitar case, right.

AVANTI R

The Poseidon Adventure PG

Sounder G

The Getaway PG

Deliverance R

OLD WEIRD HAROLD'S

ROUTE 9 HADLEY

(NEXT TO WALTER'S)

OPEN: MON. - SAT. 10 a.m. - 8 p.m.

Tel. 586-3727

Largest Retail Distributor for "Male" Jeans in Massachusetts

$18.00 values NOW $5.00

also New West. Denim Shirts $5.50

★ New West Style Boots 10.00 ★

★ Parkas & Snowmobile Suits 25.00 ★

Our Specialty Used Clothing

SNOWMOBILE SUITS ON SALE

Were $28.00 NOW $20.00

JEANS $2.50 FURS $15 - $25

FLANNEL SHIRTS $1.50

SWEATERS $4.00

LEATHERS $15.00

SUEDES $10.00

OVERALLS $4.50

P-COATS $12.00

DENIM JACKETS $4.50

NAVY 13-BUTTON PANTS $6.00

CORDUROY JACKETS $5.00

Weekend

Music

JON HUMPHREY

Jon Humphrey, tenor, will present a recital at 8:30 p.m. on February 7, 1973 in Bowker Auditorium. Mr. Humphrey has sung throughout the United States in numerous oratorio performances with several major symphonies and has been called by critics "one of the greatest oratorio tenors of our day". He has sung at many summer festivals and has toured as soloist with the Robert Shaw Chorale. In addition to performances with the New York ProMusica on Decca records, he has recorded with RCA, Victor and Columbia Recordings. This will be Mr. Humphrey's fourth recital in as many years of teaching at the University of Massachusetts.

WOODWIND QUINTET

UMass Faculty Woodwind Quintet will present its first program Sunday, Feb. 11, at 8:30 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium.

Newly formed this fall, the Quintet includes Linda Smith, bassoon, who joined the music faculty in September of 1972; and John Jenkins, French horn; Joanne Tanner, Flute; Charles Lehrer, oboe; and Joseph Contino, clarinet. This program is the first public appearance of the Quintet as an ensemble.

The program includes works for the Quintet as an ensemble as well as two works for varied woodwind ensembles with piano.

Opening with the Mozart Piano Quintet, K452, which is for piano, oboe, clarinet, horn and bassoon, the first half concludes with the well known Hindemith-Kleine Kammermusik. The Hindemith is for standard woodwind quintet, with the flute doubling on piccolo. The second half will open with a trip by Poulenc, for oboe, bassoon, and piano. Music for Wind Quintet (1973) by Karen Tarlow, a graduate student in the UMass music department, will follow the Poulenc. The Tarlow piece uses clarinet, flute, French horn, English horn, and bassoon doubling on alto saxophone. Nielson will close the program with his quintet written for the standard quintet, with the oboe doubling on English horn in the later movements.

Theater

THE CRUCIBLE

Arthur Miller's powerful drama, "The Crucible," will be produced by Roister Doisters at Bowker Auditorium on the UMass campus, Thursday through Sunday at 8:30 p.m.

Roister Doisters is the oldest student organization in New England producing plays. The Crucible will mark the 63rd consecutive play produced by this unique group since its founding in 1910 on the UMass campus.

"The Crucible" was first produced in England in 1954 and reached America during the McCarthy Era. "The Crucible's" impact was felt immediately. In it Miller had written one of the most penetrating explorations of the dynamics of fear ever seen by American audiences.

The setting of "The Crucible" is Salem, Massachusetts. The time is 1692, a year made infamous by the Salem witch trials. The central figure of the play is John Proctor. His wife Elizabeth, is unjustly accused of being a witch and brought to trial. Around this action the play moves toward a powerful courtroom scene.

The play is directed by Cheryl Cardran with lights by Douglas Gruber. Technical director is Eugene Niles and assistant to the director is Thomas Leek.

Reserved seating may be arranged through the Bowker Box Office.

Films

ALL ABOUT EVE (1950)

A wonderful exploitation of all the myths and cliches of theater life. An actress approaching middle age, and the paranoia which accompanies it, is touched by attention and admiration of a stage door fan named Eve Harrington. The star Margo Channing, egged on by her friends, takes the girl on as her secretary. Eve's intentions are much grander. Her rise, Margo's paranoia and a host of theater legends are served up as sophisticated truths by Joseph Mankiewicz, who both scripted and directed this celebrated film. Bette Davis plays Margo as the sentimental bitch all stars are said to be, and is dazzling. Her supporting cast, Anne Baxter, George Sanders, Thelma Ritter, Celeste Holm, Gary Merrill, Hugh Marlowe, and Marilyn Monroe in a bit,are flawless. The myth surrounding this film is incredible. Many of the lines have been in the public domain for so long that a first time viewer may think he has already seen the film. Best of all : Davis snowbound, with best friend Holm and moved to tears by their plight. And through sobs she stammers, "I detest cheap sentiment." And the party with Davis's Radcliffe parody won seven Oscars and Davis a New York Film Critics Award as Best Actress. Gamble Auditorium, Mt. Holyoke, Tuesday, 2/6, 7:30.

ANNA CHRISTIE (1930)

"Garbo Talks" was the inspired logo some M—G—M promotion man thought of when this film version of the Eugene O'Neill play was released. Garbo, whose beauty and manner had already made her a star in the waning days of silent films, became the screen's finest actress when talkies arrived. Here she plays a young waterfront tramp who seeks happiness with a young sea captain. The best scenes are with Marie Dressler, an accomplished film comedianne whose proved she could act as well. Gamble Auditorium, Mt. Holyoke, Saturday, 2/3, 8.

Charlie Chaplin, two of whose films are in Amherst this week. City Lights, perhaps his best, and The Great Dictator, his first talkie.

AVANTI!

Billy Wilder's anochronistic comedy is reminscent of the romantic comedies he made in the mid-fifties and somewhat at odds with his hard-edged social comedies and dramas. The story concerns a square American businessman who goes to Italy upon his father's accidental death only to learn that his father had been romantically involved with a British widow for years. He meets the widow's daughter, a chubby British girl, and they repeat their parent's story. Wilder adapted the Broadway flop by Samuel Taylor and mistakenly allows it to lag for some two hours and a half. It's something of windy trifle; with Jack Lemmon and Juliet Mills. Showcase Cinemas, West Springfield.

BARBARELLA (1968)

Jane Fonda begins this interstellar comedy with a lighter-than-air striptease; the film than quickly diminishes to a dumb futuristic farce. The time is the 41st century; Barbarella, an intergalaxy Modesty Blaise is called upon by the President of Earth to save that planet's imminent destruction by a power--mad expatriate scientist. Based upon the popular French comic strip, the sexual frankness is out of old vaudville routines and the satiric bits are painfully arch. Directed by Rober Vadim, all too leisurely, with Milo O'Shea, Marcel Marceau (wasted), and the usually competent Jane Fonda in the title role. She has a wonderous way of putting spontaniety into the most contrived situation, and they are rampant here. The effects are quite dissapointing; the studio look prevails. Most of the time Vadim slides through, but when Barbarella is attacked by a group of flesh--eating dolls and the camera goes wild with close-ups. Quite icky stuff. Campus Center Auditorium, Friday, 2/2, 7, 9, 11.

CITY LIGHTS (1931)

An unemployed man (Charlie Chaplin) falls in love with a blind flower girl and becomes involved with an eccentric millionaire who is generous when drunk but mean when sober. After trying to earn money as a street sweeper, then as a boxer, he takes a large sum to enable the blind girl to have an operation to regain her sight. He is arrested and on leaving prison finds the blind girl cured. Apart from several slapstick sequences (an evening in a nightclub, a boxing match, etc.) the film is a "comedy romance in pantomime," a bittersweet tragedy. It was two years in production and although talkies had become established, Chaplin made it without dialogue, using only musical accompaniment and sound effects. Despite its simple style and story, social polemic is quietly and continuously present, in addition to such overt allusions as the Statue to Prosperity guarded by armed men symbolizing police and war. Amherst Cinema, Amherst.

DELIVERANCE

A superior adaptation of James Dickey's novel about four men on a canoeing trip who find themselves caught up in a whirlpool of catastrophe, murder and rape. The film was directed by John Boorman, who made the crackerjack gangster flick of the late sixties, Point Blank, and it is filled with the same ferociously tense quality of man struggling against an alien environment that enriched the earlier film. Whatsmore, while the movie stands up as a tremendously engrossing adventure story, it also has an intruigingly ambiguous viewpoint regarding its violence and the morality involved. John Voight gives a highly controlled, intelligent and precise performance in the lead role. Showcase Cinema, West Springfield.

THE EMIGRANTS

Jan Troell's second film was recently cited as the most successful film ever shown in Sweden. It is the first half of a two-part film concerned with the emigration to America of a group of Swedes during the 1840's. It is a historical film of great resonance; the journey of this small group of travelers is made into a vivid and compelling experience. The film lost some thirty minutes in its American version, but the two-and-one-half which remain introduce us to a filmmaker of unique talent and vision.

Troell is a former cinematographer and his experience behind the camera evidences itself in what visually is the lovliest film of the year. He frames each image as if it were his last, but because of his strong bored plot the film never becomes a mere succession of pretty images. It is a film which grows with each viewing, with evocative images that stay in the mind/x. The film suggests a breakthrough for the historical film. One which builds from the experience itself and doesn't impose upon history melodramatic conventions. The film leaves you yearning for its second half, titled "The New Land" and scheduled for release early next year. It was one of the few films this past year worth recommending without qualification. Two strong performances from Max Von Sydow and Liv Ullman as the couple frustrated by an unproductive farm and longing for the change the New Land offers them. Calvin Theater, Northampton.

FOREIGN CORRESPONDENT (1941)

Hitchcock's second American film is alleged to have upset Dr. Goebbels. It is a fast-moving highly entertaining thriller, reminiscent of his best British films but dosed with a hard core of anti-isolationist propaganda. It was about a naive newspaperman sent by his cynical proprietor to cover the European situation from a position of wide-eyed ignorance. He falls in love with the daughter of the head of an international peace organization who turns out to be a spy chief. The action flits from London to Amsterdam where there is a rmarkable assassination, the killer posing as a Press photographer with a gun concealed in the camera. The climax of the film is a spectacular attack on a flying boat in mic-Atlantic, shot from within the cabin. Seldom has the studio tank produced such realistic seas as these, which rage across the actors as they cling to the broken wreckage of the downed aircraft. The film ends with the newspaperman broadcasting to America from a bomb-stricken London. As the studio personnel rush to the shelters and the bombs begin to fall, he urges his listeners not to ignore the peril of Europe. This film came out during the Battle of Britain and shortly before the blitz on London. It undoubtedly had some effect on American opinion, already conditioned by the 'fifth column' menace. With Joel McCrea and Laraine Day. Hampden Dining Commons, Southwest, Sunday, 2/4, 7:30.

THE GETAWAY

Another cops and robbers thriller, this time from Sam Peckinpah who follows the critical success and financial failure of the mellow and reflective "Junior Bonner" with this glossy and violent gangster fantasy. Steve McQueen and Ali McGraw play a latter day Bonnie and Clyde who rob and murder the most viscious group of decent folk to appear on the screen. The stars are mismatched, (her head is bigger than his) and both give mannered, boring performances. McQueen always manages a withdrawn sensuality that's always captivating on the screen, but Ms. McGraw better hide behind her footprints in Grauman's Chinese Theater as being her acting credentials. Sally Struthers is fine as one of the bizarre accomplices. Peckinpah again revels in violence, for those who remember "Straw Dogs" with extreme distaste evade this one—it's more of the same simplistic and nasty dribble. Showcase Cinemas, West Springfield.

GOODBYE COLUMBUS (1969)

The best things about this awkward adaptation of Philip Roth's satire of a couple's religious and class differences during the mid-Fifties are the performances of Richard Benjamin and Ali McGraw as the lovers Neil and Brenda. It is Benjamin's best performance; wry and confident. McGraw never quite equaled this debut, it's a lovely piece of acting. Otherwise scriptwriter Arnold Shulman updates the story to the mid-Sixties and changes the interpretation of Roth's social commentary. Larry Peerce directed in a stodgy, arty, and blowsy way. His staging of a Jewish wedding is perhaps the most frightening sequence of its sort in any comedy. See ad for time and place. Merrill Science Center, Amherst College; Thursday.

THE GREAT DICTATOR (1940)

Charles Chaplin classic comedy of mistaken identity. A Jewish barber is mistaken for the totalitarian dictator of a mythical European country and speaks before a Nurenbergish mass gathering of love instead of hate. Chaplin originally conceived the story in 1935, revised it in 1938 (under the title The Dictator) and began production in 1939 on a third version of the script. Despite the secrecy that surrounded its production, the public was aware of its anti-

Are you a weekend night owl with no place to go?

Fly over to the Catalyst or Hampden Snack Bars for a late evening snack or a great hot meal.

On Weekends the Catalyst is open from 7 am to 10:30 pm

and

The Hampden Snack Bar is open from 7 am to 2 am

Hampden & Catalyst
Where birds of a feather flock together

Weekend (Cont'd)

Fascist theme. The German Ambassador protested, crypto-Nazi organizations in the States sent threatening letters to Chaplin and, after September 1939, the attack was joined by isolationists and the Un-American Activities Committee. The production cost two million dollars, an enormous sum at the time. It was completed just as Nazi troops entered Paris and was one of the few pre-Pearl Harbor American films to attack German fascism. American critical reaction was cool (many felt the final speech was banal and the film's theme was too serious), but the film proved quite popular with the public. Chaplin's final speech is very much an expression of his own sincere feelings. On a dais inscribed with the word "Liberty," he urged the peoples of the world not to despair, not to give in to dictators: "You, the people, have the power to make this life a wonderful adventure. Then in the name of democracy--let us use that power, let us unite. Let us fight for a new world--a recent world that will give men a chance to work--that will give youth a future and old age a security." Chaplin's performance in the double role is extraordinary: Hynkel is a "combination of Napoleon and Nijinsky. Playing the dictator and myself, one a tragic figure the other a comic, I can no longer distinguish one from the other" (Chaplin). Amherst Cinema, Amherst.

LADY SINGS THE BLUES

The film biography of the popular pop singer from the Thirties and Forties Billie Holiday is mounted with care and style in this enjoyable throwback to the three-handkerchief Hollywood bio's of the Fifties. It is reminiscent of I'll Cry Tomorrow and The Helen Morgan Story in its tragic story of an entertainer who slowly destroys herself from problems not truly her own doing. Its fascinating performance by the female star. A star is born in Diana Ross who may not be Billie Holiday, she is a pop singer not a song stylist as Ms. Holiday was, but is an enchanting screen personality. What is best about her performance is that we are never reminded that Ms. Ross was once the plastic queen of Motown. She performs with a spontaneity in the early sections then admirably the intensity of Ms. Holiday's struggle with heroin. Her acting is the film's best point. Her singing is good; it has a tight, raspy, sensuous quality; but it doesn't suggest Billie Holiday's reading of a song. Diana Ross sings all the Holiday standards, but you have to return to the originals for their definitive interpretation. Director Sidney Furie makes the entire mess very agreeable and, in the end when Ms. Holiday stands on the Carnegie Hall stage, quite moving. Campus Cinemas, Hadley; Jerry Lewis Cinemas, Northampton.

MINNIE AND MOSCOWITZ (1971)

John Cassavetes chaotic little comedy about a romance between two societal misfits. She's a Cabiria like prostitute who swings aimlessly at life only to hide behind the opaque lens of her sunglasses; he's an overaged freak, thirty-five years old and satisfied at being a parking lot attendant. Cassavetes has a tendency to lay things on too thick and make his points so patently neat that they seem too consciously drawn to be true. He fills this film with a number of character parts that bemoan the existence of loneliness in the world and present its frightening effect upon the human psyche. In attempts to frighten the title characters into a relationship, Cassavetes attempts to merge his experimental style of "Faces" with a more conventional story-telling mode and it half succeeds, although the form has a sort of imposed quality to it. Gena Rowlands gives a superb performance as Minnie, she expands and improves upon her much-lauted part in "Faces". Seymour Casell has a wonderful sense of verve and pathos. A sometimes touching, interesting, and well-worth seeing film. Student Union Ballroom, Thursday, 2/8; 7 and 9:30.

MCCABE AND MRS. MILLER (1971)

This is Robert Altman's ("M*A*S*H) lyrical film about a small time gambler, Warren Beatty, who is overpowered by the charms and persuasiveness of a prostitute, Julie Christie, and forced into setting her up as a Madame in her own house in a newly built lumber town in Oregon. The exquisite photography, superb acting, along with Leonard Cohen's evocative

HITCHCOCK'S

Foreign Correspondent

Sun., Feb. 4 - 7:30

Hampden Commons, S.W.

Amherst Film Co-Op.

Greta Garbo and Marre Dressler in Anna Christie.

music make this one of the most beautiful films to experience in the past few years. Altman's experimentation with sound and recording the actor's voices tends to be annoying at first until you realize that everything Beatty says isn't meant to be heard. Ms. Christie has never looked more beautiful and gives a performance worthy of her Oscar nomination but even more outstanding is Beatty who outdoes his previous acting job in "Bonnie and Clyde" with his ingenious dramatic monologues. He is deeply moving even when all you can see is his back and hear his voice. Anyone who can convey such emotion without the use of his face is a truly great actor. Sage Hall, Smith College; Saturday, 2/3, 7:15 and 9:30. Student Union Ballroom, Sunday, 2/4, 7 and 9:30.

THE MERRY WIDOW (1925)

Stroheim's satire on the Viennese aristocracy has lost none of its bite and visual elegance with the years. Stroheim took the operetta's central theme-a Prince John (Gilbert) who falls in love with an American actress (Mae Murray) and used it to portray a decadent aristocracy and court intrigue. Some of his more sardonic scenes were apparently removed in the producer's release version but this did not prevent it from becoming an enormous popular success. The difference between the Stroheim and Lubitsch versions is perhaps best described in Stroheim's own words: "Lubitsch shows you first the king on the throne, then as he is in the bedroom, I show you the king in the bedroom so you'll know just what he is when you see him on his throne." Hampden Dining Commons, Tuesday, 2/6, 7:30.

PETE N' TILLIE

Directed by Martin Ritt (Sounder," "The Great White Hope") from Pete DeVries' novella Witch's Milk is a movie of many "firsts." It can boast to be Ritt's first comedy, Carol Burnett's first starring role in a feature film and Walter Matthau's first nude scene but unfortunately none of these "firsts" are enough to make this movie a winner. Television's "Queen of Comedy", Ms. Burnett (Lucille Ball has definitely past her prime!) plays a straight man to Matthau's continual merriment and putdowns. She does well with what she is given but for most of the movie you have the sense that she's making her dramatic debut as a guest on a T.V. medical series only this time around the good Dr. Welby is no where to be seen and so Burnett's nine-year-old son ends up mysteriously dying which affords Ms. Burnett her big scene in which she curses God calling Him a "bastard". Burnett and Matthau work well together but one can't help wishing that Ms. Burnett would let herself go as she always does in her own television show (and as she does for one short but riotous scene in which she has a knockdown no holds barred fight with Geraldine Page. The film itself is an enjoyable low-keyed comedy which tries to be too dramatic at times but the supporting performances of Ms. Page and Rene Aubor-jenois adds up to some easy fun. Campus Cinemas, Hadley.

THE POSEIDON ADVENTURE

A harmless pop epic that aims to please but tends to disappoint. The film faults an incredible roster of second-rate stars playing passengers on board a luxury liner which, on its final voyage, becomes capsized in the Mediterrenean. The suspense is built on who will escape and how they'll do it. It's the latest in the series of assinine entertainments made popular in recent years, like "Airport" and "Skyjacked." At the start the situations and relationships are contrived; the film picks up once the boat capsizes, but not much. The special effects and the capsize itself would look great on television. On the screen it has the anemic look of a production burdened with a tight budget. The insides of the Poseidon are recreated from the Queen Mary and its great if you possess a fetish for the deep insides of luxury liners. The script plays off the worst sentimental responses and pretentions about life. As a hip preacher who attempts to save the day Gene Hackman appears to be a waterlogged Auntie Mame. The whole thing sounds like a wretched musical comedy -- you keep expecting Hackman to break into a rousing revival number called "Let There Be Light." Shelley Winters sparks the film with a sympathetic caricature of a Jewish grandmother travelling to Israel with her husband, Jack Albertson; but their scenes together are filled with song cues out of "Fiddler on the Roof." The remaining ensemble is strikingly mediocre; Ernest Borgnine and Stella Stevens are vulgar prototypes of Wallace Beery and Jean Harlow in "dinner at Eight". The film's best moments are the obese Shelley's underwater rescue attempt. Richard Neame directed, all too methodically. Showcase Cinemas, West Springfield.

ROSEMARY'S BABY (1968)

Roman Polanski adapted Ira Levin's pop gothic allegory and improved upon it in every way possible. This is certainly one of the most unnerving films in recent years; Polanski's fetishes are in full array; hyperdermic needles lovingly photographed as Mia Farrow becomes a raving paranoid running from a cult of the devil which may have claims on her unborn child. The terror is primal, Polanski cooly plays upon fears which Levin only skimmed over in his book. Rosemary, a frigid pregnant woman becomes involved with a wierd group of fellow tenants in a spooky New York apartment house noted for a lurid history. Mia Farrow is vulnerable and sympathetic as Rosemary. Polanski plays up her frightened little girl quality to his credit. The villians are neat paranoic visions; primarily John Casavettes opportunist husband and Ruth Gordon's nosy neighbor. Ms. Gordon won an Oscar for best supporting actress. Polanski's macarbe fascinations are given a perfect canvas to be played upon. Certainly one of the best commercial fantasies of recent years. Merrill Science Center, Amherst College, Sunday, 2/4, 3:30 and 7:30.

WOMEN IN LOVE (1970)

Ken Russell's florid adaptation of D.H. Lawrence's novel is an often stunning and fully competent film, although a bit dissapointing when compared to his more flamboyant work in the more ambitious and flamboyant "The Music Lovers" and "The Devils". Much of Russell's novel is reduced to the basics, but the more important themes of sexual awareness and the dissolvement of the class structure are well played. Russell modulates the film in a series of beautiful scenes flavored by a single color. The film seems a series of moods. Russell's talents are in perfect pitch with the exxagerations loveliness of Lawrence's prose; it's the best adaptation of his work to date. The story is of the interrelationship between two sisters and the two lovers they form relationships with. Glenda Jackson won an Oscar and the New York Film Critics Award as the cool bitch Gutrene and its a splendid performance filled with sensuous resonance and power. The men are Alan Bates and Oliver Reed and their wrestling scene remains one of Russell's most beautifully evocative moments on film. It, like most of his best work, stretches the limits of the media to create moments of intensity few directors can equal. A familiarity with the novel may be helpful, but isn't necessary. Mahar, Saturday, 2/3, 7, 9:15, 11:30.

THE RULING CLASS

Peter Barnes's play has been fauted as a scathing satire on the decayed British class system. It's a wildly eclectic social comedy with targets frequently bullseyed at an all too frenetic pace. The film encompasses many moods, from hard cynicism to blissful musical-comedy; what's wrong is it happens much too often. The film concerns a mad earl who returns from a sanitorium to his family estate claiming to be Jesus Christ. His relatives plot to do away with him. The humor comes on so thick that midway through this long (two-and-one-half-hour) comedy you all but detest it. It takes much too long to establish a coherent point-of-emphasis; it's much too concerned with playing around with varied social and political topics. Peter O'Toole plays the mad Earl with a splendid self-possession; he's both funny and frightening. Arthur Loe has an enchanting sentimental quality as the Marxist butler and it's nice to see Alastair Sim in a role which exhibits his frantic sense of absurdity. Peter Medak's stylized direction leadens the film with thick meanings. In content the film resembles Renoir's "The Rules Of The Game," but this is where the similarity ends. The transparity and lucidity of that film's satire is never grasped here. There are some splendid bits though, such as the musical numbers spontaneously occuring from nowhere. Campus Cinemas, Hadley; Academy of Music, Northampton.

WAY DOWN EAST (1920)

Based on an old stage melodrama, the rights to which cost Griffith $175,000, and filmed in Griffith's Marmaroneck studios on Long Island, Way Down East is the best of Griffith's later films, despite its Victorian sentimentality, morality, and heroics. At the time of its production, he declared: "We live in a time when ideas have supplanted technical form in the cinema. The idea, the theme, the subject, the basic thought is the only element to consider in the choice of a film story, and it must be able to be expressed briefly. In 300 words, as is that of Way Down East." Louis Delluc wrote, "Griffith describes in his black and white style the story of an unmarried mother, a dead child, and a brave hero. The key scene of the breakup of the ice on the river, questionable in intention, is unquestionable in effect, because of the marvelous talent of Lilliam Gish, the vigorous healthiness of Barthelmess, and the beneficial grandeur of the snowy landscape, which the producers have interferred with only when it was necessary." This famous sequence shows the young girl being rescued from river ice that is breaking up and carrying her towards a waterfall. Griffith made this sequence out of an unusual collection of material that included not only specially filmed exteriors on the frozen Connecticut River and studio shots, but also shots taken out of various documentaries (including one on Niagara Falls), which were then convincingly intercut. Some of the sequences (such as the dress parade) were filmed in color. Way Down East was the most popular Griffith film after Birth of a Nation (q.v.), and, according to the publicity, grossed over $4.5 million. Thompson 104, Tuesday, 2/6, 7 and 9.

AMHERST CINEMA
AMITY ST., AMHERST

NOW

Charlie Chaplin
DOUBLE FEATURE

"CITY LIGHTS"
At 7:00

THE GREAT DICTATOR
At 9:00

Skin Flick
FRIDAY AT 11:30
"SPACE LOVE"
Rated X — All Seats $1.50
Not part of Regular Program

WED., TO SUN.
50c Discount
with College I.D.

BARGAIN NITES
Mon., - Tues., Adults $1.

'I'M READY. . . WHEEL ME IN !'

Letters To The Editor

Express Your Opinion

To The Editor:

From time to time some good men are moved, as mysterious as it may seem to reach out and help some less fortunate human creatures. On Monday, January 29, some good men from WTIC in Hartford performed such a service for the less fortunate mentally retarded resident of Massachusetts.

In a one hour special report "THEY NEED LOVE, THEY GET ANGRY, THEY BLEED", produced by Richard Ahles, two reporters, Brad Davis and John Sablon conducted a tour of the Belchertown State School and interviewed several staff members at the school. For those of us who know the school many sights were familiar, delapitated buildings, overcrowded understaffed wards, unhygienic bathrooms, kitchens, and dining rooms, residents screaming and squalling in relentless psychic anxiety and manic depression.

A retarded person, by definition, possesses a disability, either physical or mental, which renders him or her unable to learn in a normal manner. Their needs are special, depending upon their disabilities. Today in spite of our advancements in space technology, medical science, and nuclear warfare we have been unable to satiate these special needs of the retarded. This forgotten segment of human society which exists in institutions across our country in states of quasi-humanity and leperous depravity are the products of our criminal neglect and indifference and the wards of an irresponsible society.

Hopefully such programs as "THEY NEED LOVE, THEY GET ANGRY, THEY BLEED" will be broadcast across our state and our nation and make an unknowing public aware of the psychic death houses which their apathetic irresponsibility has procreated and will continue to procreate if public outcry does not demand change in this archaic system of human destruction.

If you did view the program, or if you did not and wish to voice your personal disgust with a system which derogates the quality of life of the institutionalized retarded in Massachusetts please join me in writing to:

Gov. Francis W. Sargent
Governor's Office
State House
Boston, Massachusetts 02133

If you wish to commend WTIC for an excellent presentation which came to us as a public service of that station without commercial interruption join me in writing to:

Mr. Leonard J. Patricelli
President WTIC
Broadcast Plaza
Hartford, Conn. 06115

Thomas R. Blanchette
President
Students Offering Support

Fill It Wisely

To The Editor:

Although it will be only two months until the Student Senate will conduct its annual election for Speaker, the position, unexpectedly vacated Wednesday night by John Hogan's resignation, must be filled by a leader of proven competence. This remaining period will be an important one during which budgets, special academic programs, rent policy decisions, residential area autonomy, and other major issues will be deliberated.

Even if it were only for the support he has given residential academic programs, Nick Apostola would be demonstrated his capability as Speaker of the Senate. Apostola's achievements, however, have prompted developments in almost every region of Senate activity. His publication of course descriptions, of teacher evaluations, and of supplementary survival literature along with his continuous lobbying with the faculty have positively affected the education of every UMass student and have accented his career as Chairman of the Academic Affairs Committee.

Not only would it be a new "twist" to elect a Speaker capable of creative thinking, but to choose a candidate knowledgeable of the educational processes of the university would be revolutionary.

Roy Perdue, President Orchard Hill Area Government

Fix The Lights

To The Editor:

We are quite concerned and actually quite frightened about the incredibly poor lighting on the Worcester Dining Commons hill. In fact one light on the hill has been broken for over one year and is causing much alarm for the Orchard Hill women who must travel this route late at night. Do we need another rape (to prove) its hazardous condition or to make you realize that this campus is unsafe to travel alone at night! Many evenings women travel this hill to make use of other university facilities such as libraries or the Campus Center but this pitch black area is a deterrent from traveling on campus via this route. Why can't our money pay for such reasonable and necessary facilities. Is electricity too scarce or doesn't anyone care! Is the Physical Plant too caught up in its own world to realize the basic needs of the students.

Rosaline Roback
Mary Beth Trageser
Diane Raum
Sally Kos
Kathy Valianti
Connie Koffman

Deplorable

To The Editor:

Is nothing to be done about the deplorable conditions of the wallways on campus? It is needless to mention my experiences with the icy mess-the horrors are apparent to all who survive (and especially to those who don't) this ridiculous obstacle course.

I suggest a desperate reaction from all students concerned about this. Would we be so crazy if we were to strike until walking to classes was a safe endeavor? Think how hard it would be to maneuver your crutches in the slop. I don't know what it will take-a call to Maintenance, the Chancellor-try anything.

UMass is a spaced-out place. Making it to class is struggle enough on dry ground. This is absurdity.

J. Epstein

Go With Nick

To The Editor:

Last night's resignation of John Hogan as Speaker of the Senate creates a void that will be difficult to fill, especially in the middle of the year, and coming as it does to a Senate whose actions tend to border on confusion even when things are going well.

A week has been allotted to choose a new speaker, and hopefully the Senate will be able to effectively evaluate the candidates in that short space of time.

One of the candidates, Nick Apostola, seems ably suited for the job. I have worked with Nick, first on his Academic Affairs Committee, and later when he would publicize his programs through WMUA.

More than any senator I've known, Nick has attempted to cut through the morass student government to reach the students who are supposed to be the center of the whole thing. As speaker, I have no doubt that theirs would be the interests he would try to represent. I hope others feel the same way.

Jim Concannon

Editorial Points

Chaos in the Colonial Lounge: The Collegian elected half a Board of Editors last night. It took four hours. Tune in Monday night for the rest of this gripping drama.

***

Both UMass basketball teams and the Bruins won last night. That combination has happened about as often as snow this winter. Let's hope we see a little more of it.

***

Under great pressure from UMass ski freaks (like nasty letters left in the Collegian office) we are forced to announce that with the recent storm you've won a battle. But not the war. Nyah-nyah.

***

We're pleased to announce that two Yankee Conference teams are listed in the "Worst ten in basketball" this week. A typical Yan-Con performance.

Poet's Corner

IN THE MORNING

(The holy time is quiet as a Nun...Wordsworth)

In the morning
The quiet sun swoops down
Over the hills, nothing to be heard.
The endless drone of the dead winds
Blow slowly across the faces of rooftops.
A row of trees are lined for communion-
Two, three, four strong they stand,
Their bent limbs arched towards the heavens.
The black-robed priestess chants at the corner,
Awaiting the morning tram.

Her every movement is sleek, subtle.
Still wet her hair pours down her shoulders
And baptizes the new day.

Hidden in the coarse brush lying about,
Repenting sparrows dart to her altar,
Ivory white they soar upwards,
Flinging their souls into the air.

The morning Mary, arms out,
Gently bows her head.
Accompanying the clang of a crippled shutter,
The glowing sunlight
Shines on her face
Blessed.

R.D. Abruzzese

THREE KITCHEN-CLEAN QUEENS
FROM STATEN ISLAND

Three kitchen-clean queens from Staten Island sit silent in the sun.
Their knees are naked. Whether it is now, or then, or later.
The sun is hot; the calm queens know this, augur accordingly,
Sip sugared cups of tea, with lemon, and contemplate the air.
Their nods are noble. Whether, this, from God, or grace, or goodness,
Is enough to praise the trees, escalate decision,
And generate notably, in contemplative sigh,
A sight fit for the gods, is up to Father Ferry,
Which, with hazy sheen and howling huzzah,
Conquers bird and beast alike in crossing the great river.
Relax, mawkish maids! The air you cleave is dapper,
Dark as the toss of screaming gull,
Which, buoyant, permeates a twilight path
From Times Square to the mayor's villa,
Dies, yet glides again.
Three kitchen-clean queens from Staten Island
Are heir to such dusk, wet panacea,
Which, fresh from Hudson's grave,
Dedicates aluminum cones and silver spheres
Where once frail Mahler sat in lyric gloom.
Charm! Gaiety! Dream on, wallflowers:
Never once despair that there
A lovesong grows, a suitor goes,
Who raped wretched whore
And followed his new convictions
To the end of his hot Manhattan,
Sincere as Christ was with the nails in his holy skin.

Jerome C. Nathanson

'OHMYGOD . . . WITH THE PRICE OF FOOD, THE STUDIO WILL NEVER BE ABLE TO RESHOOT THIS SCENE!'

FIRST EVER TEAC® Sale

FACTORY AUTHORIZED SALE ON PROFESSIONAL QUALITY TEAC TAPE DECKS!

EVERY TEAC DEMONSTRATOR REEL-TO-REEL AND STEREO CASSETTE DECK IN STOCK IS BEING TRIMMED BY 10 TO 15% DURING FEBRUARY ONLY!

TEAC Model 3300

Reel-To-Reel Player/Recorder

- Giant 10 1/2 inch reels
- Records and Plays back up to 6 1/2 hrs.
- Bias Level Switch allows best Tonal Clarity and Brilliance on all tapes
- 3 Motors
- Quick-Lok. Push Button Reel Holders
- "EDI-Q" one Hand Pause Control

TEAC Model 1230

Reel-To-Reel Player/Recorder

- 3 Motor Drive
- Built-in Mic/Line Mixing in Stereo and Mono and Solenoid Operation
- Special "EDI-Q" Pause Control
- Dual VU Meter and Tape Bias Switch
- Automatic Reverse Play

TEAC Model 3340

Four Channel-Reel-To-Reel Tape Deck

- Records on Separate Tracks for individual practice, then play back
- 10 1/2 inch Studio-Style reels
- 3 Motor Design
- 7 1/2 ips, wide excursion VU Meters 1/4 Track, 1/2 Track, Full Track capability

TEAC Model 350

CASSETTE DECK

- Dolby Noise Reduction System for 10dB S/N improvement
- Expanded-scale, angle-mounted VU Meters
- Straight-line, Studio Style input and output controls

TEAC Model 220

CASSETTE DECK

- Precision-Built TEAC Heads
- Tape Selector Switch that improves the new low-noise/high-output tapes
- Automatic Shutoff
- Built-in Headphone Jack
- Straight-Line Level Controls

★ ALL UNITS GUARANTEED FOR 2 FULL YEARS!

"You can depend on Del Padre".

Del Padre
141 Main Street
Northampton

141 MAIN STREET — NORTHAMPTON

Shop Thursday Nights 'til 9 - Mon. - Tues. - Wed. - Fri. & Sat. to 5:30

Nobody but nobody has lower prices than Del Padre . . . compare and be convinced!

A partial listing of outstanding cash and carry prices on name brand merchandise, one-of-a-kind, demonstrators, most brand-new in factory-sealed cartons!

JBL AQUARIUS SPEAKERS Reg. $186. Ideal for Dorm or Apartment	CASH AND CARRY PRICE	$89
KLH 5524 SYSTEM Reg. $379.95 M-55 Receiver, 2 M-32 Speakers, Rc-4 changer	CASH AND CARRY PRICE:	$239
PIONEER CS-66 SPEAKERS Reg. $119.95 3-Way Air Suspension, handsome enclosures	CASH AND CARRY PRICE:	$79
TELEX STUDIO Professional Headphones, Tone & Volume Controls Reg. $99.95	CASH AND CARRY PRICE:	$39
SONY No. 1510 COLOR TV Reg. $399.95 15" Screen (Diagonal Measure)	CASH AND CARRY PRICE:	$339
SCOTT 433 DIGITAL FM TUNER Card Programmed Digital Computer made of IC's Reg. $549.90	CASH AND CARRY PRICE:	$349
BELL & HOWELL CASSETTE Reg. $89.95 Model 23g7, AM/FM/AC/DC Player/Recorder	CASH AND CARRY PRICE:	$66
BELL & HOWELL CASSETTE Reg. $49.95 Model 4400 TRM AC/DC Play/Record with Automatic Stop	CASH AND CARRY PRICE:	$33
KEMPP 2BK SPEAKER SYSTEM 2-Way Air Suspension, Small with Big Sound Reg. $69.95	CASH AND CARRY PRICE:	$19
BELL & HOWELL 8 TRACK PLAYER Model 4500 T PS 3-way portable with 2 detachable speakers Reg. $69.95	CASH AND CARRY PRICE:	$44
DOKORDER 6020 DECK Reg. $239.95 Reel-to-Reel Deluxe Deck 3 motors · 4 heads	CASH AND CARRY PRICE:	$179
PICKERING DIAMOND STYLUS List up to $12.95 For most pickering V15/2 Cartridge, Black, Grey, Red, etc.	CASH AND CARRY PRICE:	$7
UTAH WTC8 DP SPEAKERS Reg. $24.95 2-Way Speaker Kit with Hardware	CASH AND CARRY PRICE:	$11
DIAMOND NEEDLES Most Popular Single or Tandem Points	CASH AND CARRY PRICE:	$1.50
BANG & OLUFSEN 5700 Reg. $285. Magnificent Speaker Systems — A Best Buy!	CASH AND CARRY PRICE:	$188
JBL APOLLO 51 With S-7 System, Handsome oiled walnut console Reg. $681.	CASH AND CARRY PRICE:	$399
DUAL 1215-S Professional Turntable Reg. $139.95 Changer with Base, Dustcover, Shure M93E Cartridge	CASH AND CARRY PRICE:	$88
SYLVANIA TR116-BK Reg. $16.95 Superb AM/FM Portable Radio	CASH AND CARRY PRICE:	$9
BSR 6500X DELUXE CHANGER with Base, Dustcover, Cartridge Reg. $49.95	CASH AND CARRY PRICE:	$29
AMPLEX C-60 CASSETTES Reg. $1.99 60-Minute Quality Blank Cassettes	CASH AND CARRY PRICE:	69¢
AKAI X165D DECK Reel-to-Reel, Crossfield, 3 Heads - 3 speeds (Reg. $239.95)	CASH AND CARRY PRICE:	$179
AMPEX 755A Reel to Reel, 3 speed record-play Sound'n Sound Reg. $249.95	CASH AND CARRY PRICE:	$219.95
SCOTT No. 477 RECEIVER Reg. $445. 70 Watts per Channel at 8 ohms	CASH AND CARRY PRICE	$275

We reserve the right to limit all quantities

Del Padre
141 Main Street
Northampton

Shop Thursday Evenings until 9 p.m.
Mon. - Tues. - Wed. - Fri. and Sat. til 5:30

PIONEER® SX-424

AM/FM STEREO RECEIVER (50 Watt)

2 Kempp 2 BK Speakers

BSR McDonald 310X Record Changer

• Base • Dust Cover • Cartridge • Diamond Stylus

SAVE $200.85 If purchased separately: $399.85

CASH AND CARRY $199

PIONEER® SX-626

AM/FM STEREO RECEIVER 110 Watts (IHF) Music Power

2 Kempp Maestro 2 Speaker Systems

BSR McDonald 310Y Record Player

• Base • Dust Cover • Cartridge • Diamond Stylus

SAVE: $300.85 If purchased separately: $599.85

CASH & CARRY $299

PIONEER® SX-727

AM/FM STEREO RECEIVER 195 Watts IHF Music Power

2 Kempp 3 BK SPEAKER SYSTEMS

BSR McDonald 610X Record Changer

• Base • Dust Cover • Cartridge • Diamond Stylus

SAVE: $310.80 If Purchased Separately $709.80

CASH & CARRY $399

Montgomery Blues Band To Perform

The UMass concert committee begins the spring semester Saturday night with The James Montgomery Blues Band and special guests, Sageworth. Montgomery and band have performed at the University on previous engagements and seem to add a spark of life to the somewhat exhausted repetoire of area musicians.

Presently they are billed as the best unrecorded rhythm and blues group around; however, the title will soon fall since Montgomery is in the midst of negotiating a record contract with either Warner Brothers or Columbia.

Often compared to J. Geils, the Montgomery band is noted for their ability to consistently play together rather than against one another. They are possesed by two guitars, organ and bass, not to mention the exceptional and overpowering harp playing of Montgomery himself. Max Ann of WBCN in Boston puts it this way"...the best I've heard recently for drinking, dancing, and having a good time."

Along with The James Montgomery Blues Band comes Sageworth, a light rock and roll assembly from Washington D.C. featuring a female vocalist and an array of precision driven talent.

Tomorrow, Saturday night in the Student Union Ballroom beginning at 8:30 p.m.

UMass Inherits Four Dormitories

Four non-academic buildings worth a total of $1.7 million have been amortized and formally turned over to UMass.

The UMass Building Association, an alumni group formed in the late 1930s, had the buildings—four residence halls—constructed on a self-liquidating basis. And now that they are paid for, the Association has passed ownership on to UMass.

Concerned about the need for student housing on the Amherst campus, alumni started the non-profit organization which in 1940 doubled the number of UMass dormitories by selling a bond issue for Lewis and Butterfield Houses. These buildings have already been turned over to the University.

The total worth of the latest buildings to be turned over, $1,696,000, represents the original costs of: Hamlin built in 1949 for $330,000; Knowlton built in 1950 for $333,000; Brooks built in 1948 for $533,000; and University Apartments built in 1950 for $500,000. The first three have a total capacity for 512 students, and University Apartments contains 50 studio and one-to-three bedroom apartments.

In the late 1940s, 2,500 students attended UMass. This year the student population is 21,700, with about half of these living in the 47 UMass residence halls.

The Building Association was incorporated as a result of efforts of eight alumni in 1933 to lease land from the Trustees and build dormitories with money raised from bond issues. These dormitories have been leased to the Trustees at sums sufficient to cover interest and principle on the bonds, and then are turned over to the Trustees when the bonds are amortized through student rent fees. After World War II, the Building Association built 12 dormitories in 12 years, as well as two apartment complexes and the Student Union. The Association will dissolve in 1987 when all of its buildings will be amortized and turned over to the Trustees.

The Association was succeeded by the UMass Building Authority which was established in 1960 by the State Legislature, and has a membership of three alumni, three trustees, and three others chosen at large.

Clayton W. Nash of South Weymouth, a 1916 graduate of UMass, and Harold Rogers of Southington, Conn., class of 1915, are surviving members of the original eight in the Building Association planning group. Other members were: George B. Willard, '92; Sumner R. Parker, '04; Theoren L. Warner, '08; Ralph F. Taber, '16; David H. Buttrick, '17; and Louis W. Ross, '17.

Present membership of the Association: Lawrence L. Jones, '26, of Beverly; Richard J. Davis, '28, or Portland, Maine; Walter F. Rutter, '17, of Boston; Eleanor Bateman, '23, of Boston; Henry Walker, '16, of Brookline; Paul Marks, '57, of Framingham; and Robert Spiller, '52, of Boston.

Sex Discrimination Suit Vs. Air Force

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP)—A $10,000 suit has been filed against the Air Force by two women who claim they were denied admission to the service because of their sex.

A deposition by an Air Force officer stationed at the Pentagon indicated that women face a number of obstacles—including stricter education requirements and aptitude abilities—that are not required of their male counterparts.

Lt. Col. James W. Ward outlined the unqeual requirements in sworn testimony taken last month by Burton Chandler, a lawyer representing Susan Stewart of Millbury and Christina Callahan of Worcester.

The women who are seeking $10,000 apiece from the Air Force, charge that they were denied admission to the service because of their sex, claiming their rejection was based on "irrelevant, illegal, unconstitutional, arbitrary and capricious" procedures.

Chandler released the 132-page text of the deposition Wednesday.

Ward, who said he worked for several years in forming rules governing the admission of women to the Air Force, outlined these differences in Air Force admission standards:

—Women must submit a picture of themselves with their application, but men do not have to.

—Previously married women are not allowed in the Air Force.

—Women are told simply they are not "among the most qualified group" if they are rejected, while men are informed of the specific reason.

—Women must be interviewed at the regional recruiting office, but men are interviewed and accepted at the local office.

—One of the three admissions tests women must take—for administration aptitude—is not required of men.

—Women get less consideration than men for waivers if they have been convicted of criminal or moral offenses.

—If a woman qualifies but there is no vacancy, she must reapply six months later for admission, but men are placed on a waiting list and are selected as vacancies occur.

—Women are required to have a high school degree, but men are not.

In addition, Ward said, once a woman is enlisted, she cannot qualify for dependency benefits if she is married.

The women's suit has not been scheduled for hearing in federal court, but a year ago the U.S. District Court refused a motion to throw out the case, thereby assuring it would go to trial.

Add-Drop Deadlines Revised

